DURING his long photo-play career Arthur Ashley, presently engaged as the creator of leading roles in Thanhouser productions, has played an exceedingly wide range of characters. Coincident to the pursuance of his work as actor Ashley has been everything from an innocent country boy to a deep-dyed villain. In fact, he had reached the conclusion that he had run the gamut of histrionic villainy, but it seems there is still one kind of villain his art has not yet embraced, the vode-villain.

Arthur Ashley.

Since January 12, however, the juvenile hero of a hundred feature plays can consider his assortment of character portrayals of a villainous nature comprehensively complete, as he presented on that date at the Dyckman Theater what can be justly termed a genuine novelty in the way of a dramatic playlet.

The piece was entitled "The Speed King," and Carroll Fleming personally prepared Mr. Ashley for his initial vaudeville bow, which will incidentally, largely in the nature of a first-night trial performance precedent to his appearance at Broadway's most palatial variety playhouse.

Harry Schenck interpreted the role opposite that of Ashley in the sketch, which consisted of a motion picture which surprisingly finishes in a highly artistic fashion as a spoken play. The manner of transition from silent screen to spoken dramatic action in "The Speed King" is markedly different from the change effected in "The Battle Cry" and "Life," and proving a success the idea in the sketch will be utilized as the basis for a contemplated three-act drama of contemporary life, in which Ashley threatens to star next season.

THERE IS A FAKER AMONGST US.

Look out for Frank Hordon, alias Bill Jury, and other aliases. Manufacturers as well as all others in the film trade are warned to beware of a tall, well-built, blonde individual who may walk into your office any moment, introducing himself as Frank Hordon, Bill Jury, C. A. Ruffles, or any other foreign film magnate, that he may be able to think of. If he gets away with the story, he will leave you poorer, but wiser.

The gentleman in question called upon Edward M. Roskam, president of the Life Photo Film Corporation, introducing himself as Mr. Jury of London. Mr. Roskam, who had become intimate with William Jury on his last visit to London, immediately became suspicious. Alias Jury, quick to see this, explained to Roskam that he was Harry, brother to Bill Jury.

Almost at the same moment Mr. Werthheimer of London, and Mr. Taylor, also of London, walked into the Life Photo offices. Roskam, expecting to see an affectionate old-home-town meeting, was surprised to see that Werthheimer failed to recognize Jury. Taylor, however, knew the gentleman immediately.

After Roskam introduced him as Mr. Jury, he gently informed him that this was not Mr. Jury, but was known to him as Frank Hordon, of Australia.

Alias Hordon, seeing that he was in bad, begged to be excused, dragging Taylor along with him, until he was outside of the offices. As Taylor stood by the elevator with the visitor, a faint hope burned within him that the "fiver" that he had loaned Hordon was coming back to him, but no such luck. He only wanted to make another touch.

The last seen of the new film faker was a hasty exit down the elevator. The only thing he took with him was his breath which would have made the strongest whiskey advertisement on the market today.

Lasky Gets Famous Star

Edith Wynne Mathison to Appear in the Lasky-Belasco Picturization of "The Governor's Lady."

SAMUEL GOLDFISH has the honor of announcing on behalf of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company that this organization has concluded a contract with Miss Edith Wynne Mathison, one of the most distinguished English dramatic artists now resident in this country, by the terms of which she will make her debut as a photodramatic star in the Lasky-Belasco picturization of "The Governor's Lady."

Edith Wynn Mathison.

Miss Mathison's career on the stage is so widely known as to need little comment and it may truthfully be said that her standing as a representative of the very finest art is second to none. Miss Mathison is equally distinguished in England and in this country, and enjoys not only the admiration of the public but the particular respect of critics and authorities throughout the world.

Miss Mathison first came to America under the management of Ben Greet, playing the title role in "Everyman," an ancient English morality play, and the success achieved by the production was regarded as an extraordinary tribute to the personality, art and beauty of the star.

After her great success in "Everyman," Miss Mathison appeared with the Ben Greet company in a number of Shakesperian roles, being particularly successful as "Rosalind" and as "Viola."

She then returned to England and was Sir Henry Irving's leading woman throughout his farewell engagement, playing with him in all the leading dramas of his repertoire during the historic farewell at Drury Lane and on his last provincial tour. She then continued in London for a time, appearing in several productions of the Greek classic dramas and, by way of sharp contrast, in a number of Bernard Shaw plays, under the direction of Vedrenne & Barker.

After this experience Miss Mathison came to the United States again, appearing in the original production, at the Savoy Theater, of the "Servant in the House," which was written by her husband, Charles Rann Kennedy, and produced by Henry Miller. Returning again to London, she played "The Servant in the House" with Mr. Miller there.

Miss Mathison's next visit to this country was as leading feminine star for the New Theater (now known as the Century Theater), during the period when that playhouse was under the direction of Winthrop Ames. She there played stellar roles in such productions as "Sister Beatrice" and the "Piper," and attracted even greater attention than in any of her other Shakesperian impersonations by her interpretation of "Hermione" in a "Winter's Tale."

When the New Theater changed hands, Miss Mathison still continued at times to appear under the management of Mr. Ames, at the Little Theater. There she played in the "Flower of the Palace of Han" and in Mr. Kennedy's remarkable drama "The Terrible Meek."

More recently, Miss Mathison has been seen in "The Spy," under the management of Charles Frohman, and at the Fine Arts Theater in Chicago. Miss Mathison states that she is especially gratified that she should make her screen debut in a Belasco play of current American life. She considers that the title role is especially suited to her and says that she looks forward with great interest not only to the work of posing for the production, but also to the possibility of seeing herself exactly as she will be seen by others.

ITALA IN WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING.

The Itala Film Company of America, of Cabiria fame, has removed to the World's Tower Building, 110 West Fortieth street, New York City, where they will occupy Suite 2402.

Gladys Hanson

MISS GLADYS HANSON, widely known as a Broadway star, and one of the most versatile leading women on the stage today, has joined the Lubin players and will be featured in Henry Arthur Jones' "The Evangelist," which the Lubin Company is now making. The play was arranged for the camera by Clay M. Greene and is being directed by Barry O'Neil. Miss Hanson will play the role of "Christabel."

Gladys Hanson.

Miss Hanson's career on the stage has been a most interesting one. Born in Atlanta, Georgia, her ambition always was to go on the stage and her parents, being liberal minded, aided her in this ambition by taking her to see the best plays and making her classical education as complete as possible. Instead of going to a finishing school, when she graduated from the Washington Seminary, Miss Hanson was sent to New York, where she studied foreign languages, literature, music and enjoyed every opportunity to see and study the best plays produced.

Following her social debut in Atlanta, Miss Hanson returned to New York and was given an important part in "The Spoilers," under the direction of Daniel Frohman. Her next engagement was with E. H. Sothern. Florence Reed was his leading woman and Miss Hanson played a heavy part. Shortly after joining the Sothern company Miss Reed was taken ill and Miss Hanson was made the leading woman. She played in repertoire with him for two years, the plays including "Richard Lovelace," "Lord Dundreary," "Hamlet," "Richelieu," "The Fool Hath Said," "If I Were King" and "Don Quixote."

For two years Miss Hanson was with Kyrle Bellew as his leading woman, playing in 'The Builder of Bridges," "The Scandal" and the revival of "Raffles." She also played with Mrs. Fiske in "The Modern Marriage." Following this she played the leading female roles under David Belasco in "The Woman" and "The Governor's Lady." Following a season with the All Star Stock Company in California, Miss Hanson played opposite Henry Miller in "The Dragon's Claw."

Miss Hanson is a woman of charming tastes and refinement and is an artist in every sense of the word. She is enthusiastic over the role she is to play in "The Evangelist" and the results she obtains in her work before the camera will be looked forward to eagerly by her many admirers.

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION RENEWS CONTRACT WITH CATHRINE COUNTISS.

Miss Cathrine Countiss, who has just completed the star part in the forthcoming release of the Life Photo Film Corporation, "The Avalanche," written by Robert Hilliard and W. A. Tremayne, has renewed her contract with the Life Photo Film Corporation to play the star part in the next production of that corporation.

The work of Miss Countiss in "The Avalanche" has been pronounced by those who were privileged to see the sample print to be about the highest form of dramatic acting ever portrayed on the screen.

Miss Countiss has declined several offers to appear on the big time in vaudeville, and has also refused a contract to take the leading role in a Broadway prduction to open up the early part of February.

ALMOST A NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice L. Flieschman announce the birth of a girl, who arrived December 21, 1914. Mother and child are reported in the best of health. Mr. Fleischman is proprietor of the Webster Avenue Garden Theater, New York.

GOVERNOR WILLIS DENIES CENSOR RECOMMENDATIONS.

M. A. Neff,
1002 Longacre Bldg.,
42d Street and Broadway,
New York City.

January 5, 1915.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your letter, with enclosed clipping. There is no foundation whatever for the statement that I have agreed to include in my recommendation to the General Assembly any action of any kind touching the Censor Board in Ohio and I cannot understand why any such statement is made, because it is entirely beyond the realm of truth. I have made no such promise to any one. When this matter comes up, if it does come up, I am sure the General Assembly of the state will give it most careful consideration.

Thanking you for calling my attention to the matter, I am,

Yours very truly,
FRANK B. WILLIS.

THE OHIO CONVENTION.

The Ohio convention, which will be held at the Southern Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, on the 9th and 10th of February, promises to be one of the largest ever held in the state.

It is now being arranged for Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia to send delegates to the Columbus convention and cooperate in making the Ohio convention a grand success.

Matters of vital interest to the exhibitors of Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana will be taken up by the members of the individual states, while they are in attendance at the Ohio convention.

There will be no program printed, but complete arrangements have been provided for those who wish to give an exhibition and the charges will be $20 to each exhibitor for the convention. Ample arrangements will be made for each one desiring to give an exhibition, but in order to secure choice space, first come first served. Everyone familiar with conventions held by the State of Ohio knows that a large attendance is assured and it is announced that the convention will be held under the same management as that of all previous Ohio conventions, which guarantees success for the affair.

Those desiring space should address M. A. Neff, 1002 Longacre Bldg., 42d street and Broadway, New York, or W. R. Wilson, Columbus, Ohio, by whom all desired information will be furnished.

NEFF ADDRESSES OHIO EXHIBITORS.

To the Members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Ohio.

Dear Sirs and Brothers: As the time draws near for holding our next state annual convention, when officers will be elected, I wish to notify you that I will not be a candidate for re-election, and I am writing you in order that you may be advised of this fact, and that you may have plenty of time to duly consider whom my successor shall be.

I have served you for five years. I have worked early and late and done all I possibly could to advance the interests of every exhibitor in the state of Ohio. I have never received a penny for my work, but feel that I have been more than amply paid by the loyal, honest support of almost every exhibitor in the state of Ohio.

At our last meeting in Columbus I then notified the convention that I would not be a candidate for re-election, but, owing to a unanimous vote which was taken in silent protest against my not being re-elected, I said nothing more about it.

We expect to hold a big convention in Columbus on the 9th and 10th of February. I hope that every exhibitor in the state will turn out to attend this convention, and that the new president may receive such loyal, enthusiastic support that it will urge him on to accomplish even better and greater things than has been within my power to accomplish for you.

I would urge the importance of every exhibitor to make himself a committee of one to see if he can not bring another exhibitor with him to the convention. There is only one way to protect your interests—organize and co-operate, forgetting your little strifes and grievances, and stand solidly together.

If it were possible for me to do so, I would be pleased to continue to fill the honorable office of president of your league, but as it is like starting life anew again, as I have given several years to your interests, I am forced to recognize the fact that my financial condition will not permit me to serve longer.

I shall retire with a clear conscience, knowing I have done my best, and hoping for better things in the future for all exhibitors, with no thought of enmity or malice towards any exhibitor or any person connected with the business, with best wishes and friendship for all.

Fraternally yours,
M. A. NEFF, Pres., M. P. E. L. of O.

"TILLIE'S PUNCTURED ROMANCE" GOING STRONG.

Advices from the New York Motion Picture Corporation are to the effect that "Tillie's Punctured Romance," that famous Keystone multiple reel feature, is breaking all records wherever shown. Telegrams from the Pacific Coast indicate that few pictures have produced the results that this one has. The New York still has some territory for sale and will be pleased to consider offers from responsible parties.

"WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES" SOON TO BE A WORLD FILM RELEASE.

George Broadhurst's famous comedy, "What Happened to Jones," is to be made into a World Film Corporation feature, and it will be released shortly on their program.

Fred Mace, who has not personally appeared before the camera since February, 1914, is to direct the making of the photoplay, and will also be seen in a prominent part. In the cast that the World Film Corporation has secured for this feature, there will be many famous players as, for example: Mary Charleson, well known to fame because of her Vitagraph associations; Chester Barnett, who has been seen in many World Film successes; Josie Sadler, well known to lovers of musical comedy, having played in "Peggy from Paris"; Wm. Mandeville, who has been seen in many of the De Wolf Hopper successes, and "Floradora" and Chas. A. Mason, a German comedian of many years standing, who has recently been seen in Henry W. Savage's companies, will also be seen in the "What Happened to Jones" company.

Joe Daly, a member of the original cast, who played the part of the Bishop, with that company, is to be seen in his original part. Mrs. Henry M. Blossom, the wife of the celebrated American librettist, will make her debut before the camera, and appear as Minerva. Others in the company are Caroline Rankin, whose name has been used in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and "The Lottery Man," and Leon Morgan, who will appear as Ciffy.

"What Happened to Jones" will be released early in March.

TRADE SHOWING OF "A FOOL THERE WAS."

Box Office Attractions Company announces that it will give a special exhibition to the trade at the Strand Theater, New York, at 10 o'clock, Tuesday morning, January 12, of a six-reel feature entitled "A Fool There Was." A full orchestra accompaniment has been arranged for.

KLEINE TO SHOW "DU BARRY" AT CANDLER THEATER.

Special exhibitions of George Kleine's big production "Du-Barry," with Mrs. Leslie Carter in the role created by her in the dramatic production of the original play, will be held at the Candler Theater, West 42d street, near Broadway, New York. The first, for the members of the theatrical profession, will be held Sunday evening, January 10, at 8.15 o'clock; the second, for the trade, will be held at 10.45 o'clock Monday morning, January 11, at the same place.

LEWIS J. SELZNICK TO MAKE A TRIP.

World Film activities, nowadays, are so numerous, and the Corporation's plans for the future are so great and far-reaching, that unusually heavy demands are made upon the time and attention of the executive head of the Corporation, Lewis J. Selznick, Vice-President and General Manager. Mr. Selznick has just been called from New York, on important affairs connected with World Film in the West, and is expected back in his office on Forty-Sixth street in the near future.

MORE DONATIONS TO ACTORS' FUND.

In addition to the $500 previously acknowledged from Alice Joyce, Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund, announces that he has received $50 each from John Bunny and Mary Pickford. A life membership in the fund may be obtained for $50.

REICHENBACH BOOSTS BOSWORTH.

Harry L. Reichenbach, formerly general press representative and advertising manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company and recently with the Alco Film Corporation, resigned his position with the latter concern this week to join the forces of Bosworth, Inc., and will be associated with that company at their headquarters, 220 West 42d street, New York City.

SCREENERS TO HOLD ANOTHER BEEFSTEAK.

The Screen Club will hold its second beefsteak dinner on the evening of Saturday, January 16. Billy Quirk will officiate as Rewinder, which in itself is a fact of no minor significance.

"Runaway June," No. 1

Opening Reels of New Reliance Serial Positively Charming —Thoroughly Awaken Interest.

By Hanford C. Judson.

TO begin with, the authors of this new series of pictures made by the Reliance Company for the Mutual program, start out with a clear-cut objective and state it symbolically. We thus know what they are about and that their subject is deep enough and big enough to make it worth our while to watch them develop it. Indeed, if the producers can keep up to the level of these first two reels which show the first episode, the whole is going to be a record-breaking success. The first installment is nothing less than charming.

In one of the best thought-out introductions we have seen. George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester, the two authors of "Runaway June," are shown sitting down to talk over what they shall write about. There is a little statuette on the table representing a man and a woman, he holding up a bunch of grapes for her to ask for. The statue comes to life and it is shown that she doesn't want to ask for it; but that he makes her. Then we are told that the series is to be about a newly married man and his wife, and that it is to show how she reacts when she, sensitive as she is, finds that hereafter when she wants money she is going to get it from him.

Scene from "Runaway June" (Reliance).

The real action really begins on a train. We had been taken into the house at the wedding, all of this was very sweet and pretty. The pathos of it and its humor were natural and effective; nothing was rubbed in and all seemed hardly aimed for, which is the end desired by all good direction. The photography, too, in these and in every other scene shown so far has that admirable quality which makes one want to exclaim at its beauty. But the two young people are on the train and the girl finds that she has left her purse home. The man has money and hands it out to her bountifully; but man-like, adding that from now on she will get her money from him and so implying that it doesn't really matter whether she has a purse or not so long as she has him. She takes the bills, but then she sees what is going to happen all through her life; she's going to be a sort of beggar, always asking him for his money, and it works on her to the extent that she leaves the train at the next station, her husband being away for the moment, and starts back to New York. A man with a dark mustache follows and is trying to mash her. Her husband learning what has happened has come back on another train and missing the ferry has hired a steam tug and is chasing the ferry boat across the Hudson.

No doubt there are places in the production where more convincing action might have been attained. Her visions of the future were shown as sleep dreams; but they must have been conscious thought-out visions. There may be one or two other little points, too; but we are candidly enthusiastic over it as a whole and sincerely think that, if its quality can be maintained, it will be the hit and no mistake.

Oscar Eagle is the director. Norma Phillips and J. W. Johnston play the leads. Arthur Donaldson plays the heavy and these are supported by a large cast, all very good players.

Miss Rosemary Theby

ONE of the most skillful emotional actresses on the screen today and one of its most beautiful women is Miss Rosemary Theby, who so ably supports Harry Myers in the big productions which he is directing for the Universal Victor Co. at the Coytesville studio. Unlike most successful motion picture actresses, Miss Theby has never had any experience on the legitimate stage, though she received an excellent training for it and would undoubtedly score heavily now should she elect to follow this branch of the profession. But Miss Theby is not well disposed toward the legitimate. The reason is very simple. She admits it herself. The speaking stage just would not have her. And now she is glad of it.

Rosemary Theby.

Almost five years ago, and at a very tender age, Miss Theby came on from St. Louis to make her fame and fortune. She studied at the Sargent School of Acting for a year and took a special course of individual instruction with Mme. Alberti in pantomime. Then she started out to look for an engagement. It was a beautiful June day and the aspiring actress felt very confident. But she lacked one very important equipment—a press book full of clippings. No one wanted to ask her a second question after she had said that she had had no experience. At the end of the third day she was so discouraged that she was willing to listen without protest to a friend who advised her to try the pictures.

The friend took her to the Vitagraph Company, and from that very day her career commenced. Though very young Miss Theby was extremely earnest in her work and her progress was rapid. When she became leading woman for Harry Myers she was well fitted to play any kind of role. She showed greatest proficiency, however, in emotional roles, and liked them best. Since joining the Universal she has been seen at the best advantage and is now one of its most promising stars.

STRONG CAST IN PHOTO DRAMA PICTURE.

It may not be generally known but more than half of the male portion of the cast working in "Time Lock Number 776" which is being produced by the Photo Drama Company, featuring Joe Welch in the leading role, are directors capable of producing almost any photo play. One of them, Edwin Carewe, was formerly producer for the Lubin Co. and leaves this week for the coast to produce pictures for another New York company. He just completed a successful engagement as leading man in "The Three of Us" with Mabel Taliaferro taking the leading female part.

Not only is Mr. Carewe an accomplished actor, but in this forthcoming production which has "Big" Bill Steiner and Hal Reid at the helm, he very successfully pilots and drives his own automobiles and after you see this picture you will admit that no one but an expert chauffeur would take the chances that Mr. Carewe does. This all-star cast includes Joe Welch, Ed. Carewe, Dave Wall, J. Sharkey, F. McKay. Dora Dean, May Georgine, and many others.

ROSENBACH JOINS ALLIANCE.

Arthur Rosenbach has resigned as sales manager of the Excelsior Feature Film Co., and will become a member of the executive staff of the Alliance Films Corporation.

Mr. Rosenbach will have a position with the Alliance similar to that held in circuses by the twenty-four-hour man—that is, he will be on the job all the time.

He is familiar with the film business from every angle and should prove to be a valuable addition to General Manager Cobe's forces.

"The Victoria Cross"

Cosmofotofilm Releasing a Three-Part London Film War Drama Containing Splendid Appeal.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IT IS a splendid war drama Harold Shaw gives us in "The Victoria Cross," which he has produced for the London Film Company. The subject, in three parts, is being released in the United States through the Cosmofotofilm Company. The script is written by Anne and Bannister Merwin, which in itself counts for much. In the telling of the story there is no evidence of haste; there is every indication of care—in the attention to the treatment of what by some might be construed as minor situations, but which in their delicate handling move us and stir us.

There is a cast of strength. Edna Flugrath, who will be remembered as a one time Edison player, has the part of Scene from "The Victoria Cross" (Cosmofotofilm).

Alice, the daughter of Bilson, architect and money lender. Miss Flugrath as the young girl charms, as the young woman appeals to our sympathies. All of her associates do, too, for that matter, even to Bilson the hard-hearted, who when he learns that Alice is in love with the younger Oldwood changes his mind about taking full advantage of a note given him by the now dead senior Oldwood. Douglas Munro, who portrays Bilson, is entitled to credit for a fine performance.

Charles Rock is Colonel Oldwood, the man who in other days has accepted a Victoria Cross for valor when he knew that on the great occasion he had flunked, that the bravery had been displayed by a comrade who met his death. He lacked the courage openly to confess the fault, but he did leave for his son an explanatory note setting forth the truth. It is the discovery of this note which impels the son to enlist at the breaking out of the war in the face of abundant domestic reasons for remaining at home. Ben Webster is the younger Oldwood. Gwynne Herbert is Mrs. Oldwood.

The story may be of England today, but nevertheless it will touch the hearts of men and women everywhere—its theme is of universal interest. Some of the minor incidents referred to are, for instance, where the young girl, with the artlessness of childhood, asks the young man if he will marry her when she grows up and then proceeds to knight him in orthodox fashion, with the mother looking on; the pride displayed by the mother as she kisses the symbol which to her makes of her husband a hero; the tenderness of the parting as the young man, with the full approval of the mother, in ignorance of the debt hanging over the family, leaves for the front; the struggle of Bilson between natural tightfistedness and disinclination to take anv step that will give pain to his daughter; the pathos in the entrance of the old gardener as he tells the mother and the sweetheart of her son that there is no word for them from the front.

There are bigger scenes, such as the night attack on the trenches. It is just a bit of the battlefield we see, but it is effective. The wire to headquarters has been smashed by a shell. The young man realizes that his chance has come to redeem the family honor. He climbs out of the trench, joins together the severed strands, and meets his death. When the mother receives from the hand of the young man's pal the personal effects of her son she finds a note in the handwriting of her husband. The vital parts of the contents are blotted out by blood as there has also been obliterated the stain on the writer, of which she knew nothing. And there is a second Victoria Cross in the package—an untarnished one.

Katherine Lee.

ONE of the brightest as well as one of the most charming of the littlest players on the screen is Katherine Lee, the six-year-old who made such a hit as the baby mermaid in "Neptune's Daughter." It will be recalled that Katherine for one or two reels in that beautiful production of the Universal shared with, if she did not monopolize, the honors over Annette Kellermann.

Katherine has been a great traveler in her short life. She was born in Glasgow, Scotland. With her mother, Irene Lee, she has journeyed all over Great Britain and Europe. She has crossed the Atlantic twice and two times has she been to the Pacific Coast.

It is a wide experience this mite has had in pictures. She appeared in the Famous Players' production of "The Scales of Justice." During the last six months she has been seen in a number of Biograph subjects, among these being "Merely Mother," "Hearts of Gold" and "The House of Silence." In this last-named play the work of the child was no small factor in the success of an unusually successful picture. Katherine has also appeared in Imp subjects, among others being "Men at Their Best," "When the Heart Calls," "Gates of Paradise" and "The Tenth Commandment."

Katherine Lee.

Katherine also appeared in the Lew Fields picture produced by Frank Crane at the Peerless studio. She is now playing with Lucius Henderson at the Imp studio. If we may forecast what may come in the future as judged by what Katherine is now doing on the screen it seems certain that she will be heard from when she gets to be a "real big girl."

NEW SOUTHERN EXCHANGE.

The Hybar Film Corporation of Atlanta, Ga., which is the representative in the Southern States for the Sawyer Film Corporation, has leased the entire fifth floor of the Forsyth Building in Atlanta, Ga., and installed a beautiful projection room, the only one in the South. Arthur S. Hyman, the president, is making an extended trip through his territory, and reports more bookings than he can fill. The Hyman Film Corporation also controls the output of the Alliance Film Corporation, Ivan Film Corporation, Cosmo Films Co., and is in the market for the purchase of films of all descriptions.

Edwin Bower Hesser, 1600 Broadway, is the concern's New York representative. The Hybar Film Corporation has secured the agency for the South of the Goldenlite Fibre Screen of which they are making a very great sucess.

"Her Menacing Past"

A Two-Reel Thanhouser Which Presents an Interesting Psychological Problem With a Melodramatic Development.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IT has been frequently asserted that subjects of psychological interest are unsuited to screen production, for the reason that they are difficult to demonstrate clearly. Time has proved the reverse, however, and the ambitious director turns today with considerable ardor to this class of play as a vehicle in which to display his ability to secure startling effects.

"Her Menacing Past," a two-reel melodrama of the class referred to, was written by Philip Lonergan, and produced in splendid style at the Thanhouser studio. Mignon Anderson as the young woman who, as an accomplice of her father in burglary, meets with an accident which obliterates her memory of the past, recovering to become an interesting and interested member of polite society, acquits herself more than ordinarily well. The role is a difficult one to play, presenting as it does at least four distinct psychological stages, all of which have been handled intelligently by her.

Scene from "Her Menacing Past" (Thanhouser).

To the ordinary observer the handling of the burglary scenes will afford considerable pleasure. The production is brimful of action, and has been handled in fine melodramatic style without being lurid or inconsistent.

The picture has a big appeal at the point where the girl, who after her accident in a run from the police, is cared for by a young doctor and his mother, meets with another accident through a fall from a horse, is restored to a memory of her former life, and predominated by a desire to return to former associations, steals away from the home of the young doctor, now her husband. The close of the picture seeks to prove the power of good environment, in presenting the young woman again face to face with the influences of the past, yielding to the power of the new environment with which she has been surrounded since her separation from her father, and the love of her husband, and returning to brighten his life and to continue the second and best chapter of her own life.

Morris Foster also appears to good advantage in this picture which was released on Jan. 5th.

E. J. CONNOLLY TO PLAY FOR THE SCREEN.

Edward J. Connolly, late of the legitimate stage, arrived in Los Angeles December 16 to begin work as a leading man under a contract with Producer Thomas H. Ince, director-general of the New York Motion Picture Corporation.

Mr. Ince has not yet made known just what vehicle he has in mind for Mr. Connolly, but it is understood he will be starred in a feature production now being prepared. Mr. Connelly is well known to theater audiences. His greatest triumphs, however, were scored in "Everywoman," the successful morality play, and "A Good Little Devil."

Who Has Seen Mrs. Baruch?

J. BARUCH, of 857 Elsmere Place, New York, is looking for his wife, Zora (or Zorica, or Hajnalka Zambelli), whom he suspects has joined some motion picture producing company. Mrs. Baruch is a comely young woman of 21 years; she is about five feet, three inches in height and weighs 165 or 170 pounds. She has long, light brown hair, deep-set, greenish blue eyes, a rather pale round face, a gold upper front tooth and a small cut on the left side of neck.

Mrs. Zora Baruch.

Mrs. Baruch has a pleasant voice and speaks Italian, Hungarian, German, Spanish and imperfect English. She has been missing since Saturday, December 5. Her husband is of the impression that she has secured a position with some motion picture studio because of suggestions of friends that she would make a good motion picture actress, but he has no information that would indicate that she has pursued such a course. Every clue is being followed by the anxious husband, however, and should any reader of the Moving Picture World learn of the whereabouts of Mrs. Baruch it is requested that information be sent to her husband, J. Baruch, 857 Elsmere Place, New York.

Leonid Samoloff

IVAN ABRAMSON, the President and General Manager of the Ivan Film Productions, Inc., has entered into a contract with Leonid Samoloff to play the leads in four high-class features that his company will release. Mr. Abramson is well known throughout the United States and Canada as the creator and father of high-class grand opera at popular prices. Eight years ago while Mr. Abramson was the impresario of the Ivan Abramson's Italian Grand Opera Company, whose productions at $1 were then favorably compared by the critics and the public to the high-class five-dollar opera, discovered in Mr. Samoloff a powerful dramatic tenor. He was so impressed with the brilliancy of his voice, that he sent Mr. Samoloff to Milan, Italy, at his own expense, to study under the famous Italian masters.

Leonid Samoloff.

After completing his studies of singing and acting, Mr. Samoloff was engaged as the leading tenor of the opera companies in the principal cities of Italy, France and Switzerland. Six years ago Mr. Abramson engaged him for his opera company which toured the country to sing the leading parts in Aida, Othelo, Faust, Pagilacci, Trovatore and Gioconda.

Mr. Abramson is well known in theatrical circles as a playright and director. He recently wrote the scenario of the photo-drama "Sins of the Parents," featuring Madam Sarah Adler, which feature has proven to be a house jammer. Mr. Abramson has also written the scenario of "Should a Woman Divorce?"

"Should a Woman Divorce?" has for one of its principal parts a character which requires the interpretation of an artist possessing extraordinary dramatic ability. Mr. Samoloff having these qualifications, was engaged for this role.

"The Deep Purple"

Broadway Success Picturized in Five Reels by James Young for World Film Program.

By Hanford C. Judson.

THE latter half of this picture, "The Deep Purple," is very good. It is all clearly told and many of its characters are ably taken, but the situation is not strictly fresh, and until the minister's daughter elopes with the crooked organ salesman, the action seems to be treading along not very interesting paths. But from this point, which takes place in the middle of the third reel, the story begins to hold most effectively. The action from there on makes one forget the unconvincing method used in building its starting point.

It is a five-reel offering and was directed by James Young in the Peerless studio. He has a good cast of players at his service. Clara Kimball Young has the part of Doris Moore, the country minister's daughter, who falls in love and elopes with Harry Leland, a "badger" salesman of a band of fraudulent "organ merchants." The girl's father is played by Edward M. Kimball. The chief crook, "Popp Clark," is played by W. J. Ferguson, who puts a touch of comic character drawing in his work that provides good relief. William Lake, the hero and a mining engineer, who comes to New York, is taken by Milton Sills, who is excellent in the role, giving a vigorous and very likeable hero. The best acted emotional moment in the whole story comes in when "Fresno Kate," in whose house the crooks planned the blackmail game, has found that they have used the innocent girl, who thinks her Harry the epitome of all that's good and noble, to attract Lake to the apartment. "Fresno Kate" is played by Grace Aylesworth, and she has taken a strong fancy to the girl. She refuses to have her used for such a purpose, but the crooks sneaked her out and now she pleads with Lake to let her help in the rescue. Mrs. Lake is played by Mrs. E. M. Kimball and Lake's sister by May Hopkins. De Will Jennings, Walter Craven and many others have good roles.

Scene from "The Deep Purple" (Peerless).

The play from which the picture was made was a Broadway success of a few seasons back and was written by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizer. The backgrounds represent a New Jersey country town and New York City. There are a few scenes of mining and Western atmosphere. The picture closes with a few very artistic glimpses of the heroine and the hero together at the new organ in the little church, two of these suggest famous paintings. The camera work and the staging are commendable.

BETTY NANSEN LIKES AMERICA.

Miss Betty Nansen, the well-known Danish actress who recently arrived in this country, is now staying at the Hotel Plaza, where she gave a short interview to representatives of the press. Miss Nansen is suffering from a severe cold, but there is little doubt of her rapid recovery. She surprised the newspaper men by her correct and fluent English. She said that as soon as she had thoroughly recovered she would start work in earnest. Miss Nansen, who has been imported by the Box Office Attractions Co., will, it is expected, star in some film adaptations of Ibsen and Bjoernsen. Miss Nansen has achieved distinction on the stage of Denmark, being the first actress who played the part of Hedda Gabler at the Royal Theater in Copenhagen. She says she likes America very much.

Artist Flagg to Pick a Winner

WHEN James Montgomery Flagg, the famous illustrator, sifts the hundreds of photographs which are being submitted in a contest to select a leading woman to appear in the "Filming America" expedition pictures, soon to be issued in furtherance of a movement to establish a Made-in-the-U. S. A. Day, he will be confronted with a task certain to delight his artistic soul. With the contest barely announced, already almost a hundred photographs are waiting for the committee's attention at the headquarters of the Made-in-U. S. A. Day Association, eighth floor, Leavitt building. These have come from all points of the compass. Many of the packages are bulky, indicating that the subjects have not hesitated to sit for varied poses, evidences of their deep interest.

James Montgomery Flagg.

The young lady chosen for the honor is to be surrounded with every comfort in her travels, a Pullman apartment car being provided for her. She is to address women's and business organizations on the Made-in-U. S. A. Day idea in addition to her filming activities, and, needless to say, will be a much feted as well as a much filmed personage. Representatives of the association will precede her in her visits to the various points comprising her itinerary and arrange for her reception everywhere, no small feature of their work being to co-operate with the press in arousing interest.

James Montgomery Flagg, whose notable effort of recent recollection is a Sundays newspaper cartoon series entitled "Adventures of Kitty Cobb," has just made his first bow to a picture audience in the filming of the above mentioned series, which has just been released by the United Film Service (Warner's Features, Inc.). Marion Swayne appears in the title role. She was selected to impersonate Kitty by the artist himself, his selection being based on the resemblance, physically and temperamentally, of Miss Swayne to the heroine of his series. It is reported at the headquarters of the United Film Service, 130 West 46th street, that the "Adventures of Kitty Cobb" is proving fully as popular in photoplay form as it was when appearing in the leading Sunday newspapers of the country. The demand for the Flagg film, it is further stated, has established a record. A glimpse of the artist at work in the act of sketching the heroine is shown in an introductory section of the film version.

ALLIANCE PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Ben Abrams, as special representative of the Alliance Films Corporation, has in conjunction with Herman Rifkin, of the Eastern Feature Film Co., of Boston, been carrying on an extensive advertising campaign in the New England territory. When he has thoroughly covered that field he will in turn visit each of the divisions and preach the Alliance Programme.

ANDERSON FILM EXCHANGE SUCCESSFUL.

The Anderson Film Exchange of Nashville, Tenn., which is the zone managers for the Sawyer Film Corporation in Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, is making a tremendous success. At the head of the concern is Harry Anderson, one of the best known advertising men of the South, who has been prominent both in State and National Politics for several years. Mr. Anderson during the existence of his exchange has originated many good publicity ideas, and seems to be getting everything lined up in about the right way. The general manager of the concern is J. E. Marsh, who has been well known for several years in the film world of Chicago.

"Zudora" Nos. 8 and 9

Latest Releases of the Thanhouser Serial Contain Action, Good Photography and Thrills.

THE eighth and ninth episodes of "Zudora," the Thanhouser serial, are notable for the possession of those elements which go to make for success in this division of motion picture production. The eighth episode is called "The Foiled Elopement," and shows Zudora attempting to get away from the restraint of her Uncle Hassam Ali, and marry John Storm, her fiance. Chang, the Americanized Chinaman, employs hypnotism in his efforts to aid the guardian of the heiress of the Zudora mine in keeping watch on the girl. Madame Du Val is also brought in as an assistant.

As Zudora is under the spell of the hypnotist she does not recognize Storm when he calls for her in his machine.

Scene from "Zudora" (Thanhouser).

When Zudora is taken to another house by her uncle Storm follows, but is unable to gain admittance. Storm enlists the aid of the police, who break in and precipitate a lively fight. Hassam Ali, in disguise as Chang, escapes. Zudora, bound, frees herself through burning the material about her wrists by means of the rays of the sun through a magnifying glass. Zudora is rescued, but her elopement is frustrated.

The ninth episode is "Kidnapped." There is an abundance of incident which gives cause for thought to Zudora, the girl whose mind turns naturally to problems in which detectives delight. She joins the hunt for a missing child heiress, accounts of whose disappearance fill the newspapers. Zudora is in a fair way to restore the child when she, too, falls into the hands of the kidnappers. She is imprisoned in the caboose of a freight train standing on a siding. The conspirators place an infernal machine in a powder car adjoining the caboose. It is Jim Baird, the dual character played by James Cruze, who saves the situation when by a flying leap he gets aboard the moving train. He runs across the top of the intervening cars, climbs down and uncouples the caboose just before the explosion takes place. Zudora and the child are rescued.

James Cruze does good work as Hassam Ali, as do the other principals, Marguerite Snow as Zudora and Harry Benham as John Storm. The staging is elaborate. There are, for instance, the many secret ways of getting about the home of Hassam. One of the features of "Zudora" is the attention given to the furnishings of Hassam's home. Certainly there is no material which in richness seems so strongly to appeal to the camera as teakwood.

COMPLETE CASTS OF "YOUNG ROMANCE" AND "THE GOOSE GIRL."

The following are the complete casts for the Jesse Lasky productions of "Young Romance" and "The Goose Girl," to be released respectively on January 21 and 25; Edith Taliaferro is the star of "Young Romance," and her supporting company includes Tom Forman, Frederick Wilson, Ernest Garcia, Marshall Mackay, Harry de Vere, Parke Jones, Charles Wells, Florence Dagmar, Violet Drew, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Miss Kellar, Miss Abril and Miss White. By courtesy of the Famous Players, Miss Marguerite Clark assumes the stellar role of "The Goose Girl," and that company includes Monroe Salisbury, Sidney Dean, E. N. Dunbar, James Neill, L. Payton, P. E. Peters, H. B. C. Carpenter, Ernest Joy, J. M. Cassidy, Miss Johnson and Jane Darwell.

Leopold Wharton, Director

LEOPOLD WHARTON, selected from a large field of experts to direct the Pathe serial "The Exploits of Elaine," has had a long and interesting experience. He was born in Manchester, England, in 1870, but was brought to this country only two years later by his parents, who settled in Hempstead, Texas, at that time known as "Six Shooter." Being of an adventurous disposition he ran away from home when only eleven years old and became a fancy roller skater on the stage, earning a good salary by the time he was twelve.

Leopold Wharton.

At this time he met Minnie Maddern, who wanted to adopt him and make a great actor of him. Her kindness to him made him think of home and mother so back he went to his own people. In 1888, however, the call of the stage was too strong for him so he joined Jennie Calif's company for "$8 per week and cakes."

Since that time he has been associated with Augustin Daly, Olga Nethersole, Marie Wainwright, Creston Clark, Klaw & Erlanger and Macklyn Arbuckle. To show his versatility, sandwiched in among these engagements was one where he took out his own company of black-face comedians.

In 1909 he became interested in pictures and scored a hit as Abraham Lincoln in the Pathe play "Abraham Lincoln's Clemency." Not long afterwards he was promoted to the position of director and in that capacity produced all of those famous Pathe comedies in which Gwendoline Pates and Charles Arling appeared as well as many sterling dramas. Among his successes as a Pathe director were "The Elusive Kiss," "Here She Goes," "The Exciting Honeymoon," "Locked Out of Wedlock," "The Itinerant Marriage," and "The Striped Bathing Suit," all comedies. Among the many dramas were "The Frozen Trail," "Baseball's Peerless Leader," "Social Highwaymen," "Memories" and "Anguished Hours."

Mr. Wharton continued as a Pathe director until about a year ago, when he and his brother Theodore formed Wharton, Inc., and began the production of pictures at Ithaca, N. Y., all their output being released through Pathe. The splendid dramas "The Boundary Rider," "The Pawn of Fortune," "The Prince of India" and "The Warning" are proof of the Wharton ability.

Given such a long experience as actor with the best companies joined with five years as picture director, a mind fertile in expedients, a sound judgment and a knowledge of what the public wants and the result is Leopold Wharton, a director second to none, "the man who knows how."

BEN WILSON IN WESTERN DRAMA.

C. H. Easton, the Victor director, and Ben Wilson, have begun work on "The Rider of Silhouette," a two-reel western drama by Anthony P. Kelly, of the Eastern Universal scenario staff. The company has gone into the Adirondacks to get some snow scenes but will soon return to New York. Wilson plays the role of Tex Davis, a bad man; Joseph Girard the role of the sheriff and Dorothy Phillips the role of the sheriff's daughter. Little Jane Lee is also cast for an important part.

DELLA CONNOR SIGNS PERMANENTLY WITH GEORGE KLEINE.

Della Connor, the petite blond who has done such splendid work in the last two Kleine attractions, "Officer 666" and "Stop Thief," has been signed up permanently with the Kleine forces and will be seen in future productions. Miss Connor is well known to the world of picture fans and has had considerable stage experience, including a long term as a protegee of Gus Edwards.

"The Affair of the Deserted House"

Society Girl Loves Adventure and Gets It—Earns Big Reward for Counterfeiters (Kalem Two-Reel Picture).

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE Kalem Company will begin releasing on January 27, and on each Wednesday following for a while a new series of detective stories in which a society girl is the heroine. The role is to be played alternately by the Kalem Continental Girl (Cleo Ridgeley) and Ruth Roland, and the character is going to be a very attractive part, for there is new and breezy touch of character in this young Miss who thinks that adventure is something that naturally comes to one. She never looks for trouble, but just has her nerve with her, and if some one, for instance, slips her a note saying, "Follow me to the taxi; there's danger in it,"

Scene from "The Affair of the Deserted House" (Kalem).

she sees it through. That is what happened to her in this first installment, and she, being mistaken for the chief counterfeiter's daughter, who was to wear black and have a white rose, finds an interesting state of affairs. A note of hers taken by a street urchin (out of as fine a bunch of gamins as one could desire) brings the police, and the gang is nabbed, so she gets the thousand dollars reward that she never heard of. She doesn't need money, but counts it a windfall.

It seems to me a new idea, to exploit this kind of nervy and happy-go-lucky society girl as a detective, and we believe the series is going to be very popular. The initial picture, "The Affair of the Deserted House," a two-part offering, is fair. The acting is good and it holds one in suspense after the first scenes that do not properly belong to the main story are passed and the story well on its way. The first instalment was chosen because it was the least strong of the lot. All the pictures are interchangeable, and it makes no difference in what order they are shown. The backgrounds are the dilapidated suburbs of a city, with hills gathered about it. The camera work is good.

The opening scenes show the girl's parents taking ship for a trip around the world. The leave-taking uses up too much space and does not add to the final effect. Following this come scenes which show the counterfeiters and, on the picture's other side, the girl in her home. A copy of "Adventure" is utilized to bring out her peculiar bent, a desire to have experiences. The chief counterfeiter is wounded, and so it comes about that he needs a messenger to go between his home and the deserted house. They choose his daughter and arrange to have her meet the gang's messenger, who, seeing the black dress and white rose on the society girl, slips her the note that gets her into the "press room" of the deserted house.

The author is Hamilton Smith, and, beside the two leading women mentioned, other players are William H. West, the chief counterfeiter; Paul C. Hurst and James Horn, his right-hand assistants; and Edward Clisbee, the chief of police.

PRISONERS TO SEE "SPOILERS."

Through the courtesy of Sol. L. Lesser, president of the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., the prisoners at the State Prison, Folsom, Cal., will be given an opportunity of seeing Selig's "Spoilers." For sometime past, Lesser has been sending films to the prison each Christmas.

Lionel Pape

HE is very, very English, and he delights to act in pictures. His monocle is the wonder of the Kinetophote office force, the butt of ridicule on the part of the office boy, and, withal, the medium through which shines a most kindly eye. This just by way of introducing Mr. Lionel Pape, one of the newest recruits, to the ranks of character actors in the pictures. Mr. Pape is playing the part of Viscount Acheson in the screen production of "A Man's Shadow," which is being filmed for the Kinetophote under the direction of Tom Terriss.

Lionel Pape.

Mr. Pape was first brought to America after a successful career in London to play one of the best roles in "Fanny's First Play." After finishing with that piece, he was engaged to play the part of the aide-de-camp to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the play, "Gen. John Regan." The curious part has been his own in real life. During the coronation of King George, he was aide-de-camp to Maharajah Cooch Behar, an Indian Prince, who has since died.

One of the professional ambitions of Lionel Pape is to direct a big feature production which will have its setting in India, preferably in the domain of the present Maharajah Cooch Behar, the grandson of his former chief, and with whom he went to Oxford. He says that the Maharajah would be delighted to work in the pictures himself, and would see great fun in having the company do a spectacle with his estate as the principal locale.

SMALLWOOD GETS REAL INTERIORS.

Arthur N. Smallwood, President and General Manager of the Smallwood Film Corporation, makers of Grandin Films, in which the dainty little actress Ethel Grandin appears, has solved one of the biggest problems of filmdom.

Until a very short time ago, one of the biggest expenses a film producer had to cope with was that of a good studio in which to make the necessary interior sets for his photoplays. Today the Smallwood Film Corporation dispenses with the use of a studio altogether although their stories show a larger number of interiors and more realistic ones than ever before.

A new portable lighting system, which can be carried about in two ordinary suitcases solved the problem. Today instead of planning scenery weeks in advance. the Smallwood Film Corporation dispatches its scouts on the errand of finding the real settings the scenario calls for.

When the story calls for bedrooms, dining-room and kitchen scenes as would be found in a home of moderate circumstances, the scout goes to that kind of a home and contracts to pay the owner for the privilege of making interior pictures therein. Twenty-five dollars a day is the ordinary price paid, although when the story calls for such interiors as can only be found in a wealthy man's home, an expense of several hundred dollars is often gone to in order to get the privilege of bringing the players, director and camera expert into the home.

The "motion picture scout" is invading stores, offices, factories and homes. It is his business to get the right settings and bring realism to the picture. The new vocation demands tact, perseverance and an abundance of just "plain nerve."

The adventures of a "motion picture scout" might prove an interesting story judging from the experience of the scouts employed by Arthur N. Smallwood. Their work, however, is productive of good results inasmuch as they are making the photoplay settings more realistic and incidentally lowering the cost of producing good pictures.

"Retrieving the Past"

Warner's Features to Release Three-Reel Feature of Unusually Fine Action and Detail.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

FOUNDED on a story that is simple in outline, but interesting withal, "Retrieving the Past," released by Warner's Features under the A. C. A. D. brand, attracts attention chiefly through the splendid manner in which it has been staged and enacted. It is not a production in which thrills predominate, but it is one which displays a wealth of legitimate dramatic action presented in the most finished style. The company of talented European players to whom the leading roles have been entrusted, have, after the manner of true artists, allowed themselves to become absorbed in the individualities of the characters of the play, to the extent of adding to the production a vivid realism.

Scene from "Retrieving the Past" (Warner).

Neither has the director of the picture forgotten what is expected of him, for in the detail of the play is evident a thorough and careful examination of the plot, and development of the character work, which latter indicates an insight into the human side of the question.

Judging from the fact that an Eclair trailer follows in the wake of the picture, the production has been staged at the Paris Eclair studios. In it an exquisite type of photography is displayed, which, coupled with effective lighting and tastefully arranged sets adds something more than a "mite" to the enjoyment of the whole.

The various situations of the play have been recorded without superfluous action or excess of emotion, and the main theme of the story has been adhered to with few complications. At one or two points only does the question of identification arise, which uncertainty is quickly cleared away by explanation in sub-title or the presentation of a new angle of the situation.

Jan. 25th is the date set for the release of the production, which promises to please the most fastidious audience.

ROBERT EDESON IN "A GRAIN OF DUST."

William Fox, head of the Box Office Attractions Company, has selected Lloyd B. Carleton to direct a picturized version of "A Grain of Dust," in which Robert Edeson will appear in the role originally portrayed by James K. Hackett. "A Grain of Dust" is a dramatization of the widely read and discussed novel penned by David Graham Phillips, and was used as a starring medium for Mr. Hackett, several seasons ago.

In support of Mr. Edeson, there will appear a company of more than ordinary excellence, consisting of Claire Whitney, Byron Douglas, Edna Pendleton, Walter Hitchcock, Nanon Walsh, Stuart Holmes and Arthur Clifton.

KERRIGAN COMPANY IN "FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD."

While waiting for the completion of a number of Egyptian sets to be used in the production of the sixth chapter of the "Terence O'Rourke" series, the Kerrigan-Victor Company, under the direction of Jacques Jaccard, has staged another of their one-reel Western dramas, entitled "Five Hundred Dollars Reward."

Warren Kerrigan is supported by Vera Sisson, George Periolat and Raymond G. Nye.

Leon J. Bamberger

LEON J. BAMBERGER, who has been acting as special representative for the World Film Corporation since September 1st, and who during this time has done extensive work for the company in Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh, has been appointed assistant to C. R. Seelye, director of sales, and will in the future remain in the New York executive offices. His work for the most part will be along educational lines, viz., instructing the various managers and salesmen of the organization in new methods of renting films and showing them how they can increase their selling power.

Leon J. Bamberger.

Mr. Bamberger is very well known in local film circles, even though most of his time has been spent in cities far removed from New York. Before his connection with the World Film Corporation he managed the Peerless Film & Supply Company in Indianapolis; prior to that he managed the booking department of the Kinemacolor Company of America at their Chicago office; was assistant manager of the Mutual Film Corporation in Indianapolis and their manager in Buffalo. Mr. Bamberger first entered the film field as assistant to Robert Lieber of the H. Lieber Co. and General Film Co., Indianapolis. That was five years ago, and today Mr. Bamberger is still a very young man, having just passed his twenty-sixth milestone last week. He has been the recipient of several flattering offers in the last month, all of which he has politely refused to consider, as he firmly believes that the company with which he is now affiliated has an exceptionally bright future, and he is a staunch admirer of Lewis J. Selznick, vice president and general manager, whom he considers the "king bee" of the motion picture industry.

FAVORITE PLAYERS' FILMS IN CUBA.

The Favorite Players Film Co. has arranged with Mr. Ludwig Diller, of The Atlas Film Trading Co., to take Favorite Players' films to Cuba and other South American countries. Mr. Diller left for Havana, Cuba, on January 6, taking with him the four-part photoplay "The Key to Yesterday" from the book by Charles Nevil Buck, featuring Carlyle Blackwell.

Mr. Diller is thoroughly familiar with film conditions in Latin-American countries, having devoted much time to that particular trade. He said, when seen at the office of the Favorite Players, "When you realize that these people are paying twenty cents gold for inferior shows you must admit that here is an excellent market for high-grade American film right at our door-step. I am convinced that superior features such as "The Key to Yesterday" must prove highly profitable and I am already laying my plans to take "The Man Who Could Not Lose" and "The Last Chapter" to Cuba, Porto Rico, and other South American countries."

JOHN EMERSON IN "THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE."

Following his successful debut in motion pictures, in the Famous Players' production of Charles Frohman's detective comedy-drama, "The Conspiracy," John Emerson will be again presented in another Famous Players' offering, in a screen production of the celebrated play, "The Bachelor's Romance," by Martha Morton, a charming "human-nature" drama, brimming over with quaint humor, colorful characterizations and refreshing romance. Mr. Emerson's success in "The Conspiracy" was so instantaneous and general as to make further introduction to the motion picture public unnecessary.

"The Girl of the Golden West"

One-Time Dramatic Success Produced in Pictures by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THOSE who have seen this great American classic with Frank Keenan as the Sheriff and Blanche Walsh in the part of the Girl, will be disposed to turn a severely critical eye on a film adaptation of the play. I am glad to be able to assure them at once that Theodore Roberts does not lag an inch behind Keenan's impressive performance and that Mabel Van Buren is a most acceptable substitute for Blanche Walsh. In the part of Ramerrez the "road agent," House Peters has surpassed himself. In appearance, in manners, in histrionic power, in the subtleties of characterization this artist was the beau ideal of the modern Robin Hood of the West.

The extraordinary success of the play on the speaking stage was due to many causes, every one of which will equally operate in favor of the filmed version. In the first place the play is of the virile American type, whose appeal to our audiences will always be irresistible, its dramatic construction is singularly free from flaws, the atmosphere comes upon us conventional mortals of the East like a storm from the mountain tops, the scenery is the best and the most picturesque in all California. There is another element of strength and popularity in the play which does not lie on the surface but which deserves the attention of the exhibitor. In "The Girl of the Golden West" we ardently sympathize with every one of the principal characters. The girl who has preserved her maidenly modesty in the riotous saloon of the frontier, the "road agent," whom the simple faith and love of the girl converts into a gentleman in the rough, the big-hearted sheriff, a keen sportsman and always "on the square" endowed with a sense of honor as sensitive as that of any cavalier—these are types which will forever charm and delight us. It stands to reason that the screen excels the stage in one of the great essentials of this play: Scenery.

Scene from "The Girl of the Golden West" (Lasky).

The story on the screen has the background, which it needs to make it perfect in all respects. Some one with the eye of a playwright and a landscape painter selected the exteriors. The interiors are all good, a rare thing in a play of this kind. One of the strongest points in the play was the climax; it comes swiftly and withal logically, it is a real culmination of all that has gone before and it rouses the emotions of the audience to the highest pitch. The climax on the screen has most of these elements of strength.

"The Girl of the Golden West" is truly one of the chef d'oeuvres of the Lasky Company and it will, I have no doubt, be a source of pride and profit to every exhibitor who can show it.

VITAGRAPH THEATRE PROGRAM.

The program for the week of January 10 at the Vitagraph Theatre, Forty-fourth street and Broadway, New York, will include a three-part dramatic appeal for the relief of Widowed Mothers, a measure that will be urged at the forthcoming session of the New York legislature. This subject was reviewed at length on page 52 of the issue of January 2, 1915. Other pictures to be shown are: "The Hair of Her Head," "Chiefly Concerning Males" and "A Mix-Up in Dress Suit Cases." "A Nocturne in A Flat," a one-act dramatic sketch, will enter upon its second week.

Handworth Out of Excelsior

Company Has Not Yet Selected Successor for Former President and Producer.

FORMAL announcement is made that Harry Handworth, president and producer of the Excelsior Film Company, last week resigned from the company. William H. Wright, treasurer of the Excelsior, and the representative of the financial interests behind the company, said on Wednesday that Mr. Handworth's successor had not yet been chosen, but that in all probability the election of two members of the board of directors would be taken up this week, and that, following the selection of a president, choice would be made of a producer.

Harry Handworth.

Mr. Handworth was one of the organizers of the Excelsior last February. The company has put on the market pictures that established the position of the concern right from the first. Some of the subjects Mr. Handworth has directed are "The Toll of Mammon," "The Path Forbidden," "When Fate Leads Trump" and "In the Shadow," which have been or will be released on the Alliance program. Mr. Handworth is a writer of scripts as well as a successful adapter. His skill in the technique of production was shown in "The Pathfinder," where he accomplished the camera feat of showing Octavia Handworth in double exposure passing to herself and receiving in synchronim a letter, cards, packages and clothes. Mr. Handworth was for many years one of the prominent producers of the Pathe studios in Jersey City.

When seen at the Screen Club this week Mr. Handworth said that he had as yet made no arrangements for the future.

SLEEPY EYE NOT SO SLEEPY, AFTER ALL.

Sleepy Eye, Minnesota, a town of 2,000 population, is anything but so somnolent as its name would indicate. At least it boasts one exhibitor who is thoroughly wide awake in the person of Mr. J. B. McNeil, manager of the Opera House, who last week contracted for George Kleine's "Quo Vadis," "Spartacus," "The Naked Truth," Savage and Tiger," "Lion of Venice" and "European Armies in Action." Mr. McNeil will show these attractions to Sleepy Eye at admission prices of ten and twenty cents, except Quo Vadis?" which will play at fifteen and twenty-five cents. All of which goes to show that the national supply of "progressiveness" has not yet been cornered by the Broadway film capitalists. Mr. McNeil is certainly to be congratulated upon his enterprise and far-sightedness.

BLACKWELL FIGHTING DISEASE.

The English government is curiously paternal in the conduct of its colonies, and, in cases of native disease, supplies the physical wants of the sufferers, as well as administering the governmental business of the provinces. In the stress of fever camps, and under the press of emergencies arising from widespread and devastating plagues, to which all tropical countries are subjected at times, medical attention is often difficult to procure, and fever camps are often placed under the control of civil authorities. It is to such a fever camp that Carlyle Blackwell, in the role of Donald Gordon, in "The Last Chapter," returns to the tropical land which he has learned to love during his sojourn as an explorer, on a previous trip. The black natives of Central Africa place implicit confidence in their white protectors, and learn to love and obey them with a dog-like devotion.

All of the above is clearly shown in many striking views of African kraals in "The Last Chapter," and the tropical atmosphere of these scenes forms a strange contrast to the luxurious civilization of the scenes laid in both England and America.

"The Millionaire Engineer"

Two-Reel Imp, Featuring King Baggot, in Which House of Washingtonian Period Is Burned to the Ground.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

DEVELOPED partly as a love story, and partly as dealing with the labor question, this film holds much that is interesting from more than one point of view. King Baggot, in the role of the Millionaire Engineer, is the typical hero whose misunderstood efforts on behalf of his fellow engineers lead his love affair into rough and stony paths. He is well supported by Bessie Toner, Frank Smith, Arline Pretty, and Ned Riardon.

A good deal of interest has been worked into the production by the interpolation of a forest fire in which an old house which stood on the plot of ground about to be occupied by the new Universal studio was burned for the occasion. This house was one about which the romance of the days of Washington clung, but had doubtless passed beyond its usefulness.

Scene from "The Millionaire Engineer" (Imp.).

The picture is notable for effectiveness of staging; its settings being well chosen, and its composition good. Plenty of action and efficient handling of the theme by the director and his players make the production a thoroughly acceptable one. There is a decided feeling of admiration for the Millionaire, and for his brave fiancee, when the daring feat of rushing a train through the raging forest fires to the rescue of a paralyzed comrade, and also to the school filled with children, who, but for the bravery of the rescue party of two, would surely have perished in the flames, has been accomplished.

Some good effects have been accomplished in the mob scenes, when the discontented employees march to the home of the millionaire, disturbing the peace at a reception which is being held in honor of his betrothal.

The story is not particularly strong; therefore a great deal of credit is due George Lessey for the clever manner in which he has developed it. The picture has been artistically photographed, and will be welcomed as good entertainment by any audience.

BERMAN MANAGER OF WORLD FILM'S NEW YORK EXCHANGE.

S. J. Berman is now the manager of the New York exchange of the World Film Corporation, having assumed the direction of that live branch Monday, December 28. Prior to coming to this work, Manager Berman was located in Kansas City, where he represented the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation, and devoted his attention to the "Million Dollar Mystery" and "Zudora." Mr. Berman is a native of Pittsburgh, and made his debut in the motion picture business as the secretary and treasurer of the Ft. Pitt Film and Supply Company. When that company went out of existence, and after the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company, Mr. Berman became associated with the Pittsburgh Calcium Light and Film Company, as manager of their Des Moines, Iowa, branch and Omaha, Nebraska, branch. Later he went into business for himself as the head of the Progressive Film Company, Omaha, which later was absorbed by the Mutual Film Company. Soon after Mr. Berman opened up the first World Film office in Kansas City, and left that organization to join the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation.

Helen Holmes.

GOING out to the Kalem studio to interview J. P. McGowan, the railroad director, I was informed that he was down at the depot doing some train stuff. At the station I asked for McGowan and his company and was directed to the yards and there, who should be directing but pretty Helen Holmes, the heroine of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series. She told me of the accident that had befallen Mr. McGowan, and that he was at present in the hospital, where he would probably remain for many weeks. As I was after an interview with a director of railroad films, Helen looked good to me.

Perched on a pile of ties, this nervy girl told me the story of how the railroad series are made and how she came into the picture. I always thought these pictures were attended with more or less safety. If one did not see the people it would seem so, but death is ever lurking for these daring performers. Not that they are careless, but the scenarios some times call for exceptional stunts, and, as Helen said, "if we do not go ahead and do them, what would the pictures be like? Sometimes I do feel a little hesitation about doing something daring, but then I only think twice and go ahead."

Helen Holmes.

Everyone who has followed this Kalem series will need no information as to this work, for the films show well what these people have been doing. Miss Holmes has been in pictures only a short time, coming from a ranch in Nevada. She was a friend of Mabel Normand, and it was through the Keystone favorite that a new star was added to the film heavens. In September, 1911, Helen, then a buxom girl still in her 'teens, wrote to Mabel and soon after came out to California and joined the Keystone, where she was put in some good pictures, the latest being "Barney Oldfield's Race for a Life." She was found by McGowan when he came West alone in March of the following year to organize a company in Glendale, and, in her, he saw a coming leading lady, and he proceeded to steal her, and ever since she has been the leading lady of the Kalem company in Glendale.

Miss Holmes was born in South Bend, Indiana, on the seventh day of July, in 189—— I promised not to give the exact year, but it was late in that period, just before the dawn of the one nine double o series. Later Chicago became her home, where she was educated in St. Mary's convent, after which she came west to Death Valley with her mother and sister. For two solid years Helen wore overalls, boots and rough clothing. She never wore a hat, and was out doors all the time. Her home there is ten miles from Shoshone.

Among the accomplishments of this daring girl are many athletic arts. She can drive a locomotive, an automobile, a horse, which she rides like a cowboy. Swimming and diving are specialties with her, while all kinds of outdoor games are right in her line. She owns a bulldog, "Casey," who is becoming a famous player in the "Helen" series, having learned to jump on and off a moving train.

A few of Miss Holmes' best pictures were "The Battle of Fort Laramie," in which she played the Indian girl, and for which she received the largest number of letters of commendation; "The Rajah's Jewels," as the daughter; "The Identification," a plain dramatic lead; and "The Conductor's Courtship," as the agent's daughter. In addition, she has appeared in a large number of other successful releases under the Kalem brand.

At present Miss Holmes is managing the company while its director is in the hospital. She writes scripts and does most of the work, and goes to the hospital nearly every evening to confer with Mr. McGowan. CLARKE IRVINE.

"The Truth Wagon"

Five-Reel Offering on Alliance Program—Is Melodrama Full of Fresh Comedy and Features Max Figman.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

CAST.

John Ross.....Mr. Max Figman
Francis Sullivan.....Mr. Al W. Filson
Forbes.....Mr. H. A. Livingston
Helen Dean.....Miss Lolita Robertson

A GOOD feature comedy offering has been made from Hayden Talbot's play, "The Truth Wagon," one in which the laughs come suddenly and often and without constraint, in most cases. The story deals with the inside and underhand workings of politics, is melodramatic, has many exciting places and holds well from the very first. Elliot J. Clawson has written the scenario and has kept it almost wholly free from cramping stage suggestions and made the story run smoothly although one or two subtitles seem heavily burdened. Director Max Figman, himself the leading member of the cast, has contrived to make the action human and convincing. It is well staged and the cinematography, for which Georges Rizard is responsible, is clear-and life-like. A rather large audience of picture men seemed to like it; one heard hearty laughter quite often. It ought to be a good offering of popular entertainment.

Scene from "The Truth Wagon" (Masterpiece).

The central character in the plot is John Ross, played by Max Figman. This eccentric, joke-loving millionaire is amusing and likable. Mr. Figman has made him of the Van Bibber kind and has drawn him with the right touches that convince and make the things he does often compellingly funny. Ross' father is running for governor, and it being the year for the "long hairs" to win, the Boss makes a deal with him. The candidate prefers not to talk with the Boss; a smooth henchman makes the deal much more palatable. The father fears his son's practical jokes will harm him politically.

On the other side of the picture is the owner of "The Truth," a daily paper, and his daughter, who is working as a reporter. She tries to interview John Ross and it ends by his buying "The Truth." The Boss butts into the deal and wants to know what John Ross is going to do and this starts the melodramatic story through which there is much comedy woven. Lolita Robertson, the heroine, also carries her role well and it must be added that most of the other parts are clearly drawn.

GREAT NORTHERN TO RELEASE NEW BETTY NANSEN PICTURE.

The Great Northern Film Company announces that it has for release an elaborate new production featuring the distinguished star, Betty Nansen. The photoplay is entitled "A Woman of Impulse," in four parts, which is said to superbly suit the requirements of this unusually gifted actress. In fact it is claimed that in her latest vehicle she is seen to better advantage than ever before.

Miss Nansen is far too well known and admired by American moving picture fans to necessitate lengthy comment or praise in these columns. Suffice to say that she is one of the world's greatest tragediennes and is known as the Bernhardt of Scandinavia, her native country. Well remembered is her powerful acting in former Great Northern productions by the American public and it is safe to say that all will welcome her return to the screen in "A Woman of Impulse."

"Samson"

Splendid Picturization of Henri Bernstein's Drama as Produced on the Legitimate Stage by Charles Frohman.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE CAST.

Maurice Brachard.....William Farnum
Marie, his wife.....Maud Gilbert
Marquis D'Andolin.....Edgar L. Davenport
Marquise D'Andolin.....Agnes Everitt
Max D'Andolin, their son.....Harry Spingler
Jerome Govain.....Chas. Guthrie
Elise Vernette.....Carey Leigh
M. Deveraux.....Geo. de Carlton
M. Fontenay.....Elmer Peterson
Baron Hatzfeldt.....Edward Kyle

THE picturization of Henri Bernstein's great human drama, "Samson," as presented by William Fox through the Box Office Attraction Company, reflects credit not alone on its producer, Edgar Lewis, but on the mind whose judgment chose the play for presentation on the screen.

The theme, not that of the Biblical story, is one that is redundant with human feeling and passion. Its appeal is general because it touches the average normal human being. Its field of action is broad because it covers a vast human, social, and financial area.

As a film production there is little, if any, fault to be found with it. The action runs smoothly, partly because there is no evidence of any tendency to save film by omitting scenes which constitute connecting links, or to elongate unnecessarily scenes whose presence are significant of a mere suggestion or thought, and largely because the director and his talented company of players have combined with intelligence the human and artistic instinct in the handling of the theme.

It is safe to say that William Farnum has never been seen to better advantage on the creen. His portrayal of the dock-hand, Maurice Brachard, whose remarkable success in life was inspired by the story of the Samson of Biblical history, is a veritable triumph. He has cloaked the character of the silent drama with a virility, a strength of purpose, and a moral cleanliness that stamps itself indelibly on the face of the production.

In the handing out of honors, Maud Gilbert comes next in attainment as well as opportunity. Her portrayal of the wife who married to save her family from financial ruin is a clever bit of acting. The gradual turn of her affections to her "copper king" husband, whom, in a spirit of detestation she dubs "dock hand" has been splendidly accomplished.

The presentation of the Paris Bourse where the copper panic scene takes place, and where Brachard pulls his temple of gold in ruins about him that the man who "spat upon him" and insulted his wife might "lie mangled in its ruins," has been well done, and presents perhaps one of the most attractive scenes in the production.

Scene from "Samson" (Box Office).

What will doubtless be enjoyed more than any scene in the picture is that in the offices of Brachard, where he handles the detestible Govain with all the force of his "dock hand" origin.

"Samson" is a powerful production. The thread of suspense is complete; each scene seems more alluring than the last, and in its five reels the action never flags, nor presents a single rough spot. A great deal might also be said in compliment of the sets and locations chosen throughout.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by the REV. W. H. JACKSON

THEORY—PRACTICE—RESULTS.

Several years ago we theorized as to the probable value of the educational picture, the time has now come when those theories having been practically developed, results can be tabulated, and a sound judgment formed. Apart from educational pictures, the educational influence of all good pictures in general must be widely noticed, especially when it is found that the use of good pictures have been productive of elevating influences, what must be the higher good when pictures intended for uplifting results have become widespread?

It is no exaggeration to say that from all parts of the world there come reports of the beneficial effects of the uplifting picture, and there is no scope of secular or religious thought which has not felt the power of this advance, and the need for a larger and wider adaptation of those powers.

The Moral Uplift.

In noticing the great moral good brought by proper pictures, we are fortunate in being able to fall back upon facts and figures officially rendered, and not upon either the opinions of the enthusiast, or the visions of the optimist. During the last few years in the State of New York alone nearly 1,000 of the baser kind of saloons have been closed by the transfer of the youth of the state from the criminal making evil of drink, to the mental, moral and spiritual possibilities of the pictures. In other words, the pictures have been more effective than the combined agencies of all classes of anti-saloon leagues, temperance workers, prohibition politicians, or even the reform agencies of the churches. Added to this there is also a similar effect coming over the dance hall and the pool parlor. That the youth alone is so beneficially affected must not be supposed.

The Poor Man's Home Has Been Made Richer.

The Liquor Dealers Association is our authority for declaring that the poor man's nickel no longer flows unrestrainedly in the cash box of the bar—why? The poor man goes himself and takes his family to the picture theater; the result of this now takes up another form. The great number of children to whom the pictures have become so familiar are making an unconscious demand upon the educational authorities to satisfy their craving appetite for more illustrative teaching, so that there is resulting a great Pressure Upon Teachers.

Everyone in any way connected with the educational branch of the moving picture business testifies to the fact that it is impossible to comply with the demands made upon them for the best way of meeting the requirements resulting from the above-stated conditions. In this crisis the desires of many school principals are becoming unreasonable, finding the moving picture teaching so successful, they immediately ask for a supply of pictures to run parallel with their text books, and become severe and critical if the miracle they ask is not immediately wrought.

Thus it results that the theory of the educational picture has become a definite pratical and profitable fact, so far exceeding the most sanguine anticipations that the result is a Temporary Dilemma.

At the present time it is impossible to do all that the new users of the educational picture ask, for two reasons: First, the field of opportunities is so great that it will take time to adequately satisfy them; and second, the demands made are too often unreasonable and extravagant, too much being expected of this youngest professor in pedagogy. The dilemma is, however, only temporary; the young educational picture, like the famous English statesman whose opponents criticised his youth, replied: "That is a fault from which I am daily proving less guilty." Every day is bringing the educational picture nearer its required standard; patience from the expectants, coupled with energy by the suppliers, will work wonders and nowhere is the desire and help combining to bring about that result than in the efforts of the Moving Picture World.

WHERE EDUCATIONAL PICTURE IS WORKING.

History and government are being guided by means of the moving picture. No greater question is just now before the American government than the control of the Philippine Islands and the granting of independence. Dean Worcester, a twelve-year resident in an official capacity of those islands, took occasion to fortify himself with a thorough series of films, taken under all possible conditions, for the purpose of showing the exact status of the people, their surroundings and development or, as the case may be, any lack of development. These pictures are now used and studied in Washington and will aid largely in deciding the immediate future of many races of people. The point worthy of most emphasis is the fact that without the moving pictures, a commission might have been compelled to visit those far-away regions.

When statesmen and governments can use the moving picture in such a remarkable manner their usefulness as an educational power is exceedingly great.

* * *

France has so far revived from the first shock of the war that the moving pictures are now resuming their place before the public. Of course they are of the instructive rather than the entertaining class. People want to know what is going on rather than to be amused. Many of the prohibitions of three months ago have been removed—there is therefore more freedom both in the taking of pictures as in the exhibiting of them. Invaluable as historical records those which are now news conveyors will prove, and their appearance in this country will be welcomed.

In England the moving picture has proved the timely attraction suited to the occasion. Sports have been suspended, theaters seem superfluous in the face of tribulation; the moving picture has proved both instructive and relaxing. The legitimate attendance has been conceded as appropriate and the moving picture has proved the most acceptable exponent of twentieth century needs.

A parish house especially adapted for moving pictures is now the demand of many churches. While always considered a splendid adjunct to the social life of a religious community or society, the acquirement of one was always looked upon as a luxury afforded by the few of those possessing larger financial facilities; the average church could get along with the usual equipments of the one church building. The proof that the moving picture is as necessary to true social religious work as anything else, coupled with the very proper decision that the church auditorium is not the place for exhibitions, the parish-house comes to solve the problem, thus many churches will now acquire this addition with its advantages, while it may also prove that by the aid of the pictures it can be made to pay for its own erection. Many a pastor will be thankful if the moving picture in addition to proving an instructive and entertaining aid to all his endeavors can bring him the much desired parish room. The pastor of a church in Peoria, Ill., is thankful for this result and is proceeding to the erection of such a building. In Millburn, N. J., another pastor is following out the same idea and is seeking a license to exhibit. If this brief note can be read by many pastors in all parts of the country they may also delight in the happy combination and hail with gladness this much desired growth to those activities which at once increase the efficiency as well as the attractiveness of the church. The problem of "holding the young people" will have received another solution and an active, wide-awake, up-to-date minister who is able to add a parish-room and moving pictures to his work will be happy.

* * *

Moving pictures as an educational factor are an established fact in the State of California. The secretary of the State Board of Education has recommended their adoption for permanent use in all the schools. The Extension Department of the State University and the State Librarian have plans under way for a general use of the pictures along their own particular lines of work.

Among the Picture Theaters

CUMBERLAND THEATER, BROOKLYN, NEW YORK.

Picture House Playing to Capacity Since Opening—Under Management of Francis A. Mangan, an Experienced Picture Man.

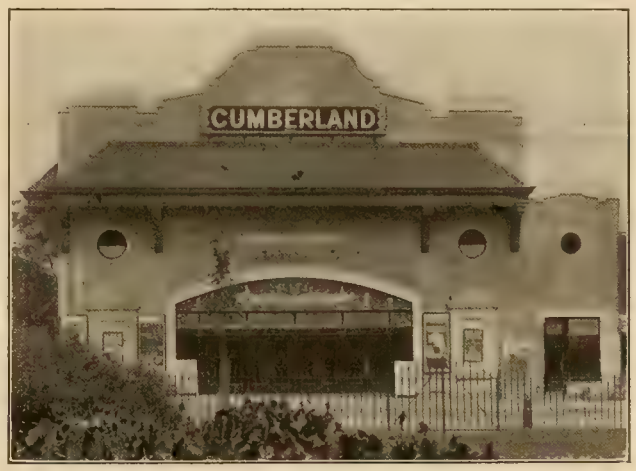
THAT the Photoplays Theater Corporation of New York City has made a wise choice in installing Francis A. Mangan as manager of its Cumberland Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y., is manifested in the ideal way that that house is being conducted. There is an atmosphere of quiet elegance and repose pervading the entire structure which is perceptible immediately upon entering. The ushers are courteous and polite; the doorman and cashier are attentive and always willing to answer whatever question is put to them concerning the house or show. Taking the operation of the theater as a whole, it is run on a systematic and well conducted basis.

Francis A. Mangan.

Francis A. Mangan is still in his twenties. He has been in the motion picture trade for the past eight years and knows the business thoroughly. Early in the year 1907 he became affiliated with Marcus Loew, who at that time had a string of small theaters throughout Greater New York. Having knowledge of the operation of a picture house and perceiving that good profit could be made by the presentation of motion pictures in almost any kind of a place where there were a few seats (so interested were the public), Mr. Mangan severed his Loew connection in the beginning of 1909, and opened a small but pretty and well built theater at the corner of Suter and Alabama avenues in the East New York section of Brooklyn. He christened the house, which had a seating capacity of 299, the Criterion. An admission price of 10 cents was charged for an hour's show. By careful management this theater netted Mr. Mangan a handsome weekly profit. Deciding to open a bigger and more beautiful house, he sold the Criterion in 1911. While he was cogitating upon the location of his contemplated theater and formulating plans of its size and architecture an opportunity presented itself that to Mr. Mangan seemed to be a remunerative one; namely, to enter the vaudeville booking game, and in partnership with Marcus & Harrison a vaudeville booking agency was opened at 1547 Broadway, New York City. But the lure of the motion picture was so strong that he did not feel content in his new sphere, and the result was that after running this booking office for a short time he disposed of it at a reasonable profit and started on the road with a film entitled, "Around the World." This picture was composed of scenic subjects made by Pathe, Gaumont, Eclair and a number of other manufacturers' travel films which Mr. Mangan had bought outright. He then removed the trademarks, put in fresh subtitles, and spliced the subjects together, making a number of reels of views of absorbing travel interest and gave to the set the name of "Around the World." He played towns and cities of all sizes, giving shows at 15 and 25 cents until 1913. The success of this venture caused him to further appreciate the public's interest in the motion picture. While he was traveling through Ottawa he was caught in a blizzard which kept him in that city for five days, during which time his picture played to capacity business.

In the fall of 1913 he became superintendent of the Regent theater, 116th street and Seventh avenue, New York City, of which S. L. Rothapfel was at that time manager. When Rothapfel resigned the management of the Regent to accept a like position in the Strand theater at Broadway and 47th street, New York City, F. M. McClintic was inaugurated as manager and Mr. Mangan was advanced to assistant manager. After running the theater for several months, McClintic was transferred to one of the Photoplay Theater Company's houses in Richmond, Va., and Mangan was made manager of the Regent, and directed the destinies of that house until June 23, 1914. The Cumberland, a new picture house, was opened by the Photoplay company in Brooklyn about that time and Mr. Mangan was installed in that theater as manager. Under the capable direction of Mr. Mangan the house since its opening has been doing a good volume of business, and has already declared a quarterly dividend of 7 per cent.

Mr. Mangan's personality has created for himself a large number of friends among his patrons, which constitute a valuable business asset. He has built up a clientele for the Cumberland not only from the elite of the residence of the locality of the theater, but also from sections miles distant from the house. In conversing with Mr. Mangan on the picture business one is uncertain whether the success and knowledge attained by him has been by dint of hard work and study of the phases of the business or whether it is due to an inborn genius, as he seems to have a comprehensive understanding of the branches of the trade with which he has had no previous connection and a concrete idea of just what kind of show will please and entertain different classes of people. It is aphoristic that some exhibitors make a success of running a theater simply because the extraordinary workings of fate has installed them in a location where the people are, colloquially speaking, "picture mad," and where there is very little, if any, competition. But if such an exhibitor should be unfortunate enough to open a house where there is plenty of competition he undoubtedly would make a failure. Not so with Mr. Mangan. Fate has not been so kind as to place him in localities where the people were absolutely picture mad. The success that he has secured has been partly by, it would seem, a perfect application of the science of the business to concrete pursuit and partly by inherent foresight. The science and art of an occupation are always essential to positive achievement.



Cumberland Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Cumberland is situated at the corner of Cumberland street and Greene avenue, a section of Brooklyn where trade can be worked up for miles from the house. Trolley lines and the Fulton street elevated railway pass within a half a block of the door. The structure is as near fireproof as it is possible to build one with the present fire resisting material. As will be seen from the accompanying photograph of the exterior the building proper has been erected of concrete, reinforced by steel and iron. Posters announcing current and coming pictures are displayed in neat wooden and gold frames with glass coverings, and these are placed in positions that will not hamper the easy egress and ingress of patrons. The name of the theater is emblazoned on an electric sign prominently placed near the roof of the house. It is also worked into the beautifully stained glass ornamentation directly over the lobby doors. The floor of the lobby is of red tile and is always spotlessly clean. Beside the cashier's window is an attractive gold frame giving the prices of the shows for adults and children. To the right of the lobby and immediately behind the ticket office is the manager's office, while to the left is a patrons' resting room with wicker tables and chairs treated in green, which match the carpet and wall and ceiling decorations. The interior embellishments are quite attractive and refined. Red, gold, pale blue and cream form the color scheme.

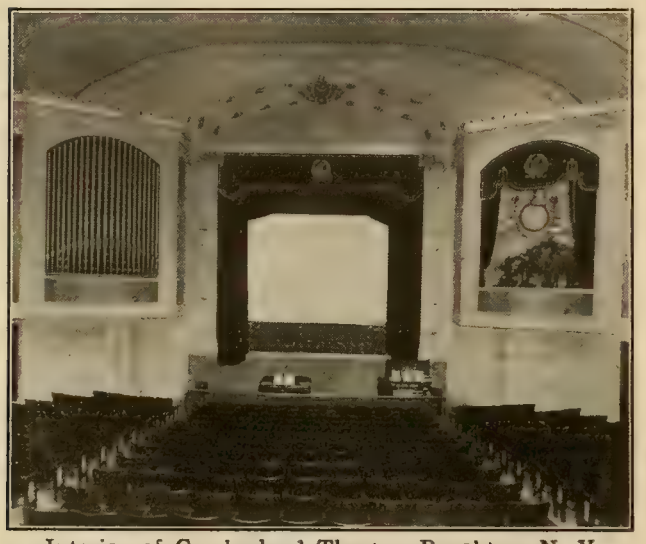
The 600 seats are divided by two longitudinal aisles which are covered with thick red carpet. The foyer is also laid with the same kind of flooring. The seats are finished to match the carpet and are in perfect harmony with the general color scheme. To the left of the screen are the pipes of the big $8,000 Austen organ, the keyboard of which is placed directly in front of the stage. To the right is the singer's balcony. This as well as the proscenium arch is adorned with expensive plush draperies, and in the middle of the valance, which is ornamented and fringed in gold extending across the top of these openings, is an old English "C" done in gold and encircled with a wreath. In the center of the singer's balcony suspended by heavy gold painted chains is a cut glass flower receptacle. There are always plenty of fresh ferns to be found in this recess. The indirect lighting system is used. In the lobby there are three big bronze electroliers. From the walls of the auditorium at a distance of about ten feet from the floor a number of electrically lighted stained glass bowls project which add a rich effect to the interior.



Interior of Cumberland Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.

As a concrete example of his enterprise, Mr. Mangan recently induced Lilliam Walker, Hughie Mack, Flora Finch, Marion Leonard and Norma Talmage of the Vitagraph Company to appear at his house and give short monologues. It is his intention to have prominent photoplayers at his theater occasionally.

Much advertising is done in the local papers, by painted signs in different parts of the city, and by billboards. A neat ten page program is printed each week which gives the program for that week, and is well patronized by the local advertiser.

The two motor-driven Simplex machines are in a spacious and well erected operating room, and are presided over by two competent operators. The pictures comprising each show are run off before the opening of the theater, and the proper musical accompaniment is selected. Francis E. Cocks is the organist, while Mrs. Anna Johnson is the assistant organist and pianist.

The admission prices for matinees are 10 cents the entire house, and 10 cents for children and 15 cents for adults are the rate for evening shows.

HABLE BROTHERS BUILDING ANOTHER THEATER

The historic Taylor Hotel in Main street, Winchester, Va., where opposing generals of the Union and Confederate armies stopped during the Civil War, has been purchased by Fred H. Hable of Washington and his brother, Herman H., of Winchester, who will raze the old structure and erect a modern building containing a moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 1,500. Plans have already been drawn, and the demolition of the old edifice will begin shortly. Hable Brothers are also the lessees and managers of the Auditorium in Winchester.

COLONIAL THEATER, TACOMA, WASH.

Beautiful New Picture House a Credit to the Industry.—Has Many Pleasing Novelties and Innovations.

WHEN the Moore Amusement Company, Inc., of Tacoma, Wash., owners and operators of the Colonial theater at 918 C street that city opened that house, the public was, indeed, given a picture theater to be proud of. From the accompanying illustrations of the exterior and interior of the structure a concrete idea can be obtained of the architecture and the beauty of construction. There is no unnecessary ornamentation, and everything bespeaks of elegance. The view of the facade shows that it was built of brick and hollow tile. It is a two-story structure and the two big fluted stone columns running from the ground to the top of the building at each end and connected at the top by gable masonry savors of the Colonial period. A balcony which extends from the building to the edge of the sidewalk over the two main entrances also serves as a canopy. It is supported by four strong iron uprights. The name of the theater is displayed on a large electric sign which runs from the top of the building to the top of the balcony. On the front end of the roof, perched upon a stone circle enclosing the American shield, stands a massive bronze eagle with open wings. Displayed in neat frames in the lobby and on the sidewalk are posters of current and coming attractions and portraits of leading moving picture actors and actresses. The front of the Colonial has a very inviting and clean appearance, and as this condition of affairs is usually indicative that the interior is just as inviting and that the house is under competent management, the Colonial ought to do a very good share of business.

Colonial Theater, Tacoma, Wash.

Interior of Colonial Theater, Tacoma, Wash.

The building is 65 by 120. As a means for protecting those already seated from the detracting influence of those coming in and the swinging of the foyer doors, a wall with arched windows and doors has been erected dividing the auditorium proper from the foyer. These doors and windows are draped with heavy velour curtains. Inside of each one of these openings at the top has been placed a valence, in the center of which is an old English "C" inside of a wreath. The draperies in the loges are of an old rose color which harmonizes with the general color scheme of the interior. It is estimated that the draperies cost over $3,000. At both ends of the foyer are broad stairways which lead to the loges, the manager's office, the women's retiring room, operating room and the men's smoking room. The color of the carpet covering the floor of the foyer is dark brown. The interior walls are painted a warm tan and the ceilings are a combination of cream and tan, giving the place a very pleasing appearance. As a means of adding to the attractiveness of the auditorium the ceiling is laid off in big squares, each square being bordered with fluted moulding. There are a number of big bronze receptacles suspended by strong chains from the ceiling of the auditorium in which are a number of powerful electric lights casting their rays upwards. Several large ventilators are placed in good positions in the ceiling, and the air is completely changed every minute and a half. The coils over which the air supply is drawn are heated in winter and ice cooled in summer.

Sectional View of Foyer of Colonial Theater, Tacoma, Wash.

In order that the auditorium might be given a homelike appearance windows have been fitted in the side walls of the structure which are supposed to look out upon landscapes but which in reality have been painted upon the windows. The illusion is perfect. Each window is ornamented with a margin of amber colored glass behind which lights in frosted globes intensify the painted scene. Further interior decorations of the side walls are fluted columns between panels which are quite attractive.

Retiring Room for Women at the Colonial Theater, Tacoma, Wash.

The music numbers of the program are furnished by a pipe organ costing $7,000, made by Estey especially for the Colonial theater, and is equipped with all the necessary stops to get the best and most suitable melody to accompany the pictures. The seats are dark brown and are upholstered in leather and cane. The seating capacity of the Colonial is 1,200. There are 900 seats on the parquette floor and these alone cost over $6,000. The seats in the loges are high backed wicker chairs, and there are four in each loge.

One of the predominating features of the Colonial theater is the beautiful resting room for women. A glance at the accompanying illustration of that section of the house will substantiate our statement. This room is well lighted and fitted with handsome chairs and sofas made of wicker and cushions. The thick blue carpet of this parlor is in perfect harmony with the exquisite wall paper and paintings. The stripes which can be seen on the walls by looking closely at the photo of this room are of light and dark blue and are paneled off. Upon the ceiling has been painted an elliptical shaped wreath from the center of which hangs an elegant electric shade. The color of the ceiling around the wreath is pale blue. The windows are draped in cretonne of a very pretty and charming design which adds to the atmosphere of domesticity. A valence with delicate blue and pink flowers on a light pink field is draped over the cretonne and hangs over the top and down the sides of the window. There is a maid in attendance, from 2 until 5 P. M., and from 7 until 10 P. M.

The admission prices to the Colonial is 10 cents for the entire house except the loges for which 20 cents is charged. Small children may gain entrance for 5 cents. In the parlance of the pavement, the Colonial is "some theater."

STANDARD'S BEAUTIFUL LOBBY DISPLAY.

More like a high class art gallery than the lobby of a moving picture theater is the impression one gets upon entering the Standard, Prospect avenue and East 8th street, Cleveland, Ohio. Oil paintings of famous photoplayers have been hung over the walls, World Film Corporation donations, and flowers have been hung in festoons through the long hall. The decorative work was accomplished by G. W. Schroeder, manager of the Majestic theater, Cleveland, and a decorator of recognized ability. He was assisted by Joseph Grossman, manager of the Standard, who is severing his connection with that theater.

Artistic Lobby Effect at Standard Theater, Cleveland, Ohio.

CHILTON, WIS., GETS ANOTHER THEATER.

William Merz opened in the latter part of December, 1914, a pretty little moving picture theater in Chilton, Wis. The dimensions of the interior are 21 by 75 feet, and there is a gradual incline to the floor, which gives a clear view of the screen from any seat in the house. The indirect lighting system has been installed, and the furnishings are such as could be compared with any of the bigger theaters in large cities.

"The Needs of Commerce."

A One-Reel Edison Educational Release of Unusual Interest.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

QUITE a number of those patient seekers after moving picture merit, the rapacious reviewers, expressed approval amounting to serene satisfaction when "The Needs of Commerce" was shown. The title does not convey more than a general idea of the subject matter. "Making Money" would have been more appropriate, as the actual process of engraving, printing, cutting and storing our paper money was shown, probably for the first time by motion pictures. From a newspaper point of view, the Edison producers have registered a scoop, and one of live interest at that. The picture will hold close attention in any theatre where it is shown.

There, right before the enraptured vision of the small audience of critics, was an ocean of greenbacks, rising in great billows, foam-crested at the edges, almost washing out of the screen. It was thrilling at times and agonizing at others—water, water everywhere and scarce a drop to drink. Critics are naturally spiritual, otherwise they could never go about with happy faces and nothing but keys to jingle, but they became suddenly absorbed and horribly material at the sight of millions of real money tossed about like amateurs' scenarios on a reader's desk. It is to be feared that the sight of so much stored wealth, in view of the fact that there is so little in general circulation, may make socialists of us all. One feels instinctively that Uncle Sam ought to divide with all his children instead of with those fortunate enough to own banks—there may be something the matter with a social and political system that appropriates the savings of industry for the uses of high financiers!

"The Needs of Commerce" starts with a few exteriors of our Washington money factory and then treats us to a glimpse of expert engraving. We watch the tracing of a master hand transferring the scholarly features of President Wilson from a photograph to a plate destined to immortalize him on the new Federal Reserve bank notes, an entirely appropriate act in view of his work in revolutionizing the currency. After this glimpse of our visionary Chief Executive our eyes suddenly become rivited upon some ten thousand dollar bills in the process of making. This will make some eager eyes bulge, if, indeed, the owners of those eyes do not have to be chained to their seats.

All the processes from the transfer of engraving to the plate, through the tempering and hardening of that plate, the printing, cutting, ruling, trimming, examining and counting are boldly shown, and the working of both machinery and employees is of absorbing interest. The astounding thing about it all is how such fine photography was possible under actual conditions. Even the full sweep of a large shop is clear to the eye.

While the picture may be classed as "educational," it is far more than that from the usual nature of the subject and the fact that very few people have more than a remote idea of how the making of money is done. It holds attention more than the average picture play because it is new to most of us. It becomes more thrilling than a subterranean melodrama when one set of employees carelessly shoves sixty-six millions into a formidable-looking safe, and another throws away five millions before our very eyes, prints that are slightly defective. Withal, it is a dignified presentation of what cannot fail to be of interest to the average audience, an audience of minds quite as eager to absorb information from dependable sources as to be merely entertained.

FILM FOLK AT BRONX BUSINESS MEN'S CELEBRATION.

The film industry was well represented at the beef-steak dinner given by the Independent Business Men's League of Bronx County at their clubhouse New Year's Eve. Among "reel" fellows were Jacques Spiegel, manager of the New York Exchange of the United Film Service; Albert Kramer, Julius Schwartz, Max Cohen and David Weinberg, of the same office. Sam Trigger of the Exhibitors' League, J. Goetz of the Crystal studio, Charles Goetz, manager of the Gauntier Studio, and the Misses Stella F. Janover and Victoria M. Fruss, of the general offices of the United Film Service, were other representatives of the film industry present. Jacob Kramer, manager of the Newark office of the United Film Service, was there also with an entourage of exhibitor friends. Sidney Asher, owner of a chain of theatres in the Bronx, was another well known film man present. Stars appearing in his several theatres contributed to the program which had been arranged for the amusement of the guests. Trigger was so pleased with the entertainment that he clamored to become a member of the organization and insisted on plunking down a half year's dues on the spot.

"The Exploits of Elaine."

Second Installment of Pathe-Hearst Serial Utilizes New Discovery of "The Twilight Sleep."

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE interest excited in the first episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" finds new stimulation in the second, which is entitled "The Twilight Sleep" in which the mystery deepens, and the suspense is made even more breathless by the death warning sent to "Craig Kennedy" when he is enjoined to keep out of the Dodge affair or take the consequences.

Tremendously interesting, too, is the strange visitor to the sanitarium where the wonders of the Twilight Sleep is demonstrated, who rewards the kindness of the demonstrators by pocketing the syringe and serum. Later we find the mysterious agent of the "Clutching Hand" in possession of it, and still in the trail of the coveted letter belonging to the late Mr. Dodge, he enters the sleeping apartment of Elaine and injects the ethyl chloride into the arm of the sleeping girl, who, in her semi-conscious state, obeys the commands of the man of mystery, opens the safe, and afterward pens a note to Craig Kennedy, telling him that his services will no longer be required in following up the mystery of her father's death.

In this instalment we have also the glimmer of a love element to be developed. The face of pretty Elaine has begun to crowd against science in the mind of scientific Craig. But the great feat of the picture is the ruse of the clever detective in administering an under dose of the Twilight Sleep producing fluid, under the influence of which Elaine recounts the incidents of the night before when her mysterious visitor has commanded her, thus clearing up the mystery of the receipt of the note in her handwriting by Craig.

Another thrilling point of the story occurs when the agent of the "Clutching Hand" just misses being clutched in the home of Elaine.

In the forthcoming instalments Craighton Hale will be seen in the role of Jamieson, the friend of Craig Kennedy, in place of Raymond Owens, who is giving place to Mr. Hale for the remainder of the series.

Elsie Janis.

ELSIE JANIS, long considered one of our best mimics, comediennes and musical comedy artistes, has turned author and just completed her appearance, under the direction of Lois Weber, for Bosworth, Inc., in an original work, by herself, "The Caprices of Kitty" a five-part feature which will be released on the paramount program early in February.

Elsie Janis.

Miss Janis suggested to Mr. Bosworth a plot she had in mind for a dramatic production. "I am going to write a play as soon as I have enough money to stand a disappointment," she said.

When it was suggested, in return, that her plot would make a capital motion picture story and further that Bosworth would produce her play, if she would scenarize it, the little actress began work and within ten days had completed a three hundred page scenario which she titled "The Caprices of Kitty."

Lois Weber, Bosworth's principal director, thought Miss Janice should play the role of Kitty, herself, with the result that a most satisfying and pleasing romance of sentimentality is about to be shown with Miss Janis as star and authoress.

Miss Janis is leaving Los Angeles this week for New York where, after a few days, she sails for London to assume the principal role in Charles Dillingham's big winter review there. Bosworth completed three Janis pictures during the fourteen weeks she remained at the coast studios.

"The Chef's Redemption"

Interesting Demonstration of the Origin and Preparation of Some of the Hecker Food Stuffs.

Reviewed by Margeret I. MacDonald.

ACCORDING to Edward Blackstone, the camera man in the case, the filming of the interior of the Hecker mills was no easy job. Nevertheless, he has succeeded in giving a satisfactory photographic study of how the products of these famous mills are handled previous to being placed on the market.

It is not clear just why it was deemed necessary to interweave these interesting scenes with a story; especially as the story in itself is not of much account. The film, 1,000 feet in all, represents a valuable industrial subject.

After the opening of the story in the home of Miss White, whose inspection of the Hecker mills we later follow through the picture, a demonstration of the harvesting of the grain is given, which is one of the picture's most interesting points. In the trip through the mills the preparation of the grain for the market is followed through its different stages, from the grinding and sifting through the finest of sieves to the bagging of the flour, all accomplished by mechanical means.

An illustration of the uses to which the Hecker flour is put in the making of the various kinds of bread peculiar to different countries is also given. The engine room taken by flash light is another attractive item. The interior of the mills and the view from its windows are likewise of interest.

The picture, which will be known under the brand of the Blackstone Films, will be used throughout the country by the Hecker Company as a demonstration of the sanitary methods employed in their manufactory.

Seth D. Perkins.

Los Angeles Theater Manager Appointed Director General of Exhibitors' Ball.

IN order to raise funds with which to fight freak legislation against the motion picture industry in California, a grand motion picture ball will be given at Shrine auditorium on January 16 by the Southern California Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association. The bills pending before the coming session of the California legislature include barring of children under sixteen unless with guardian, intermission of five minutes with all house lights on between each thousand feet of film, thus eliminating multiple reel features, segregation of the sexes, and general Sunday closing.

Seth D. Perkins.

Seth D. Perkins, manager of the Woodley and Optic theaters in Los Angeles, has been appointed director general of the affair, with the following aides to assist him, Bert S. Lustig, Dick Parks, William Urbach, J. F. Lustig and H. W. Warner, all well-known picture men of the city. Hammond Beall is director of publicity.

Governor Hiram Johnson of California and Dorothy Gish of the Griffith studios have been asked to lead the grand march. As Los Angeles is in the center of the movie camps a large attendance of player folk is anticipated.

BINDER GOES TO OHIO.

J. W Binder, of the National Board of Censorship, has left New York to go to Ohio in aid of the agitation for the repeal of the Censorship Law in that state. Mr. Binder will stay on the ground for some weeks and he hopes for an early repeal, as the party coming into power has incorporated the abolition of the State Censorship Board into its legislative program.

CARLYLE BLACKWELL'S CAIRN.

Carlyle Blackwell, of the Favorite Players, has registered with the American Geographical Society the Blackwell type of cairn. This step was taken by him in the course of the production of "The Last Chapter"—a photoplay from the story by Richard Harding Davis.

Explorers usually register with an accepted geographical or exploration society the type of cairn which he thereafter uses to mark particular spots, or to preserve the records of his expedition. The Blackwell cairn is three feet high, with a three-foot base, and a hollow interior for the reception of records, etc., with a second cairn, not to exceed one foot in height, and not to contain more than six stones lying four paces north by east of the master cairn.

The Blackwell type is plainly shown in one of the scenes of "The Last Chapter," where Donald Gordon marks the spot and deposits his records of the discovery of the lost river, which lost river is the cause of his African explorations.

TOM TERRISS AS "SCROOGE."

Tom Terriss, the famous English player, who is producing film versions of the Terriss plays for the Kinetophote, took a little excursion back into the legitimate last week when he appeared at the Westchester theater at Mount Vernon in Dickens' "Christmas Carol," a piece in which he has appeared Christmas week every season for ten years. As in former years, Mr. Terriss took his famous role of "Scrooge" at Mt. Vernon. His success was so great that he has been engaged to return to the same theater four weeks hence and play in "Oliver Twist," another Dickens story in which he has had success all over the world.

The "Christmas Carol" has been put on by Mr. Terriss with his own company and with stock companies in England, America, Australia, South Africa, and in fact everywhere that English is spoken, for many years. He played "Scrooge" before the King and Queen of England by special command at Sandringham Palace and scored more than one success with the part in London.

UNIVERSAL ENGAGES ELAINE STERN.

The Universal Film Mfg. Co. has engaged Elaine Stern, winner of "The Evening Sun" photoplay contest, to write one multiple-reel photodrama around the personality of Mary Fuller each month. Miss Stern spends much time in Miss Fuller's company, watching her at rehearsal and under actual working conditions, in order to gain an insight into her methods.

As a result of this close study of the Universal superstar, Miss Stern has completed and seen produced two of her own photoplays, "The Witch Girl" and "My Lady High and Mighty," in both of which Miss Fuller has starred. Miss Stern is now working on "The Sphinx," a feature production, which also has been written with Mary Fuller's unique personality foremost in mind.

Miss Stern holds that the plot of the photoplay is entirely subordinate to the personality around which it is written and before undertaking to fit her plays to a particular star she insists upon an intimate study of her subject.

Maurice Tourneur Staging the Balcony Scene in the Wilton Lackaye Photoplay "The Pit," Released Through the World Film Corporation.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"PATSY AT COLLEGE" (LUBIN).

This number of Clay M. Greene's narrative of Patsy's trouble is wonderfully funny. Young Bolivar is stocked up with typical outfit for college and bid "good-bye" and "good luck" by his family and many little sweethearts. The fiendish Sykesy and his sister Jane, also Tilly Grace, are all bound for the same university. Patsy's baggage is considerable, and in getting it on board the train starts, and Patsy, with many handpieces, climbs upon the back platform, from which he falls and rolls down an embankment, and thus, with many bruises and his clothes badly mussed, he arrives late and is gaily laughed at by the others. Troubles heap one on top of the other, causing him physical injury and disgrace until he is suspended for the balance of the term, and, despite a broken leg acquired in a football game, he is put to plowing on his father's farm. Percy Winter, who is directing the series, has given full value to the excellent script.

Scene from "Patsy at College" (Lubin).

"HIS FIGHTING BLOOD" (Selig).

Unusual photography realistically picturing the wonderful mountains, hills and vales of old Kentucky—a picture-play showing picturesque mountain passes, rough cabins almost hidden away in mountain recesses, an atmosphere of feudal days, and dealing with Kentucky mountaineer life, and primitive manhood and womanhood, is the two-reel Selig feature, "His Fighting Blood," to be released Monday, January 18. This gripping drama of Kentucky mountaineer life was written by James Oliver Curwood, and features Thomas Santschi, Bessie Eyton and others. Thomas Santschi directed the production, which is replete with beautiful backgrounds, tense situations and unusual character delineation.

Scene from "His Fighting Blood" (Selig).

A Kentucky feud is pictured in all its realistically desperate details. Hope McTrigger, of the Fighting McTriggers' clan, is secretly in love with Jim, a bright and clever young man, but a dreamer, instead of an active participant in the exciting events occuring between the clans of the McTriggers and the Sampsons. Jim confesses to Hope his love for her and she is about to answer in kind when Sam Buck, a rough, uncouth mountaineer, discovers the love-making, ridicules Jim, and, in spite of Hope's protests, takes her in his arms. Hope repulses Sam, but deplores what she thinks is Jim's lack of hardy nerve and courage.

How Jim acquires his fighting blood, how he avenges the abduction of his sweetheart at the hands of the Sampsons; how he becomes the ideal hero and lover and wins the admiration of Hope, the fighting girl of the mountains, is graphically shown in these two reels of convincing action. How love brings forth the hidden courage of Jim and transforms him from a dreamer and a student into a man with fighting blood, is a psychological study graphically portrayed, and a character study new and novel to lovers of the picture-plays. "His Fighting Blood" is a virile picture-play, certain to cause comment and unusual interest.

"IT'S NO LAUGHING MATTER" (BOSWORTH).

The next release of Bosworth, Inc., will offer Maclyn Arbuckle, one of the most prominent portrayers of typical American characters on the legitimate stage, in "It's No Laughing Matter," a delightful comedy drama, written and directed by Lois Weber.

Scene from "It's No Laughing Matter" (Bosworth).

In this production the jovial Arbuckle is presented in a role for which he is specially adapted, as Hi Judd, poet, postmaster and philosopher of a little country village. The story is simple, yet strong in the unfolding of its half humorous and half romantically dramatic plot.

Supporting the star is an exceptional cast, including such artists as Adele Farrington, Myrtle Stedman, Herbert Standings and Charles Marriott. "It's No Laughing Matter" will be released on the Paramount Program, January 14th.

CLEMENTS WITH PREMIER.

Hal Clements, well known as a producer and an actor, has been engaged by the Premier Company and is busily directing dramas at Santa Paula, Cal.

MARIE DORO IN "THE MORALS OF MARCUS."

Had William J. Locke expressly written his famous novel and play, "The Morals of Marcus," for Marie Doro, he could not have improved upon the theme or the role, with their treasure of opportunity charmingly congenial to the talents and mannerisms of the youthful star. The five-part film version of this celebrated play, with its original star, Marie Doro, will be released by the Famous Players Film Co. January 18.

The picturesque oddity and originality of the charming play is further illumined by the sweet wistfulness and captivating personality of Miss Doro. Her delicate beauty and appealing tenderness make her an ideal interpreter of the role of Carlotta, the slender and fascinating little refugee from a Turkish harem, and the central character of the play.

Scene from "The Morals of Marcus" (Famous Players).

The development of the plot unfolds one of the most delightful love stories that the stage has produced in years. The element of comedy is predominant, but there are many moments of pathos in the play, that effectively demonstrate the truth that all wisdom is folly save only that which has germinated in trials and sufferings.

The entire supporting cast is exceptionally well chosen, including such Broadway favorites as Eugene Ormonde, Julian L'Estrange, Russell Bassett, Frank Andrews, Wellington A. Playter, and Helen Freeman, who in connection with the elaborate settings and the varied atmosphere of the subject, provide a film story that will not only be entertaining but long remembered.

OPEN A PHOTOPLAYERS EXCHANGE.

The Hunter-Breton Photoplayers' Exchange, recently opened in the Gaiety Theatre building, 1547 Broadway, New York, claims the distinction of being the only institution of the kind in the field. The purpose of the exchange is to supply high class talent, stars, leading men, leading women and directors to the producing firms of all cities, direct from the New York office, where the firm is in close touch with the pulse of the industry.

"AFTER DARK" (Brady).

One of the surprises of the New Year will be the picturization of "After Dark." This is the famous old melodrama in which William A. Brady made a great impression as an actor. He played the part of Old Tom. Those who remember the melodrama have not forgotten that it is a thrilling play, filled with hair-breadth escapes on the part of the villain and the task of the "heavy" man. Mr. Brady is at work on the scenario now and he will assist in the production of this photoplay. It will be released on the World Film Corporation schedule in the near future.

In the leading roles Robert Warwick and Alice Brady will be seen. Both these stars have made their debuts in World Film photoplays, and Mr. Brady has personally selected them for the picturization of the melodrama which is so closely associated with his career as an actor.

One of the innovations will be a scene showing a vaudeville entertainment with actual stars from the vaudeville stage.

HANDSOME CALENDARS RECEIVED.

The Moving Picture World wishes to acknowledge the receipt of several handsome calendars for 1915. One comes from Romaine Fielding, another from the Smallwood Film Corporation, carrying several good views of the company's star, Ethel Grandin. A third comes from E. E. Wagner, of Lamar, Mo., maker of the "Ideal" reel.

SIGNED SIX THEATRES IN EIGHT HOURS.

The following theatres in the Pittsburgh district have contracted for the World Film Corporation service, consisting of one feature per week, for a period of fifty-two weeks, all of the herein mentioned theatres having contracted for this service within a period of eight hours. Jack Marks, of the Orpheum and Star Theatres, Clarksburg, W. Va.; Homestead Amusement Co., Homestead, Pa.; J. F. Gonkindor, of the Park Theatre and Opera House, New Castle, Pa.; Mr. Blackburn, of the Nittany Theatre, State College, Pa.

GREAT WORK ON "DU BARRY" PRODUCTION.

To gather together from San Francisco to London, England, the long dismembered cast that made "Du Barry" famous as a stage play, and to send these units to a remote point in the foothills of the Alps to re-enact for motion pictures the beautiful tragedy which delighted millions and made them severally famous, is something of a feat even in these days of expensive picture making.

Yet that is what George Kleine did to immortalize the story of "Du Barry." Mrs. Leslie Carter, who made the play famous, and her original supports, Hamilton Revelle, Richard Thornton and Campbell Gollan, spent six months at the big Kleine studio in Grugliasco, Italy, in the foothills near Turin. To obtain the proper local color these thespians, along with a score of actors of lesser importance, were moved from Grugliasco to Paris and back again several times, and also made two or three excursions to Naples, Italy. They were provided with every convenience for the making of a perfect picture, as the extraordinarily beautiful results of the finished product indicate.

Mrs. Leslie Carter wears a number of expensive gowns that attract comment by the feminine portion of the audience. The total value of three of these dresses exceeds $2,200 and as they were all purchased in Europe, where, we are told, laces and brocades grow luxuriantly in their wild, native state, it is difficult to say what would be their cost in New York City.

"THE WIFE OF A THIEF" (Sawyer).

"The Wife of a Thief" is a three-reel Regent which will shortly be released by the Sawyer Film Corporation. The story is quite melodramatic, and opens with the daring rescue of a young woman from drowning. The girl marries the man who saves her, and not long afterward she discovers that her husband is a thief—a professional gambler. Every role is well interpreted, the settings are splendid, and very wonderful gowns are worn. It is a society drama of unusual interest.

Scene from "The Wife of a Thief" (Sawyer).

"THE FRIENDSHIP OF LAMOND" (Lubin).

Emmett Campbell Hall's photoplays are always excellent, and "The Friendship of Lamond" is quite up to his vigorous standard. It is a playlette which may be qualified as a problem story, embracing the eternal triangle. The honor of a dear friend's house is in danger, and a daring soldier of fortune works out the problem and saves the inevitable issue. In so doing he subjects himself to blame, but retires with the satisfaction that he has accomplished a grand purpose and saved the happiness of a man and woman dear to him.

Scene from "The Friendship of Lamond" (Lubin).

This story has to be directed with great skill to retain its intense value, but the excellent cast have fully responded to the requirements. It is a two-reel picture featuring Ormi Hawley, assisted by Earl Metcalfe, Kempton Green and Herbert Fortier.

"THE LONE GAME" (Eclair).

An "absolutely different" Western story in plot, action and production is "The Lone Game," a two-part Eclair offering to be released on Wednesday, January 20. The idea of a mysterious robber who has terrorized the surrounding country, who escapes, and is pursued in a thrilling chase by the sheriff and his posse, and in the final climax is proven to be the very sheriff himself, is rather a unique construction which places this production above the average Western story. From the opening until the close of this original picture the spectator's interest is held firmly enmeshed, and this Western tale is replete with hair-raising riding, breath-taking running fights and action of the most vivid sort. A large and competent cast of Eclair favorites are engaged in the telling of this story, headed by Edna Payne, Nobert Myles and Fred Hearne, and the latter named artist does a fall down the side of a steep declivity which, while it lends splendid realism to the scene in question, laid Mr. Hearne up in the Tucson Infirmary for two weeks.

Scene from "The Lone Game" (Eclair).

Eddie Lyons has produced another comedy at which even Al Christie had to laugh. Victoria Forde, Lee Moran and Eddie Lyons, himself, enact the leading roles. The title of the side-splitting film is "Lizzie's Dizzy Career."

"SMUGGLER'S ISLAND" (Gold Seal).

"Smuggler's Island," a two-reel sea coast drama in which Grace Cunard and Francis Ford are featured, will be released under the Gold Seal (Universal) brand on Tuesday, January 19. The scenes in this littoral drama of love and adventure were shot along the shores of Southern California amid the rocks and crannies where the high tides of the Pacific ocean break in long oily rolls.

An exciting chase between a smuggler's high-power yacht and another ten-ton motor boat are featured in this thrilling sea drama. Aboard the yacht a smuggler attempts to force his attentions upon the fisher-girl (Grace Cunard), but is caught in the act and tossed overboard by the pursuing revenue officers and the girl's sweetheart. Incidentally Grace Cunard displays her ability as a crack shot with the pistol and disables the motor-boat's engine with a well-directed bullet.

Harry Schumm is a captivating villain, so much so that one wonders if he would not make an excellent leading man. In "The Mystery of the Throne Room," and "The Call of the Waves," Mr. Schumm plays a secondary role with much skill. Grace Cunard is always the vivacious, devil-take-me lass and no matter whether she is cast for queen or scullery maid she brings to the enaction of her role an inimitable charm and lovableness which puts one immediately in sympathy with her.

Francis Ford in his dual role of director and actor is always the virile type of young American which real men cannot help but admire. His is the fighting type of jaw. There is no feminine beauty of feature about Ford. Always ready with the "punch" his work in roles which call for bony-knuckle action is always convincing. His presence is commanding and as a forceful exponent of straight-from-the-shoulder roles he reminds one much of Donald Crisp. One would have to go far to equal the Ford-Cunard-Schumm trio.

Scene from "Smuggler's Island" (Gold Seal).

PREMIER'S LATEST PRODUCTION.

"When Shadows Fall" is Willis L. Robards' latest production at the Premier studio, Santa Paula, Cal. Mr. Robards ably portrays the part of an old trapper, with Frederick Church as his partner. Edythe Sterling is the girl and Joe Franz the heavy.

NATURAL COLOR, FLICKERLESS PICTURES?

Extraordinary claims are being made for a camera that will take motion pictures in natural colors, stereoptic in quality and continuous in motion, said to have been invented by Edmund Lysle, who has been working on the idea for the past three years. A company called the Semper-graphic Corporation has been formed to promote the invention. Mr. Lysle is its president. Among the stockholders are H. E. Aitken of the Mutual Film Corporation; Crawford Livingston, of Livingston & Company, bankers; Addison E. Jones, Wilbert Shallenberger, R. M. Eastman of the W. F. Ball Printing Company, Chicago, and Paul Davis, of John Burnham & Co., bankers, Chicago. It is said that the cost of building the first of these magic cameras will be $30,000 and that it will be ready for demonstration by this coming Spring. Its appearance will be awaited with interest.

NEW MUTUAL PUBLICATION.

The Mutual Film Corporation announces the discontinuance of the "Mutual Girl Weekly," a motion picture and fashion publication which that company has been issuing for some time, and the substitution of a new publication of similar character under the name of "The Film." The change of name is probably due to the fact that the "Mutual Girl" series comes to an end with the fifty-second reel. With the completion of that series it was decided to rename the little weekly and broaden its scope. "The Film" will be distributed to exhibitors at a nominal price and by them it will be supplied to patrons of the picture theaters. The back page is left blank so that the exhibitor may use it for his daily program or for local advertising. One of the features of "The Film" is the prevailing fashions in woman's apparel. This feature is cleverly worked into the picture idea by the use of players as models for the latest in woman's things. Stories of the picture and pictures of the scenes of interest in them help to make this little magazine attractive. Arthur James is the editor.

KRAUS MFG. CO. MOVES.

It was not because they outgrew their old quarters, which were of ample size to serve for some time to come, but because they wished to be in closer touch with the trade that the Kraus Manufacturing Company moved the executive end of their business to the Candler Building, 220 West 42d street, New York, on the twelfth floor of which they are now occupying 2,750 square feet of floor space to be used for stock, show room and offices.

At the time that the Kraus Company entered the "Advertising for the Exhibitors" end of the picture business, the entire trade was centered around Fourteenth street and 14 East 17th street, their former address, was then a good central point from which to operate, and especially as they were able to secure a building at 17th street and Eighth avenue offering facilities for their printing and hand color work.

It will be remembered that the Kraus Manufacturing Company was the first to offer the exhibitor hand-colored photos in all sizes from a postal card to a life-size painting of the leading men and women of the various film companies. Through a careful study of conditions and the wants of the exhibitors, this company has built up a trade of international reputation and are doing business in all parts of the amusement-loving world.

A WONDERFUL INSTRUMENT FOR MOVING PICTURE HOUSES.

One of the greatest recent advances in instruments for moving picture houses is to be found in the Empress Piano with reed attachment. This is a development of the famous Empress Bell Piano, so popular throughout the United States and foreign countries.

The new Empress Piano has an 88-note range. All the controlling mechanism is above the keyboard. The traps, such as bass drum, snare, cymbal and reeds are below. Among these is an automatic mandolin, which adds to the novelty as well as to the rich musical effect.

A striking feature of the Empress Piano with reed attachment is that it has exceptional tone as a manual piano, and can be played by hand.

As evidence of the high quality of this remarkable instrument it is interesting to know that the well-known house of Lyon & Healy will handle it. When it is remembered how eminently successful has been this truly representative concern in the development and sale of automatic electric pianos for motion picture houses, it goes without saying that there could be few stronger endorsements of an instrument that offers so much in those unusual qualities so vital to successful entertainment.

"THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME" (Box Office).

From the Box Office Attractions Company comes the news that the picturized version of "The Girl I Left Behind Me," Belasco's notable success, has been completed under the direction of Lloyd B. Carleton. The principal characters in the photoplay are portrayed by Robert Edeson, Claire Whitney, Walter Hitchcock, Irene Warfield, Stuart Holmes, Edna Pendleton, Nanon Walsh and Arthur Clifton.

CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION MOVES.

On January 4, the California Motion Picture Corporation, which had occupied quarters at 218 West Forty-Second street, New York City, moved into larger offices at 126 West Forty-Sixth street, where their new telephone is Bryant 8390.

ANOTHER RECEIVER ASKED FOR ALCO.

The Alco Film Corporation is named as the defendant in an equity action filed in the United States District Court Thursday, January 7, in which the appointment of a receiver with full authority to operate the business is asked for.

The plaintiffs in the suit are James B. Clark, Hunt B. Miller, Albert S. Davis, James Steele and Richard A. Rowland, who entered into a contract with the Alco to release its feature plays and films in the Middle West. They allege the Alco failed to carry out the agreement and blame the trouble on John D. Dunlop, who is charged with failing to advance $125,000 to the corporation pursuant to an agreement under which it is claimed stock and property of the corporation was turned over to him.

In the complaint the plaintiffs ask that Dunlop be enjoined from transferring or otherwise disposing of the stock or property in his possession.

REGENT THEATRE NEAR COMPLETION.

Peter Magaro, of Harrisburg, Pa., will shortly open at 410 Market street, in that city, the Regent Theatre, a moving picture house with a seating capacity of 1,000. Under the management of Mr. Magaro, an experienced man in the game, the Regent ought to do an excellent volume of business. The house is further benefited by its location, which is in the heart of the downtown business and shopping district of Harrisburg. One of the features of the lighting arrangement is the big thirty-two foot electric sign which is being erected on the roof of the structure. This sign will show in electric lights a woman diver. She is to climb to the top of a high ladder made of electric globes and plunge into the water. It will be one of the most attractive electric signs in the city.

Notes of the Trade.

MURDOCK MacQUARRIE plays two parts in "The Fulfillment of the Law" in so wonderful a manner that it is difficult to imagine the bright, dapper young fellow to be the same as the broken-down consumptive.

* * *

In "The Governor Maker," a new 101 Bison picture, Wiliam Clifford is featured. The scenes are taken in and about a cotton mill. Included there is a splendid mob scene, also a scene where two autos collide, one of them being hurled over an embankment. There is also an exciting fire scene.

* * *

Pearl Feature Film Company is the style of a new feature exchange operating in Tampa, Florida. It will handle features through Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina, and will handle nothing under four reels.

* * *

Al. E. Christie, comedy director, has more than outdone himself in "A Maid by Proxy," a new Nestor film. He evidently has an eye for "reel" beauty, for his new leading lady, Billie Rhodes, is as pretty as a picture with her saucy curls and charming face and figure

* * *

W. J. Ferguson having posed for pictures of his original role of "Pop Clark" in the World Film Corporation release, "The Deep Purple," in which Clara Kimball Young is starring, encountered Lew Fields, who at once arranged for him to appear on the screen in "Old Dutch," which is being made at the World Film Corporation studios at Fort Lee. In "Old Dutch" the character Mr. Ferguson plays is "discovered" holding a stenographer on his knee. Miss Lillian Russell, entering at that moment from her posing in the World Film Corporation release "Wildfire," observed: "Things certainly are soft for some people around here."

* * *

Purchasing Agent Hodges of the World Film Studios, at Fort Lee, receives queer commissions, but the hardest one he had for days was the one from Director Tourneur, who said that he must have three Pullman cars, with their tops off. Nothing feazes Mr. Hodges, and he set about to secure the necessary Pullmans. Before he could set about it, however, another thing happened, which almost upset the impassive Mr. Hodges. Director Frank Crane, wishing to get some new method of introducing his characters for Lew Fields' production of "Old Dutch," asked Mr. Hodges if it was impossible to install an escalator in the studio within a day or two. Hodges said he thought he might be able to do that little thing for him.

* * *

Wallace Beery, the inimitable "Sweedie" of Essanay's photoplay comedy company, made a lightning jump into the leading part in a dramatic production on the speaking stage Sunday, December 13. In "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," at the Imperial theater, Chicago, he familiarized himself with the manuscript covering his part, to go through with the play. At 1 o'clock Beery received a telephone message from his brother, Noah Beery, who is in the company, telling him the leading man, Wells Knibloe, had had a stroke of paralysis and asking him to play the character of Jack Hale.

* * *

Tom Terriss of the Kinetophote, who is putting on the famous Terriss plays for that corporation, also does a little lecturing on the side to take up the few hours out of the twenty-four when he does not have to be bothered with directing scenes in "A Man's Shadow." Mr. Terriss is an authority on Dickens and when the superintendent of schools at New Rochelle heard that Mr. Terriss was making a picture near New Rochelle he got him to lecture to the pupils of the New Rochelle public schools. Mr. Terriss spoke to about 1,000 of them last Friday morning, touching especially on the Dickens Xmas stories, in which he has appeared so often himself.

* * *

Violet Mersereau, the little blond Imp, is very happy these days. She is the proud possessor of her first long dress, that is, her first very long gown. It is a beauty, too, and she promises to wear it soon in a film.

* * *

A residence containing fifteen rooms, which, during the summer, was occupied by one of New York's prominent society matrons, will be burned to lend to "Zudora," Thanhouser's new serial, a gripping thrill. The house is the home of an eccentric inventor, who has a marvelous ray throwing machine of great destructive power. This machine explodes, setting the building on fire.

* * *

Francis X. Bushman, leading man with the eastern Essanay stock company, caused a surprise when he appeared in person in one of his photoplay scenes at Schanze's theater in Baltimore last week. Bushman, who was visiting in the east, appeared at the playhouse unknown to the spectators. He was on the stage in the last scene in "One Wonderful Night" and just as it faded out, the spotlight was turned on strong to reveal Mr. Bushman himself in the exact position as seen on the screen. The transposition was so sudden that the spectators could scarcely believe their eyes, many thinking for several moments that it was a portion of the scene reproduced. Then Mr. Bushman turned and bowed, and there was a cheer that shook the roof. A speech was demanded and Mr. Bushman responded, thanking the audience for its appreciation of the play and the kindly reception of himself.

* * *

"The Mystery of the Man Who Slept," is the mysterious title of Ben Wilson's new picture. And not another word about it until it is released except that it is a thriller.

* * *

Mark Daniels, general superintendent of all the national parks in the country, was a recent visitor at the Thanhouser, New Rochelle, studio. Mr. Daniels is working for the interest of the Department of the Interior in the value of motion pictures as a means of popularizing the national reservations. The Thanhouser company has a series of scenic and dramatic films taken in the Yellowstone Park which will soon be released, the approval of the Secretary of the Interior having been given to them.

* * *

Howard Estabrook has won his way into World Film stardom by experience, merit and ability—the only things that count with World Film. Notwithstanding his comparative youth (he is only 30) he has had ten years' hard practical stage experience under William A. Brady, Charles Frohman, David Belasco and others, appearing successfully in such productions as "Within the Law," "Little Women," "The Dictator," "Brown of Harvard" and many other Broadway hits.

* * *

Barton & Olson of the Isis theater, Indianapolis, Ind., state that they did more business on Clara Kimball Young in "Lola," than on any other picture they have shown in their theater.

* * *

Thomas Heise, for several years in the negative department at Thanhouser's, has resigned.

* * *

The American theater, at Terra Haute, Ind., under the management of Maurice Less, had its opening Dec. 24. The American theater is without a doubt, the most pretentious photoplay house in the state of Indiana.

* * *

Ernest Lane, who has been special traveling representative of the Philadelphia branch of the World Film Corporation, has been transferred to the Indianapolis office to do special work, under Manager George J. Beihoff.

* * *

Carl Louis Gregory, cameraman, returned Thursday morning from Washington, D. C., where he went to secure a motion picture of Secretary of the Interior Lane for use in "Our Own Country" features, which Mr. Gregory taken this fall in the Yellowstone National Park.

* * *

Howell Hansel, director of "The Million Dollar Mystery," has been made Director of Productions to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Lloyd F. Lonergan.

* * *

Carroll Fleming had the court room on Lawton street turned into a "movie" studio Thursday, when he took several courtroom scenes of "In the Jury Room."

* * *

William Franey, in "Hubby's Cure," flirts with death so bravely that mention cannot be made of this picture without giving him credit for his heroic act. He stands in the direct way of an auto rushing towards him at full speed and just escapes a collision by a hair.

* * *

Ned Reardon, the Imp leading man, is playing a prominent part in "A Five Pound Note," an interesting drama which George A. Lessey is directing. Some beautiful exteriors were taken on Long Island.

* * *

Howard Hickman, for years a noted leading man in Pacific coast stock circles, will make his debut as a member of the Broncho company in "The Chinatown Mystery."

Miss Elizabeth Forbes, late of the Henry Miller company, New York, has been secured to appear in "Zudora" films. Her first Thanhouser work was "Under False Colors," soon to be released.

* * *

D. C. Randolph and D. A. Taylor, proprietors of the Eastern Film Brokers, 220 West 42d street, N. Y. C., have contracted with the Vitagraph Company of America for the Southern rights on "The Christian" and will open this superb attraction at the Grand theater, Jacksonville, Florida, early in January.

* * *

Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane has gone into pictures. The genial Californian who presides over the vast public domains of the nation posed for the camera last week. The picture so taken will serve as an introduction to the educational Yellowstone pictures soon to be released in the Mutual program, by Thanhouser Film Corporation.

* * *

Shorty Hamilton, the Broncho comedian, is carrying around a black eye as the result of a realistic encounter he had recently with a company of his associate players during the production of "Shorty and the Prize Fighter," a release of January 6. Director Richard Stanton gave "Shorty" explicit instructions to plunge heavily against his assailants—for Stanton is an enemy of fake combats—and "Shorty" obeyed .

* * *

Anna Luther has been a busy little girl the past week, what, with acting the part of the wife in "A Man's Shadow," which is being filmed for the Kinetophote, and selling penny lunch tickets in a daily paper's campaign for cheap lunches for school children. Miss Luther has been spending her days in "reel" life as the mother of another's kiddie, and her evenings in real life selling tickets to help the kiddies of a thousand mothers.

* * *

M. Spiers of the Spiers Theater Realty Co., of Philadelphia, has just purchased two twin electric machines from the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Co., of the Lonaaon Building, New York, for use in the Century and Plaza theaters.

* * *

Carl H. Pierce, special representative for Bosworth, Inc., has just returned from a trip covering over five thousand miles, during which he has interviewed exchange managers, exhibitors and newspapers, ascertaining the needs of the various communities, interesting them particularly in the Bosworth productions and establishing an entente cordial with the local press. Day by day the leavening influence of the photoplay is being felt, editors and critics are coming to realize its importance and to devote corresponding space to legitimate news and it is to be hoped that continued awakening will ensue until the industry shall have come into its own.

* * *

Clune's Auditorium in Los Angeles, California, has paid the Pathe colored feature "More Than Queen," a high compliment by booking it for a week's run. This theater has the reputation of showing only pictures of exceptional excellence.

* * *

Among the letters received by Gladden James, the popular leading juvenile man of the Vitagraph company, was one from a daughter of Kentucky very anxious to get a position in a picture company. She said she had remarkable ability as an actress—her friends had told her so. She had had wide experience in church entertainments, and consequently had no hesitation in saying that she was equally proficient in old maid parts, young girl roles, as a mother or as a male impersonator.

* * *

One of the handsomest and at the same time most serviceable Chrismas souvenirs that has reached the World office this season is the gold pencil that Mr. Harry Sterling Goldman, of the Interstate Films Circuit, in the Strand Theater building, is sending out with his Christmas greeting.

* * *

Marguerite Snow has been insured by the Thanhouser Film Corporation for $150,000 as a guaranty against incapacitation. In company with other members of the Thanhouser "Zudora" company, the actress had a narrow escape from death last week. Miss Snow has been so widely heralded as the star of "Zudora," now being offered at the Mutual exchanges, that the Thanhouser managers decided to protect themselves against loss in the event she should meet with an accident.

* * *

Walter Belasco, of the Broncho Company, was in San Francisco's Chinatown recently working in some scenes for "The Chinatown Mystery," a thrilling newspaper story, to be released January 20. He was made up for a Chinaman—the weazened proprietor of a "hop joint." A real Chinaman approached him as he waited for instructions from the director. John Chinaman had mistaken him for a true Chinese.

* * *

J. Barney Sherry, veteran actor of the Kay-Bee Company, is seen in one of his favorite roles in "The Still on Sunset Mountain," a story of the moonshiners, to be released January 15. Mr. Sherry interprets the part of Jason Harper, a picturesque character of the hills, and he plays it with a fine degree of realism.

* * *

Jean Adair, who played a prominent part in the William A. Brady production of Emma Dunn in "Mother," which is released through the World Film Corporation, has been engaged by Mr. Brady for a prominent part in "Sinners," the Owen Davis play that is to receive its premier performance in the Ossining Prison.

* * *

Some beautiful California scenery, hitherto unfilmed, has been caught by the cameraman for "An Outlaw's Honor," a Powers-Universal drama wherein Wilbur Higby makes the usual capital villain, with Louise Granville as the heroine.

A dilapidated shack in the mountains of Inceville a dwelling that once sheltered a hermit in the pioneer days—serves as the background for the principal scene in "Through the Murk," an intensely interesting story of the hills, to be released by the Domino Company January 28.

* * *

Edwin August, master actor of the films, who is making that mysterious picture for the Kinetophote, and Bliss Milford, his leading woman in Kinetophote productions, have been invited to lead the grand march at the initial ball of the exhibitors of Trenton, N. J., which will be held at the Arcade Dancing Academy in that city on January 18. Hal August, who is playing in his brother's first Kinetophote picture, will accompany him and Miss Milford to Trenton.

* * *

Now that Bosworth, Inc., have engaged Fritzi Scheff for appearance in the film version of "Pretty Mrs. Smith," considerable temperament is likely to be noted at the Bosworth studio. The ever changing Fritzi is now at work at the studio under the able direction of Lois Webber. Watch Fritzi's gowns. A warning to women who follow the screen for their fashion hints.

* * *

Outside of being a first-class comedienne, Margaret Joslin has a wide reputation as a cook. Her specialty is doughnuts. She cooked two dozen of them which were used in the Essanay western comedy, "Snakeville's Rising Sons."

* * *

Mr. John H. Cossar has been quite won over to the cause of labor. In "The Lieutenant Governor" he takes the part of a Portuguese laborer. He says that the stunts he was put through has made him a sympathizer with the workingman forever.

* * *

Owen Moore worked opposite Elsie Janis in "The Caprices of Kitty," which was just completed and the print of which is en route to New York with Miss Janis. "Caprices of Kitty" will be given a private showing at the Strand theater shortly, at which Miss Janis and her friends will be present.

* * *

"The Kate Greenaway Girl of the Screen," the sobriquet applied to Louise Huff, the little Lubin actress, has traveled across the seas to relatives of the late Kate Greenaway, creator of the quaint Little Greenaway people of the past generation. Relatives of the Englishwoman have written to Miss Huff felicitating her upon the sobriquet and praising her work in Lubin photoplays.

* * *

Director Charles L. Gaskill, of the Vitagraph Company, sent one hundred pennies, and a dollar bill as a Christmas present to one of his little friends, and wrote upon the box containing the money this: "Spend the dollar and let the pennies take care of themselves. This is from the revised edition of our old friend, B. Franklin."

* * *

The I. K. L. M. Film Company have contracted with the Mica Film Corporation to handle the Kriterion Service in the Missouri and Eastern Illinois territory. Their headquarters will be located at 3214 Locust street, St. Louis, Mo.

* * *

The Rex-Universal Company, noted for their splendid photoplays, have featured wonderful Pauline Bush and Lon Chaney in a strong drama, entitled "The Sin of Olga Brandt." A novelty in the form of a screen within a screen has been introduced with a decidedly startling effect. One of the scenes represent a moving picture theater with the film being unreeled before the audience.

* * *

Few outside his intimates know that Edgar Jones, the Lubin actor-producer, is an indefatigable collector of specimen butterflies. Since his boyhood in the West he has added to his collection, which now numbers over eighteen hundred. It includes some rarities, found only in the jungles of South Africa, one from the deadly swamps along the Amazon, and his prize, a butterfly seen only in the valleys of the Alps.

* * *

To be your own father and mother are distinctions that will fall to Miss Ethel Grandin and John C. Brownell in a forthcoming film attraction to be released through the United Film Service by the Smallwood Film Corporation under the Grandin brand.

Director Ray C. Smallwood has prepared a pretty little comedy subject entitled "As Their Parents Before them," in which both of the above-named players will enact the dual roles.

* * *

Harry Edward and Jack Blystone, formerly of the Universal staff of directors, have joined Pathe Lehrman, owner and chief producer of the L-KO Comedies, and hereafter will assist in making the brand of film which is universally conceded to be among the funniest ever released.

* * *

So insistent have been the calls from exhibitors of motion pictures, that Ethel Grandin, who is appearing in Grandin Films in the United Film Service, has decided to make personal appearances in many of the theaters in and around New York city, where she will do impersonations of popular actresses for her audiences.

* * *

Thrills and thrills! Hair-breadth escapes and startling scenes make up the 101-Bison picture "In Jungle Wilds." William Clifford is as handsome and debonair as ever in his western outfit and beautiful Marie Walcamp plays the emotional role.

* * *

Sculptors and concrete architects are busy putting in the great arches of the massive gates which will mark the entrance to the Selig Jungle-Zoo. Within a short time the life-size stone elephant, lion, etc., will be hoisted to their places. Inside the grounds the work has been completed, with the exception of a single strip of land at the east side. The opening will not be deferred long.

Mr. W. N. Selig has purchased about four miles of film from E. Swift Train, grandson of George Francis Train, who has just come back from a trip to the Alaska-Siberian coast. He was gone eight months, and went as far north as Wrangle Island, where they assisted in the rescue of eleven survivors from the Karluck, an Arctic exploration vessel which was stuck in the ice for twenty-four days. Train secured some great pictures of native life, animals and scenery. He intends to go to the Philippines next year on a similar trip.

Picture Houses Projected.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Daniel P. Brown, 17 Hillhouse avenue, is having plans prepared for a one-story theater and store building, 62 by 141 feet.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—J. H. de Sibour, Hibbs building, is preparing plans for the remodeling of the Walker-Hughes market house into a modern two-story moving picture theater, to cost $60,000.

CHICAGO, ILL.—John Papp, 641 East 93d street, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 100 feet, to cost $1,000.

CHICAGO, ILL.—A. L. Himelblau, 179 West Washington street, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 100 feet, to cost $12,000.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Emil J. Dirks, 1166 Diversey Parkway, is planning to build a modern fireproof moving picture theater to be erected in the early spring.

SPARTA, ILL.—Kennerly & Stiegemeyer, Benoist building, St. Louis, Mo., are preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 41 by 110 feet, to be erected here in the near future.

SHELBYVILLE, IND.—Hoagland & Van Meter, 923 Hume-Mansur building, Indianapolis, are preparing plans and specifications for a two-story theater, office and store building. The structure will be fireproof and up-to-date in every detail.

BALTIMORE, MD.—J. Diggs, 2040 Druid Hill avenue, and H. S. Trimble, 612 North Chapel street, are planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater, to cost approximately $25,000.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The Amused, 412 East Baltimore street, are to expend about $10,000 for alterations and improvements to their theater building.

BROCKTON, MASS.—John Murphy and others contemplate the remodeling of a church property into a modern theater and store building.

LOWELL, MASS.—Harpoot & Topizian, Merrimack street, are to make extensive alterations to their moving picture theater.

HAMTRAMCK, MICH.—Klepisz & Bichanski, Detroit, are having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, 30 by 108 feet, to cost $15,000.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Perry Crozier, 615 Plymouth building, are preparing plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater, 60 by 120 feet, to cost $20,000.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—A. E. Rydlun, 910 Andrus building, Minneapolis, Minn., has obtained the contract to erect moving picture theater, 46 by 115 feet, to cost $15,000, for George B. Ashworth, 643 Portland avenue.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—George Meiers, 3135 Park avenue, will erect a two-story moving picture theater, 60 by 135 feet.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—F. D. Anernathy is having plans prepared for converting a store building into a moving picture theater, to cost $8,000.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—C. W. Van Keuren, Wright building, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $7,000.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Cohn Brothers, 361 Stone avenue, are preparing plans and specifications for a one and two-story moving picture theater, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $20,000.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—James McGowan, 1209 Flatbush avenue, is planning to erect a commodious moving picture theater to be constructed some time in April or May.

CINCINNATI, O.—Edwin Behymer, 3737 Eastern avenue, will erect a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 140 feet, to cost $20,000.

COLUMBUS, O.—J. C. Campbell, Hartman building, is having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater and store building. The theater will have a seating capacity for about 900 persons.

ELYRIA, O.—H. E. Wurst is having plans prepared for a moving picture theater to be erected on Broad street, to cost about $6,500.

TROY, O.—T. C. Shilling, Dayton, O., is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater to be erected at Market and Franklin streets, to cost $10,000.

DUBOIS, PA.—J. H. Waylouis will build a one-story addition to his moving picture theater, 29 by 45 feet, to cost $1,500.

ERIE, PA.—Columbia Amusement Company will erect a one-story moving picture theater, 44 by 120 feet, to cost $15,000.

15c
For your Favorite Player Slide, $1.75 per dozen
Get a sample and you will want them all.
NIAGARA SLIDE CO., Lockport, N. Y.

PURE AIR
is as necessary to your theatre as fire exits. You can make the air in your house sweet and clean by using PARFAIT The Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant in Powder Form
Convenient, economical, safe. Delightful Perfume.
No spraying or apparatus necessary. 50c. per can—4 cans $1.50. Sent express charges paid on receipt of money order.
WOHLGEMUTH, Chemist, 1057 Bergen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Horstmann Wants to Retire

President Ernest H. Horstmann of Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts Does Not Want Office This Year—A Review of the League's Legislative Work.

By E. H. McCloskey, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts will soon prepare to campaign against certain bills, which will come before the new legislature and which are deemed detrimental to the business in the Bay State.

A meeting of the Board of Directors will be called on Wednesday, Jan. 13, by President Ernest H. Horstmann, for the purpose of making arrangements for the election of new officers. And while it is the desire of the members of the league that President Horstmann occupy the executive chair for another term, Mr. Horstmann has stated to the World correspondent that he wishes to retire from office and under no circumstances will he accept another term. His retirement will be deeply regretted by all exhibitors in the state. He was the founder of the organization and during his two years' regime as the presiding officer he has worked untiringly in the interest of the association. His efforts have been very productive. Although he did not receive the co-operation of a large number of the exhibitors throughout the state, nevertheless he worked in their interests and fought against legislative bills which, if passed, would have proved serious to the moving picture business, and much of the time which he devoted to the business of the league was given at a financial loss. Many of the exhibitors in Massachusetts should realize that the league is working for their welfare from one end of the year to the other. These men should give the new officers of the league their hearty co-operation.

During the year of 1914, about fifteen bills adverse to the business were defeated in the legislature, through the work of President Horstmann and his associates. The citizens of the Puritanical Bay State are always trying to pass legislation that would injure the exhibition of moving pictures. It would give great encouragement to the executives of the League if every exhibitor in the state would assure them that they appreciate their work and are willing to co-operate with them at all times.

The "Twenty Minute" bill has already been submitted for consideration by the general court which has been elected for 1915. This bill, which was defeated last year, provides that no reel of film be allowed to run over twenty minutes and provides a penalty for any violation. Among other bills which were defeated was the censorship bill, which provided that the chief of the state police or his representative should inspect or approve every photoplay before it is exhibited in the commonwealth. The "Five Minute Bill," which compelled every exhibitor to wait five minutes between reels, was also erased from the statute books of the state, after a vigorous campaign which was led by President Horstmann. If he did not accomplish anything else during his entire tenure of office, he would be justified in taking pride in this. A bill to shorten the time during which moving picture and vaudeville shows might be open was also sent to the scrap heap. If this act had ever been placed on the statute books, it would be unlawful to display pictures except between the hours of one and five in the afternoon and seven and eleven in the evening.

Other acts which were defeated included a bill compelling the theaters to publish a scale of admission prices to hold for one year; a bill authorizing the mayor of Boston to revoke or suspend licenses; a bill for the prevention of overcrowding theaters; a bill which prohibited children under fifteen years of age from attending moving picture shows unless they were accompanied by an adult, and a bill favoring the regulation of admission to theaters.

The league is now conducting an active membership campaign. Those exhibitors in the state, who are not members of the organization, can show their appreciation of the work done by President Horstmann and associates, by joining league.

FREDERICK MURPHY BUYS NEW ENGLAND FRANCHISE

United Film Pictures to Be Distributed by Former Manager of Warner's Office.

Frederick B. Murphy, who has been the manager of the New England office of Warner's Features, Inc., at No. 209 Pleasant street, Boston, for the past eight months, has purchased the New England franchise for the productions released through the United Film Service (Warner's Features), Inc. Mr. Murphy is the first individual in this territory to branch out as an independent. He is a native of the Hub, but had been away from the city for a number of years. It is his intention to settle there now. He has established a regular runoff day, which started Wednesday and will continue every week on that day. He has received the good wishes of his friends for his success in this new venture.

He will maintain a branch office at Springfield, Mass., which will be under the direction of William F. O'Brien, and his Maine office is located in Portland and presided over by George Hickey. Charles H. Barolet will work from the Boston office.

Mr. Murphy and his road men are well known in the film business in New England, and during the week that he has been running the independent business Mr. Murphy has contracted to give his regular service to five new houses. They are the Opera House, Lawrence, Mass.; Academy of Music, Lowell, Mass.; Empire theater, North Adams, Mass.; Jefferson theater, Portland, Me., and the New Princess theater, Berlin, N. H.

OTHER NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

Exhibitors in the many manufacturing cities and towns of New England are looking forward to a great business boom. Their receipts have fallen off very much during the past two months on account of the general business depression, which forced a large number of the mills and factories to shut down or run on half time. Many of these manufacturing establishments have now announced that they will start to run full time in the near future.

Charles L. Winston, manager of the Empire theater at North Adams, Mass., made his debut as a blackface comedian last week and was pronounced a great success. Mr. Winston had booked George Darling, a New York performer, for an act at his house. Shortly before the opening of the performance, Darling sent a telegram that he was ill and would not be able to appear. "Charlie," by the way, is the youngest theatrical manager in the country and is a former Boston newspaperman. He endeavored to find a substitute, but was unsuccessful. He then decided that he would do the act himself; a card was placed on the stage announcing the blackface comedian. Manager Winston made his appearance before the audience, as the orchestra played, "I Don't Know Where I'm Going, But I'm On My Way." He was greeted with a ripple of applause. This encouraged him and he told some jokes and sang a few songs. When he reached his dressing room, he was asked where he secured the line of talk and he replied, "From an almanac I found in the dressing room." However, a new act was booked and appeared at the evening performance.

The Hippodrome at Morrisville, Vt., is now under new management. L. C. Emmons has sold it to William M. Johnson.

Charles Stern, manager of the Bangor, Me., office of the Universal Film Service, was registered at the Hotel Touraine, Boston, for two days last week, with his bride, with whom he had just returned from New York. "Charlie" visited many of his friends while he was in the city and was showered with congratulations.

John F. Patten, first vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts and manager of Bates opera house, Attleboro, Mass., is a most versatile story teller. Whenever you meet him, he has a new tale and they are not chestnuts either.

William Dowling, proprietor of the Magic theater, East Boston, visited Edward J. Farrell, New England manager for the General Film Company. Mr. Dowling was enthused over business. He states that he has been playing to capacity for the last two weeks. His matinees have been unusually well attended. In fact, he says that the patrons waited at the box office for an hour before it opened.

Frederick J. McIsaac, dramatic editor of the Boston American; Richard Sears, New England cameraman for the Hearst-Selig Weekly, and John D. Bogart, general manager of Hearst papers, witnessed a special exhibition of "The History of the World's Greatest War" at the New England office of the General Film Company, at No. 218 Commercial street, Boston.

Philip Keon has purchased the Salem theater building at Salem, Mass. It was one of the biggest real estate deals ever transacted in the Witch City, and is said to have involved $80,000. Mr. Keon is the proprietor of the Federal theater in Salem. The new house, which he has purchased, was formerly the leading playhouse in the city, but of recent years has been used for the exhibition of pictures.

Al H. Maley, manager of the Scollay Square Olympia, Boston; Samuel Grant, of the Eastern Theaters Company, and Ernest H. Horstmann and Frank Howard, of the Gordon enterprises, have become real devotees of bowling. Much rivalry is said to exist among them for the championship. It is rumored that they are contemplating the organization of a moving picture exhibitors' bowling league.

Samuel Pinanski, manager of the Modern theater, Boston, has assumed the managership of the Shawmut theater, succeeding Frank Prior. In the future, Mr. Pinanski will direct the destinies of both houses.

Franklin F. Plympton, superintendent of Tremont Temple, Boston, announces that he has booked the Eclectic feature, "Les Miserables," for a six-week run at his playhouse. This is the third time that he has booked this production. On the first booking, it ran for thirteen weeks and its second exhibition was for five weeks.

The Box Office Attraction Company's production, "Samson," was among the missing for a few days. It had been shipped from New York, but was lost in the holiday rush. The first exhibition of this feature in New England will be given at the Modern theater during the week of Jan. 11. The management of the theater is advertising this feature extensively, emphasizing that it is not a production of a Biblical play.

Harvey Watkins, general manager of the Keith interests, spent several days of the past week in Boston. During the visit, he called upon Edward J. Farrell of the General Film Company.

William Eckler, one of the proprietors of the Dreamland theater at Revere and the Peabody theater, Peabody, Mass., was seen in Boston during the week, having recovered from the effects of a severe cold.

L. W. McChesney, general sales manager for the Edison Company, has informed the New England exhibitors that his company's shipments will continue as usual regardless of the loss which the company recently suffered from fire.

Thomas Sprye, of the American Feature Film Company, has returned to his headquarters at No. 168 Tremont street, Boston, after a business trip through this territory. He declares, after interviewing many exhibitors, that business is holding up exceptionally well and that a substantial increase is anticipated.

Manager I. M. Mosher, of the new Franklin Park theater, Dorchester, Mass., reports that he played to capacity during the past week. His attraction was the Famous Players' production, "The Country Mouse," featuring Adele Farrington and Robert Bosworth.

George E. Stevens has booked the Life-Photo picture, "The Littlest Rebel," for the next two weeks at different houses throughout the western part of Massachusetts.

William White, manager of the Academy of Music, Lowell, has contracted for the Alliance program and will start in the middle of January.

H. R. Lefavor, proprietor of the View theater at New Bedford, is contemplating the purchase of the building in which his theater is located. He is using the Alliance program and states that "The Key to Yesterday" went big with his audiences.

Franklin H. Vine, New England manager for the World Film Corporation, has contracted with several new houses to use the feature productions of his company. Among them are the Melrose theater, Melrose, Mass.; New Comique, Montpelier, Vt., and the Pavillion theater at Barre, Vt.

Norman D. Merrill will become associated with the New England office of the Box Office Attraction Company on Jan. 11. Mr. Merrill is one of the most popular film men in this district. To affiliate himself with the Fox enterprise, Mr. Merrill will sever his connection with the Mutual Film Company. He has been manager of their Maine branch at Portland for some time.

Leslie Long, who was formerly connected with the Universal and Paramount Services, is now in charge of the New England shipments of the Box Office Attraction Company.

A moving picture exhibition was held in the Lexington, Mass., Town Hall for the purpose of adding to the Wellesley College restoration fund. Mrs. Mabel Wing Castle, president of the Lexington Equal Suffrage Association, and Mrs. E. R. Ferguson, of Lexington, both Wellesley graduates, were in charge of the affair, which netted a neat sum.

L. M. Boas, of the Academy of Music, Fall River, Mass., is now using the Alliance program. "Hearts and Flowers" was well appreciated by his audiences during the first three days of the past week. This production has been heavily booked in this territory.

Ben Abrams, special representative of the Alliance Film Corporation, was a visitor to Boston during the past week. He interviewed Jacob Laurie of the Beacon and Modern theaters and Robert Larson, publicity director for the Keith enterprises.

Harry F. Campbell, New England manager of the Box Office Attraction Company, has booked Winsor McCay's resurrection of that prehistoric but comic animal, "Gertie," to appear at Keith's Bijou Dream, Boston, for two consecutive weeks. This is the first time that a single reel feature has ever been booked for over one week at the same house. Mr. Campbell should feel proud over this accomplishment.

Manager Stanley Sumner of the Plaza theater, Salem, Mass., was so elated over the reception given to the Box Office Attraction Company's feature, "The Thief," with Dorothy Donnelly, that he could not wait to come to Boston to tell of the success, but communicated with Manager Campbell over the telephone. For three days he offered this attraction and played to capacity at each performance.

On Jan. 13, the Boston theater will discontinue the exhibition of moving pictures and will return to the legitimate. No reason has been given for the change of policy, but it is generally believed that moving pictures were not a paying proposition at this monster playhouse.

Mayor Curley had the pleasure of seeing himself in moving pictures as the guest of the management of the Park theater on last Saturday. At Christmas, Mayor Curley played a prominent part in spreading Christmas cheer throughout Boston by the distribution of Christmas baskets. The Park theater secured pictures of this Santa Claus at work. The mayor enjoyed the performance very much.

The story of the "Sleeping Beauty" was the special feature at the moving picture show for boys and girls at Tremont Temple last week. This was the fourth of a series of exhibitions for children and they have proved to be very successful. They are produced under the auspices of the children's players' department of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union.

The World Film Corporation's attraction, "Your Girl and Mine," gives every indication of being a winner throughout New England. The many suffrage societies throughout the territory are doing all in their power to make it a success.

C. A. Riva, proprietor of the Pastime theater at Tilton, N. H., is doing a fine business with the Eclectic feature, "The Exploits of Elaine." His playhouse is one of the most beautiful in New Hampshire. It was opened four weeks ago and is looked upon as a success. It is up to date in every detail and has a seating capacity of 400.

The Dreamland theater at Keene, N. H., has been closed.

Keith Buys Maine Theatre

The Keith Interests Have Bought the Star, Theatrical Landmark of Bangor—Will Be Called the Park—Was Built by Pope McKinnen and Has Interesting Record.

By John P. Flannigan, Special Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

THE Park theater, formerly the Star, has opened under the management of the Keith interests, "The Walls of Jericho," a Box Office Attraction, being the opening production. The Park is the only specially constructed moving picture theater in Bangor in a building of its own, and is one of the most substantial of its kind in the United States. It is of brick throughout, fireproof, and has the largest seating capacity of any Bangor moving picture house.

Built by Pope D. McKinnon, and opened about a year ago as the Star, this big property has never been a bonanza. It was first managed by Arthur Allen, also manager of the Palace theater, also owned by Mr. McKinnon. Later, Mr. Allen severed his connection with Mr. McKinnon, who assumed the management of the establishment himself for a while, when Mr. Allen again took control, leasing it from Mr. McKinnon and running it with Universal backing. For a while the venture was successful, but terminated a few weeks ago, when the theater was leased to the Keith interests, and the name changed to The Park. It is now under the management of Stephen Bogrett, the local manager of the Keith theater, the Bijou. Mr. Bogrett has been manager of the Keith moving picture house, the Nickel, now closed. The staff of the Nickel has been transferred to the Park. With this move the amusement center of Bangor has been entirely shifted to Exchange street and the east side of Kenduskeag Stream. A few years ago the only theatres were on the west side.

The Park theater admission charge is ten cents for adults and children are admitted for five cents in the afternoon. This marks the passing of another five cent moving picture house. The Palace theater, on Exchange street, which has a Universal program, is now the only house in the city with a five cent admission. The Graphic is ten cents, and the lowest price at the Bijou, which is a vaudeville house, is ten cents.

SUNDAY OPENING IN BANGOR

At least a temporary settlement of the question of the opening of the moving picture theaters which has been agitating the Lewiston, Me., public, has been reached during the past week by an agreement made between the managers of the three theatres that each theater is to be permitted to run Sunday nights in turns. The gross receipts of the first Sunday evening performance will be turned over to the municipal authorities for charity and a percentage of the receipts for each subsequent performance is also to be given to charity.

A. L. Ehrgott, branch manager for the General Film Co., at Bangor, Me., and Mrs. Ehrgott, spent Christmas in Boston and New York.

Bangor moving picture theatres have no cause for complaint in looking back over the year just ended. It has been one of prosperity on the whole. Early in the year, at the request of the city government, alterations were made on several of the theatres to make them comply with the city fire ordinances, and this was cheerfully done. Higher prices are received for admission, better pictures are shown, and more satisfactory conditions prevail in general than a year ago.

SEND FILMS TO LUMBERJACKS

Perhaps the most unusual use to which moving pictures are being put in the State of Maine is that of entertaining woodsmen, isolated hundreds of miles from towns and cities. The Y. M. C. A. industrial department of this State is sending A. B. Clark into the big woods holding services for the men and incidentally entertaining them with the latest moving pictures. These are also shown at the Woodsmen's Y. M. C. A. building at Greenville. These men, keenly appreciate the pictures.

NEWS LETTER FROM WISCONSIN

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

Censorship of rag-time songs as sung on the present-day vaudeville stage is just as essential as the censorship of motion pictures, Miss Helen Welch of Janesville told the Woman's Civic League of that city.

Competition is keen in Sturgeon Bay, resulting in the installation of orchestras in the moving picture houses. The Gem theater recently had a band concert in front of its house on Saturday evening.

Julius Feldman and Fred Brown, who have opened a moving picture show in Brown's Hall at Wanzeke will give shows two nights a week.

The Star theater at Eau Claire recently had a film fire, but aside from the destruction of one reel of pictures no damage was done.

A moving picture machine has been installed for public schools at Fairchild.

Tax May Last Two Years

Internal Revenue Tax on Picture Houses May Be Imposed Again in 1916—Exhibitors Should Begin Work at Once to Obtain a More Acceptable Classification.

By Clarence L. Linz, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

FROM present indications it would look as though American motion picture exhibitors will again be subjected to an internal revenue tax for the year 1916. According to data given out by a leading member of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, who has investigated the matter, at the present rate of Government income, as produced by the customs revenue, the receipts for the present fiscal year will go behind by $70,000. This will be taken care of by the present internal revenue act, which, it is estimated, will bring in between $80,000,000 and $90,000,000.

Unless the war terminates in the near future, it will be incumbent upon the next Congress, which will convene in December, to take immediate steps for the renewal of the present internal revenue provisions, or enact new legislation with similar intent. On their part, in view of the dissatisfaction manifested by exhibitors all over the country by reason of the alleged improper classification of motion picture houses, it is incumbent upon the exhibitors to seek to have a more acceptable interpretation expressed of the provisions of the law of Oct. 22, 1914, which classes the movie houses with the legitimate theaters in the matter of assessment of taxes.

CRANDALL'S THEATER MAKES SHOPPERS' MATINEE PAY.

Harry Crandall's Theater Makes Afternoon Show Attractive to Tired Shoppers.

Many exhibitors in the business sections of the larger cities are overlooking a good bet, according to Harry Crandall, of Crandall's theater, who during the past few weeks has been able to materially increase his business by catering to women shoppers for the matinee performances. The popularity of the shoppers' period was first worked up through the medium of the newspaper advertising, circular letters so couched as to form a personal invitation to shoppers to make that theater their headquarters after a tiresome afternoon round of the stores, and the issuance of small cards on which were printed the schedule of commencement of the different shows of the afternoon and evening. This sort of advertising was greatly augmented through the special service offered to women patrons. The courtesy of the theater's attaches has made it a very popular rendezvous.

The "Shoppers' Matinee" is a feature of the business heretofore overlooked by exhibitors, but go into any up-to-date department store and you will very likely find an elaborately fitted out rest room.

Truly, the moving picture theater is the haven for the tired and it needs but little publicity to persuade the public of the fact. In Washington, the theaters have heretofore depended almost entirely on their night business for their existence. This does not apply now, for there are many days during the week when at several of the downtown houses the crowds are so great as to almost block the sidewalks. It requires but very little change in the usual policy of a house to get after this business. From the results seemingly obtained at Crandall's the returns are well worthy of the outlay.

ANOTHER BACHELOR GONE.

A number of exhibitors strolling into the offices of the Electric Film Exchange, in the Bank of Commerce and Savings Building, noticed the chair of George W. Smiley, the manager draped in black. Happily, there has been no death to mar the season's festivities, and Mr. Smiley asks the Moving Picture World to announce to its many subscribers the fact that all of this hilarity was due to the fact that while in New York spending the holiday season with relatives, he took unto himself a wife in the person of Miss Helen S. Peto, of that city. No one ever accused George of being very romantic, but the ceremony was performed at the Little Church Around the Corner, the mecca for all eloping couples, and George's was a real, last minute elopement. Congratulations are due the young couple and the very best wishes of all their friends are being heaped upon them.

OSBORNE BUYS FURNITURE.

There's more excitement yet to come, for there is a well defined rumor around town that Herbert M. Osborne, manager of the Eclectic Feature Film Company, another of the city's popular purveyors of motion picture films, is about to desert the ranks of the benedicts and lead a certain young lady blushingly to the altar. Mr. Osborne is very reticent, but always smiles and turns American Beauty rose color when the subject is broached. However, he was heard pricing a set of dining room furniture and asking whether, if he made a purchase, the same would be held pending his orders for its delivery.

LEAGUE TO TACKLE PROBLEM OF SCHEMES.

Country Store Night and Other "Schemes" Not a Real Help to the Business.

It is a strange thing, but in the moving picture business, more than in any other, the individual members are always trying to get ahead of the other fellow, and always to a mutual disadvantage. If one exhibitor opens up with three reels for five cents and seems to be getting the trade, his competitor will go him one or two better or seek to gain an advantage through the medium of a country store or some other scheme whereby the public will be impressed by the giving of something for nothing and will transfer its patronage and favor to the gift-distributors, and then the first-mentioned exhibitor comes back with something else. This is one of the many problems which the Exhibitors' League of the District of Columbia, following its reorganization during the month, will endeavor to solve. It is a common sense fact that no one producing company has a monopoly on well-acted, popularity-bringing photoplays, and the sooner the average exhibitor learns this and believes this, the sooner will amity reign among all. If you, Mr. Exhibitor, do not get what you think is your rightful share of the patronage of your neighborhood cast your own personality and that of your theater into the reflections from the mirror of public opinion and see what is missing. Are you and your employees courteous, your theater well kept, clean and sanitary; your music good, projection up to the standard? Ask yourself these and such other questions as may come to you, and find the answer for yourself before you start giving away all of your profits and find yourself the victim of your own poison distributed to commercially kill your fellow-exhibitor.

SUIT BROUGHT AGAINST DISTRICT AMUSEMENT CO.

Two Stockholders Bring Suit Against President and Secretary of Company.

Reid S. Baker and Martin Roth have entered suit against the District Amusement Company, and John Harry Miller, Fred W. Miller, Thomas D. Harper and Henry Dern, shareholders therein, to settle certain differences which have arisen in the business affairs of the corporation. The troubles seem to involve more particularly Messrs. John and Fred Miller.

The complainants, who are also stockholders in the company, claim that in November or December, of 1911, the Miller brothers were directed to purchase certain real estate at 419 and 421 Ninth street, Northwest. At that time they held office as secretary and president, respectively. It is alleged that they succeeded in securing title to the property for the sum of $41,000, later offering it for sale to the District Amusement Company for the sum of $50,000, which latter amount was paid. It is claimed that the Millers represented that they had paid $50,000, and that they thus made a secret profit of $9,000 upon the transaction, and the plaintiffs petition the court to call upon the defendants to make an accounting of the moneys involved.

The plaintiffs further aver that the defendants Miller are now engaged, and have been engaged in other business in Baltimore for the past year, and have given little personal attention to the business of the company here; that notwithstanding this, they have paid themselves a salary of over $2,000 a year; and that they have wrongfully connived and acquiesced in an action of one of their employees in converting to his own use $300 or more and have refused to take any action for the recovery of the money, although frequently requested to do so by the plaintiffs, and that the defendants have in other respects mismanaged and misdirected the affairs of the said corporation to the detriment of its stockholders.

The District Amusement Company operates the Leader theater at 507 Ninth street, Northwest. The property involved in this suit is not a theater building.

OTHER WASHINGTON ITEMS.

Now that the holiday season is over the box office receipts at the various houses in the National Capital are mounting up to the normal and the exhibitors are beginning to cultivate the smile which vanished during the recent very dull period. From all sections of the city come reports of improvement and from now until April a good business is expected.

Congratulations and well wishes for his future sucess are being heaped upon C. W. Sawin, formerly manager of the local branch of the General Film Company and up to the present time manager for the Paramount Feature Film Company with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., who has just been designated district manager for the World's Special Film Corporation. Mr. Sawin spent the holiday period in this city.

Mr. Wertheimer, of the firm of Wertheimer Brothers, operating the Grand and Victoria theaters in Cumberland, Md., was a visitor here during the week. While in the city he contracted with the Eclectic Feature Film Company for a regular of service of features for the Grand and booked "Elaine," the new serial, for his other house. Benjamin Hack, operating the Colonial theater, in Martinsburg, W. Va., also booked "Elaine" while here last week.

HARD TIMES THEATER.

New Picture House in St. Louis Asks Only Two and a Half Cents.

By A. H. Giebler, Special Correspondent Moving Picture World.

A THEATER charging two and a half cents admission has been opened in the house formerly known as the World's Dream theater, at 1413 Market street. Two for a nickel admission is charged all during the week, but on Sundays and holidays the price is raised to five cents, and a box of candy is given with each ticket. The Hard Times theater, as the place is called, gives its patrons five reels of pictures, and has been playing to full houses. Jos. Cohen is manager.

INVESTIGATE IN ST. LOUIS.

The Illinois State Board of Fire Underwriters, who have made a report of the condition of East St. Louis, recommend that precautions should be taken by moving picture exhibitors of the city. A committee of the City Council will investigate the picture theaters soon, with regard to public safety.

OTHER ST. LOUIS NOTES.

Moving pictures have been made of all the classes of the Southwest Turnverein of St. Louis, a social and athletic association, showing the various groups and teams in the different drills, marches and athletic exercises. The pictures were photographed in Tower Grove Park, and were shown at the Cerokee theater, on Cherokee street and Ohio avenue, on Dec. 29 and 30.

At a meeting of the St. Louis Advertising Men's League, held at the City Club recently, moving pictures were used in a novel manner. An election of officers was held, and the candidates for the various offices were filmed in the act of making speeches urging their election. These pictures were made in advance, and on the night of the meeting the seekers after office stood behind the screen and recited the speech as the camera depicted their gestures and actions to the audience.

Charles Humpfeld, a musician of considerable local prominence, has been added to the orchestra at the Cherokee theater, on Cherokee street and Ohio avenue.

The Eagle theater, at 1719 South Broadway, gave its initial performance on the night of Dec. 19. The Eagle is just one door south of the old theater of that name, which was managed by F. L. Root, until the audiences grew so large that a new place to entertain them had to be built. The new Eagle seats 380, is fireproof, has sanitary drinking fountains, and all the other late improvements. The ground space covered by the theater is very narrow, and every seat in the house is directly in front of the screen. A five-reel program is given, and the Renfax Singing pictures will be put on as an added attraction as soon as the apparatus can be installed. The box office at the Eagle showed that three hundred more persons paid admission on the Christmas day just passed than on Christmas day, 1913. Further evidence that the amusement business in St. Louis is decidedly on the mend.

F. Wehrenberg, manager of the "Best" theater, at Jefferson avenue and Cherokee street, who has been in the habit of having a Santa Claus to distribute candy and toys to the children at the Christmas matinee for the last four years, varied the performance in a novel and pleasing manner on Christmas day just passed, by securing a man to play the part of Santa Claus, who is as nearly a double to the good old saint as it is possible for any one to be. The old gentleman who took the part is a sort of itinerant book peddler, and is a familiar character in St. Louis; he is short and fat, with long-flowing beard, red cheeks and sparkling eyes.

NEWS GOSSIP FROM MISSOURI.

By Kansas City Moving Picture Direct News Service.

GENE GAUNTIER, her husband, Mr. Jack Clark, and the Willis Wood theater gave Kansas City something new to talk about in the way of novelty. The management of the Willis Wood learned that Gene Gauntier was in town and decided that they would secure her services if possible. She agreed to their proposal. It was to the effect that they secure a film made by herself and her husband and show it at the Willis Wood; she and her husband appearing after the picture was shown and make little speeches. The plan was very satisfactory and for the past week she has been appearing every day after the picture "Come Back to Erin," in which she plays the lead with Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark made a decided hit with the audience with his Irish brogue which is unassumed. Kleine's "Officer 666" is also being shown.

H. M. Warner, vice president of Warner's Features, Inc., is in Kansas City on business. Mr. Warner announces that the company is shipping twelve reels of film into this office weekly at the present time and that in the near future it will ship twenty-eight.

The Royal theater in Kansas City had as its Christmas and holiday attractions the Famous Players release, the "Sign of the Cross." The lobby display put up for this picture was beautiful and was prepared by Mr. Butts of Kansas City. It consisted of two large crosses of electric lights over the entrance to the theater and several beautiful pictures of various scenes taken from the picture.

S. J. Baker, traveling representative for the Box Office Attractions Co., returned to Kansas City after a very extensive trip through Nebraska and Iowa, where he reports excellent business.

The Twelfth street theater closed a very successful week with the Griffith, Mutual feature, "Battle of the Sexes." The picture was well attended and Manager Durrin says that he had the most satisfied patrons that he has had for some time. He also announces that from now on the house will be an exclusive feature house, showing the best features obtainable.

George C. Rau, manager of the World in Motion and the Rex theaters, proved to be a Santa Claus to all of his employees. Mr. Rau presented to everybody, the porter included, at each house a five dollar gold piece for Christmas. His wife also gave everybody something. Miss Fitzgerald, who has been with Mr. Rau for the last eight years, was presented with a $150 set of furs and a beautiful diamond lavalliere.

C. L. McVey, acting manager of the Kansas City office of the World Feature Film Comp., is tickled to death by the arrival of a baby boy at his home. The new "film man" arrived December 18 and weighs eight pounds.

G. E. Akers, formerly a traveling representative for the Box Office Attractions Co., has taken the management of the Mutual "Runaway June" in this territory for the Serial Publication. Mr. Akers has had considerable experience in this vicinity and is well known and well liked by the exhibitors of the territory.

A. M. Werner, special representative for the New York Motion Picture Co., was in Kansas City several days. Mr. Werner is in this territory taking bookings for the "Wrath of the Gods."

C. W. Baldwin, manager of the Kansas City Poster Mounting Co., presented all of the exchange managers in Kansas City with fine boxes of cigars for Christmas presents. He also in many instances gave the girls in the offices boxes of candy.

Manager N. H. Spitzer, of the Box Office Attractions Co., reports an excellent business on "Gertie," the comic creation by Windsor McKay.

G. M. Anderson and Harry Chaplin paid Kansas City a brief visit on their way east. While here Mr. Anderson gave a lengthy interview to the newspapers.

UNIVERSITY MAY CENSOR PICTURES IN WISCONSIN

Legislature May Make University of Wisconsin Censor of Films

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

A BILL is reported to be under preparation in Wisconsin, to be introduced before the state legislature, which will vest the state university with the powers of censoring motion pictures. If such a measure is passed the work will be handled by the extension division of the university and its seal of approval will be necessary for the exhibition of any film. The extension division is using a great many motion picture in its work and in fact is one of the greatest promoters of the use of films for education purposes in the central west. As a result of its efforts a great many of the schools in the state are equipped with projecting machines.

WILL USE PICTURES TO TEACH GOOD CITIZENSHIP.

Civic Secretary Scholtz to Make Use of Pictures in Rural Schools.

Moving pictures will be used in the work of Walter Phillip Scholtz, who assumed his duties of civic secretary of the town of Neillsville—the first small city to create this position—January 1.

Mr. Scholtz is hired by the school board. Some of the early plans call for a series of Friday night meetings in surrounding rural schools, in which work the motion picture projection apparatus owned by the school will be utilized. A course in good citizenship is planned and suitable films will be selected for exemplication of this instruction.

OTHER WISCONSIN ITEMS.

Architect A. E. Swager of Milwaukee has been taking bids for a new 55x120, brick and terra cotta moving picture theater at Fortieth street and North avenue in that city. It will seat about 900 and cost about $20,000.

A modern opera house is projected for Kendall by A. H. York of that place.

"The Spoilers," the Selig picture, shown under the auspices of the Guild of St. John's Church, did capacity business at the Magee opera house in Evansville.

Roy Hannan of DePere has purchased a "taking machine" and expects to do quite a little camera work taking films in this section of the state.

Thomas Saxe of the Orpheum in Milwaukee and the Sentinel of that city were hosts to 1,000 newsboys. A special Christmas program, with the Vitagraph film, "Private Dennis Hogan," a talk by Max Owhie, a 97-year old Indian and a dance by his grandson, Then-Yan-Da, was prepared by Manager William M. Mick.

At the time when the question of national defenses and citizen soldiery was very much alive the Unique theater of Tomah did a good piece of business by booking the films of the Wisconsin National Guard, which were made at Camp Douglas. The demand for these films is good. They have been booked for Menahsa. At Marshfield, where Company A is located, they brought large crowds to the New Adler opera house. The militiamen share in the proceeds.

Plans for remodeling the Gem theater at Beloit have been discussed by S. Klein, who went recently from Chicago to take charge of the house.

Power to eliminate undesirable moving pictures as well as songs and vaudeville acts may be vested in Miss Emma Tyler, policewoman at Superior. The City Council has been contemplating a broad measure along this line because of difficulties sustained by the policewoman in ridding the Superior stage of offensive vaudeville.

The new manager of the Orpheum theater at Milwaukee, selected by Thomas Saxe, is William E Mick, formerly manager of the Gayety and later of the Shubert.

Censorship In Spokane

Commissioner Samuel Glascow, the New Censor in Spokane, Believes That Exhibitors Are in Favor of Clean Shows—Puts the Problem Up to the Theaters Themselves.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

CENSORSHIP of motion pictures in Spokane, Wash., will be left largely to the managers of the photoplay houses, according to Commissioner Samuel Glasgow, the new censor. The commissioner believes that the exhibitors will find that it pays to give clean shows. His policy was outlined at a conference in his office, to which he had summoned all the picture house owners in the city. B. W. Copeland, president of the local exhibitors, thanked him for the confidence shown in the managers and gave his opinion that the summary measures, to be used only as a last resort, would not be necessary. "We have some good men in the picture business here who deserve to be aided by the city government, rather than hampered," declared Mr. Glasgow.

SUNDAY OPENING STIRS GRAND JUNCTION

Church People in Colorado City Up in Arms Over Pictures on Sabbath.

The Sunday closing of moving picture houses has developed into a big local issue at Grand Junction, Col. The battle has developed into one of petitions with the Ministerial Association on the offensive. The church people set aside a Sunday for the signing of papers by those in attendance at religious services and the enlistment of volunteers to circulate the lists among citizens of Grand Junction.

One pastor is reported to have declared that he did not care to consider as members of his church any communicants who refused to sign the petition. The picture men prepared counter petitions asking that the city commission take no action on the matter at this time. The church people claim that the city council stands four to one in favor of closing the photoplay houses on Sunday.

MINNESOTA INTERESTED IN SHOWS FOR CHILDREN.

Public Spirit in the Northwest Works for Good Children's Pictures.

In order to help the managers of Minneapolis picture houses who are cooperating in the special childrens' shows, the Drama League of that city plans to conduct a publicity campaign. All organizations interested in child welfare work will be informed of the good work done by the Minneapolis exhibitors. It is preposed to have these special children's programs run for the full Saturday afternoon show instead of for one run. Standards just announced by the organization include the elimination of films showing bar and wineroom scenes, featuring of drunkenness and murders and robberies, abduction of girls, lure of shop girls, and flashy love stories.

Following the plan of the Drama League in Minneapolis, the Women's Civic League at St. Paul, Minn., has appointed a committee to secure special shows for children. A survey will be made to find out the kind of films preferred by the youngsters. The committee is composed of Mrs. Phineas N. Cardozo, Mrs. S. A. Rice and Mrs. E. C. Emmons. Dr. Dawson Johnson, public librarian, is co-operating in the work.

Moving pictures are not bad for the morals of youth, it has been decided in debate at the Biwabik, Minn., high school. The young debaters who upheld the photoplay presented their arguments well.

OTHER NORTHWEST ITEMS.

J. E. Frankson of Neche, N. D., has purchased a moving picture outfit and will operate a show at Bathgate, N. D.

Edward S. Curtis' pictures of the Indians of Alaska were given their local premier at the Tacoma theater in Tacoma. These are more than occasional moving pictures of the Pacific Northwestern tribes. He composed a scenario based on composite legends of love and war and the epic photodrama includes the distinctive tribal dances, war ceremonies, whale and sea-lion hunting and head-hunting expeditions.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Nance, who sold their show at Wayne, Neb., are now operating their moving picture show in the opera house at Wagner, S. D.

The Christmas show at the Lyric theater in Minneapolis, under the auspices of the Drama League, was a typical Yuletide offering. The program was made up of Dicken's "Christmas Carol," a cartoon cemedy, and a colored film of bird life.

F. M. Beaty has opened a moving picture show at Clinton, Minn.

Manager Moore of the Colonial theater at Tacoma, Wash., has installed a new electric generator. This house also has been making plans for the installation of a new pipe organ.

J. Piller of the Empress theater at Leeds, N. D., has been making plans for some extensive improvements to his house.

Art Totushek has sold his interest in the moving picture show at Hutchinson, Minn., to Ben Pawlak, who will continue the business.

F. A. Seeley is now manager of the Lyric theater at Atwater, Minn.

The Family theater at Bagley, Minn., has announced that hereafter it will give shows on Wednesday and Saturday nights.

Hamm & Hansen have sold the Gem theater at Sleepy Eye, Minn., to Schroder & Rosenthal of Graceville.

John Pesava, who recently sold his moving picture show at Zumbrota, Minn., has been looking over the field at Rush City, Minn., with a view to conducting a show there.

The Nemec theater at St. Cloud, Minn., has added seats to its balcony and now can handle almost a thousand patrons.

Frank McAndrews has been contemplating opening a moving picture show at Green Isle, Minn.

Saturday afternoon shows, especially for children, have been tried at the Columbia theater, in Brainerd, Minn., for three Saturdays and may be made a permanent feature. In one of the days, half the proceeds were donated to the local Associated Charities.

The Gem moving picture theater at Lidgerwood, N. D., has been sold to Emil Frieck of Wyndmere.

The Bijou theater at Barnesville, Minn., has reduced the number of shows to three nights a week—Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. As holiday attractions this house had "The Last Days of Pompeii" and for the Sunday following New Year's "Quo Vadis."

J. J. Appel has been remodeling a building at Phillipsburg, Mont., to be used as a moving picture theater.

Free candy for the children has been a feature of the Saturday matinees at the Ansonia theater in Ansonia, Mont.

The opera house at Claire City, S. D., is now under the management of Joe Ercink and D. A Burnett of Lidgerwood, S. D.

E. H. Lower is again in charge of the Cozy theater at Tyndal, N. D., having purchased it from L. Jones.

The Bijou theater at Duluth, Minn., has adopted the "pay-day" stunt for Monday nights.

"Good Fellows' Day" was a pre-holiday event at the Blue Mouse theater in St Paul, Minn. The proceeds went to make more real Christmases in St. Paul.

A self-sustaining municipal theater for Helena, Mont., is the ambition of Alderman W. M. Biggs of that city. He thinks that one could be constructed and equipped for about $15,000.

Prize moneys received by the Lewis Junior High School at Ogden, Utah, have gone into a fund for the purchase of a moving picture machine to be used in the school work.

Mr. J. Kuchera has sold his Crescent moving picture theater at Kimball, S. D., to P. F. McCusker of Mitchell, S. D., who has been connected with the Redline Piano Company of Mitchell.

C. F. Johnson and Henry Foss have been planning to open a moving picture show at Stephen, Minn.

Lloyd Heron has purchased moving picture equipment and will operate a show in Dunbar Hall at Beaver, Minn., two or three times a week.

The Forsyth Opera House Company of Forsyth, Mont., has been incorporated with capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are Bert Hammond, L. H. Wahl and A. C. Wilson.

A new moving picture house, 36x100 feet, seating 435 persons and costing about $20,000, is projected in Brigham City, Utah. It probably will be erected by a local stock company, which contemplates making an offer of $10 for a suitable name for the house. Building will not start until April.

Folsom & Tindall have opened their new picture house at Edgerton, Minn.

Juvenile patrons of the Bijou-Grand moving picture theater at Walla Walla, Wash., were given candy by Santa Claus at a Saturday matinee.

Songs by Chief Silver-Tongue were featured for a week at the Grand opera house in Pueblo, Col.

R. A. Lockridge has started a moving picture show at Mussellshell, Mont.

A two days' return engagement of "Dante's Inferno" was played at the Orpheum theater in Butte, Mont.

NEWS FROM SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST.

By the Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

ILMS of the Southeast Texas Fair at Beaumont, which were made for Manager J. C. Clemmons, of the Imperial theater, did a big business at that house for two days.

M. B. Trezevant tendered his resignation as general manager of the Association of Commerce at New Orleans, La., effective Jan. 1, to accept a position as general sales manager for the Coquille Film Company and also to become a member of the board of directors of that company. The company has been making plans for a studio at New Orleans.

The Colonial theater, at Greenville, Tex., is laying particular emphasis on the idea that an admission ticket entitles a patron to comfort as well as to a good picture show. "What is your comfort worth?" is the catch-line that leaves a way open for impressing the public with the Colonial's conveniences.

The Empress theater, at Muskogee, Okla., announces that it has changed its service and is now giving 4,000 feet of first run film, changed daily, for five cents. The Empress has been running three reels.

The Cozy theater, at Shawnee, Okla., has changed its admission price to five cents for all.

Joe Powers has changed the name of his house at Jonesboro, Ark., from the Pastime to the Jewel and gives as reasons for this action that the name Jewel suggests a spic and span house which it will be, also that the pictures will be as bright as a jewel.

Construction of the moving picture theater for the Consolidated Amusement Company of Birmingham, Ala., has begun on Fourth avenue, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, in that city. It will seat about 600 persons and will cost about $12,500.

J. L. McDonald, formerly manager of the Theatorium, at Wilburton, Okla., is now manager of the Cozy theater, at that place.

The Princess theater, at Denton, Tex., is using quotations at the head of its advertising, such as: "No profit grows where there is no pleasure ta'en? "Taming of the Shrew."

The Mound City theater, at New Orleans, La., has been giving away candy in connection with its Sunday night vaudeville and picture shows.

Ministers of Augusta, Ga., learning that a movement was on foot to have the moving picture theaters operated on Sunday, presented a petition to the city council asking that the request not be granted. They declared such action would be positively injurious to the life of the city and would be of small intellectual value.

The Queen theater, at Houston, Tex., was one year old December 17. The anniversary feature was World Film offering, "The Wishing Ring."

Manager George B. Falligant, of the Pastime theater, at San Benito, Tex., arranged a benefit picture show for the night of December 28 to help a local park improvement fund. One night each month the proceeds at the Pastime will be used for this purpose.

Manager Sidney M. Nutt, of the New Central theater, at Hot Springs, Ark., has installed a new $1,000 grand piano. A facetious reporter declared that Tex Griffin would be given the honor of uppercutting, swinging, jabbing and jolting the harmony out of this new toy.

A charter has been granted at Birmingham, Ala., to the Alabama Amusement Company, with capital stock of $2,000. Jake Wells is one of the incorporators and the action was taken as an inkling that the Majestic in Birmingham would be operated as a picture house. The other incorporators are M. L. Semon, Louis V. Clarke and Robert L. Gregory.

W. B. Futch, of Warren, Tex., has been making arrangements to open a moving picture show at Browndell, Tex.

A special smokers' balcony at 15 cents admission is a feature of the new Empire theater, which has been opened at San Antonio, Tex., by T. H. Apostolon, W. J. Lytle and A. Nicholson, lessees. A Hope-Jones unit orchestra has been installed and in addition to playing the pictures J. Arther Geis takes delight in giving selections by request. "Neptune's Daughter," the Universal picture, was the big feature picture of a grand opening.

Doak Aydelotte, of Tyllhoma, Tenn., and Barclay Morgan, of Henryetta, Okla., have purchased a lot in Okmulgee, Okla., to be used as the site of a new opera house, 69x102.

Fire destroyed the Lyric Theatre at Sulphur Springs, Tex., but most of the equipment was saved. The origin of the fire, which started in an adjoining dry goods store, is unknown.

A free show for farmer boys who attended a meeting of the corn club boys of that section of North Carolina was given by the Lyric Theatre at Lexington. The Lyric has been featuring "The Beloved Adventurer" and giving a copy of the book with each fifteen tickets sold for $1.50.

Attendance at the Belgian war pictures which were shown at the Columbia Theater, in Columbia, S. C., was increased by the activity of "The State" of that city. The paper offered prizes to the girl and boy and to the school selling the most tickets in advance.

Free picture shows, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce were important attractions at the first trades and market day at Donaldsville, La.

"Be a Crystalite" is a slogan adopted by the Crystal Theatre of Greenville, Tex.

"Masher" Nuisance Up Again

Problem Perplexing Exhibitors in Louisville, Kentucky—Subject Discussed at Several Meetings of Local League—Managers and Ushers Keeping Strict Watch and Acting Quickly.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ONE of the most serious propositions Louisville exhibitors have had to contend with during the past few months is "the picture show masher." More trouble has been experienced this season than ever before and the exhibitors are at a loss as to just how to handle the situation. The Louisville Exhibitors' League has held several meetings at which the subject has been discussed. Men drop into the theaters and take seats beside women who are by themselves and become annoying. Very few women wish to make a scene or be the subject of a lot of notoriety and fail to report it to the managers. The consequence is that numbers of women patrons of the moving picture houses are adverse to attending shows either in the afternoon or night unless accompanied by friends, and in many cases have been annoyed unless the companion happened to be of the male sex. There has been some talk of providing special sections for men not accompanied by women, but no practical plan has been worked out. Ushers and managers at the theaters as well as operators are watching closely and doing all in their power to clean up the evil. Men who come into the theaters and take seats next to women when vacant seats are to be had are watched very closely, and if they again change their seats one of the employees or the manager of the theater will go to the first women and see if the man has been annoying. If he has been he is at once bounced and the box office ordered not to sell him any more tickets unless he is accompanied by women. The Novelty theater has been using a slide which requests that any annoyance be at once reported, but only one or two cases have been brought to the attention of the managers for fear of notoriety. The Novelty has also had its box office girls and paid employees mingle with the crowds. This latter form of detective work has done a great deal of good and many culprits have been identified. It is probable that warrants for arrest of offenders will be taken out shortly if no other way of cleaning up the evil is found.

MIX-UP BETWEEN TWO HOUSES OVER BRADY BOOKINGS.

Theater in Louisville Books "The Pit" Through Indianapolis—Neighboring House Books Same Picture from New York Office.

Louisville exhibitors are greatly interested in the outcome of a mix-up in bookings between the Mary Anderson theater and the Alamo theater. Both houses had bookings with the World Film Corporation to show "The Pit," the big William Brady production, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Dec. 30 and 31, and Jan. 1. The Alamo theater had been running the World's features for several weeks on a contract signed through the Indianapolis office, which gave the film company the right to discontinue service on two weeks' notice. The Mary Anderson theater signed a contract with the New York office to start using the World features on Dec. 30, with "The Pit" as the first show. The Alamo theater was given less than a week's notice, according to officers of the company. Both concerns have advertised the feature for the same dates and both houses expect to show it. Fred Dolle, manager of the Alamo theater, went to New York City to straighten out the tangle. The Alamo received posters and photographs with which to start its advertising several days in advance of the dates for which the show was booked.

BUNNY SELLS SEALS.

John Bunny, the well known moving picture comedian, was recently in Louisville, where he played at the Gayety theater. Throngs appeared wherever Mr. Bunny happened to be. Mr. Bunny was the headliner in a vaudeville entertainment held in Levy Brothers' big clothing store, for the benefit of the Louisville Anti-Tuberculosis Club, which was handling a big sale of Red Cross Seals for Christmas. The store was packed and business was practically suspended for the time being. John Bunny and John Buschemeyer, Mayor of Louisville, were featured as the two "greatest living Johns." Pictures of the men were sold at auction for as high as $5 each. John Bunny exerted his well known wiles in selling seals and Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven, the well known vaudeville stars, also took a prominent part in the entertainment. L. J. Dittmar, president of the Majestic Amusement Company, was one of the first subscribers to the fund to help fight tuberculosis in this year's campaign.

The Temple of Moloch," the Edison feature issued annually for the National Anti-Tuberculosis Association, was rebooked during Christmas week and was shown at the Ideal theater at Twenty-third and Market streets. Large crowds of association workers viewed the picture and pronounced it the best preachment to the public that has been made by the Edison company.

OTHER LOUISVILLE JOTTINGS.

Christmas week and the holidays kept things humming for the Louisville motion picture houses in spite of the fact that bad weather was experienced. Reports from various parts of the state show that country business has also been excellent and the local film exchanges have had all the business they could conveniently handle.

The Keith theater at Louisville has replaced Keystone comedies with travel pictures and has transferred the Keystones to the Mary Anderson theater, which is under the same management, but which is operated as a photo play house.

The S. & P. Film & Supply Company advertised a big reduction during the holidays on all supplies, machines and features. The concern has been making a specialty of ⅝x12 soft-cored carbons at $4.50 per 100. A 10 per cent. discount on all feature subjects during the next thirty days has also been advertised. The company has been very successful with a four-reel European war picture which rents for $25 per day or is handled on a percentage basis.

The Mary Anderson theater had a special program on Saturday morning following Christmas Day. This program was picked carefully by the Board of Censors and included "The Night Before Christmas," "A Study of Kittens," "Sea Anemones," "At Home in the Water" and "The Boy Rangers." Arrangements were made whereby free Christmas candy was awaiting the children on arrival at the theater.

The Casino, Alamo, Novelty, Majestic, Mary Anderson and Orpheum theaters all took part in boosting a big "Made in Louisville" dinner held under the auspices of the City Salesmen's Club during December. Slides were used in all the theaters and no charge was made for the service.

The Majestic Amusement Company, Fourth Avenue Amusement Company and The S. & P. Film & Supply Company were all featured in "Commerce of Louisville," a business publication which has just been begun. The paper featured business activity during 1914 and prospects for the coming year. More than one hundred concerns in Louisville were given space in the publication.

Eldridge Denham and A. W. Bragg, experienced motion picture men of Columbia, Tenn., have leased the old Princess theater at Russellville, Ky. The name of the house has been changed to the Star theater and the first showing was made on December 21. A Powers 6-A machine and 150 seats were installed. An electric piano furnishes music for the new house. Four reels of Universal films are shown and changed daily. Admission prices have been placed at five cents for children and ten cents for adults.

The Idle Hour theater of Uniontown, Ky., has booked the great Universal serial, "Trey of Hearts," and has made arrangements with the "Telegram," the Uniontown newspaper, to run the story in conjunction with the pictures.

Manager Harris, of the Princess theater of Morganfield, Ky., had a special matinee on the afternoon of Christmas eve, and invited all children under twelve years of age to attend the theater as his guests free of charge. Practically the whole town was present to receive the Christmas treat.

The Masons of Elizabethtown, Ky., donated the use of the Masonic Temple and furnished an operator and orchestra with which to hold a special performance for the benefit of the poor people of the city. Good crowds attended the benefit performance and numerous stockings which otherwise would have been empty on Christmas morning were filled.

Announcement has been made that the Pastime theater at Paducah, Ky., will be closed on January 2 for extensive repairs. The house will be remodeled and a larger stage built. The management expects in the future to show vaudeville as well as pictures.

John Couty and Jesse Kirby, of Smith's Grove, Ky., recently started a motion picture show in the Opera House. A unique form of generating electricity was employed until a six-h.p. engine and generator could be installed and some trouble was experienced with the current. An automobile was used to make the "juice" during the first few shows.

N. A. Wilkerson, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., is having the equipment in the Maxine Eliott theater removed, as the lease will be up in February and the house has not been successful. He will continue to operate the Tabb theater, which has always proved a good investment.

J. N. Landrum, of Lancaster, Ky., and W. B. Landrum, of Harlan, Ky., recently purchased the Cumberland theater, of Harlan, Ky., from F. F. Cawood. J. N. Landrum will move to Harlan at once and take the active management of the theater.

The Lyric theater at Jackson, Ky., is a newcomer in the mountain district of Kentucky. The theater has been open for about two weeks and is doing nicely. This is the second theater to open in the Breathitt county metropolis.

HONOLULU NOTES.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

The Ye Liberty theater at Honolulu had a moving picture camera man on the job when Mystic Shriners had a big procession through the streets of the city, preparatory to the adoption of sixteen candidates. The local pictures were regarded as quite an enterprise.

The Popular theater has inaugurated daily matinees. This house was one that celebrated Mary Pickford's birthday at the expense of the Famous Players, admitting free all girls on the day "Hearts Adrift" with "America's Little Sweetheart" was shown.

PHILADELPHIA NEWS LETTER.

By Philadelphia Special Moving Picture World News Service.

Mr. Calehuff, of the Calehuff Supply Company, which is located at 1301 Race St., announced the opening of the new Globe theater, at 59th and Market streets, on Monday, Dec. 28. The new theater is equipped with two No. 6A machines, rectifier, compensarc, spot lamps, etc. Messrs. Sablosky and McGuirk are the managers of the new establishment. This theater is a revelation to the lovers of all that is beautiful in the way of interior and exterior decorations. It is absolutely fireproof and has a seating capacity of 2,500 persons.

Mr. Calehuff reports that he is selling large quantities of American carbons and also states that his picture photograph frames, which are to be had and he invites every one to visit 1301 Race street and give his frames the "once over."

Lewis M. Swaab announces that he has installed complete equipment for the showing of motion pictures for the amusement of the sailors on the battleship Connecticut, also a big supply of Universal films.

Thousands of picture-loving people from Overbrook and Merion are being pleased each week by the manager of the Overbrook theater. Mr. Albert E. Brown is very critical as regards the pictures which are placed before his patrons and always insists upon a well balanced program, including romantic subjects and a variety of comedy of the latest releases.

The Belmont theater, which is one of several owned by Mr. Wheeler, and located on Fifty-second street above Market, has just celebrated its first anniversary. The management arranged a bill for the week, which not only proved attractive to the patrons, but was also indicative of the quality of pictures which will be shown during the coming year. On Monday a five-act drama, Feature Photoplay, "Human Wolves," headed the bill. On Tuesday the Life Photo picture, "Northern Lights," a five-act production of a famous play, was shown. On Wednesday the Feature Photoplay, "The King of the Beggars," and on Thursday the Life Photo offering, "The Grey Hound," were shown. On Friday, New Year's Day, when there was a continuous performance from 1:30 to 11 p. m., the Hepworth American offering, "Mistress of the Air," was shown. On Saturday a new Edison three-part drama, "The Colonel of the Red Hussars," first of the Young Lord Stranleigh series, was shown.

William S. Lloyd was appointed by Judge Thompson, in the United States District Court, receiver for the Liberty Motion Picture Company, a Delaware corporation. The receiver was appointed upon the petition of John Axford, a stockholder and creditor, and Walter C. Neeley, a stockholder. The petition followed a meeting of stockholders and creditors on Dec. 10, when it was deemed advisable to put the concern in the hands of a receiver to work out a plant of rehabilitation.

Louis Lemisch has conveyed the moving picture theater at the northwest corner of 17th and Annin streets, lot 86 feet by 58 feet, to Max Katzman, subject to morgages of $27,259.25.

Allentown is to become the proud possessor of another moving picture theater, according to plans which have recently been completed. The new theater will replace the three one-story frame buildings at 206, 207 207½ Hamilton street, now occupied by Siegfried's plumbing shop, Ewing's laundry and Meeker's provision house.

The plans call for two store rooms in the front with a lobby to the theater dividing them. The entire plot of ground, 26 feet by 120 feet, will be covered by the new structure, which is to be of the most modern fireproof construction.

Work on the new building will be started before April 1, when the leases on two of the stores expires.

NOTES FROM OTTAWA.

By F. J. Genest, Special Correspondent Moving Picture World.

The People's Forum, now being held every Sunday night in the Imperial theater, has been exceptionally fortunate in securing Dr. W. A. Hunsberger, the National lecturer of the American Peace Society. His address will be entitled "A Plea for the Passing of War." Following the lecture the Donald Heins orchestra will render a musical program.

Mr. G. Kalil, manager of St. George's theater on Bank street, has lowered his price of admission from ten to five cents. St. George's theater has the distinction of being one of the pioneer picture houses in Ottawa.

The English feature, "For the Empire," was given a special showing last week by All Features Limited at Exhibition Park before the 2,000 officers and men of the second Canadian contingent encamped nere. These men are soon to leave for the front and gave the film an uproarious reception.

Manager Welsman of the La Plaza theater has booked Paramount features for his theater to start next week

Christmas afternoon marked the opening of the Hippodrome theater, of Reading, Pa. The new building is of the most modern equipment and design and is perfectly fireproof throughout, being of concrete and steel construction. The interior decorations are of the most beautiful design and color and could favorably withstand the most exacting critic. The new theater is located on the Saylor property on High street and has a seating capacity of 1,100 persons.

Beginning on the afternoon of Dec. 28, pictures of the European war, which were taken under the directions and sanction of the Belgian Government, will be shown at the Opera House, which is located at Broad and Montgomery avenues. The exhibition of the pictures takes place at 1, 2:30 and 4 o'clock in the afternoons and at 7, 8:30 and 10 o'clock in the evenings, under the agreement that 50 per cent. of the proceeds of the sale of the pictures be given to the Belgian Red Cross Socity. It is said by many that have viewed the pictures that they are decidedly gripping in their reality and convincing in their simplicity, and that never before has a stronger plea for peace been advanced than is to be found in these pictures of the gruesome affair which has covered all of Europe with a mantel of death.

The moving picture theaters in this city continue to attract big crowds every night despite the war in Europe, which is beginning to effect nearly all lines of business in Canada. People who would hesitate to spend a dollar or more to attend regular theaters, are quite willing to "dig down" for ten or fifteen cents for an evening's amusement at a picture show.

Ken E. Finlay, manager of the United Motion Picture, Ltd., recently announced that he refused to allow the Imperial theater to be used by the People's Forum on the night of Mr. Henri Bourassa's address, giving as his reason that he feared for the safety of his theater. Mr. Bourassa is the Montreal Nationalist politician and editor of Le Devoir who has made himself decidedly unpopular by his views on the war.

The Majestic theater on Sparks street has become very popular with numerous government employees during the noon hours. It is situated quite near the Parliament buildings and many civil servants who remain uptown for lunch are in the habit of dropping into the Majestic after their mid-day repast. This theater is one of the few picture houses in Ottawa which has adopted the Ozone ventilating system, which insures a constantly changing supply of pure air.

The orchestra at the National theater is certainly deserving of praise. The National is showing moving pictures exclusively and is under the capable management of Mr. A. T. Charron.

NEWS LETTERS FROM DETROIT.

Architects William S. Joy & Company are taking figures on a brick store and theater building to be erected in the North Woodward district. Bids close Jan. 10.

Several hundred persons in the Medbury theater, Medbury and Hastings streets, filed out quietly on Christmas afternoon when fire was discovered under the stage. The blaze burned slowly and there was no danger at any time. When smoke began issuing into the auditorium, a little girl called "Fire!" but the manager ascended the stage and informed the crowd that there was a small blaze in the basement, but that there was no danger, and asked all to leave quietly. The audience arose quickly and filed out in orderly manner. The damage was very slight. This was the second fire in the theater within 30 days.

Herman Warren, of Wyandotte (a suburb of Detroit), contemplates the erection of a new picture theater to cost $20,000.

Manager Irons of the Washington theater reports that the Famous Players offering, the "Sign of the Cross," actually did a bigger business than he had anticipated. This picture opened at the Washington on Sunday, Dec. 27, and was very much appreciated by large audiences both afternoon and evening.

Hover Shea has taken out a permit for a one-story brick theater to be erected on Burdeno avenue, between West End and Cary streets, to cost $12,000. The owner is Emma Lancaster.

The National Photoplay Association, 1120 Chamber of Commerce, which has been offering from $25 to $100 for motion picture scenarios, has discontinued business.

H. H. Hallert, 1229 Gratiot avenue, has about completed plans for a $20,000 theater building to be erected on the east side. It will be one story high, 50 by 108 feet in size, to be of brick and terra cotta.

A. J. Gillingham, proprietor of the New Empire in Detroit, and a partner in the firm of Gillingham & Smith, controlling a chain of theaters in Grand Rapids, announces that since Jan. 4 Keith vaudeville formerly shown at the Columbia was transferred to the Empress, and pictures are being shown at the Columbia, while pictures and vaudeville is the policy at the Orpheum.

DETROIT HAS NEW THEATER

Rosedale, Detroit's New Picture House, Beautifully Appointed— Has 1,000 Seats.

With the general "opening up" which usually comes after the first of the year, N. H. Rounds, manager of the new Rosedale theater, looks for a big improvement in business. As reported last week, this new playhouse opened Christmas eve. Mr. Klatt, proprietor, has not made any great splurge, but instead opened quietly, mailing complimentary tickets to those living within a half mile of the theater. The Rosedale has a total seating capacity of approximately 1,000, all on one floor. The balcony is used for the operating room and the offices of the theater. The Rosedale auditorium has a high flat ceiling, decorated with heavy ornamented panels: the decorative scheme is blue and gold with Japanese hangings in the panels. The woodwork throughout is finished in black walnut. The Rosedale has a complete steam-heating plant and mechanical ventilating. Entrance to the theater is gained by a long vestibule, which seems to be the modern way of doing, especially in Detroit. This vestibule is of rough brick, Bedford stone and marble, and is 110 feet in length. It is lighted with special fixtures. On the whole, the Rosedale ranks with the most attractive theaters in Detroit and is a credit to its owner, Mr. Klatt, and the motion picture industry. W. B. Stratton was architect.

Prohibits Cafe Pictures

Building Code of Detroit Will Keep Cafes and Churches from Showing Motion Pictures Unless Halls Have Been Designed for Such Shows—Many Churches and Cafes Would Like to Show Pictures.

By Jacob Smith, Special Correspondent of the Moving Picture World.

IN the past thirty days at least a half dozen cafes in Detroit have applied for service from film exchanges, indicating that they contemplated putting in the necessary equipment to show photoplays. The first cafe to actually show the pictures was the Hotel Tuller. As soon as the matter came to the attention of Peter Jeup, president of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, he conferred with the building inspector and found that it was against the city building code for cafes to install this equipment. So he immediately had the matter brought to the attention of Mayor Oscar B. Marx, with the result that every cafe in the city was sent a letter calling their particular notice to the building code, which does not permit the showing of motion pictures in their places, and also informing them that the police department would take steps at once to stop any pictures which may be shown. The Tuller Hotel was the only place where any equipment had already been installed and where pictures were being shown. The part of the building code which prevents the showing of pictures in cafes is to the effect that "the chairs must be fastened to the floors, aisles be kept clear and other safeguards heeded."

President Jeup also told the Moving Picture World representative that some of the churches throughout the state have started to install motion picture apparatus, and that a number were already showing pictures. In most cases, this is against the State Fire Marshal law, which says that places showing motion pictures must not be over two feet above the sidewalk. As is generally known, most churches are at least three or four feet above the street level. President Jeup has sent a letter to the State fire marshal's office, calling attention to the violation on the part of the churches. "I do not see why churches should 'pick' on the motion picture industry," said Mr. Jeup. "Why don't they open cigar stores, eating places, saloons, etc., if they want to raise money, instead of an industry which has done more for the development of the present century than any other single one industry."

DRAWS COLOR LINE—PAYS.

Exhibitors in Detroit were very much interested in the decision made on Dec. 29 by a jurist in Lansing, Mich., where Claude E. Cady, manager of a motion picture theater, was found guilty of discrimination against negroes, it being alleged that he refused a colored man admission to his theater after the latter had purchased a ticket. Mr. Cady claimed that there were no vacant seats in his theater. The judge imposed a fine of $15 and $30 costs.

FINE THEATER TO BE BUILT IN SAGINAW.

Three Detroiters are behind a project to build a $150,000 theater in Saginaw, Mich., to be known as the Saginaw Hippodrome. A company has already been organized with a capital stock of $150,000 and it is expected to begin the construction of this new playhouse some time in the spring. The proposed location of the new theater is within the block bounded by Genesee avenue, Franklin street, Tuscola street and Baum street. The officers of the company are: Peter Wiederhold, of Saginaw, president; Edmund Schram, of Detroit, vice-president and resident manager (he was formerly connected with the National theater); Walter O. Webster, Detroit, secretary, and Mortimer Hoffman, formerly one of the assistant managers of the Palace theater, Detroit, treasurer and general manager. According to present plans, the theater will seat 1,600 and will cost over $100,000. There will be a main floor and balcony and a big pipe organ. The promoters expect to have the new house ready Sept. 1, 1915.

OTHER DETROIT ITEMS.

A new theater is in course of erection at the corner of Third and Putnam avenues; rather the theater is being remodeled from a building formerly used for cold storage. Mr. Prendergast is the owner of the new enterprise, which it is expected will be in operation by the first of or fifteenth of February.

A change in policy is announced by the management of the new Orpheum theater, which opened some months ago at Lafayette and Shelby streets. The change became effective Jan. 4. Afternoon performances will begin at 12:30 with six reels of first-run motion pictures, which will continue until 2:15. Eight vaudeville acts will next be shown, after which will follow the Hearst-Selig war pictures for which the Orpheum has the exclusive contract in Detroit. At 7 p. m. the motion pictures will again be shown, the regular vaudeville program following at 8:15. The matinee prices will not be increased, but the evening prices will be 10, 15, 25 and 35 instead of 10-20-30.

Bert St. Johns, who has been manager for some time of the Broadway theater, which is now showing "Cabiria," and who has been connected for the past fourteen years with B. C. Whitney, the theatrical owner and producer of this city, has resigned and on Dec. 26 left for San Francisco, where he will have charge of the Fred Thompson Toyland Company, which is to be one of the big features of the Exposition. At the Broadway, as manager, he has been succeeded by Jack Saunders. There was a report afloat that the Broadway theater is to be remodeled into an office building, but this is flatly denied by the management.

The Motion Picture Service Corporation, capitalized at $2,000, has changed its name to the Photo-Play Training Service.

Friends of Richard H. Lawrence, the popular young manager of the Garrick theater, will be interested in the announcement of his engagement to Miss Myra Amanda Martin, of Honeoye Falls, N. Y.

Ross Kay Hubbard, treasurer of the Garrick theater, also announces his engagement to a popular Detroit girl.

Frank J. O'Donnell, formerly manager of the Columbia in Grand Rapids, is the new manager of the Family theater.

M. Harlan Starr, manager of the Liberty theater, takes the greatest of pride in confirming the report that at 9 a. m. Wednesday morning, Dec. 30, the stork brought an eight-pound baby boy to the back door of his residence, which has been named William Harold Starr. Both the baby and Mrs. Starr are doing nicely. This is their second boy, the first being two and one-half years old. Mr. and Mrs. Starr have not decided whether the two youngsters will be producers, managers or proprietors; it may be that he will try to develop one of them as a "white hope" champion. Only time will tell. We know that both Mr. and Mrs. Starr have the best wishes and congratulations of their many friends in trade.

W. H. Buyce, formerly manager of the Royal and Casino theaters, has been appointed assistant manager of the New Empire.

KANSAS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

By Kansas City Moving Picture Direct Special News Service.

HERBERT WELSH, manager of the Colonial and the Orpheum theaters at Atchison, Kan., has closed the Colonial. His reasons are that the better features are costing more at the present time and that they, on that account, can go only into the best of the houses. The Orpheum, he says, is the best house in the city and the poorer theaters would get only the cheaper productions. Mr. Welsh said that he thought that it would be to his advantage to get the best pictures that were to be gotten and run only one show with them.

The Iris theater at Topeka, Kan., is conducting a queer contest. Each evening there is shown a slide with the rear view of some prominent Topekan's head. The party guessing who the head belongs to receives a ten dollar gold piece.

Carl E. Olsen, secretary for the Wichita, Kan., Film and Supply Co., was rather seriously injured recently when a taxicab ran into a bicycle which he was riding. He sustained several painful bruises and a severe nervous shock.

Miss Blanche Shepard of Wichita, Kan., lost a purse containing five dollars in bills and several other valuables in the Princess theater November 17. The purse could not be found at the time so Miss Shepard promptly forgot it. She was very much surprised on the evening of December 12 when she visited the theater and was handed her purse with its contents intact.

Tom Kress, formerly of Fort Smith, Kan., but now connected with the United Film Service, returned to his home to spend several days visiting his friends recently.

The Hip theater at Topeka, Kan., will show moving pictures in connection with the stock company that is now playing in the theater. The first feature to be shown at the house will be the Chicago Tribune war pictures.

The Grand theater at Lawrence, Kan., gained considerable popularity with the ladies recently when it showed a film demonstrating the fitting of a leading make of corset on living models. The show was for ladies exclusively.

The Twelfth Street theater, Kansas City, has booked Anette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter," the Universal offering, for a week solid, commencing Sunday, January 10. This house is now a feature house, and is booking such films as "The Thief," "Life's Shop Window," with Box Office attractions, and other large offerings for a week steady. This has proven by far the more profitable way to operate the house.

The Crystal theater in Kansas City is now showing four reels of pictures and vaudeville at five cents. Another house under what is rumored to be the same management is doing the same thing. A third house in the same location ran "The Master Key," a Universal serial feature, and two comedies, all first release pictures, on one day. This practice has hurt the business for everybody, and has done the parties managing the shows no good. For some time other exhibitors in the same neighborhood have tried to raise their prices to ten cents, but this practice prevents them from doing so.

The Royal theater in Kansas City showed Mary Pickford in the Famous Players' release, "Cinderella." The picture was well attended and everybody spoke very highly of it. The theater had one of the most attractive lobby displays for the picture that has been seen in Kansas City for some time. A large oil painting of "Little Mary" was the most prominent feature of the decorations, and a small crowd was in front of it at all times.

Acting Manager McVey of the World Feature Film Corporation in Kansas City had some difficulty in explaining the nature of a telegram that lay in his desk recently. The wire read, "Ship Painted Woman to Tulsa tonight as usual." The mystery was cleared up by Mr. McVey explaining that "The Painted Woman" was a film.

The first thing that attracts the attention of a visitor in the office of "Marty" Williams, manager of the Mutual Film Exchange, is a handsome smoking set that graces the top of his desk. Mr. Williams explains that the set was the Christmas gift of his inspectors, and he feels very proud of it.

Chas. W. Harden, formerly assistant manager of the Mutual Film Exchange, has been appointed special representative for "Zudora" in this territory. Mr. Harden takes the place made vacant by the resignation of Sol Berman, who is now in New York with the World Feature Film Corporation.

Mrs. M. Pauls, the only woman film representative that has ever visited the West, and who has been covering the territory adjacent to the Kansas City office of the Mutual Film Co., working on "Zudora," has completed her work. She has done remarkably well in placing this picture, and it is with regret that the film men of Kansas City see such an efficient representative leave this territory.

The House of Good Shepherd, an institution for incorrigible girls, is to have some moving picture shows in the near future. Three men are responsible for the performance, but they are all modest, and each shifts the responsibility on to the other. However, these are the facts: L. A. Wagner, chief engineer for the Lappe-Tighe Amusement Co. and also the Standard Amusement Co., is going to furnish the machine and operator; C. S. Edwards, Jr., manager of the Eclectic Film Exchange, is going to furnish the feature, a Pathe offering, "The Life of Our Saviour," and J. J. Burke is going to furnish several rattling good comedies.

S. J. Baker, representative for the Box Office Attraction Co., was slightly injured in a wreck on the Rock Island railroad near Carrolton, Mo., recently.

Although Sedalia, Mo., is not a large city, it has proven itself to be very metropolitan as far as its taste for pictures is concerned. The first time that the Selig picture, "The Spoilers," had appeared in the West was about the middle of December in Kansas City. It was shown only at one theater in the city. But the New Sedalia theater at Sedalia found that it was a good picture and immediately proceeded to book it. The result was that Christmas day and three days afterward the theater showed this remarkable photoplay.

The Lewis theater at Independence, Mo., is running moving pictures in connection with its regular performances of the stock company. This plan is very satisfactory and removes the tiresome wait between acts.

The Princess theater at Stanberry, Mo., showed the films taken at the Maxwell automobile factory recently to a very large crowd. The pictures were run in conjunction with the regular program, and proved to be highly entertaining to the patrons of the theater.

A reel of pictures taken at the factory of the Postum Cereal Co. was shown recently at the Star theater in Hannibal, Mo.

The theaters in Great Bend, Kan., were unusually good to the children on Christmas day. The Elite theater held its annual Christmas day matinee, at which a program picked especially for children was shown free of charge to them. At the Echo theater the Eagles had charge, and they gave a free performance to all children, besides giving them a toy. The result was that the children of the town saw two shows free of charge during the day.

The Palace theater is running "The Master Key," and reports great success from the serial. The theater is doing some very attractive advertising in the daily papers, which no doubt accounts partially for the success of the picture.

Several business men of Eldorado, Kan., had a Christmas tree erected in the Gem theater for the children of the city. The tree furnished a treat for nearly all of the little folks in the town.

A company making moving pictures of some of the leading cities in Kansas spent several days in Dodge City "filming" the buildings and the surrounding territory. The films will be exhibited for a short time in Topeka and Wichita, after which they will be taken to the fair at San Francisco, where they will be exhibited daily in the Kansas building.

The Hippodrome theater at Leavenworth, Kan., broke into print December 24 with an excellent advertisement wishing their patrons a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. The ad said that this wish applied to everybody in the city, "big or small—rich or poor."

A water pipe in the Photo Play theater in Concordia, Kan., burst recently, flooding the theater. Fortunately there was no one in the show at the time. The damage was repaired the next day and a show was given that night.

Jack Johnson, manager of the Echo theater at Great Bend, Kansas, has had difficulty in finding seats for everybody that wishes to see the Thanhouser offering, "The Million Dollar Mystery." This picture has proven very popular in Great Bend, and Mr. Johnson wishes that it would last longer than it does. However, when he has completed it he will run "Zudora," and he thinks that he will have as much success with it.

NORTH WESTERN NEW YORK.

By Billy Bison, Special Buffalo Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

MANAGERS of Buffalo theaters have been informed that moving pictures of national parks may be shown there and in other cities, in accordance with a plan of the Secretary of the Interior.

It is reported that Buffalo business men may build a $100,000 moving picture theater and business block in North Tonawanda, N. Y., just as soon as Sunday shows are permitted there.

Moving pictures, vaudeville and dramas are being featured in the Colonial theater, recently opened in Norwich, N. Y., by the Hippodrome Amusement Co. The officers are Adam Tennis, president; Peter Karl, vice-president, and Peter Tennis, secretary and treasurer. The same company has leased the Hudson theater in Peekskill, N. Y.

According to the Utica, N. Y., Observer, The Mohawk, a new moving picture theater, has been opened in Frankfort by P. J. and H. A. Thibault.

Moving pictures and road companies will be booked for the Beekman theater at Dundee, N. Y. The lease of this house has been taken over by Leland B. Earnest and Edwin K. Maurice.

The Co-Operative Amusement Co., which will "build, acquire and operate moving picture theaters in New York State and Pennsylvania," has been formed in Erie, Pa. The concern has already taken over the Venice and Victoria theaters in that city.

James S. Savage, owner of the Como theater, Buffalo, has taken over the management of the Abbot theater in that city.

The Cohoes, N. Y., Republican recently had an editorial on the popularity of the movies.

The Common Council of Binghamton, N. Y., has voted in favor of Sunday shows in moving picture theaters.

The Paramount Service has been introduced in Proctor's Griswold theater in Troy, N. Y.

The Shubert theater of Utica, N. Y., was recently reopened under the management of the Phoenix Amusement Co. Vaudeville and moving pictures are featured.

Miss Philomena Cavanaugh, press agent for Shea's vaudeville theater and Shea's Hippodrome theater, Buffalo, recently assisted in serving a free dinner given for a party of poor children. Clothing, shoes, stockings and candy were distributed.

Moving pictures between the acts of a stock company are a new feature in Buffalo. This has been introduced by Joseph W. Payton, manager of the Lyric theater of that city. Incidental music is supplied by the Lyric's symphony orchestra.

Moving pictures were among the features at a recent entertainment given by the Buffalo Ad Club.

The Tonawanda, N. Y., News recently printed a story on the use of moving pictures in the anti-tuberculosis campaign.

If Sunday shows are permitted, a Buffalo concern may open the Webster theater in Tonawanda, N. Y.

The Princess theater of Norwich, N. Y., has Sunday shows, despite the report that movies have been discontinued in that village on the first day of the week.

The Watertown, N. Y., Times-Standard recently printed an interview with Chauncey Olcott, who said that the cheap drama would be forced out by moving pictures and that the legitimate shows would survive.

The Happy Hour moving picture theater at Elmira Heights, N. Y., closed for the holidays so improvements could be made.

The Delphi moving picture theater at Lestershire, N. Y., will be reopened. The house has been completely overhauled.

The Standard Programme Film Exchange has been incorporated in Buffalo, with a capital of $100,000. The directors are Silas H. Bunce, George H. Verbeck, Wilbur B. Grandison, Clinton T. Horton and Archibald H. Lewis.

Moving pictures of various animals from all parts of the world were shown recently before the Buffalo Society of Natural Sciences by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator at the New York zoo.

Thomas M. Osborne, the wealthy warden of Sing Sing prison, treats his prisoners to moving pictures on certain occasions.

Henry Bauer, superintendent of the county almshouse at Buffalo, N. Y., gives moving picture shows for the benefit of his guests every two weeks.

Manager Michaels of the Academy theater, Buffalo, recently had a waltzing contest and cabaret performances in addition to his regular programme of vaudeville and moving pictures.

The burning of a film at the McLaughlin theater at Oriskany Falls, N. Y., recently caused a slight commotion among the audience. When the fire was discovered the people left the place in an orderly manner. The fire department responded, but its services were not needed.

Manager Moon of the Happy Hour moving picture theater, Buffalo, uses this attractive sign at the front of his house: "Spend a happy hour at the Happy Hour." He also calls attention to the faultless projection, perfect service, continuous performances, etc., at his house. Details of the new Happy Hour clock introduced by Mr. Moon as a unique advertising feature will be given later. He also posts at the front of his theater complete printed programmes of his daily attractions.

Manager Davis of Keith's theater, Buffalo, has added the Universal to the General service at his house. Of the wide range of features offered he picks six of the best. Francis X. Bushman and Keystone Comedies on alternate Sundays are among the attractions which draw capacity business to this theater.

Recent attractions at Buffalo moving picture houses: At the Hippodrome, was the Famous Players' offering, "Cinderella;" at the Teck, "Damon and Pythias," a Universal picture; at the Strand, "As Ye Sow," by World Film; Olympic, "The Strange Story of Sylvia Gray," a Vitagraph Broadway feature.

The manager of the Frontier moving picture theater, Buffalo, has requested Buffalonians to make this New Year's resolution: "Resolved, That in the interest of prudence, mental satisfaction and general well-being, I shall not miss a Sunday performance at the Frontier theater during 1915."

Censors Fine Exhibitors

Forty Exhibitors in Pennsylvania Fined Fifty Dollars Each—Showed Films Without State Censor Board's Sanction—Both Old and New Films Must Now Bear Stamp of Board.

By Pittsburg News Service.

ON Wednesday, Dec. 23, the State Board of Moving Picture Censors announced that from this time forward every film exhibited in Pennsylvania, irrespective of the time it has been on the market, must bear the official stamp of the board.

Forty exhibitors have been fined $50 each for showing films that have not been approved by the board. Since Jan. 1, when the board began operations, 6,116 reels have been submitted for examination, each reel containing 1,000 feet of film. Thus, 6,116,000 feet, or 116 miles of film have been examined by the State authorities.

The amount of fines and fees collected have made the State Board of Censors self-sustaining.

LOCAL 171 ELECTS.

Local 171, Moving Picture Operators' Union, recently held their annual election of officers with the following result: President, James A. Sipe; vice-president, Roy Groves; recording secretary, Harry F. Spang; financial secretary and treasurer, John Sipe; business agent, Frank Radcliffe; sergeant-at-arms, Al Miller. Regular meetings are held the first and third Sunday mornings, shortly after midnight at the headquarters, fourth floor, 127 Fourth avenue, Pittsburg.

FELT HE HAD TO CHEER.

"John Smith," said to be the docket name of Paul Sturnagle, a well known resident of Sewickley, near Pittsburg, told Magistrate J. J. Sweeney in Central Police Court recently when fined $3 that he would have his case reported to the State Department by the British Consul and that he probably will prosecute the police.

He was arrested in a downtown nickelodeon when he disobeyed the request of an usher to refrain from cheering the motion picture showing Canadian troops drilling on Salisbury Plains.

OTHER PITTSBURGH ITEMS.

An edict by Mayor Rockwell of Marietta, Pa., puts a ban on Sunday advertising at the moving picture theaters.

The police have been instructed to see that no posters are left out on Sundays.

The Boy Scouts of Tarentum recently gave a four-reel motion picture show in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. The entire proceeds were used for Boy Scout work in this place. Two reels of Boy Scout life were shown on the screen, including camp scenes and "hike" views. The training of the scout was vividly illustrated. Such things as woodcraft, first aid to the injured and numerous other features were presented. Two reels of films showing West Point Cadets were also included in the program. The training quarters of Uncle Sam's boys were exhibited with photos recently taken at the Hudson River School.

The Grand and Lyric theaters at McKees Rocks, near Pittsburg, were recently opened, the proceeds of the first Sunday shows being donated to the poor people of this borough. Films are donated by Mr. Schuchman, of The Film Exchange, 212 Fourth avenue, Pittsburg. These houses expect to continue Sunday showing of moving pictures.

Manager Wood, of the Grand theater, at Indiana, Pa., was recently in Pittsburg, where he purchased a complete lighting outfit which will be installed at once. The plant will supply direct current and will increase the projection efficiency a hundred per cent. When the Grand theater was built everything used was of the best quality and every point was covered with the exception of the projection light, which could not be had at that time.

The Globe theater, at Washington, Pa., of which J. W. Mercer is manager, recently went through a complete remodeling and renovating process. The Globe has a seating capacity of 1,200 and is owned by T. M. Harton Company.

Ludwig Hommel & Company, the "Everything for You Playhouse" people, report that they have sold during the past month a total of six Wagner Rotary Converters. These converters take AC from the Electric Light Companys' lines and deliver DC at the arc.

John A. Strouss and Hays M. Jenkin filed a bill in equity against Sheriff George W. Richards, H. Cohen and others, asking an injunction to restrain the defendants from removing chairs and a piano from a theater building at Beaver avenue and Juniata street, Northside, Pittsburg, Pa. The plaintiffs state that they have filed a mechanic's lien against the building and contents for materials to the amount of $1,622. Another creditor secured judgment for $146 against the owners of the business and it is claimed proposes to take away the chairs and piano in settlement. A preliminary injunction was granted by Judge John D. Shafer.

Manager Levenson of the Renfax Film Company, Pittsburg, Pa., reports that during the past thirty days he has installed his musical motion pictures in twenty-six houses. One of the users of these musical moving pictures in Washington, Pa., reports that the feature pleases his patrons so well that he was requested to repeat several subjects.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Baldwin and daughter, Pittsburg, the former who expects to become manager of the Beaver theater, Beaver, Pa., arrived in that town last week and have taken rooms with Mrs. Phillis on Sharon avenue.

The Seltzer Automatic Music Company reports the sale of one of their large $4,500 Seeburg motion picture players, to be delivered May 1 to a new house of 700 seating capacity to be built in Pittsburg some time this winter.

W. B. Jones, manager of the Industrial and Domestic Film Company, is in the West Virginia mountains with hts cameraman, filming some difficult problems to be found in the production of gas.

The Schoen Music Company installed a Peerless photoplayer, costing $3,500, in the new Alhahmbra theatre at Monongahela City, Pa., which opener a short time ago. The instrument is reported to be giving excellent satisfaction.

The Feature Film & Calcium Light Company sold two Mirroide screens measuring 13x17 feet, to the Penn Amusement Company, at Uniontown, Pa., last week, for use in two of their houses.

New Castle's new motion picture house, The Dome theater, owned by Spear & Marousis, recently opened. This house has a seating capacity of 420 and is up-to-date in every respect. Music is supplied by Wurlitzer style G organ costing $1,500.

J. D. Simpson recently installed a Wurlitzer style G organ in his Orpheum theater at Brownsville, Pa.

Marion S. Pierce, president of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America, recently wrote the Pittsburg League, complimenting the members on their attitude in regard to legislative matters and urging a large attendance at the State Convention in Harrisburg, Jan. 26, 27 and 28.

With the expectation of its completion about the first of the year work has been rushed on the new Majestic theater, in Charleroi, Pa., owned by Messrs. Hepler & Mathews. This house will have a seating capacity of about 1,100. The feature Film & Calcium Light Company supplied two Powers 6-A motor driven machines, complete with loop setter.

The Morris theater, at Woods Run, near Pittsburg, has contracted for the Renfax Musical Motion Picture.

Damage of $15,000 was caused by a recent fire at Northview, a suburb in West Virginia, which destroyed the Dixie motion picture theater.

An application for a Pennsylvania State charter of incorporation has been made by Frank D. Seidel, J. E. Fulton and E. G. Hays for an intended corporation to be called the "Delton Amusement Company," the character and object of which is buying, leasing or otherwise acquiring and selling, letting or otherwise disposing of, and establishing, maintaining and operating theaters, moving picture exhibitions, bowling alleys and other places of entertainment.

Last week a three-reel film showing the lumbering operations in Louisiana, was exhibited at the Pastime theater, State College, Pa. The films were shown under the direction of the forestry department of the college and were in the nature of an illustrated lecture.

BOARD OF TRADE REMEMBERS J. W. ALLEN.

San Francisco Organization Gives Token of Appreciation to Former Warner's Manager.

By T. A. Church, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

AT the close of the regular weekly meeting of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco, held on Dec. 23, Maurice L. Asher, secretary of the organization, arose and in a few words of unqualified appreciation presented to J. W. Allen, former district manager for Warner's Features, a handsome gold handle umbrella suitably engraved. Mr. Allen was taken entirely by surprise at this gift from exchange men with whom he had been in close touch for but a short time, but rose to the occasion and received the token with moist eyes but with a clear speech that made all feel that their efforts had not been in vain. Mr. Allen is leaving San Francisco to go to Los Angeles and take charge of the California Film Exchange in that city. He has been one of the hardest workers for the success of the local Board of Trade and may be relied upon to assist in similar work in the Southern city whenever called upon.

NEW THEATER FOR OAKLAND.

The Turner & Dahnken Circuit has completed arrangements for taking over a large theater to be erected at Fourteenth and Franklin streets, Oakland. Negotiations toward this end have been under way for several months, but have now been consummated and plans for the building are now being drawn by Architect Carl Werner, Phelan Building, San Francisco. The building will be a twelve-story structure, with the theater occupying a large part of the ground floor. The house will have a seating capacity of about 2,700 and will be by far the largest and most sumptuously decorated of any theater on the East Bay side.

OTHER SAN FRANCISCO ITEMS.

The first floor of a store building at 1049 Fillmore street, owned by G. Berson, is to be remodeled, and when this work is done the place will be opened as a moving picture theater. W. L. Schmolle, 166 Geary street, is the architect in charge.

A new floor has been added to Tait's Cafe on O'Farrell street and a system of spot lamps has been installed under the direction of Herman Lubfin, well known in moving picture circles. The new hall will be used for dancing and can be used on occasions for the showing of moving pictures.

The Poppy theater on Sixteenth street has given up the use of a regular program and is now booking feature attractions.

Kahn & Greenfield, who conduct a circuit of high grade moving picture houses here, remembered their many friends in the local film trade on Christmas by presenting them with boxes of fine cigars bearing labels made especially for them. Their thoughtfulness and expressions of good-will were greatly appreciated by exchange men and others.

Through the generosity of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., the prisoners of Folsom Penitentiary were treated to a moving picture show on Christmas, the great Selig production, "The Spoilers," being the feature presented. This concern not only supplied the film but the machine and operator as well, the show being given by M. Calmy and M. S. Fairbanks.

C. F. Unger, who conducts a large amusement place at Selma, Cal., was a visitor here during Christmas week.

David A. Curry, renowned as the "Stentor of Yosemite," who has been showing moving pictures of the valley and of the high Sierras at the Savoy theater during the past two weeks, donated the receipts of one matinee recently to the municipal Christmas tree fund.

The United Program Film Service of California has been incorporated here with a capital stock of $60,000 by J. L. Warner, S. Solomon, P. Franklin and L. S. Warner.

The Zone Film Company has been incorporated at San Francisco with a capital stock of $50,000 subscribed in full. The incorporators are M. R. Le Baron, G. A. Collins and P. A. Cooley.

The Panama theater, Market street, near Golden Gate avenue, featured Scout Younger during Christmas week, the famous outlaw being present to talk on his past experiences. A great collection of outlaw curios in the lobby served to attract a large crowd.

Articles of incorporation of the Kachukoggo Kabushiki Kaisha have been filed at San Francisco with a capital stock of $20,000, the interested parties being T. Nakamura, S. Osia, I. Suguyama, S. Akishige and F. Taniguchi. In spite of the formidable name of the concern it is announced that its sole purpose is that of engaging in the general amusement and moving picture business.

The Macograph Moving Picture Company, Spreckels Building, has commenced work on a four-reel production in which pupils of the school maintained by this concern will take part. The leading roles in the subject will be taken by Pearl Cliftian, Leroy Reilly, Miss G. Fox and Miss Katherine Carleton. The production will be under the direction of Walter L. McGinn.

The initial presentation of the World Film offering, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," took place during Christmas week at the Tivoli opera house and attracted a great crowd. The production was filmed in a suburb of San Francisco and the courtroom scene was arranged under the direction of Theodore Roche, a local attorney.

G. A. Metcalfe has been appointed sole jobbing agent in this territory for the new Baird projector and the first machine received has attracted a great deal of attention. Two of these new projectors have already been ordered for one of the finest local houses.

The Grand theater at Elmhurst has been opened again after having been closed for a short time.

J. V. Spaugh, formerly of the Colonial theater, Merced, Cal., and of the Pacific theater, San Francisco, is now conducting the Colonial theater at Eureka, Cal.

A. B. Attell has taken over the Lincoln theater at Alameda, Cal., and the house is now being conducted under his management.

The Gem theater at Kennett, Cal., was closed down recently owing to a quarantine in the town.

The Princess theater, Oak Park, Cal., is now giving a program of Golgate features, seven changes a week being made.

The Geographical Feature Film Corporation has been incorporated at Pasadena, Cal., with a capital of $10,000 by F. Huber, Esther J. Johnson and H. Huber.

The Maywood opera house, recently destroyed in a disastrous fire that visited Corning, Cal., is to be rebuilt by the Foster Company. The new theater will be on the ground floor, instead of upstairs, as formerly.

The new Novelty theater being erected at Martinez, Cal., by Mrs. V. Gray is nearing completion. Four hundred opera chairs of the latest design will be installed.

A fire occurred recently in the basement of the Garrick theater at Stockton, Cal., but the loss to the house was comparatively small. The fire was caused by an over-heated furnace.

The Actograph theater at Sacramento, Cal., is being remodeled and refurnished, but the regular performances are not being interfered with. A new photo-player has been ordered and will be placed in position shortly.

A fire occurred recently in the Star theater, Selma, Cal., the blaze originating in a defective flue. The show management quietly asked those in the rear to walk out and the house was emptied before it was learned by any in the audience that there was a fire. The blaze, which was between the ceiling and the roof, was extinguished with chemicals and within a short time the show was resumed.

C. M. Pyke, the first manager of the Barton opera house, when it was opened at Fresno, Cal., twenty-seven years ago, visited that city recently as advance man for European war pictures, which are to be shown there shortly.

Marshall Flagg of Turlock, Cal., recently made an official inspection of the moving picture houses there and has rendered a report to the City Council. It is asserted that these do not conform entirely to the local ordinances covering the subject of public safety, but before making an order necessitating changes in the houses an investigation will be made to ascertain the building requirements in other cities.

The pupils of the Modesto schools were dismissed one afternoon recently to enable them to see the "Picturesque Hawaii" films at the Modesto theater. The films were first shown to members of the school board and they were so impressed with their value that arrangements were made for the attendance of the school children in a body.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co., of Sacramento, Cal., were the hosts during Christmas week to about four thousand children of the Capitol City, the youngsters being presented with free tickets to Ray's Photo Plays, 421 K street, where a typical Christmas program was featured.

NOTES FROM NEBRASKA.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Along with six business houses the opera house at Central City was destroyed by fire December 27.

The Sterling theater is the name of the house at Nelson which heretofore has been known as the Elite.

Saturday afternoon picture shows for the country folk will be a feature of the operation of the moving picture show at Riverton by John Wickstrom and Bert Harwood.

Harry Higgins will be the manager of the new Gilbert theater on Court street in Beatrice.

W. J. Lorenz of Plattsmouth has opened a moving picture show at Odell.

SUNDAY ENTERTAINMENTS HELP CHRISTMAS TREE

Four Chattanooga Picture Houses Give Shows Under Auspices of Rotary Club—Step May Lead to Sunday Opening.

By G. D. Crain, Jr., Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE Chattanooga Rotary Club recently made arrangements with the exhibitors' and Rotary member, Howell Graham, whereby four of the theaters on "Quality Way" were opened for a Sunday performance upon condition that the proceeds of the show should go to help defray the expenses of the Community Christmas Tree. The show was held on the Sunday previous to Christmas and 1,045 persons paid ten cent admissions to the four theaters. The well known film showing the life of Christ from his birth to the resurrection was shown. Besides the $104.50 paid in admissions, $18.86 was placed in the special donation boxes placed in the lobby of each theater. Of this amount $70 was held back to pay for the use of the films, although Mr. Graham made no charge for the use of the theaters, electric current or services of his employees. The fact that 1,045 persons paid admission to see the special pictures encourages the Chattanooga theater managers in the opinion that something may be done about the Sunday closing law before long. A great many persons are anxious to see the theaters open and good crowds could probably be drawn.

JUVENILE PROGRAMS.

The Nashville papers have taken a good deal of interest in the special Saturday pictures for juveniles which recently started at the Princess theater. The pictures are shown from 10 o'clock in the morning until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The Nashville papers have printed a number of articles showing how successful children's programs have been in other cities and called attention to the fact that moving picture theaters of Washington, D. C., exhibit special educational pictures two days in the week for the benefit of school children.

OTHER NASHVILLE NOTES.

All of the newsboys from the Sentinel and other newspapers of Nashville, Tenn., were recently the guests of the Queen theater, where they were shown the great Paramount Western feature, "The Bargain," in which William S. Hart is the headliner. The boys took great interest in the pictures, which they claimed were a "darned sight" better than "Nick Carter's" or the ordinary run of paper bound books with which the "newsie" and messenger boy generally wile away their spare hours. Manager Shorey was very much pleased with the interest the boys displayed in the Western pictures. The same picture was also shown at the Fifth Avenue theater as a special Christmas offering later in the month.

The Belmont theater, the handsome suburban house of Nashville, arranged for a special Christmas day matinee at 3 o'clock. "The Chimes," the big Shubert feature (World Film) in five parts, in which Tom Terris takes the leading part, was presented. The fact that "The Chimes" was a big Broadway hit last season made its appearance in movies very interesting to the suburbanites.

Conditions throughout Tennessee have improved considerably during the past few weeks, due to a better movement in both cotton and tobacco, and moving picture houses in the smaller towns have been busier than for some time past. A number of small houses which closed when the war tax was first announced have paid their tax and are running again.

O. B. Cleveland and Buford Macey, of Lebanon, Tenn., have purchased the lease of F. E. Draper, of Nashville, on the Lyric theater, of Lebanon. The new proprietors have announced that they expect to improve the service considerably and operate one of the best houses in the Lebanon district. A number of improvements in equipment are under consideration.

Moving picture houses of Cleveland, Tenn., have been very successful in showing pictures recently made of "Greater Cleveland." Every Cleveland industry, such as woolen mills, stove foundries, knitting mills, etc., was shown on the films, besides churches, schools, street scenes and conspicuous residences. It is said that a circuit will shortly be formed whereby pictures taken in various cities in the state will be shown over a regular circuit. The idea is a remarkably good one, as it will acquaint the public with state activities which otherwise they may not know even exist.

Frank Rogers, proprietor of the Gay and Bijou theaters, of Knoxville, Tenn., has returned to the city after a road trip which took in Louisville, Ky., and a number of Tennessee and other cities. Mr. Rogers handled the big Itala feature success, "Cabiria," which has proved a winner.

Sunday Shows in Indiana

Exhibitors of Brazil, Indiana, Convinced by Failure to Convict Muncie Owners of Sunday Shows, Will Make Attempt to Keep Open—Courts Hold Sunday Shows a Necessity.

By Indiana Special Moving Picture World News Service.

BRAZIL, Ind., exhibitors will attempt soon to operate their shows on Sundays, having been convinced by the failure of the courts to convict the owners of two moving picture shows at Muncie, Ind., that Sunday shows are not in violation of the law. At present many Brazil people are going to Terre Haute to attend Sunday performances. The Terre Haute theaters have long operated on Sunday. The experience at Muncie is interesting to exhibitors all over the state. Prosecutor J. F. Mann has abandoned all attempts to close the Muncie houses on Sunday, and recently dismissed charges against Eugene Simmonds and Dudley Williston, owners of two local picture shows, who had been arrested. The Muncie tests of the law was made both in the city and the circuit courts at that point, and in both instances it was decided that the operation of Sunday shows came under the head of a necessity.

OTHER ITEMS FOR INDIANA.

The two or three weeks' depression was overcome with a rush Christmas day in Indianapolis, and all parts of the State. Reports from the film exchanges are that every house enjoyed good business. It was the practice in many parts of the state by owners and managers to give some sort of free entertainment for children or orphans with candy or a gift to add to the Christmas cheer. The picture men are almost a unit in their belief that good business will prevail from now on until hot weather.

George W. Bishop has sold the Victoria Theater, Lafayette, Ind., to William Sweitzer, of San Pierre, Ind. The theater property was valued at $44,000, and in payment for it Mr. Bishop becomes the owner of a farm in Francesville in Starke county. The farm contains 350 acres and was valued at $41,460. Mr. Sweitzer paid the difference. The new owner will take possession of the theater at once and expects to book legitimate shows. Under the management of Mr. Bishop the Victoria used both vaudeville and pictures.

The Arc Theater, Delphi, Ind., has been working hard on its publicity problem, with a result that it has finally decided upon the following slogan: "Always the Best All Ways at the Arc." The management proposes to use painted signs on the roads leading to Delphi and carry the slogan into all its advertising matter.

Messrs. Rembusch and Rapp, owners of the Alhambra and Coza theaters, Shelbyville, Ind., literally sprinkled the town of Shelbyville with green tickets bearing the word "Christmas" on the face. Simultaneously with this distribution Messrs. Rembusch and Rapp announced that they would admit free to either of their theaters any child presenting a green ticket between 10 A. M. and 12 A. M. Christmas day. Both houses were packed as a result.

Miss Geraldine E. Weeks, a picture show singer who has appeared in several different houses in Lawrenceburg, Ind., was married to Chalmers C. Ward, a Cincinnati photographer. They met Christmas day and were married two days later.

Mrs. E. O. Drollinger, manager of the Lyric theater, Sullivan, Ind., donated the house to the Tri Kappa Sorority Christmas day. The Sorority paid for the films for a charity show.

Madison, Ind., one of the oldest cities in the state and one of the most conservative, a town which mean traveling men say has not been moved in 30 years, has been shown in motion on a picture film. A Cincinnati company turned the trick, and among the traveling fraternity great is the marvel thereat.

The Starland theater, Michigan City, Ind., makes an annual feature of a special free matinee entertainment for children on the last day of each year.

Mayor Benjamin Bosse, of Evansville, Ind., has ordered all theaters giving a mixed performance, vaudeville and pictures, on Sunday to be closed. The order came as a result of agitation by local ministers.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Parent, owners of the Crystal theater, Decatur, Ind., gave a free show to children the matinee after Christmas, each child admitted being given a big sack of candy.

Dr. L. C. Kigen, state veterinarian of Nebraska and a former Hoosier, is showing a film taken at the expense of the state of Nebraska that illustrates the difference between bovine tuberculosis and human tuberculosis. Dr. Kigen made the exhibit on his Christmas vacation for the benefit of the Rush County Society for the Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis.

Elmer Shortridge has opened the Priscilla, a new moving picture theater in St. Paul, Ind. A good size crowd attended the opening. Mr. Shortridge was formerly a motorman on the I. & C. traction company.

"Uncle Sam At Work," the big nine-reel story produced by Henry W. Savage and based on the book by Frederic J. Haskin, entitled, "The American Government," is being shown for a week in English's Opera House, Indianapolis. The big film is attracting large crowds.

The Jefferson theater management, Ft. Wayne, Ind., gave a big dinner at the Anthony hotel for the boys who sell papers in Ft. Wayne. Following the dinner the boys were guests of Manager Harvey Porter at the Empress theater.

The Luna Motion Picture theater, Lafayette, Ind., dedicated its new $4,500 mechanical orchestra at the shows given Christmas day. R. L. Steffens, the instrument company's demonstrator, was on hand to see that everything went off in good shape. The instrument will imitate about every sound under the sun.

"Three Teddy Bears" is the title of the film used by David Maurice as the special

Censorship Meeting In Ohio

Meeting Called in Cincinnati to Discuss Censorship Showed Sentiment in Favor of the Ohio State Board—State Censors Have Been Considerate During Past Year—No Resolutions Passed.

By J. D. Raridan, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A MEETING held in Cincinnati, at the Sinton Hotel, on the afternoon of December 28, showed plainly that there is another side to the censorship fight which has been more or less in evidence lately, as between the advocates of the National Board and those who believe that State censorship, such as that in Ohio, is a good thing. Opposition to the workings of the Ohio Board seemed general at the beginning, when, on account of the rush of initial business and inadequate equipment, the release of films was much delayed. Recently the visit to Cincinnati of Jacob W. Binder and Dr. O. G. Cocks, members of the National Board, served to encourage the opponents of the State board. The meeting in question, however, which was attended not only by representative Cincinnati film men, but by most of the leading exhibitors, developed a pronounced sentiment in favor of the State board, which has for some time been working smoothly and efficiently.

The meeting was called and presided over by A. M. Muller, Cincinnati manager of Warner's Features, and was addressed by L. S. Miller, one of the attorneys representing the local branch of the Exhibitors' League, and by Chairman H. E. Vestal, of the State Board of Censors. Mr. Miller, especially, pointed out in vigorous terms that an independent State board can work much more effectively than one which is to any extent controlled, directly or indirectly, by film producers. It was stated by Chairman Vestal that the rejections of the State Board have not exceeded two or three per cent. of the more than 30,000 films which it has examined, showing that it has not been without regard to the rights of film manufacturers, and that its strictures have not been unduly oppressive. Mr. Muller, of the Warner Company, declared that the exchanges now receive their films from the board ample time in advance of release dates, so that there is no trouble and no complaint on that score.

Speaking for himself as well as from the viewpoint of the film exchange man in general, Mr. Muller pointed out that inasmuch as it is a matter of choosing between State and municipal censorship, and the present State Board has shown discrimination and efficiency, it would be rather bad policy to attempt to repeal the law under which it is operating, with the practical certainty of harassing municipal bodies to follow.

About sixty persons attended the meeting. No resolution or other formal action was taken, the purpose of the gathering being merely to clear the atmosphere and place the attitude of the State Board squarely before the film men and exhibitors. All of those present, however, as well as others who were interviewed by Chairman Vestal while he was in the city, expressed themselves as being emphatically in favor of the continued maintenance of the Ohio Board under the circumstances, and it is apparent that if there is a fight in the Legislature against it, as there probably will be, the opposition will not have the support of any considerable body of Cincinnati exhibitors, at least.

A new photoplay house, which is to be one of the handsomest suburban theatres in Cincinnati, is to be constructed in Price Hill, as indicated some time ago in these columns. John W. Weinig, a lawyer, who has acted in the preliminaries, is one of the promoters. A lot with a frontage of 96 feet and a depth of 110 feet has been acquired, at a cost of $77 a front foot, and a house to cost about $35,000 will be erected. Besides seating capacity for 750 persons, the building will contain four storerooms, which are expected to rent well. Architects Zettel & Rapp are drawing plans, which provide for a handsome and up-to-date building. The building will contain its own electric plant, and a costly orchestrion will also be a feature. It is understood that the school children in that part of the city will be asked to participate in a prize contest for the selection of an appropriate name for the new house.

COUNTRY STORE NIGHT GETS EXHIBITOR IN TROUBLE.

Proprietor of Theater Arrested on Complaint of Juvenile Protective Association.

The vigorous opposition which has been indicated in some quarters in and around Cincinnati to plans on the "country store" order, used by some exhibitors as a means of getting business, found concrete expression last week in action taken by the Juvenile Protective Association, an organization whose purposes are indicated by its name. The organization filed an affidavit in the Juvenile Court directed again Christ Popp, proprietor of the Main theatre, on Main street, near McMicken avenue, on which he is to be tried shortly. The affidavit charges that Popp allows children to frequent his theatre, where a "country store" drawing feature is conducted. According to a representative of the Association, the movement to break up this practice has the backing of a number of leading exhibitors in the city, and it is understood that an investigation is being made for the purpose of seeing whether it is not susceptible of prosecution under the general criminal statutes of the State. Whether it can be attacked in the manner indicated will doubtless be developed in the case referred to.

OTHER ITEMS FROM CINCINNATI

Harry N. Brice, who was formerly associated with McMahan & Jackson, well known Cincinnati film and theatrical men, is now at the head of the Faultless Feature Film Co., Henry Olhaber being his partner in the venture. Besides booking in this territory for several attractions of the United Booking Offices, including "The Evolution of Europe," a war film, "Ireland a Nation," and "The Master Cracksman," the concern has been specializing on taking local moving pictures at various places on order, with considerable success. Mr. Brice reports that the features under his control are going very nicely.

The first of the Paramount releases which will hereafter be shown twice a week at the Strand theater, as announced some time ago, was displayed there beginning Dec. 24, Christmas Eve, when Dustin Fanum, in the famous Players' "Cameo Kirby," in which he starred on the stage, was the attraction. Following this production Mary Pickford in "Cinderella," another Famous Players feature, proved to be an exceptionally popular offering, as those featuring Miss Pickford invariably are. The Strand has handled crowded houses for these attractions, packing both floors, and seems already firmly entrenched in popular favor as a photo-play house in spite of the short period since its transformation.

War pictures, showing actual scenes of hostilities in Europe, were exhibited for the benefit of a fund being raised in Dayton for the widows and orphans of German and Austrian soldiers, recently. The exhibition was held in a society hall under the auspices of an organization formed for the purpose of helping the dependents of the soldiers killed and injured, and the pictures were made the more interesting by an accompanying lecture in German. Good crows attended, resulting in a substaltial sum being added to the funds of the society.

The Columbia theater, of Marion, O., which shows the Hearst-Selig Pictorial regularly, gained considerably in attendance when a certain number of the series was shown a week or so ago, by reason of the fact that among the German soldiers shown as guarding French prisoners at Koenigsbruck was recognized a former resident of Marion. He was an employe of the Marion Steam Shovel Co., and left for Germany in 1913. Fellow-workmen, as well as some of the employees of the Columbia, recognized him as soon as he was seen in the picture, and the incident added considerably to the interest with which the war pictures were viewed.

A new use for motion pictures must be listed in the manner in which River City Camp of the Woodmen of the World, of Portsmouth, O., has applied them. The camp has installed a projecting machine, and recently had one of the degrees of the initiation, capably presented by a well-drilled team, shown in moving pictures for the benefit of the members. This seems to be very nearly the latest thing in pictures, but possibly there are other uses more out of the ordinary, as they are coming up every day.

The Rex Theatre Co. has been incorporated at Youngstown, O., with a capital stock of $10,000, for the purpose of constructing and operating a moving picture theater.

IOWA ITEMS OF INTEREST.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

The rapid advance of the photoplay again is emphasized for Iowa residents by the discovery that Dubuque, one of the largest cities in the state, is now without a house devoted exclusively to the "legitimate" drama. The Grand opera house now has gone over to pictures, with five cents admission, although on isolated dates it will play some theatrical attractions.

A cry for relief from the Rex and Frank theaters was heeded by the city council at Council Bluffs, and because these two houses are not down-town, give no matinees and have small seating capacities, the license fee was cut from $50 to $25 a year.

Fred Ross, who formerly operated the Orpheum theater at Oelwein, is reported to have purchased another show at Owatonna, Minn.

Fred De Vere of Chicago has purchased the Lyric theater at Columbus Junction from R. J. Diehl.

Miss Alta C. Meves has sold the moving picture show at Collins to E. J. Kielly.

Elmer Hesner, who recently bought Ray Toole's interest in the Gem theater at Lamont, has sold it to Joy Bradley of West Union, who will manage the house. Bradley started the first picture house in Lamont and will return to his old home.

William Tomilson has started a moving picture show at Center Junction.

Samuel Good of Conrad has purchased the Princess theater at Eldora.

A new opera house building is projected at Elkhorn by Knut Peterson.

The Majestic theater at Sioux City has been sold to J. H. Gould.

A. F. Myers and A. C. Carson, who recently leased the opera house at Massena, will also operate a show at Cumberland.

A new picture show for Stanhope is planned by the editor of The Stanhope Enterprise.

Cohen & Rookey of the Pastime theater at State Center have taken a lease on the new building which is being erected by Eckhardt & Hilleman.

J. A. Robinson of Webster City is said to be planning to erect a new theater.

feature for his free show to orphan children in Lafayette the matinee before Christmas. Mr. Maurice provided special car service for the children to and from the Orphan Home, and each child was given candy and a present.

L. C. Moses, manager of the New Era theater, Columbus, Ind., has been charged with desertion and embezzlement by his wife. He has left Columbus, and Mrs. Moses believes that he is in Lima, Ohio, or Evansville, Ind., in both of which towns he formerly owned theaters.

Moving pictures dealing with Bible history were the principle feature of a big boys' meeting in the Y. M. C. A. in Indianapolis. A picture machine is to be made part of the equipment at the Y. M. C. A.

The Renfax musical pictures are being shown at the Manhattan theater, Indianapolis. It is the initial appearance of the pictures in Indianapolis.

Editor Scares Censors

Takes Exception to Blue Stocking Ideas of What Is Wholesome in Censoring Pictures—Argues for Spectators of Mere Normal Tastes—Says Exhibitor Has to Pay the Freight.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

The editor of the Evanston, Illinois, Index thinks that a league formed by the women of that city to secure "wholesome motion pictures will not attain desired results. Illinois exhibitors who have played to slim houses while endeavoring to co-operate in the "wholesome picture" plan will agree with him on many points.

"That which will be termed 'wholesome' by women of maturity of judgment and some degree of good taste in literature," he says, "will be most certainly called 'dull' by the other and far larger class who frequent the 'movies' habitually. Here it will be necessary to perform that most difficult mental feat, see a matter of great personal interest from the point of view of another individual whose ideals, likes and dislikes are diametrically opposed to one's own. The second difficulty is that of regulating for others what neither they themselves nor their children patronize."

By way of illustration he recalls the attempt made in Evanston last spring to "increase the wholesomeness of the Saturday picture shows. Mrs. Brown's children, who know and like the thrillers, thought the 'wholesome' pictures tiresome and stupid, and for once in their lives didn't want to go. Mrs. Smith's children, unaccustomed to attendance and unattracted by the promise of edifying pictures, elected to do some of those other things which are always available for the amusement of children in their walks of life."

The obliging exhibitor "pays the freight."

MAY CENSOR FOR MOLINE.

Newspapers in Moline talk of "a movement on foot" to bar white slave films and to have the Chicago board do the censoring for Moline. Information as to any persons or organizations connected with the "movement" is lacking. A reprint of an item from a recent issue of The Moving Picture World telling of the Joliet lid on problem plays seems to be the basis of an "early-copy" story.

OTHER ILLINOIS NOTES.

The Christmas spirit was evident in many Illinois picture houses. Santa Claus had a present for all patrons at the Globe in Tuscola on Christmas Eve. For several days prior to the holiday he drew upon a supply of 10,000 boxes of candy for youngsters visiting the Grand in Joliet. Manager W. W. Watts of the Vaudette, at Springfield, gave a special noon-day show for the poor children of the capital city. Manager Scott put on three free shows at Jacksonville and delighted more than a thousand kiddies. Judge Harry Higbee took over the Knights of Pythias Opera House at Pittsfield and gave a Christmas matinee of "The Princess of Bagdad" to all the children of the community.

Johnson Brothers have opened their new family theater on Fourteenth avenue in Rockford. Bert Johnson is in charge. The house seats 245 persons.

Mrs. Zelia Zah, who purchased the east side picture show at Mt. Pulaski has renamed it "The Idlehour." The house has been remodeled.

The Idle Hour theatre, at Hinckley, which is now under the management of W. E. Childs, has been remodeled. Miss Alicen Tiede is the pianist.

A man with a camera picked off prominent citizens in Lacon and drew many new patrons Lyric-ward.

The Gem theatre, at Sullivan, has been sold again—this time to a man from East St. Louis.

The Crystal theatre, at Glasford, gives away a prize every show night.

The Maine theatre, at Carmi, had as its Christmas Vitagraph feature "Uncle Bill," starring Anita Stewart and Billy Quirk, Carmi favorites.

A new moving picture show has been opened in the Just Building at Libertyville.

An attractive mission style storm front has been added to the Elite theatre at Galesburg.

Chris Taylor had a Bushman-Bayne New Year's Day at Dreamland theatre in Kewanee. "Every Inch a King" was booked for the Kewanee lovers of Essanay romance.

The Young Men's Club of Joliet is giving a lyceum course in moving pictures at the Auditorium to secure funds for equipping the club rooms. Judge Willis Brown is lecturing the films, which include "The Boy and the Law," "The Girl and the Law," "The Child and the Beast," "Better Than a Millstone," "The Tramp," "A City of Boys," "Tom and the Raggedy Girl," "The Wizard of the Hills," "A Color Line" and "How Jimmy Substitued."

Saunders' picture show at Harvard exhibited the Holeproof Hosiery industrialog for a local clothier for three days.

The Majestic theatre, at Bowen, has acquired the opera house as a winter home.

A six-weeks contest for the selection of a child to be made happy with an electric-lighted, bicycle-propelled automobile, has been started by the Princess theater at Arcola.

"The Shadow of the Cross," a mystery painting—a portrait of Christ visible in the darkness as well as in the light—supplemented the regular moving picture show at the Family theatre in Rock Island.

Dreamland theatre, at Nebo, is now under the management of Unglaub & Main. Shows will be given Wednesday and Saturday nights.

The Order of the Eastern Star had charge of a recent show at the Alamo theatre, in Plainfield.

In order to get the children out of the way for the night crowds, the Eagle theatre, at Princeton, let them see the Chicago Tribune war pictures until 6 o'clock for 10 cents. This bill was made double alluring by adding the films of the dairy show at Chicago.

Matinee business at the Playhouse theater in Staunton is being boosted by publishing five-cent rebate coupons.

Manager John H. Wilburn, of the Lyric theatre, at Ashland, bought a big supply of Red Cross seals and gave one with each ticket to "The Master Key." Wednesday, Dec. 23, was Red Cross benefit day at the Royal theatre, in Sandwich.

Ed Fellis, proprietor of the Opera House at Hillsboro, has installed stoves to supplement his steam-heating equipment.

The New Majestic theatre at East St. Louis had the very appropriate Pathe, "The Life of Our Savior," for Christmas, and the days before and after.

Patrons of the Oak Park theatre, at Oak Park, anxious to be assured seats, are responsible for that house's plan of reserving all seats at the first shows on holiday nights.

Fear of a disease epidemic having passed, moving picture houses in Benton have been allowed to reopen.

Fire destroyed the Grand Opera House at Charleston, causing loss of $35,000.

F. W. Jirock, of La Grange, has purchased the Park theater, on Lake, near Austin avenue, in Oak Park, from H. E. Krauth.

Production of films at the much exploited and little used Zoo Park, north of Springfield, is the announced intention of the recently incorporated Illinois Film Company of Springfield. Plans call for the transformation of the Arcade at the park into a studio. The grounds possess some attractive scenery. Earl J. Karm, former manager of the Majestic theatre, in Springfield, has returned to the city and will be active in the work. H. V. Johnson, of Mobile, Ala., an experienced motion picture man, will have charge of the technical work.

Local interest is big in the Thanhouser serial "Zudora." The author of the story, Daniel Carson Goodman, is a former Springfield boy, and his father still resides here. The Capitol theatre, on East Washington street, is enjoying a run on the mystery film.

The films made at the recent Illinois State Fair were run in connection with a regular show at the Princess theatre, Fifth street and Capitol avenue.

George S. Riordan, formerly manager of the Majestic theater here, but now in charge of Butterfield's Bijou, at Flint, Mich., has been spending the holidays at home. Jack Yee, road manager for the Butterfield syndicate, was at Flint in his absence.

"No cheap or reckless producer should be allowed to lay his hands upon the great master-pieces," declared Rev. L. G. Carpenter, pastor of the Universalist Church at Peoria, Ill., in a sermon on "The Morals of the Movies." "When it comes to a consideration of the morals of the movies we may say that even as they are they constitute a very fair and respectable sort of entertainment," he said. As corrections in bettering the morals he suggested: "There is too much use of liquor and tobacco. . . . I would eliminate all 'problem plays,' such as 'The House of Bondage' and 'The White Slave.'"

MICHIGAN ITEMS.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Morris Frank has installed a new machine at Frank's opera house in Wayland.

The Kozy theater at Ludington has installed a new aluminum mirror screen.

Holiday matinee patrons at the Marion theater in Iron Mountain caught the first installment of "The Master Key," which was not started until that date.

The Big Brothers of Grand Rapids had a Christmas morning picture show at the Empress theater for 2,000 children of that city.

The Postum Cereal Company of Battle Creek has 1,000 feet of film, picturing the making of breakfast foods which is being run in theaters throughout the middle west.

The Third Regiment band of Saginaw gave a concert in connection with the presentation of "The Spy" at the Auditorium in Saginaw.

ERROR IN MONTREAL COLUMN.

Through an error in our Montreal News column last week the Noted Players Film Company was credited with controlling "The Bells of Reims," whereas this picture is being handled by the Famous Players Film Service Limited.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

KALEM.

THE LEECH (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 18).—Attracted by Mrs. Tully's efforts to break into society, Carl Linden, a parasite, contrives to meet the woman and her family. He cleverly manages to make the socially-ambitious mother believe him a nobleman. Mrs. Tully's son, George, falls in love with Grace, a Salvation Army worker. The girl, however, refuses to marry him, and begs the boy not to press her for her reason.

Linden becomes engaged to Helen, George's sister. George induces Grace to call upon his mother. Mrs. Tully is horrified to learn of her son's love for the Salvation Army girl. Linden enters the house just at this time. Sight of him causes Grace to start forward. A moment later the girl denounces Linden, declaring that he had deserted her three months after their marriage. While Helen, heart-broken, falls into Grace's arms, Linden flees from the house.

But thought of the stakes he had played for, causes the scoundrel to make one more effort to enrich himself. Knowing that Helen has placed all her valuable engagement gifts in her room, the man climbs up one of the balcony columns and enters the girl's room by way of the window.

Grace, endeavoring to console Helen, accompanies the girl to her room. They enter in time to catch Linden at work. Grace grapples with him. The sound of the struggle brings George and his mother to the scene. Linden breaks from his wife's grasp and makes a flying leap through the window. George sees the scoundrel land heavily on the ground. When the boy approaches the spot where Linden lies, he finds the man dead.

CORNELIUS AND THE WILD MAN (Jan. 19).—When Bosco, a wild man, escapes from a circus sideshow, the terrified community offers $100 for his capture. Cornelius is on his way to the village with a load of eggs, when he is captured by Bosco. The farmer manages to escape and relates his adventures to the people in the village.

Upon his return home, Cornelius tells the story to Mandy, his wife. The smell of hard cider on her husband's breath fills Mandy with suspicion and she beats him with a buggy whip. Cornelius flees, only to be captured a second time by Bosco.

Mandy searching for her husband, comes upon the wildman. Unafraid, she tackles that individual and makes him a prisoner. The woman takes him to town while her husband trails along. While she is collecting the reward, Cornelius tells of how he captured Bosco. Mandy happens along during his recital—and once more poor Cornelius flees from the buggy whip.

A NIGHT IN NEW JERSEY (Jan. 19).—On same reel as foregoing.—Hesanut learns that lions, tigers and wildcats are tame housepets compared to the ordinary, everyday variety of the Jersey 'skeeter.

One of the mosquities which gets on Hesanut's trail, is equipped with skeleton keys, augers and other tools which enable him to enter any room. Your patrons will enjoy this animated cartoon.

THE CABARET SINGER (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 20).—The Denton's marital happiness brings home to Randall the loneliness of his own existence. Shortly afterwards, the young man meets Pearl Eltinge, a cabaret singer. Ignorant of the fact that her beauty is a mask for a shallow mind, Randall makes her his wife. Pearl's utter selfishness becomes apparent shortly after the marriage. Dorothy, her maid, aware of her mistress's heartlessness, secretly pities the husband. Denton invites the Randalls to a party given in honor of his children. Mrs. Randall sees her husband's love of children assert itself during the affair. Infuriated, the woman returns home.

As time passes, Randall sees the difference in the characters of his wife and her maid. The former, wearied with domestic life, longs for the bright lights of her former career. She suddenly desides to return to the stage. Despite her husband's pleas, Mrs. Randall departs. Just before she goes, the woman discharges Dorothy while in a fit of temper. Randall, however, reemploys the girl. The following morning, bitterly thinking of the disappointment his marriage has caused him, Randall picks up a newspaper. The flaring headlines, telling of a frightful railroad wreck, rivet his attention. At the head of the list of the dead is the name "Mrs. George Randall."

COOKY'S ADVENTURE (Jan. 22).—News that the Democratic candidate has been elected fills Rogers with fear and trembling. It not only means the loss of about $50, but also entails having his hair cropped in true convict style. In an ugly mood because of these thoughts, he roughly refuses his wife's request for a new hat. Rogers shaves his head that same day. Mrs. Rogers remains in ignorance of what has occurred until she calls at his office to make another request for the bonnet. Her husband's shaven poll fills the wife with amazed anger. To escape a tongue-lashing, Rogers gladly gives her the money she wants.

Mrs. Rogers purchases the hat and sends it home by Katy, a cook she hires after leaving the millinery store. So greatly does Katy admire the new hat that she wears it, instead of her own, while on the way to the Rogers' home. The new cook climbs abroad a 'bus. It happens that Rogers, also on his way home, is seated directly behind her. In lighting a cigar, Rogers accidentally sets fire to the bonnet. Furious, Katy, attacks the poor man and gives him a thrashing. Rogers is not only thrown off the 'bus, but is arrested and fined.

Katy carries the ruined hat to Mrs. Rogers and informs her of what has occurred. In the midst of her story, Rogers comes home. Sight of him inflames the cook and she gives him another mauling. It requires the combined efforts of Mrs. Rogers and every servant in the house to separate the two. Quaking with fear, the unfortunate man pays Katy and sends her on her way.

VITAGRAPH.

THE FATES AND FLORA FOURFLUSH—A RACE FOR LIFE (Part Three of the Ten-Billion-Dollar Vitagraph Mystery Serial—Jan. 18).—[NOTE: This picture is a parody on the numerous Perils, Thrills and Mysteries recently perpetrated, and must not be taken too seriously.] By performing prodigies of valor, Honest Frank, our hero, rescues himself from the alligator pit where he and the beautiful heroine, Flora Fourflush, have been thrown by order of the Rajah of Chutenpore, unduly influenced by Sir Simon Blackheart, the villain. Safely out of danger himself, brave Frank then rescues Flora by stealing the giant ruby from the treasure-house elephant, and is tracked by his human bloodhounds. Unsatiated by his villainies, Blackheart commands his thugs to capture Frank, and the long-suffering hero is tied upon a railroad track. Flora is warned of his terrible plight and hastens in her racing car—good for ten miles an hour or more—to the rescue of her lover. Sir Simon steals a locomotive and is soon speeding towards the helpless Frank. The poor street-sweeper is struck and run over, but miraculously escapes injury, springs into the engine cab and heaves Sir Simon down the bank. The arch-villain then disguises himself as a child, hunts up our unsuspecting hero and tells him that Flora awaits him in a deserted cottage. Sir Simon little knows that the Rajah and his men are on his track. Flora, meanwhile, has arrived too late to save her lover from the engine. She learns of his escape, and meeting the Rajah, is told that Sir Simon has tied Frank to several cases of dynamite in the cabin and is even now lighting the fuse. Brave as a lioness, Flora rushes to help Frank, followed by the Rajah and his High Priest. They overcome Blackheart, rescue Frank from his perilous position and tie Sir Simon in his place, beside the explosive. All depart to a safe distance and see the villain blown to atoms. Frank and Flora embrace and the Rajah adds to their happiness by presenting them with the huge ruby as a wedding present.

THE EVIL MEN DO (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—Jan. 19).—As childhood sweethearts, David Horton and Beatrice Elton are inseparable. Fifteen years later, Beatrice goes abroad and while there is heartbroken to learn that David has married Margaret Forsythe, a social climber. Margaret starts to entertain on a lavish scale. David, in order to pay the bills, speculates, loses everything and his wife elopes with Captain Clifford, a dashing army officer. Beatrice returns from abroad, meets David, learns all and urges him to go West and start all over again. Horton does so and locates at Ranchville, where he buys a small ranch. Meanwhile, Clifford has tired of Margaret and deserted her. He later meets Beatrice, they marry and he takes her out West with him. Beatrice meets David at his ranch and tells him she is married. Horton meets Clifford, but keeps silent about Clifford's former life. Beatrice plans to reunite Margaret and her husband and invites the girl to Ranchville. On her arrival, Beatrice asks David to give Margaret another chance, pleading so hard, he finally takes Margaret back. Forseeing trouble, should Margaret and Clifford meet, he urges her to leave that section until the Cliffords have gone. Unfortunately, she does meet Clifford, he threatens her, they struggle, and she is accidentally killed. Horton finds the body and a clue to the guilty one. He accuses Clifford, who breaks down and confesses the whole truth, which Beatrice overhears. She tells Clifford it is all over between them and he kills himself. After the funeral, Horton and Beatrice leave for the East, determined to forget the past and start life anew as man and wife.

THE RIGHT GIRL (Jan. 20).—Upon their return from their honeymoon, Earle New-Wed and his wife, Anita, receive a letter of congratulations from a bachelor pal of Mr. New-Wed's, Jack Bachelor, expressing his regrets that he has not as yet met the "right girl"; she always disappears before he can speak to her. Earle, in answering the letter, advises his friend that the next time he sees the "right girl" to follow her and find out where she lives. Next day Mrs. New-Wed sees her husband off to business, and goes on a shopping tour. She accidentally bumps into Jack, out for a stroll, and he, not knowing who she is, is struck by her beauty, and follows her. She takes him for a masher and has him locked up. She then goes home. Jack, after much difficulty, manages to obtain permission to telephone his friend Earle at the latter's office, and tells him what a pretty mess his advice has caused. Earle is very sorry, hastens down to court and bails him out. To square things, Earle takes Jack home to dinner and to meet his bride. On their arrival at the house, Earle tells Jack to make himself at home while he calls his wife, whom he thinks is upstairs. Anita, however, is in the kitchen, attending to the preparations for the evening meal. She goes into the living room. Jack is sitting in her husband's chair with his back towards her. Anita, mistaking him for Earle, coyly tiptoes up and in the most approved "New-Wed" style, places her hands over his eyes, whispering words of love. Happening to touch Jack's moustache, she realizes to her horror the man is not her husband. After one glimpse of his face, she screams and flees to the kitchen, where she and Nora, the servant girl, seize the rolling pins, and other weapons and prepare for a siege. Earle, who has rushed downstairs on hearing his wife's scream, is told by Jack that his wife has gone crazy, and that she is in the kitchen. Earle opens the door, is set upon by the women and beaten up. Jack makes a getaway ,exclaiming "Good Night!" "None of that married life for me!"

THE NAVAJO RING (Jan. 21).—The town drunk and bad man of a small western town, Jim Dace, becomes so abusive and neglectful of his family that his wife can stand it no longer. She leaves him, taking with her their child Jess. He receives a shock next morning when he awakens and finds them gone. Later, he leaves town, reforms and becomes prosperous, but the longing to see his family grows stronger as the years pass. He resolves to travel, cherishing a secret hope that he might in that way learn something of them. Meanwhile it has been a constant struggle for existance for his wife to bring up the child, and when Jess is eighteen, the mother is unable to keep up the strain. The bread winning falls upon the girl's shoulders, she loses her position and, unable to find other employment, is faced with the double care of providing medicine and caring for her mother. Seeing a flashily-dressed woman leave a cafe door, the desperate girl enters the place. Approached by a loafer, Jess, terrified, takes out a Navajo ring her father had given her when a baby and asks him if he will purchase it. Accompanied by an old friend from the East, Jim happens in at this moment. He is at once struck by the incongruity of the girl's presence in that place, and experiences a strange feeling that he has known the girl previously. The sight of the Navajo ring crystallizes this thought into instant recollection; the girl is his own daughter, Jess. The loafer tries to force the girl to drink and Jim interferes. Words are passed and Jim knocks the follow down, then escapes with Jess. Safely outside, Jim learns the powerful motive back of the girl's action, and tells her to take him to her mother at once, as he believes he is her own father. By the bedside of Mary, his long-lost wife, there is a joyful reunion, and the following day, Jim takes his wife and daughter in his automobile to his beautiful home and establishes them in the midst of comfort and luxury.

WANTED, A NURSE (Jan. 22).—A wealthy Chicago clubman, J. Robert Orr, while stopping in New York, meets Helen Worth, a nurse at Mercy Hospital, through the medium of a street accident. With him it is love at first sight, and he is quite eager to see her again, although she does not give him her name. Determined to carry out his desire, he pretends to be very sick at the club, and begs to be taken to the Mercy Hospital. His scheme works all right, but unfortunately, Miss Worth is called away to attend a private patient, so that when Orr arrives at the hospital, he is taken in charge by the most awful apparition of a nurse he ever beheld. He tries four nurses, but refuses to allow them to tend him as all are homely as sin. Being plentifully supplied with money, he feels he can afford to be particular. After some very distressing experiences, Orr manages to escape from the hospital, clad in nurse's clothes. He appears at the club, where his friends think he is crazy and call a doctor. By chance, Doctor Worth, Helen's brother, is called. Although puzzled at Orr's peculiar hallucinations concerning nurses, he finally yields to the almost madman, and sends for Helen, his sister, whose private patient is out of danger. As soon as Helen's soothing hands touch his fevered brow, Orr, realizing that his angel has returned, opens his eyes and gazes into the girl's face. She smiles at him and he then goes quietly to sleep. Next morning, while she is taking his temperature, he writes a note to her reading, "I love you. Won't you promise to marry me—if I am normal." Helen, pretending to be annoyed, takes the little thermometer from his mouth, looks closely at it, then shyly whispers, "You're normal!" and consents to become his nurse for life.

WAR (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 23).—The Schultz and Du Bois families, keeping respectively, delicatessen and bakery shops, and living in the same apartment house, are the best of friends until the European war breaks out—then the German in one and the French in the other family comes to the surface with an outburst of patriotism. Little Johnnie Du Bois and Heinie Schultz start things by their "Hoch Der Kaiser" and "Vive La France," with the result that they are soon engaged in a miniature war of their own. Their parents are furious and the Du Bois, in the flat overhead, stamp on the floor and shout their battle-cry, while the Schultzes, downstairs, respond in kind. Things are going from bad to worse, when Fritz, the Schultz eldest son, arrives from medical college, and Marie, the Du Bois' pretty daughter, returns from the hospital, where she is a trained nurse. This quiets things somewhat. Later, the eldest son and the pretty daughter meet and fall in love. Heinie and Johnnie, still bitter enemies, and backed up by their "allies," decide to fight it out in a vacant lot. The parents are told of this and start for the scene of battle. There a battle royal takes place between the two families. After a terrific struggle, they are separated and almost dragged home by their respective loving son and daughter. All the participants are a sight to behold, and the Red Cross knowledge of Fritz and Marie comes in very handy. Their tender and impartial ministrations cause better feelings and after the excitement calms down, all see the humor of their ridiculous patriotism. No one makes any objection when Fritz embraces Marie before them, waves an American flag over their bandaged heads and shouts, "First and foremost we're all good Americans!"

ESSANAY.

SWEEDIE AND HER DOG (Jan. 18).—Mr. Dingy engages Sweedie as their cook. She insists upon bringing her dog "Skinny" and her parrot along. Mr. Dingy dislikes dogs, but rather than lose Sweedie consents. On the way home the dog catchers attack "Skinny" and Sweedie is forced to give battle to the entire squad in order to free the dog. At the Dingy home Sweedie is sent in to cook dinner. Instead she gives her dog a bath in the dishpan, and uses the best linen napkins to dry him. About this time her sweetheart is whistling over the back fence, so she goes out for a ride in his hansom cab. While she is gone Mr. Dingy beats her dog, so upon her return she simply wipes up the kitchen floor with him for abusing her pet.

THE MISJUDGED MR. HARTLEY (Jan. 19).—In honor of his return from abroad, Mrs. Worthington invites her cousin, Brian Hartley, to dinner that evening, but forgets to tell him she has moved from her old address. He goes to the old home where he is met at the door by Celia Thayer, a guest of the Holbrooks, who now occupy the residence. None of the family being at home, Cecilia admits him, thinking he has been invited to dinner. When her hostess does not arrive the two have dinner together and become quite infatuated. Later it develops that the house was robbed while Mr. Hartley was there and, of course, he is suspected. Celia does not see him again until the following summer, when she meets him at a summer resort, then the tangle is straightened out. Hartley pleads his love to Celia and is accepted.

THE FABLE OF HIFALUTING TILLIE AND HER PLAIN PARENTS (Jan. 20).—When Tillie left her country home for the seminary, she was just a plain Gawk, but when she returned a year later, she was a Glorious Butterfly. She gazed at her birth place and said it was a dump. She then started in on her father and told him that his hat was from the vintage of 1880; that his vest was tacky and that his shoes looked like a couple of mud scows. She advised her mother to get a long C. B. Q., and do something for her shape. Home cooking didn't suit her, she wanted grape fruit and sweet breads instead of pigs knuckles and cabbage. She finally decided it was her destiny to be a star actress, so beat it to the city. But fame and fortune were not on hand to greet her. Tillie was an actress up to the time she tried to act, then she got canned. Then she was up against it, so she set sail for home, where things looked mighty good to her.

SENTIMENTAL SOPHIE (Jan. 21).—Slim and Mustang are rivals for the affections of Sophie, the cook at the O. K. Hotel. One afternoon Slim sees Mustang wearing his Sunday clothes, ride up to the front of the hotel and go in for Sophie. Slim follows and when Mustang finds that Sophie is not quite ready, he goes into the bar for a drink. Slim then hurriedly writes a note telling Sophie that he will be unable to take her riding, but that Slim will accompany her. He signs Mustang's name. Sophie soon comes down stairs, and, after reading the note, goes out with Slim. Mustang soon emerges from the bar room and sees Slim helping Sophie to mount his horse. Mustang raises the alarm and all his friends come to his rescue. They chase Slim until he is glad to take refuge in the muddy river.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE BABY (Jan. 23).—A reward of $500 is offered for the capture of Broncho Billy, a desperate outlaw. One day, while hiding near the home of a rancher, Broncho sees a little girl burying her broken doll. Before she completes the ceremony, her mother comes out and takes her into the house. That evening after she has been put to bed, the little girl steals out to finish burying her doll. She falls over a ledge, and Broncho, who is sleeping nearby, is awakened. He picks her up unconscious. Upon taking her home the mother offers him a cot to sleep on. While Broncho sleeps the rancher comes home and recognizes him. He is intent upon getting the $500 reward, but his wife protects the rescuer of her child and Broncho is allowed to escape.

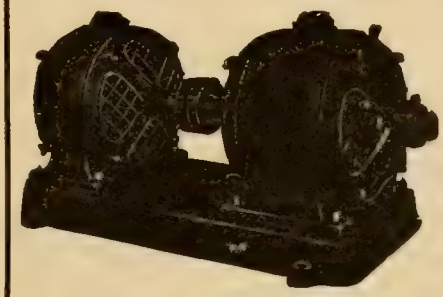
THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 22).—Cook, a noble but weak character, proposes to Helen Rathbawn, daughter of the mill owner. She tells him she is sorry but she is betrothed to Barclay, the lieutenant governor. After her refusal he goes to pieces and tries to drown his sorrows in drink. Later, Dennis McGrath, the corrupt political boss, proposes to Helen. She is astonished and indignant at his audacity. He tells her she must marry him or he will make trouble in her father's mills. She orders the servants to throw him out of the house.

BARGAINS

1 Baird (used for demonstration)
4 Practically New Power's 6 A's
3 Practically New Simplexes
6 Practically New Motiographs
3 Rebuilt Power's No. 5's
6 Edison Model B's
1 $350 Drumona (New), $225.
15 Fort Wayne Compensarcs
2 Power's Inductors
2 Mercury Arc Rectifiers
2 Wagner Rotary Converters
1 Edison Transformer 220-V., 60 cy.
"Bio," "Electra," "Henrion" and Domestic Carbons

A lot of other current savers and choke coils

GET MY PRICES TODAY!!!

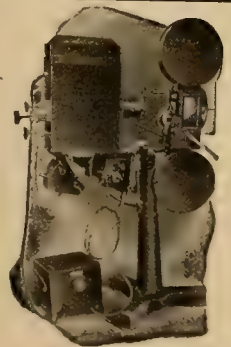


HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. Economizer

The results on your screen will amaze you, please your audience and put your competitors In The Shade.

Let me post you on the latest. Write today. RESULTS COUNT—NOT LOW PRICES.

Send $2.50 for new book
MOTION PICTURE ELECTRICITY
Every Operator Needs One



SIMPLEX

Distributor "BAIRD" and Motiograph M. P. Machines

BAIRD

Distributor Power's 6-A and Simplex M. P. Machines

POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for BAIRD, POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

McGrath brings about a strike at the mills. Because of his political power the police and governor fear to interfere when the workmen threaten the mills. Barclay tells Rathbawn to fight, declaring that neither McGrath nor the governor will aid him. The starving wives of the mill workers finally urge the men to go back to work. Through his political affiliations, McGrath causes an article to be published blaming the lieutenant governor for the whole affair.

Barclay brings his fiancee to his office adjoining that of the governor. She goes into the governor's office where McGrath and the governor are conferring. She tells McGrath that she will accept him if he stops the strike. He agrees and orders the governor to halt it. Barclay has stationed a committee of women, wives of the workers, where they can hear all, to place the responsibility. They burst into the room and fairly mob McGrath.

McGrath shortly before had plotted with some of his most desperate henchmen to kill Barclay and Rathbawn. Cook, who is drinking at the bar when the plot is made, follows the desperado who is bent on killing the lieutenant governor. While the women are attacking McGrath, he tries to shoot the lieutenant governor through the window. Cook wrests the revolver from his hand and kills the governor. He is arrested. He admits the shooting, declaring he loves both Miss Rathbawn and Barclay, who had once saved his life, and that he wants to make him governor so he can end the trouble.

EDISON.

TO MAKE THE NATION PROSPER (Produced to aid the movement for promoting the purchasing of goods made in America, Jan. 18.—"Buy a Bale of Cotton" is on everyone's tongue. That slogan was the start of a great national movement, to not only bring back lost prosperity on account of the war, but to increase the internal trade to a point that has never been surpassed. Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of Speaker Clark, is promulgating this movement on a practical basis, namely, to buy all-made-in-America goods, and to this typical young American girl the nation already owes a lot, which debt will increase as the success of the movement progresses. Already the wheels in the big cotton mills are starting to turn, which wheels have been idle for a long time. It is bringing restored prosperity to the nation at large, and proving American independence of the European markets. American cotton and made in America goods are benefiting in this great commercial movement. Thousands who were out of employment are profiting through this stupendous benevolent plan conceived by the flower of our land, an American girl.

The story itself shows the conditions before the movement started, weaves in a strong drama that brings it right to our door, and finally shows the results of Miss Clark's plan. Miss Clark has voluntarily offered her services in the production of this picture. So far, and may it continue so, everything has been done with the one principle in view, that is "To Make the Nation Prosper."

OLIVE'S MANUFACTURED MOTHER (Ninth of "Olive's Opportunities"—Jan. 19).—Olive must be disposed of, so that Mme. Forresti would not adopt her. That was the decision of beth Drew Martin and Laura, the other portegee of Mme. Foresti. Drew concocts a scheme by which Olive is led to believe that her unknown mother has been discovered. He and Laura hire a woman, who leads a double life—one aspect is that of a poor woman, who lives in a cellar, and the other is that of a crooked hag, who conducts a fence for stolen goods. Olive, believing that this creature is really her mother, goes to live with her, and leaves Mme. Forresti's palatial home. Vance and Mme. Forresti both protest, but Olive resolves to live with her mother, at any cost.

The police trace stolen goods to this woman's home, and raid the place just about the time that Olive has found some of the concealed loot. They place Olive under arrest, and she, almost fainting, happens to lean against the wall, which in some unknown manner gives way, and precipitates her into a passageway. The police turn around and can't find her. They are amazed and go outside to search. Meanwhile, Olive manages to return through the secret panel, and is confronted by the old woman, who thinks Olive has betrayed her. She attempts to kill Olive, but a heart attack prevents her executing the deed. She dies, telling Olive of her deception, and Olive, hearing the police returning, escapes back to Vance, and tells him the news that the woman was not her mother.

THE WONDERS OF MAGNETISM (Jan. 20).—The lode stone's attraction for iron was well known to the Greeks as early as 800 B. C., and is mentioned by Homer, Plato and Aristotle in their writings. It was the original magnet, and was followed, in course of time, by a suspending needle, which has been touched by a lode stone, in order to give it magnetic properties. This was the elementary compass, and was used by Chinese mariners about 1000 A. D. At that time people considered these two magnets as bewitched, and it was not until William Gilbert, a scientist, in the year 1600 A. D., announced that the earth itself was an enormous magnet, that people began to realize the possibilities of magnetism.

To-day there are two kinds of magnets in common use, the electro-magnet and the steel magnet. The steel magnet is a bar of steel that appears to hold its charge of magnetic force indefinitely, although the force actually is diminishing, but never seems to arrive at a zero quantity. This magnet is used for light work, where electricity is not immediately available. However, when steady and heavier work is to be done, the electro-magnet, because of its far greater strength, is used. The electro-magnet, in its simpler form, is nothing but a bar of iron around which a current is passed. When the current is on, the magnet possesses magnetic force, but the second the current ceases, the bar loses its attraction. The Edison magnetic ore separator is an example of the electro-magnet performing the seemingly impossible task of separating magnetic from non-magnetic ores on a large scale.

In the picture we see both of these modern magnets used for different kinds of work. We learn what a wonderful aid the magnet is to science and industry. Likewise we are taught in a few minutes more of the principles of magnetism than the ancient philosophers discovered about the bewitched metals, as they called their magnets, in a millenium.

A WEIGHTY MATTER FOR A DETECTIVE (Jan. 20).—On the same reel as foregoing.—Why, isn't that the fat woman and the living skeleton over there? No, no, gentle reader, it is only poor Shrimp with his plump sweetheart, Skinny. She is very jealous of him and won't allow him out of her sight, except when she plays detective. See three rubes over there? Well, they are going to sneak off in the woods and have a mumbleypeg contest. They have a jug full of water with them. Water? Oh, yes, they all belong to the W. C. T. U. Look at their wives trying to follow them. Ah! Skinny, the girl detective, will help the deserted wives. She disguises, and is going to solve the mystery of what they are going to do with the jug, and where they are going.

What is Shrimp doing with that gun? Why, he has heard that Skinny is kidnapped, but that is impossible, for nothing except a derrick could kidnap her. Shrimp is on the search for her, prepared to do or die. Look, look, she has found something. She rushes back and tells the whole town that she knows where the three mumbleypeg artists have their den. The town follows her and finds some gentlemen who make lead nickels so as to fool the pay-as-you enter cars. Skinny in the excitement falls down hill and lands plump among the wife-deserting, water-drinking three. Her sweetheart, Shrimp, finds her there, the wives find their husbands and there will be a hot time in the old town to-night.

TRACKED BY THE HOUNDS (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 22).—Robert Stuart, a millionaire, has a daughter, Katherine, who was in love with a bright young American, Frank Johnson, who owned an adjoining farm. Frank was an ardent lover of sports. Dogs were his particular hobby, and he took great delight in a pair of Siberian wolf-hounds which he had trained for police work. However, Frank was by no means popular with Mr. Stuart, who favored an unprincipled fortune hunter, Count La Francisco, because of his blue blood. Therefore, when he discovered his daughter's affection for Johnson and her dislike for the Count, his rage knew no bounds. By chance, the Count overheard the father tell Katherine that he was going to send her to Europe, and immediately formulates another plan for raising money. His idea is to abduct the girl and hold her for ransom. So, in league with two of his countrymen, who have a grievance against Stuart, he proceeds to carry it out.

The girl is kidnapped and taken to a hut in the woods, where she is forced to write a letter to her father demanding money. Then follows a search led by Detective Smart and Johnson in which the Count has joined so as to keep up appearances. The dogs follow the trail to the hut and a battle ensues in which the hut is destroyed by fire. Katherine is rescued and the conspirators all receive their just deserts. Stuart becomes reconciled to Johnson.

MR. DALY'S WEDDING DAY (Adapted from the story of the same name which appeared in "Short Stories" Magazine—Jan. 23).—Connors got busy. He took a man posthaste to the Brenner Hotel, because the chap said he had to be married in an hour, and had forgotten his marriage license. A traffic cop halted them, but a five-spot slipped to him ended further trouble. The passenger—it was Daly—emerged from the hotel with two telescope cases, and told Connors whither to take him. Connors was handed a five-spot. Connors was fondling the bill, when up came the traffic cop, and showed his fiver, with the mere comment, "Phony." Both gentlemen had been stung, and Connors went to Captain Kane to prove it. To the number of tickets sold and the amount of cash received.

How to Tell at a Glance

You no longer need to guess at the number of tickets sold or be doubtful as to the cash turn-over being accurate, for the covers all these points with the pressure of the button. It automatically registers and accounts for every ticket.

AUTOMATIC

It has come to the rescue of old-fashioned ticket selling and gives you a new, accurate system.

It is the standard ticket selling machine to-day and is used by all the leading theatres throughout the country. It is also being installed in other fields wherever a large volume of tickets must be quickly sold.

You must have your theatre right up-to-date and its equipment is not complete without the

AUTOMATIC

Our booklet, "Selling Tickets by Electricity," will be gladly sent on request.

You cannot imagine what a simple and yet wonderful machine the Automatic is without seeing it or reading and studying the illustrations in our booklet.

If you are not ready to install a machine get a copy for reference.

The Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY.

the Captain and Meservy it was plain that Daly, alias Hackett, was up to his old tricks.

Connors took Meservy to the house Daly had entered, and while the detective was prowling around the building, a sailor bade Connors take him and a friend to Chinatown. There, under the pretense of getting a new spark-plug, Connors runs to a garage and calls up Captain Kane. When he returns to the taxi, the two birds of prey have flown, and in their stead, a stranger, disclosing himself as a detective, asks Connors for data, when Meservy arrives.

The two sleuths exchange greetings and inspect the telescope case left in the taxi. Crocks of opium in it—nothing else. Meanwhile, Captain Kane is notified to look out for Roy Haven, a deserter from the cruiser "Kennebec," to which a hundred pounds of contraband opium had been sent for destruction. To put Daly and the sailor together was easy figuring. Connors, playing the part of a window-washer, finds work at the spotted house, and thereby locates Daly's room. The plan worked out without disturbing others than Mr. Daly and Roy Haven, petty officer, and as Meservy and his men take the pair in charge, Daly, from his perch on the sill, opens the window and requests Meservy to collect a little taxi bill, three eighty, to be exact, from the balked bridegroom.

LUBIN.

PATSY BOLIVER SERIES, NO. 4 (Patsy's Vacation, Jan. 18).—It is the time of final examinations at the college just before vacation, Patsy, having paid full attention to study, is ready to pass successfully, but Sykesy's attention to athletics made him a possible candidate for plucking. The boys are in the examination room just finishing their examination papers and Sykesy is laboring hard to complete his. While the other boys are out on the campus waiting to be called upon for the final delivery Sykesy steals a page from the papers of the boy next to him and copies it. One of the teachers suddenly appearing, in his haste to conceal the stolen paper, Sykesy puts it among Patsy's papers. When the stolen page is found among Patsy's papers, he is called before the faculty, and, being unable to explain how it came to be there, he is expelled for all time from the college, his connection with the automobile theft never having been satisfactorily explained to the faculty.

Arriving at his home, even his doting mother cannot induce his irate father to believe that there is any hope for Patsy, and he is put to the hardest work on the farm. On the other hand, Sykesy comes home, having successfully passed his first examinations, contrary to popular belief, and is received in the village as a lion. A grand picnic is given in honor of the returned collegians, but Patsy is in disgrace, and, moreover, his father, now more severe than ever, compels him to do his work on the farm which is more confining than ever. But Patsy takes his medicine like a man, submits to the taunts of Sykesy and other young people, and remains away from the festivities.

During the day Sykesy and Tilly cross the field in which Patsy is at work, and leave the bars down. Later on, an opportunity is offered Patsy for a long sought interview with Tilly, whose love he still covets. Accordingly Patsy deserts his post and meets Tilly by the brook, only to have it interrupted by a fight with Sykesy. While he is away the herd of cows escape from the field, and his irate father, having forbidden him to leave, attempts to give him a thrashing. This Patsy refuses to receive, and leaves the gathering in spite of the tears of his mother and sister. Going to his home, he leaves a note to the effect that, not having been able to make good at home, he has gone to shift for himself. But the only bill he has is a bad one, and he is put off the train at night in an unknown town, where he spends his first night away from home on a bench in the railway station.

GUS AND THE ANARCHISTS (Jan. 19).—Gus Goober falls in love with Rosy Heintz, a cashier recently hired by Tom Dreck, proprietor of a very sloppy cafe. Rosy, however, does not return his love. So engrossed is Gus in watching Rosy that he spills a lot of food on a customer's head. For this Dreck fires him, but Rosy pleads with Dreck to take Gus back, promising to cure Gus of his love for her. Dreck consents, and she unfolds her plan to the waiters.

Dreck falls eagerly into the scheme and agrees to let them have the use of an old house for the purpose. He informs them that he has a lot of costumes and wigs left by some stranded actors. The plan is put into action and Rosy sends Gus a letter telling him that before he can hope to secure her love, he must first join the band of anarchists of which she is the leader. Gus, wild with joy, calls upon her, but his ardor is dampened when he sees the fierce-looking anarchists. They lead him to the old house where Dreck has hung up a sign, "The Suicide Club."

THE SPOILERS

Selig's 8 reel MASTERPIECE

By

REX BEACH

is a

RECORD-BREAKING MONEY-GETTER

That's what everybody says that has played it, and we have got the records on the shows to prove it.

NOW LISTEN:

"THE SPOILERS"

has played in more towns, more theatres and to more money in the short time of its release than any other production ever shown.

IT IS A SHOW

for any house, any neighborhood and gets the money.

HAVE YOU HAD YOURS?

If not, now is your chance.

START THE NEW YEAR RIGHT

Write, wire or phone for bookings in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois (except Cook County).

F. O. NIELSEN

720 Schiller Bldg.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Gus is considerably shaken but is nevertheless sworn in as a member of the band. But when Dreck tells Gus that, after he has killed his man he can select whatever mode of committing suicide he wishes, showing him a pistol, a rope and a bottle of chloroform, Gus is ready to run. At this moment several of the other waiters dressed up as cops burst into the room and all run pell-mell out the rear entrance. The cops give chase and shots are exchanged. Gus, crazy with fright, takes to his heels followed by the rest, who make things lively for him by shooting. He finally takes refuge in his home and the others retire laughing heartily. Next morning in the cafe Gus, now thoroughly cured of his love for Rosy, waits on customers with celerity and dispatch amid the winks and silent laughter of the waiters, Rosy and Dreck.

CUPID'S TARGET (Jan. 19).—On same reel as foregoing.—Bobby had to sit by Lucy's side and watch her get excited over the pitching of Marty, the pride of the village nine. Between root and peanuts, Lucy mentioned the fact to Bob, that Marty, the pitcher and his bitter rival, was sending her the most beautiful flowers regularly. Bob began to speculate on the cost of the flowers, as he carefully counted his few small coins and shook his head sadly at the result of the inventory. He must get her some flowers and he was out of a job.

Next morning he notices an advertisement for a man wanted; he applies for the job and gets it. He is blacked up and told to stick his head through the hole in the sheet and let the people throw balls at him. And who should arrive but the village pitcher, escorting the fair Lucy. Marty throws the balls at Bob and they all land on Bob's "dome." Fear of recognition keeps him from running. Marty and Lucy pass on. Bob resigns and gets no pay for his work. Sorrowfully he passes down the street and a speeding auto hits him. The driver jumps out and gives Bob some money and makes his escape in the car. Bob rushes to the florist and buys a big bunch of flowers and, as he is entering his boarding house, he is handed a note from Lucy in which she tells him that she and Marty have been married. Bob goes to his room and arranges things for a funeral and lays down on the bed with his hands folded across his breast and is at rest.

HER WEAKLING BROTHER (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 20).—Kitty Morgan and Jack Burrows are employed by Robert Hedden, an architect. Jack receives a letter from a friend telling him of a partnership opportunity, but one which will require the investment of $500. He is without the necessary amount, but Kitty, anxious to help him, sells some jewelry left by her mother, and raises $250. She does not tell Jack the source of the money, fearing that he would refuse to accept the sacrifice. Lloyd, Kitty's weakling brother, has become involved with questionable associates, who promise to let him in on a deal if he can raise $250. Remembering the jewelry, he plans to steal it, but finds that it is gone. During the lunch hour he goes to Kitty's office, hoping to find the jewels in her desk. Not finding them, he is about to leave, when he sees Hedden's check book. He takes several blank checks and a spoiled and torn check which Hedden has signed but thrown away. He leaves the book on Jack's desk. When Kitty returns, she finds the book, and takes it to Hedden, telling him that it was on Jack's desk. Hedden has been attracted by the girl and seizes the opportunity to make love to her. Kitty leaves him, disturbed by his attitude, and meets Jack in the outer office, but she fears to tell him of Hedden's actions. At home, Lloyd forges a check for $250, and when leaving drops a blank check and the torn copy on the floor.

That evening Jack comes to Kitty, telling her that he has borrowed the remaining sum of $250 and is leaving for the other city. When he leaves Kitty finds the two checks on the floor and thinks that Jack has dropped them. The next day Hedden is told by the bank that they have received a suspected check. He remembers the finding of the book on Jack's desk, and sees the advantage which he now has over Kitty. He demands that she marry him, or see her lover convicted of forgery and Kitty consents to save him. The paying teller recognizes Lloyd on the street as the man who cashed the check, and causes his arrest. When Hedden is notified he announces that Lloyd is the brother of his fiancee, and that he could not prosecute him. A few days before the wedding Kitty writes Jack, telling him that she is marrying Hedden for his sake, but that she feels that she must tell him. When Jack receives the letter he starts for home. The night before the wedding day Kitty finds the thought of marriage too great to bear. She goes to Hedden's home in a last effort to change his purpose. Lloyd, called upon for more money by his associates, determines to attempt to get it from Hedden. While Kitty is at Hedden's house her brother enters. Kitty is in the library. In the hall Lloyd demands money, saying that Hedden must have a special reason for keeping the forgery a secret. Kitty hears and rushes from the library. She tells Lloyd to go, and then turns upon Hedden in scorn. She is about to leave him when he grasps her arm, telling her that she must stay. Meanwhile Jack has sought Kitty, and not finding her, has started for Hedden's house. He breaks in the window of the library in time to rescue Kitty from Hedden's hands.

THE SHANGHAIED BABY (Special—Three Parts—Jan. 21).—Jackie, the little son of Gordon and Leila Lambert, is neglected by his parents. Various sports occupy the father's attention, while the mother, left to herself, spends her time at bridge and similar pasttimes and amuses herself with many men admirers. Among them is John Manning, who has been a favorite at Leila's court, but whose popularity has begun to wane.

One evening during a party Leila, coming to a temporary realization of the hollowness of her life, goes to the piano, where, alone, she sings "The Slumber Boat." Upstairs, Jackie hears the song and creeps down to listen. Then he steals out to a summer house and falls asleep. Manning, dismissed by Leila, in anger finds the sleeping boy. He determines to bring the mother to a realization of her errors, and takes the child to his home. He intends to return the boy within a few days, after the mother has realized what his loss would mean, but Joe, the "Eel", entering the apartment intent on burglary, and recognizing Jackie, abducts him, expecting a ransom. Dressing him as a Chinese child, he hides him in a cellar in the Chinese quarter.

Captain Brent, of a tramp steamer, rescues the boy, after a fight with his Chinese captors, and puts to sea with him. "Joe, the Eel," is arrested and when he confesses to his part of the abduction, Manning goes to the water front where he searches for the lost child, and thus makes amends. In time his strength fails him and he dies, forgiven by Leila and her husband.

Fifteen years later, Jackie, who has been adopted by Brent, is living on a tropical island, where Brent dies, leaving the young man the ring which was found on his finger as a child. Jack leaves the island and goes to San Francisco, where, without work, he joins the navy as a seaman. To his shop comes Isobel Gregg, a wealthy girl, who has become interested in kindergarten work in the slums. When Isobel and Jack meet they know that their hearts are one. But Isobel's mother puts her foot down upon the romance between her daughter and the sailor, and Isobel meets Jack only at the home of her friend, Leila, Jack's mother. When Leila, strangely stirred by the bronzed young man, sings again the old song of "The Slumber Boat" a memory awakens in Jack's heart. The little ring brings proof of Jack's identity and with the happiness of regaining the son and gaining a daughter life begins anew for Leila and her husband.

A QUESTION OF CONSCIENCE (Jan. 22).—George Gray and Frank Wright are clerks in the office of the latter's father, Silas Wright, an aged capitalist. Gray, energetic, alert and faithful, is admired by his employer, while the son, because of his laziness and general indifference, is merely tolerated in the position of bookkeeper because he is his father's son. His father's feeling of disgust toward him is increased by the fact that he is rapidly becoming a slave to drink.

Gray's wife is an invalid. Long continued illness accompanied by heavy expenses for doctors has thrown him into debt which presses him. One night when he has tried in vain to figure out a way to meet his obligations he decides upon the desperate expedient of "borrowing" money from the office safe, and at the same time altering Frank Wright's books so that the deficit will temporarily be concealed. Before there has been opportunity to make the shortage good his employer learns that the doctor has advised that Mrs. Gray's only chance to recover is to go West. He offers to send Gray West to superintend a mine which he owns and Gray accepts the offer. The western climate has the effect on Mrs. Gray's health which the doctor anticipated, but the husband broods over the shortage, which he knows must be discovered soon.

It comes to light at last, but instead of the real culprit being suspected, it is blamed on young Wright, whose ways have become so dissolute that his father is more than ready to believe any ill of him. Young Wright, realizing this, and also that, sooner or later his father will cast him off, accepts his dismissal. Silas Wright writes to Gray telling him that he has disowned his son for theft and expressing a determination to visit the mine. Gray, conscience stricken, decides to confess all but is interrupted and postpones writing the letter. Frank Wright's downward course is rapid. Soon he is a common saloon bum. He falls in with a couple of tramps and goes West. The father and son, unknown to each other, arrive at the railroad station where the mine is located. Silas Wright is entertained at the home of the Grays.

Meanwhile Frank and his companions have fallen in with a gang of yeggmen who have planned to rob the mine office. Frank protests but is overruled. He deserts the gang and starts for the mine alone to give warning. The others give chase. A shot, fired by the pursuers, kills him just as he reaches the mine office. Gray and the father are aroused by the shot, investigate and find the body. Standing over his son, killed, as he believes, in the commission of a crime, the father turns to his trusted employee begging him to take a son's place. Gray, having to decide quickly whether to relieve his own conscience or preserve his employer's sole remaining consolation, chooses the latter course.

SHODDY, THE TAILOR (Jan. 23).—Henry Bugg is the only tailor in Riverside. He is only one-tenth of a man, but he thinks he is one of the real fellows and a regular lady killer. He flirts with the girls who are in love with the police, and gets pretty well clubbed up.

The Riverside police are lined up for inspection and they look as though they had been sleeping in their clothes for a month. The chief orders them to get their suits pressed and, all unsuspecting, they go to Henry Bugg. Bugg realizes that this is the best chance he'll ever have to get square. He makes away with the uniforms and then takes the train out of town. The girls go down to the shop to wait for the police and this creates a rather embarrassing situation, but they sneak out into the yard and over the fence, induce a kindly maiden lady to chase the girls out and hand them some clothes.

The chief, told by the girls, comes down and the second line-up finds them in everything but the uniforms. Bugg sends a telegram telling where the uniforms are and an inspection takes place with the shivering force in suits wringing wet. The worst of it is that the girls all laugh and run away. Buggs gets his revenge, though he is too far away to thoroughly enjoy it.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 88 (Dec. 31).—First freeze of winter chokes Raritan and Erie canals and sends barges and boats into Erie basin for the winter. Novel pictures of this barge city and its picturesque inhabitants.

Thousands of bird houses are built by children in Toledo to foster movement for more song birds.

Citizens of San Diego gather on the plaza of the new exposition grounds to attend a public concert. Interesting pictures of the fair.

Former newsboys of Detroit, now wealthy citizens, resume places on downtown corners and vend papers for Goodfellow fund.

First hard freeze of season brings out score of ice yachts at Toledo for program of races.

Waves driven inland by heavy gale batter down houses and wreck beach walks at Alamitos Bay and Long Beach, Cal.

School children of San Francisco write thousands of letters to friends in the east telling them the Panama Exposition will open Feb. 20. Chinese maids join in indicting missives.

Dinah, sick gorilla in Bronx Zoo, New York, is placed in go-cart and taken out for airing in the park.

Newest pictures from Naco depict conditions there; show U. S. troopers squatted in bomb proof at one end of fence built by Mexican general to prevent flank attack across internationay boundary. Other typical scenes.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 1 (Jan. 4).—Steamer "Lusitania" arrives in New York with the largest shipment of mail ever received. Charles M. Schwab is a passenger.

Pitcher Dick Rudolph of the Boston Braves poses with Baby Bunny at his New York home.

Great fire in Chelsea, Mass., causes loss of $125,000. Firemen are covered with ice while fighting it.

Red Fox James, Indian Chief, travels from Montana to Washington on horseback to urge President Wilson to set aside a national holiday for the Indians.

Charlestown Navy Yard is crowded with vessels waiting to go to dry dock while work on the Dixie is rushed to put that vessel in commission for a voyage in Panama waters.

A. E. Wallace, a staff photographer of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, by special arrangement with the German Government, has been permitted to visit a number of interior cities and make photographs. The first lot of these scenes is released in this number. It shows a new phase of the European war. The new army being trained by the German military machine to fill places of men killed in the trenches. The scenes are made at Frankfurt where the quarters of the 63d Field Artillery are being used by the recruits. They show the method by which the men are trained to handle cannon, to ride their horses, to march and how their bodies are put into physical condition for the rigors of a campaign by a systematic course in setting up exercises. Wonder has been expressed as to the manner in which the German Government will replace the enormous numbers of killed and wounded in the present war. The pictures taken by Mr. Wallace at Frankfurt show that the ones being called upon to fill the depleted ranks are mostly youths just gaining manhood.

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new
SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER
Manufactured by
J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.
Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

MENGER & RING
304 W. 42nd Street, NEW YORK
Telephone, Bryant 6621

Please Step One Side
THE Silver Maple
Silver Maple Screen $3.15 per yard
Silver O. K. $1.80 per yard
Screen today is a wonder. Get a free sample and prove it by test. We are the sole manufacturers of all colors of bronze and screen coating for theatres.
R. A. MILLER & SON
Newburgh, N. Y.

HIS FIGHTING BLOOD (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 18).—In the mountains and hills of Kentucky, a feud has raged for many years between the McTriggers and the Sampsons. In vain did the authorities intervene, threaten arrests and endeavor to patch up the mimic war; all these efforts were of no avail.

Hope McTrigger is sought by many, but she declines them all.

But in secret she is in love with Jim, a bright and a clever young man, but a dreamer, instead of an active participant in the neighborhood events. He is deeply in love with Hope and seeks her companionship upon every occasion.

One day Jim tells Hope of his love for her. She accepts his affection and is on the point of confessing her own love for him when their scene is interrupted by the approach of Sam Buck, a rough mountaineer, who gives vent to laughter when he discovers the bashful Jim making love to Hope. Grabbing Jim roughly, he jerks him aside, so that Jim stumbles and falls. Sam then proceeds to make love to Hope in rough, mountaineer style, and, in spite of her protests, takes her in his arms. Hope slaps and scratches the rough mountaineer who finally releases her. She runs away, her face flaming with anger and her eyes darting fire at her impotent lover.

Jim remains prostrate where he fell. When Hope runs away he gets to his feet and is at once pounced upon by the threatening Sam, who declares to Jim that he will kill him if he dares to make love to Hope any more. Hope, who has hidden herself in a clump of brush a short distance away, witnesses the scene and believes that Jim has been thoroughly cowed.

Upon the departure of Sam, Hope returns to the scene and arraigns Jim fiercely for his cowardice. She declares she will have nothing more to do with such a coward. And Jim believes her.

But no one can read the heart of a maiden. Hope still loves Jim, but she hides it from everybody. She cannot take a pride in his manliness, because he makes such a poor showing in comparison with the giant mountaineers. So, when they meet at a dance a short time after the scene with Sam Buck, she ignores Jim and smiles upon Sam.

One of the participants at the dance is Chuck Sampson. Chuck is the leader of the Sampson clan at feud with the McTriggers. He comes as a spy and falls in love with Hope at first sight. He spends the evening among the dancers, asks many questions about the forces of the McTrigger clan, and prepares a plan for an assault upon the McTrigger clan by his own clan.

His experience at the dance has changed the heart of Jim. His "fighting blood" has been aroused. He realizes that among the rough mountaineers he can no longer maintain an equality unless he can compete with them in their contests of skill. He discards his books and obtains possession of a revolver and a rifle.

Jim is not really a coward. His heart throbs with the fierce, hot blood of the fighting McTriggers, and there is an elasticity in his step as he makes his way to the cabin where Hope lives. He has determined to seek her and to tell her that he will make of himself a man among the McTriggers.

Sam makes his appearance while Jim is explaining matters to Hope. Sam attempts the same tactics which defeated Jim on the mountainside, but Jim fully aroused and fiercely angered by the big brute, assaults Sam with the fury of a wild cat and succeeds in knocking the big bully to the ground, completely defeated.

Hope's eyes sparkle at this proof of the prowess of her lover, but she does not let him know her thoughts. On the contrary, she dismisses both Jim and Sam telling them never to speak to her again.

A short time afterwards, Chuck Sampson appears and tells Hope's father and brothers that the Sampson clan will bury the feud against the McTriggers if Hope will marry them. Hope overhears this proposition and is terrified; but her terror is changed to joy and pride when her kinfolks angrily refuse Chuck Sampson's proposition and order him from the cabin. Chuck threatens to wipe out all of the McTriggers.

His threat is no idle boast, for immediately afterwards there is a great gathering of the Sampson clan on the other side of the mountain and they prepare an armed fray against the McTriggers. Silently they descend upon the cabin where Hope lives and find her alone. She cries out for assistance and her screams of terror are heard by both Jim and Sam. Sam is in the immediate neighborhood of the cabin and when he hastens to the relief of Hope, Chuck and his clansmen engage in a pistol battle with him. Sam is wounded and is left in the trail to die.

A few moments later Jim comes running along the trail. Sam explains the situation and tells Jim that the Sampsons have captured Hope and carried her up to the mountainside. Jim tells Sam to arouse the McTriggers while he will follow the raiders and try to rescue Hope.

Sam succeeds in making his way to the McTriggers, where he gives the alarm.

Jim follows the raiders with their fair prisoner into the Sampson stronghold. They do not know that they have been followed and there is no guard at the cabin of Chuck Sampson when Jim makes his way to a window for the purpose of spying upon the occupants. He finds Hope defending herself against the advances of Chuck.

Jim bursts into the cabin and in a hand-to-hand fight avenges the abduction of his sweetheart by the death of the villain, who kidnapped her. The other members of the Sampson clan come to the rescue of their leader, but Jim barricades the door and engages in a desperate defense.

In the meantime the McTrigger clan has taken up the trail and arrive in force just in time to rescue Jim and his sweetheart Hope. Hope acknowledges that Jim is her ideal lover and hero.

CACTUS JIM'S SHOP GIRL (Jan. 19).—Cactus Jim is tired of being a bachelor. He advertises in a newspaper for a wife and in response receives a telegram from Nell Morton, a shopgirl in the city, who bids him come at once, as she is willing to comply with the requirements of the advertisement. Jim shows this telegram to his fellow cowpunchers and excites their jealousy.

When Jim appears in the store before Nell, all dolled up in his holiday attire, his appearance does not strike her favorably and she decides not to go further in the compact. While urging her to reconsider the matter, an angry customer intrudes and declares that Nell has short-changed her. She is fired.

Cactus Jim considers this rank injustice and he privately tells the floorwalker so, giving him the money to make up the shortage in Nell's wages.

But Cactus Jim desires to avoid the laughter of his brother cowpunchers; so he buys a dummy figure, takes it home and pretends that it is his bride. However, the boys discover his ruse, but as Nell has a change of heart, she accepts Jim and makes him happy.

BETWEEN MATINEE AND NIGHT (Jan. 20).—Richard Stanhope, an actor, visits the criminal courts in search of "types." One day he witnesses the sentencing of Harry Edwards to five years imprisonment for embezzlement. While being led away, Edwards denounces Ethel Stephens, an unscrupulous adventuress, whom he charges is the cause of his downfall. He threatens her with violence upon his liberation. This scene impresses Stanhope.

Five years later Stanhope has become a star at the head of his own company. Tom Daly, a boyhood friend, comes to the city from Wyoming where he owns a cattle ranch. Daly falls into the net of crooks, among whom is Ethel Stephens, who infatuates him and makes him her slave. Stanhope recognizes Ethel and recalls the incidents in the court room when she was denounced by Edwards. Wishing to break off this evil connection between his friend Daly and the adventuress, he cleverly disguises himself as the convict Edwards; whereupon he exacts a confession from the girl and thereby disillusions Daly.

It so happens that Edwards has been released from prison on the same day. He has obtained Ethel's address and as Stanhope and Daly leave her house, Edwards enters prepared for vengeance. They tell him the story and he forgets his revenge to enter upon a new life on a western ranch with Daly.

WHO WANTS TO BE A HERO (Jan. 22).—Count De Swigg is informed by his valet of the arrival of a messenger who proves to be the emissary from General I. Shootem, Commander of the Umgulla army. The messenger brings a military order directing Count De Swigg to report for duty immediately. The messenger also brings the Umgulla uniform, which the Count is supposed to put on.

Immediately after the departure of the first messenger comes another from the Bamboozlum General, I. Sliceum, requiring the Count to report for duty at once to him.

The story deals with the efforts of the Count to report to both Generals, who are engaged in

Mr. EXHIBITOR:

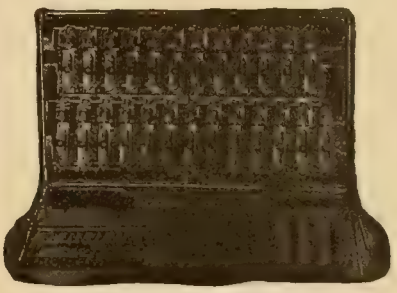
Attract the Crowd

To Your

Lobby

With a

Deagan Unaphone



More exciting than a

Circus Calliope

Write for Particulars

J. C. DEAGAN,

Deagan Building,

1776 Berteau Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

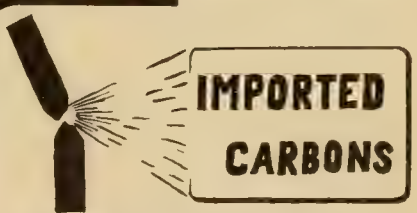
PRINTING and DEVELOPING

FILM TITLES

Give us a trial. All work guaranteed
Prompt service. Prices right
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.

STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.

Phone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago



I still have some Electra and a few Bio Carbons in my Pittsburgh stock.
Let me know how many and what sizes you require, and I will make you a low price.
You can save 35% of your carbon expense if you use a pair of Hommel's Carbon Savers. They do not heat up your lamp mechanism, are simple to use and save their cost, $2.00 a pair, many times over. It will pay you to order a pair of Hommel Carbon Savers to-day.

LUDWIG HOMMEL & CO.

Complete Theatre Equipments

422 First Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

T. S. M. QUALITY

Brass Lobby Display Frames

EXPENSIVE? NO, INDEED!

You would be surprised at the really high grade goods and original designs that we produce at moderate prices. A well dressed lobby will get the best possible returns for any money that you spend on your theatre. May we suggest to you the best styles that can be made to fit your house?
QUALITY is our motto.
A postal card from you will bring our quotation, for the new or remodeled house.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.

318 LONG AVENUE, CLEVELAND, OHIO

a battle, and save himself from the consequence of his enforced versatility. As a final result, the Count is ordered to fight a duel with himself.

THE PRIMITIVE WAY (Jan. 23).—Mildred Manning is the spoiled daughter of wealthy parents. She has a host of admirers, but does not permit them to become serious. Jimmie Blake, who frequents the household more than anybody else, is a rattle-brained young chap who fancies that he is in love with Mildred and insists that he wants her to marry him. Mildred jokes him and refuses to take him seriously.

Among Jimmie's friend is Billie Vaughan, son of a railroad president and actively engaged in railroad construction work. He is a sturdy, virile chap and falls in love with a photograph of Mildred, which he sees in Jimmie's apartments.

Billie takes a vacation, and while in his hunting camp at the seashore meets Mildred and her aunt when a storm blows them to his hospitable shore. Jimmie has told Billie scornfully that the fair Mildred has primitive instincts, and will marry no one but a fighting man. Billie adopts the cue thus given, and treats Mildred with a gruffness and in a way calculated to win her admiration. His campaign is successful and he succeeds in carrying off his fair prize after a spirited contest.

MINA.

DAREDEVIL HARRY (Jan. 21).—Daredevil Harry is in love with Flossie, the pride of the ranch, but affairs do not progress very rapidly owing to the objections of Flossie's father, Mr. Dynamite, who rushes Flossie off to a boarding school, notwithstanding the remonstrances of the very sanctimonious looking minister, who turns out to be a fighting parson, when Mr. Dynamite cannot see reason. However, "love will find a way." Flossie sends Harry a note telling him of her departure, and he mounts his faithful pony and goes to her rescue.

In the meantime Cyclonic Pete has heard of the departure of the stage coach and with his two assistants plans a holdup. While looting the coach he is smitten with Flossie's charms, and lets his assistants have the mail bag and rides off with the girl. The men discover the bag is empty but find a note saying the money is in the driver's pocket, so they rush back for a second holdup.

Along comes Harry and when he discovers that Flossie is gone a long thrilling chase follows, which ends at the edge of a cliff where the men engage in a hand to hand battle with knives, their bullets having been exhausted by the running fire that has been kept up during the chase. They both fall over the brink—Flossie throws a rope down to Harry, who climbs up, and the lovers, once more together, ride out to Harry's ranch. He is just about to leave for the minister, when Cyclone Pete falls through the roof—another fight, Pete is shot out of the window—Flossie and Harry stand looking aghast after him, when he walks in the door and here several trick stunts are done. The two bandits come up at this time to aid their chief, and Harry is tied to a post. Flossie escapes and runs for help. Pete lights the bomb and places it at Harry's feet and rushes off with his pals to await in the distance for the blowing up of the house and his hated rival, but Flossie and two officers arrive at the psychological moment—Harry is saved—the bomb is thrown out of the window and lands near the waiting trio, who are blown up in smoke, and thus the lovers are at last united.

BIOGRAPH.

THE GIRL HE BROUGHT HOME (Jan. 11).—Daughter of the gardener on his country place, she had no social accomplishments. The pretty ways which won his heart were frowned upon by his mother, sister and brother. The climax to their dislike was her behavior at the reception. Poor Beth merely felt uncomfortable in her tight slippers and took them off, but the family declared her "impossible." So she went back to dad. Jack found her in their favorite nook, ravishing in a gingham dress, and forthwith renounced his family.

THE THIRD ACT (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 12).—Roberts, the actor, neglects his wife and children. His brutal indifference results in the baby's death. Alone with the terror, Mrs. Roberts goes insane. Her little girl witnesses everything, and never forgets. Fifteen years later, Roberts is a successful producer of plays; after his wife's death he has lost track of his daughter, who is brought up by her aunt. The girl's whole idea is to avenge her mother's wrongs. Histrionic talent, inherited from her father, helps her to get into Roberts' company, and she makes an instantaneous success. At the end of the season Roberts goes abroad, leaving the playwright and the star to arrange the next production. A remarkable play is written around the incidents of that night fifteen years ago. Roberts sees it for the first time on the opening night, when, in the great third act, his past rises up to denounce him.

GETTING INTO A SCRAPE (Jan. 14).—Invited to the embalmer's ball, wifey sends hubby for a shave. He enters a shop where lady barbers operate, and trouble starts. Weary Willie is just ahead of him, having a shave, manicure and bawth. And just behind is hubby's enemy, who brings wifey on the scene to catch him holding hands with the pretty finger polisher. Then wifey plays barber on hubby with a dull razor and—let us draw a veil.

NEAR-EDUCATIONAL, THE CHEESE INDUSTRY (Jan. 14).—Here we see one of the wonders of modern science. The entire process of cheese-making is unfolded, and we are introduced to all who take part in this interesting art, from the complacent cow to the consumer. Of course, accidents will happen, and when you consider the slippery floors, etc.—or it may be something in the atmosphere of a cheese factory that makes visitors behave in such a scandalous fashion.

THE INEVITABLE RETRIBUTION (Jan. 15).—With the mortgage coming due, and other pressing needs, the young farmer is desperate when the peddler comes to his house. The man is unknown in those parts, nobody is aware of his visit, and he has money. In a moment the deed is done, the evidence hidden. But the man has friends who search for him, and evidence does exist—enough to hang the guilty man, were it not for the strange chance that kept him from being a murderer.

THE HOUSE OF HORROR (Jan. 16).—Clark's visit to the money-lender was ill-timed. Drink had made him ugly, and he threatened the man. Then he lapsed into unconsciousness. When he awoke the next morning in a strange room and, wandering through the money-lender's house, came upon the man dead, with a great gash in his skull, terror seized him. Fleeing from the police, who find his bloodstained stick beside the body, he reaches an old house and overhears the real murderers quarreling over the spoils. They discover him, and a fight ensues. When the police arrive he delivers the criminals to justice.

PATHE.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS, NO. 90, 1914 (Dec. 30).—Animated map of German retreat.
British charge on German outpost.
Terrible cold kills warring soldiers.
Rich newsboys shout "extra" in Detroit.
Bronx road run won by Kolehmainen.
South Africa sends troops to war.
New York's poor suffers from cold.
U. S. Troops guard American border.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

The character of your show is reflected by the elegance of your display. Our modern, compact Brass Poster Frames lend a polish of refinement to your lobby. An investment that will greatly increase your receipts by adding select patrons who otherwise would keep distant.

Get our New 1914 Catalog.

The Newman Mfg. Co.
CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.
Established since 1882.

A NEW WAY TO PAINT SIGNS
We guarantee that anyone can paint signs, cards, etc., without experience with our outfits, which contain ten alphabets of letters, three sets of figures, one to ten inches in height, brushes, colors, book of instructions and a selection of beautiful designs. Not printed letters, but the real letter cut out of durable material. Complete outfit, prepaid $5.00. Send in your order at once. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. BUTTS ADVERTISING AGENCY, 15 West 10th Street, Kansas City, Mo.

GOOD Two Plano Fig. 1
BETTER One Meniscus One Plano Fig. 2
BEST One Meniscus One Bi-Convex Fig. 3

There's a Reason WHY—
Our Wonderful
Meniscus Bi-Convex Condensers
Appeal to particular people and expert operators.

Our perfect white imported MENISCUS-BI-CONVEX CONDENSING lenses are today being exclusively used in America's best operating rooms. Men who have had years of experience in perfect projection and moving picture operating come right out and ask us to use their names as high endorsers of the MENISCUS-BI-CONVEX CONDENSER COMBINATIONS that others who are striving for perfect results might be benefited. There is scarcely an issue of this paper that Mr. Richardson does not quote satisfactory results from some particular operator. Remember, we are particular and exclusive jobbers in MENISCUS-BI-CONVEX CONDENSERS. If you need our expert advice on perfect projection it will be cheerfully given. In ordering condensers give distance from machine to curtain, electric current and machine used. Price of Condensers $4.00 per pair (include 20 cts. additional for parcel post).

Laemmle Film Service, Minneapolis, U. S. A.

Don't overlook our wonderful BRIGHTASDAY EMULSION for improved daylight pictures. $7.50 PER SET OF CANS

OHIO, IND., KY. APEX FEATURE SERVICE
Booking Apex, De Luxe, and Strand—The Popular Features. 416 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio. 224 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

NESTOR.

WHEN CUPID CAUGHT A THIEF (Jan. 19).—Miss Hobbs is the possessor of a valuable necklace and the great Kickamoor ruby valued at thousands. Old Sleuth gets a tip from a reformed crook that Second Story Jerry and his gang are going to attempt to steal the jewels at a reception to be held in the Hobbs home. Eddie, the reporter, is sent to secure an interview with Miss Hobbs, but he does not succeed in doing so until the night of the reception, when he slips into the house along with the other guests.

Jerry and his gang are on hand. While Eddie is interviewing Miss Hobbs Jerry slips the necklace from around her neck. The necklace is missed. Eddie is searched but is found not guilty. The necklace is, both by mistake and purpose, transferred from one person to another until complications arise. Second Story Jerry and his assistant, however, are finally captured by the daring young reporter, who returns the stolen jewels into the hands of Miss Hobbs' father.

AND THE DEACON SWORE (Jan. 22).—Alice receives an invitation from her grandfather, who is the minister of a small country church, to pay him a visit, which invitation she accepts. Mandy is loved by Jed, but her affections are with the deacon. The deacon holds a mortgage on the village church and presses the old minister for his money. Alice arrives at the minister's house and the deacon, catching sight of her, falls in love. The old minister plans a barn dance and basket social to raise funds to pay off the mortgage.

The night of the social Alice arrives accompanied by Jack, the leader of the church choir. The minister announces the auctioning off of the lunch baskets furnished by the girls. The man buying any of the girl's basket must eat lunch with her. The deacon resolves to purchase the basket belonging to Alice. Alice tells Jack she will tie her hair ribbon to her basket. The deacon overhears their plan. He confides his intentions to Alice, but is overheard by Mandy. She changes Alice's hair ribbon from Alice's basket to her own. Jack and Alice plan to take their basket away and eat together, while the bids are being called for. The deacon bids $100 for the basket with the hair ribbon on it and finds that he has drawn Mandy. He buys another and is stung. Thoroughly disgusted, he buys the whole lot of baskets, only to find that he has been fooled. He presents his mortgage to the minister and is paid off with the very money he has paid the auctioneer for the baskets.

JOKER.

THE HICKTOWN RIVALS (Jan. 18).—Cud McGiven and Kid Connot are rivals in Hicktown for the hand of Maggie Ryan. Papa and Mamma Ryan are proud of Maggie and are pleased to see her have so much company.

Cud is the favored one and is accepted by Maggie. The date for the wedding arrives. Kid, the disappointed suitor, plans revenge, and hiring two thugs he has them wait outside the house in an auto. When the pair is ready to leave the house to go to church, they start a row and when Cud comes out to stop it they set upon him. A free for all fight follows and in the excitement the thugs make a getaway in the auto with Maggie. The guests with Cud follow but lose the kidnappers. Kid suggests to Maggie that she marry him. She agrees and they hurry away to the church and are married.

BISON.

RIDGEWAY OF MONTANA (Two Parts—Jan. 23).—The story deals with the battle waged between two financiers, Waring Ridgeway and Simon Harley, who own adjoining mining properties. Ridgeway has the better of the fight when Harley with his young wife leaves secretly for Mesa, Montana. Enroute to the town, Harley and his wife become snow bound, and Harley, leaving his wife in the auto, goes for assistance. A blizzard sweeps the mountains, and the young wife falls a victim, Harley having lost his way.

Ridgeway, enroute to his mine, comes across Mrs. Harley, places her on his horse, takes her to a deserted cabin, where he nurses her back to consciousness. The two young people remain three days in the cabin, in which interval Ridgeway loses his heart to Aline Harley. Sam Yessler, of the State Legislature, rescues Harley. At the end of the third day Yessler relief party come upon Ridgeway and Aline. The latter presents her rescuer to her husband, and the party start for the Yessler ranch.

Later, Harley offers to place Ridgeway at the head of a copper combine. Ridgeway, however, refuses the offer, and declares that it must be war to death between them. Harley retires, determined to crush the young mining operator. Lyndon Hobart, Harley's manager, is ordered to engineer the dynamiting of one of Ridgeway's mines. He obeys Harley, but is discharged. Harley then takes the initiative; the mine is dynamited, and one of Ridgeway's workmen is killed. Steve Elton is bribed by Harley and sells Ridgeway out.

Hobart is in love with Virginia Balfour, an ambitious young woman, who is engaged to Ridgeway. Secretely, Virginia is in love with Hobart, but is attracted by the wealth of Ridgeway.

Sam Yessler, Ridgeway's friend, refuses to aid the latter in an attempt to elect himself a senator. Balked in his effort, Ridgeway sees the leaders of the labor union, plays upon their sympathy, and induces them to have Harley arrested for the killing of the miner. The plan is successful, and Harley is brought to trial. Ridgeway succeeds in inducing Harley's foreman to turn state's evidence, but, despite this, a fixed jury brings in a verdict of "not guilty." The dead miner's widow, one of the court spectators, then shoots the aged millionaire, killing him as he sits in the witness chair. Thus Ridgeway triumphs.

A year lapses. Virginia, seeing the love between Ridgeway and Aline, releases Ridgeway from his engagement and accepts the proposal of Hobart. Sam Yessler, in search of an honest man, proposes the name of Hobart for senator, carries his point, and Hobart is elected. Aline turns over to Ridgeway her enormous copper interests, which move makes Ridgeway a power in the mining world. Later, Ridgeway marries Harley's widow.

VICTOR.

FATHERS THREE (Two Parts—Jan. 18).—The three bachelors live together in loneliness. Each night they return to their rooms and exchange solitary greetings. One evening one of their number reads in the newspaper of a poor woman who is unable to support her little daughter and wishes to have some one adopt her.

The bachelors visit the poverty-stricken woman and come to an agreement with her to educate her daughter and to provide for her maintenance in the best fashion. The child, Rosemary, grows up to be a handsome young woman with every advantage of environment and surrounding. The bachelors lavish money on her and give her everything she happens to mention.

The bachelors' housekeeper dies and the girl mourns her loss greatly. The bachelors fear that the girl takes her loss too much to heart and come to the conclusion that what she really needs to make her happy is a husband. All three decide to propose to her, hoping that she will chose one of their number.

Rosemary is much amused by the three proposals but tells each one of her suitors that she loves, but not any more than she does the others. She promises, however, that the one who will bring her the most appropriate gift on her eighteenth birthday will stand highest in her affections.

Acting upon her hint the three bachelors scour the town seeking appropriate presents. Robert decides that a beautiful imported gown which he sees at a fashion show would be the most acceptable gift of all and has the package sent home to Rosemary. Henry steps into a jewelers and buys Rosemary an elaborate diamond necklace.

Vincent, however, comes to the conclusion that Rosemary does not seek a gift of only material value and when he overhears her making an inquiry about her mother, whom she does not remember, Vincent decides to find the old lady and to bring her to live with her now grown-up daughter.

Accordingly he follows several clues and at last learns where Rosemary's mother is living. He finds the old lady in a squalid tenement but with everything about her neat and clean. Telling her that he is about to give back her child, Vincent induces her to visit a fashionable dressmaker and secures an apartment for her in a much better neighborhood.

On Rosemary's birthday Robert opens up the boy containing the expensive imported gown. Rosemary is enraptured with it and kisses the fotrunate Robert enthusiastically. Then Henry presents her with a diamond necklace and Rosemary again demonstrates her affection and gratitude upon the donor. All then look expectantly at Vincent to see what he has to give.

Vincent leads a kindly-faced wrinkled up old lady into the room, and, when she has removed her vail, presents her to her daughter. An affecting meeting between mother and daughter follows and the other two bachelors, Robert and Henry, take Vincent aside and congratulate him upon his happy choice of a gift. All then gaily make merry to celebrate the engagement between Vincent and Rosemary and the return of Rosemary's mother to become the housekeeper for the two disappointed bachelors.

ECLAIR.

THE LONE GAME (Two Parts—Jan 20).—A series of daring robberies and hold-ups occur in Cuga, Arizona. They seem to be the work of one lone bandit who has terrorized the neighborhood. Sid Burton, a Chicago detective, is sent to the far west to help the local sheriff capture the bandit.

Upon his arrival in the west the detective is met by the sheriff, who takes him to his home. There he meets Edna, the daughter of the sheriff. Mutual affection springs up between the pair at first sight.

Not long after the detective's arrival the express company is robbed again by the lone bandit. The detective finds the empty strong box which has been stolen from the express office and evolves a plan which, with the aid of the express agent, he carries out immediately.

That day the sheriff is notified that the box stolen from the express company had a false bottom in it and that there were several bills of large denomination which undoubtedly escaped the robber's notice, and that the express company would give a handsome reward for the recovery of the box. The plan works only too well.

That night the detective, lying in wait for the bandit, surprises him, but he receives a greater surprise and shock himself, for the lone robber is none other than the sheriff and the father of the girl he loved.

In endeavoring to make his escape the sheriff falls from his horse and is mortally injured. Before dying he reveals to his future son-in-law the hiding place of the money and jewels he has stolen, and tells him to make reparation as far as possible. The sheriff explains that the lone game he played was for his daughter's sake.

The detective returns to the express company the old box of money. The detective decides to remain in the west and receives the appointment of sheriff as successor to the unfortunate man who played the lone game and lost.

THE CLUE OF THE PORTRAIT (Jan. 24).—Dorothy and her little sister, the daughter of a ranch owner, are enjoying a little vacation up on the mountains. William Vernon, who is a rich cattle dealer from Chicago, is out west buying cattle.

Dorothy warns her little sister not to go near the edge of the rock. The child disobeys with the result that she falls. Dorothy screams and rushes to the edge of the rock. Vernon hears the scream and sees the child lying on the ground apparently badly hurt. He picks her up, finds that she is more frightened than injured, and returns with her to her sister.

An acquaintance is struck up which ripens into love. He is called back to Chicago and by some adroit business deals, so corners the market that he ruins the smaller ranch owners, among them being Dorothy's father. The shock so affects Dorothy's father that he dies of a broken heart, leaving the two orphan girls alone in the world.

They are forced to go to the city to make a living. Dorothy tries to sell some of her sketches but with little sucess. One old dealer in paintings tells Dorothy that if she will make a picture of the baby, it will stand a good chance of being sold.

Meanwhile, William Vernon, now that he has amassed a fortune, intends going back to his mountain sweetheart. He finds the ranch deserted. Neighbors tell him of the death of the owner and of the children's going to the city.

Dorothy paints a picture of her little sister; it is placed in the window of the art store. After a long search for his sweetheart, Vernon one day comes across the picture and he recognizes her, and through it finds his sweetheart again.

IMP.

THE HOUSE OF FEAR (Three Parts—Jan. 22).—Margaret Irwin is in mourning for her father, John Irwin, who has recently died, leaving her a fortune of half a million dollars. Ralph Irwin, her cousin, is appointed Margaret's sole guardian. She cannot marry without his consent, and in the event of her death the money will revert to Ralph Irwin.

At the reading of the will Margaret faints and the family doctor, who is summoned declares that if she is subjected to any sudden shock she may die of heart failure. Margaret's uncle and her guardian, Ralph, look at each other significantly when the doctor makes his pronouncement, for both have been disappointed that they have not received a larger slice of John Irwin's fortune. The young lawyer, Ho-

(Continued on page 428.)

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending January 16 and 23

MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Girl He Brought Home (Drama).
EDISON—A Superfluous Baby (Comedy).
ESSANAY—Sweedie's Suicide (Comedy).
KALEM—The Adventure at Briarcliff (Special—Two parts—Comedy).
LUBIN—Patsy Bolivar Series No. 3, "Patsy at College" (Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 3, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Old Code (Special—Two parts—Drama).
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 91 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Fates of Flora Fourflush Part 2, "The Treasurer Temple of Bhosh" (Comedy).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Third Act (Special—Two parts—Drama).
EDISON—Olive's Other Self (Eighth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
ESSANAY—By a Strange Road (Drama).
KALEM—A Bold, Bad Burglar (Comedy).
LUBIN—Baseball and Trouble (Comedy).
SELIG—Harold's Bad Man (Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—A Mix-Up In Dress Suit Cases (Special—Two parts—Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1915.

EDISON—Curing the Cook (Comedy).
—McGinty and the Count (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Fellow Who Had a Friend Who Knew a Girl Who Had a Friend" (George Ade—Comedy).
KALEM—The Stolen Ruby (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—When Honor Wakes (Special—Two parts—Drama).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 4, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Richest Girl in the World (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Hair of Her Head (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Getting Into a Scrape (Comedy).
—Near-Educational Series, The Cheese Industry (Comedy).
ESSANAY—When Slippery Slim Went for the Eggs (Western Comedy).
LUBIN—The Friendship of Lamond (Special—Two parts—Drama).
MINA—Distilled Spirits (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 92 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Legend of the Lone Tree (Drama).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Inevitable Retribution (Drama).
EDISON—Lena (Special—Two parts—Comedy).
ESSANAY—Dear Old Girl (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—A Boob for Luck (Comedy).
LUBIN—Out of the Storm (Drama).
SELIG—The Snailburg Volunteers (Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—Chiefly Concerning Males (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The House Horror (Drama).
EDISON—The Banker's Double (Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Sisters (Reg. in the U. S. Patent Office—Western Drama).
KALEM—The Broken Circuit (Tenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Drama).
LUBIN—Mr. Stubb's Pen (Comedy).
—Spaghetti and Lottery (Comedy).
SELIG—Robert Thorne Forecloses (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Sage-Bush Gal (Broadway Star Features—Special—three parts—Western Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Undying Fire (Drama).
EDISON—To Make the Nation Prosper (Drama).
ESSANAY—Sweedie and Her Dog (Comedy).
KALEM—The Leech (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Patsy Bolivar Series, No. 4, "Patsy's Vacation" (Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 5, 1915 (News).
SELIG—His Fighting Blood (Special—Two parts—Drama).
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 5 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Fates of Flora Fourflush, "A Race for Life," Part Three of the "Ten Billion Dollar Vitagraph Mystery" Serial (Comedy).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Lady of Dreams (Special—Two parts—Drama).
EDISON—Olive's Manufactured Mother (Ninth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series (Drama).
ESSANAY—The Misjudged Mr. Hartley (Comedy—Drama).
KALEM—Cornelius and the Wild Man (Comedy).
—A Night in New Jersey (Cartoon—Comedy).
LUBIN—Gus and the Anarchists (Comedy).
—Cupid's Target (Comedy).
SELIG—Cactus Jim's Shop Girl (Western—Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Evil Men Do (Broadway Star Feature—Three parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1915.

EDISON—The Wonders of Magnetism (Educational).
—A Weighty Matter for a Detective (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "Hifaluting Tillie and Her Plain Parents" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Cabaret Singer (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Her Weakling Brothers (Special—Two parts—Dr.).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 6, 1915 (News).
SELIG—Between Matinee and Night (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Right Girl (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Gang's New Member (Drama).
ESSANAY—Sentimental Sophie (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—The Shanghaied Baby (Special—Three parts—Dr.).
MINA—Dare-Devil Harry (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 6 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Navajo Ring (Drama).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Heart's Hunger (Drama).
EDISON—Tracked by the Hounds (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—The Lieutenant Governor (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—Cooky's Adventure (Comedy).
LUBIN—A Question of Conscience (Drama).
SELIG—Who Wants to Be a Hero? (Farce-Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—Wanted, a Nurse (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—His Night Out (Comedy).
—In the Boarding House (Comedy).
EDISON—Mr. Daly's Wedding Day (Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Baby (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Fast Mail's Danger (Eleventh of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Drama).
LUBIN—Shoddy, the Tailor (Comedy).
SELIG—The Primitive Way (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—War (Special—Two parts—Comedy).

TO INTRODUCE our high grade slides to exhibitors, we quote a price of $1.00 for six of any of the following slides: "A Slight Interruption"—"Next Picture in a Moment"—"A Special Program for Tomorrow. Don't Miss It."—"Welcome"—"Special Western Feature"—"Intermission"—"Next Time You Come Bring Your Whole Family"—"All Children Occupying Seats Must Have Tickets"—"We Select the Best Pictures Obtainable for Our Program"—"Glad Tew Hev Ye Stay 'Till Ye Hev Seen the Hull Show"—"Advertising on This Screen Brings Results. See the Manager for Rates." Kindly enclose money orders with all orders.

AMERICAN SLIDE AND POSTER COMPANY, FIRST NATIONAL BANK BUILDING, CHICAGO.

Have you noticed how the exhibitors have taken to the Two Reel Biograph?

The demand for this regular Tuesday release is greater now than ever before.

If your weekly service does not include the Two Reel Biograph, you are overlooking the best stories that have ever been produced in two reels.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
807 EAST 175TH STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending January 16 and 23.

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 10, 1915.

ECLAIR—The Dummy Husband (Comedy—Drama).
L-K O—Through a Knot Hole (Comedy).
REX—Star of the Sea (Two parts—Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1915.

IMP—No Release This Week.
JOKER—The Butler's Baby (Comedy).
VICTOR—My Lady High and Mighty (Two parts—Comedy—Drama).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1915.

BIG "U"—The Useless One (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—A Woman's Debt (Two parts—Drama).
NESTOR—A Maid by Proxy (Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 149 (News).
ECLAIR—Reunited (Two parts—Domestic—Drama).
L-K O—Thou Shalt Not Flirt (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1915.

BIG "U"—The Hearts of the Brady's (Western—Drama).
REX—Pawns of Fate (Two parts—Drama).
STERLING—Those German Bowlers (Comedy).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1915.

IMP—A Gentleman of Art (Two parts—Detective Smuggling—Drama).
NESTOR—When the Mummy Cried for Help (Comedy).
VICTOR—Father's Strategy (Comedy—Drama).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1915.

BISON—The Governor Maker (Two parts—Modern—Drama).
JOKER—Hubby's Cure (Comedy).
—Quaint Brittany (Educational).
POWERS—An Outlaw's Honor (Western—Drama).
—Scotch Dancing (Educational).

SUNDAY, JANUARY 17, 1915.

ECLAIR—Romance in Bear Creek (Western—Drama).
L-KO—Caught with the Goods (Comedy).
REX—A Small Town Girl (Two parts—Human—Interest—Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

IMP—On Dangerous Ground (Comedy—Drama).
JOKER—The Hicktown Rivals (Comedy).
VICTOR—Father's Three (Two parts—Comedy—Drama).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1915.

BIG "U"—The Dear Old Hypocrite (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—Smugglers' Island (Two parts—Sea Coast—Drama).
NESTOR—When Cupid Caught a Thief (Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 150 (News).
ECLAIR—The Lone Game (Two parts—Western—Drama).
L-KO—Every Inch a Hero (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1915.

BIG "U"—Their Island of Happiness (Two parts—Drama).
REX—Six Months to Live (Drama).
STERLING—Dude Raffles (Comedy).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915.

IMP—The House of Fear (Three parts—Melodrama).
NESTOR—When the Deacon Swore (Comedy).
VICTOR—No Release This Week.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1915.

BISON—Old Peg-Leg's Will (Two parts—Mining—Drama).
JOKER—Fools and Pajamas (Comedy).
POWERS—Uncle Sam's Phenomenal Achievement (Educa.).

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JANUARY 10, 1915.

KOMIC—Love and Business (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—Three Brothers (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—An Inside Tip (Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1915.

AMERICAN—Restitution (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Reported).
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl No. 52 (Topical).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1915.

BEAUTY—The Spirit of Giving (Drama).
MAJESTIC—Probation (Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Speed King (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Black Ghost Bandit (Western Drama).
BRONCHO—Mother Hulda (Two parts—Romantic Fairy Tale—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Terror of the Mountains (Western Dr.).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1915.

DOMINO—In the Land of the Otter (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—Mabel's Vacation (Comedy).
MUTUAL—Weekly No. 2 (News).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Clubman's Wager (Drama).
—Producing a Nation's Pride (Educational).
KAY BEE—The Cross of Fire (Two parts—French Canadian—Drama).
PRINCESS—Pleasing Uncle (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1915.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Reported).
RELIANCE—One Flight Up (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—The Unwilling Bride (Comedy).

SUNDAY, JANUARY 17, 1915.

KOMIC—A Flyer in Spring Water (No. 15 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy).
MAJESTIC—What Might Have Been (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—A Yellowstone Honeymoon (Scenic—Dr).

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

AMERICAN—Refining Fires (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Announced).
RELIANCE—Mutual Monographs No. 1 "With Julian Street and Wallace Morgan" (Topical).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1915.

BEAUTY—A Girl and Two Boys (Drama).
MAJESTIC—On the Table Top (Drama).
THANHOUSER—Craft vs. Love (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Crucifixion of Al Brady (Western—Dr.).
BRONCHO—A Lucky Blowout (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Sea Brat (Drama).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1915.

DOMINO—The Still on Sunset Mountain (Two parts—Dr.).
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Announced).
MUTUAL—Weekly, No. 3 (News).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915.

KAY-BEE—Sergeant Jim's Horse (Drama).
KAY BEE—The Man Who Died (Drama).
PRINCESS—An Innocent Burglar (Drama).
RELIANCE—After Twenty Years (Drama).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1915.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Announced).
RELIANCE—The Craven (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—Her Hero (Comedy).

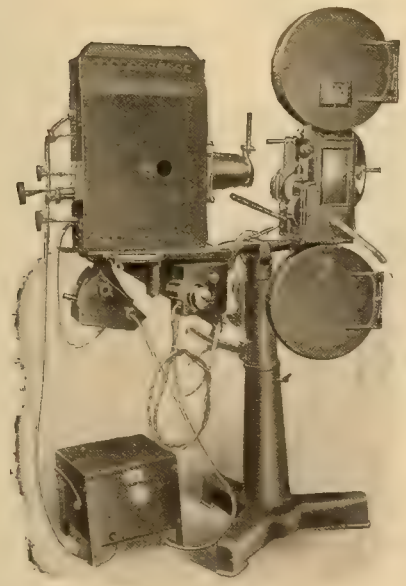
Simplex

DO YOU Stand in the LOBBY

MR. EXHIBITOR

and hear the expressions made by your patrons?

YOU can get unbiased opinions and valuable hints from what is said. Here is what one Exhibitor heard who is using



Simplex
TRADE MARK PAT'D

Projectors

"What steady pictures!"

"Did you notice how clear the pictures were!"

"This is the first time my eyes have not pained me after the show!"

"We must come again."

And these are some of the reasons why

SIMPLEX

Machines are daily replacing other makes. Write for Catalogue A.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

UNITED FILM SERVICE

PREMIER DRAMAS

RELEASING WEEKLY THROUGH THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

FEATURING THE WELL-KNOWN DRAMATIC STARS

Edythe Sterling, Fredk. Church and Jos. J. Franz

Under the Direction of WILLIS P. BARDS

PRODUCED BY

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

St. Louis, Mo.

STUDIO, SANTA PAULA, CALIFORNIA

MEMBERS OF

UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS INC.

REGENT FILMS

ONE A WEEK

ON THE

UNITED PROGRAMME

OUR FIRST TWO-REELER

The House on E Street

A magnetic photoplay filled with thrilling situations, love, ardor and heart interest.

PRODUCED BY

RAMO FILMS, Inc.

C. LANG COBB, Jr., Manager

Columbia Theatre Building New York

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

FEATURES IDEAL

INCORPORATED

PRESENT

HIGH-CLASS

DRAMAS

THROUGH THE 43 EXCHANGES OF THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Released:

Nov. 15, 1914—THE LAST CHORD ..... 3 Parts
Nov. 20, 1914—THE NIHILIST'S DAUGHTER ..... 2 Parts
Nov. 23, 1914—ZANDORI'S SECRET ..... 3 Parts
Nov. 30, 1914—THE WOLF'S PREY ..... 3 Parts
Dec. 7, 1914—LITTLE MISS NUISANCE ..... 2 Parts
Dec. 16, 1914—HER DUPLICATE HUSBAND ..... 3 Parts
Dec. 22, 1914—THE LASH OF FATE ..... 2 Parts
Jan. 5, 1915—THE HONOR OF BILL JACKSON ..... 2 Parts

Coming:

Jan. 12, 1915—THE EYES OF JUSTICE ..... 2 Parts

NOTICE—to the public: We are now producing "MADE IN AMERICA" films.

FEATURES IDEAL, Inc.

126 West 46th Street, New York

MEMBERS OF

UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS INC.

EMPRESS FILMS

Featuring

MARIAN SWAYNE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Produced in U.S.A.

by

Gaumont Company

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

SUPERBA

COMEDIES EXTRAORDINARY

RELEASING WEEKLY
THROUGH THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Demand these Comedies from your
Nearest United Exchange

COMING—A BIG SURPRISE—WATCH US

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.

430 Claremont Parkway
Bronx, N. Y. City

JOS. A. GOLDEN
President and Treasurer

BEN GOETZ
General Manager

UNITED FILM SERVICE

MEMBERS OF
UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS
INC.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

GRANDIN FILMS

Go to your nearest United Film Service Office and DEMAND GRANDIN FILMS. Do it for your bank account's sake.

Every Grandin subject is a feature whether it be in one, two or three reels. Sit on your exchange manager's neck and make him get "The Adopted Daughter," a real house jammer in three reels. Beseech him to give you "Cupid Kicks a Goal," a crackerjack one reeler, and "The Burglar and the Mouse," another one reel dollar getter for exhibitors. Then watch and wait for "His Doll Wife" and a ripping two reeler called "The Verdict."

Demand, Coax, Howl, Pray or Cuss for Grandin Films,
BUT GET THEM.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION

ARTHUR N. SMALLWOOD, President and General Manager

175 Fifth Avenue, New York

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

LUNA FILMS

TWO COMEDIES WEEKLY

FEATURING

Miss DOT FARLEY

Farce Comedy Production by ARCHER McMACKIN RELEASING THROUGH
THE 43 EXCHANGES OF THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

THE ALBUQUERQUE FILM CO.

Direction of
GILBERT P. HAMILTON, President and General Manager

Office and Studio, 406 Court St., Los Angeles, Cal.

MEMBERS OF
UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS INC.

STARLIGHT

FARCE COMEDIES
BEING RELEASED
WEEKLY THROUGH THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

COMING HEN PECKED SMITH
THE MIX-UP
WITH DALLAS WELFORD

In Preparation

TWO-REEL SOCIETY DRAMAS

MITTENTHAL FILM CO.

Studio: Yonkers, N. Y. Office: 110 West 40th Street, New York City

UNITED FILM SERVICE

(Continued from page 417.)

bart Henderson, sees the significant exchange of glances between father and son, and is not able to forget the circumstances which recurs to trouble him at the most unexpected time thereafter. In parting the young lawyer tells Margaret that if at any time she should ever need him to call upon him at the address he gives her.

Irwin takes Margaret to his own home to live. His house is known in the neighborhood as "The House of Fear," and in it lives a weird creature known as Nick. Nick is half-witted and is dumb. He looks half beast and half man. Those in the neighborhood are afraid to go near the house, as strange stories are told of the happenings therein.

From the first Margaret is fearful of Nick. Irwin and his father notice this and accordingly they start to work on the girl's fear. Nick takes much delight in creeping about the house, frightening Margaret, and darts about upon her at the most unexpected moments. Margaret tells her uncle that she is afraid of the half-witted monster. Her uncle gives her a revolver, telling her that if she has occasion to use it to do so.

That night as she sleeps the half-man creeps into her room. His heavy breathing awakens the girl and when she sees the hideous, grinning figure at the foot of her bed she cries out. When the distorted face continues to leer at her Margaret draws the revolver from beneath the pillow and fires at him. Nick drops on the floor, apparently dead. Ralph and his uncle examine Nick's body and tell Margaret that he is dead. She swoons and they carry Nick away. Margaret believes herself a murderess and the thought preys upon her mind.

Oppressed with the feeling that all is not well with Margaret, Hobart decides to visit her. Margaret rushes to him with a glad cry. Ralph and his uncle demand a reason for Hobart's visit and the young lawyer explains that he has to have Margaret's signature to a legal document. Hobart then boards a train, but leaves at the other end of the car and returns to watch "The House of Fear."

Again Nick creeps into Margaret's room, and the overwrought girl thinks that she sees the ghost of the man she has murdered. Hobart outside the house hears Margaret's terrible scream and with a platoon of police raids the house. Nothing upon which a charge could be based is discovered by the police, but, acting upon Hobart's suggestion, they surround the house and await developments.

Hobart, through a window in the house, sees Ralph talking with Nick, who has a knife in his hand. He looks up and sees a light in Margaret's window. Climbing up the verandah pole, Hobart taps on Margaret's window and is admitted to her room. Margaret breaks down and tells him how she has killed Nick. Hobart is amazed and opens Margaret's revolver to discover that all the cartridges are blanks.

Margaret is much relieved to learn that Nick is not dead. Hobart then hides Margaret in another room and arranges Margaret's bed to make it appear that she is sleeping beneath the covers. A few moments later Nick creeps in and plunges his knife into what seems to be Margaret's sleeping figure. Hobart then closes with the half-witted monster and a desperate struggle follows.

Hobart endeavors to obtain possession of Nick's knife and in the fight both men fall from a balcony within the house. Nick's superhuman strength enables him to pinion Hobart to a table and he is about to plunge his knife into the young lawyer when Margaret comes out on the balcony with her revolver filled with real bullets and shoots the madman.

The police outside hear the shot and raid "The House of Fear." Ralph and his uncle are jailed. Nick, the half-man, dies of his injuries. In the end Hobart and Margaret are married and "The House of Fear" becomes but a memory.

L-KO.

EVERY INCH A HERO (Jan. 20).—He was skinny and awkward, this hero, and he dressed as only a farmer boy without clothes can dress, but she loved him. And then appeared the villain shadowed by two villainous hirelings. And the villain saw pretty Nell and determined to have her, but our hero, single handed, held him until re-enforced by the constable. Arriving home, Nell finds the villain with her mother. The mortgage must be paid, or out they go. Then, realizing that Nell is the daughter, he offers to take her in place of the money due, giving them five minutes to decide.

Then comes the hero. They tell him their trouble. Off he rushes and digs for his buried savings. Deeper gets the hole but fast passes the five minutes; they are up and she must pay the price to the villain; but just in time comes the hero with his savings and the villain is foiled.

The lovers go forth, but he leaves her for a moment to gather a flower, when again appears the villain, and kidnaps Nell. But our hero follows and just as she is lowered on a rope over the edge of a precipice he grabs the rope and pulls her up, but the villain knocks him senseless. Tying his feet to the rope they drag him to a tree, telling him that the weight that drags on him is the weight of his sweetheart, and when his arms clutching the tree give out, she will drop to the bottom of the precipice. But, as his strength goes, help comes.

Feeling the rope slack, our hero stands erect, resting his aching arms, but Nell slips back again and, as he is drapped along the ground, he clutches the long legs of the villain and drags him with him. The villain, however, has the upper hand and proceeds to pummel our hero, who is finally rescued. Torn and dirty, but every inch a hero, he finds joy in his sweetheart's arms.

THE DEATH OF SIMON LA GREE (Jan. 24).—The village beauty is satisfied with Fatty, her lover, until Uncle Tom's barn stormers hit the town. Then she meets Simon La Gree, who, to make an impression on the country lass, supplies her with passes to the show. Torn with jealousy, Fatty threatens to kill himself, but changes his mind and decides he, too, will take in the show.

The entire town turns out to the performance. To the little country lass, seated in the front seat, it is a wonderful thing when he comes before the curtain bowing, and tosses her a rose. Her lover is forgotten, but he makes his presence known by throwing a pie in the face of Simon Le Gree. Poor Fatty, believing that by becoming an actor he can win back the affections of the fair maiden, procures a copy of the play, and starts rehearsing.

At the Opera House the play is pushed forward by the Property Man and assistant props, running on through the thrilling escape of Liza over the ice, the pursuit by the bloodhounds,

MAKE YOUR OWN CURRENT WITH A
Brush Electric Lighting Set
Send for 125 page catalogue with very complete information about electrical matters
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
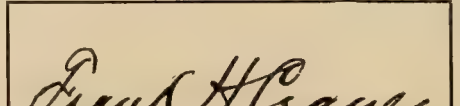
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED
Two Old Power's No. 5 or No. 6 Heads
Condition no object if price is right. State all in first letter.
W. C. McGUIRE
220 N. State St. Chicago, Ill.



DIRECTOR, PEERLESS CO.

WANTED
TWO-REEL DRAMA SCENARIOS
ONE-REEL COMEDY SCENARIOS
ALL COMEDY FILMS, Inc.
1600 Broadway
New York City

J-M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet. H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO., New York and Every Large City.

Franklin's Program
3 and 4-Reel Features
New Releases and Cold Copies open for your territory with a great line of advertising matter at reasonable rates. Selected single reel commercials with posters.
Sidney Franklin
FILM BROKER
145 West 45th St. New York City

OPTIC PROJECTION
S. H. Gage, B. S. and H. P. Gage, Ph. D.
Postpaid $3.00
A comprehensive book of 700 pages, with over 400 illustrations on all forms of projection apparatus. Write for circular giving table of contents, sample pages and illustrations.
THE COMSTOCK PUBLISHING COMPANY,
Roberts Place, Ithaca, New York

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST! BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Bldg., Chicago

Assisted by
GAIL KANE
Phenomenal Pianist-Organist directing correct scene interpolation, arranging, etc.

Mueller
INSTRUMENTALIST
Carrying a magnificent collection of Saxophones, Chimes, Unaphone, Solette, Xylophone, Ringola, Marimba, Bells, Drums, etc.; also Extensive Patent Electrical Equipment. Working doubly or with orchestra.
Originator and Producer of Elaborate Musical Novelties and Features. Expert Experience in the Highest Class Theatres and Organizations. Open to Class A Houses; to those desiring the essence of refinement and originality in Musical Entertaining, capable of pleasing the most exclusive or widely varied audiences.
Engagement open Jan. 10th. Address
LOUIS MUELLER
558 Fletcher Ave. Indianapolis, Ind.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 5 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc. 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

OZO-CARBI MOVING PICTURE LIGHT

SUBSTITUTE FOR ELECTRIC
CHEAPER AND BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM
OVER 500 IN USE
Moore-Hubbell & Co. 714 Masonic Temple CHICAGO

to the tragic death of Little Eva, whose ascent to Heaven is ruined by the property man's slipping on the rope that hauls her up and landing on the stage. This last blunder is too much for Simon La Gree. He rushes into the wings blaming the breaking up of the show on assistant props, who, feeling that he is wrongly accused, comes back with his fists. Drawing a revolver, Simon La Gree goes after assistant props.

At the sight of the revolver the audience, with the exception of the town sheriffs, who jump bravely onto the stage, beats a hasty and disorderly retreat. Finding the armed sheriffs at their heels, the entire troupe forget their quarrel, take a stand together against the town's sheriffs, and succeed in routing the town sheriffs—temporarily.

Hastening home, the beauty and her friends hear the ravings of Fatty endeavoring to become an actor. Believing him to be one of the troupe, they make a rush to drive him out of the house. Frightened, poor fatty tries to make a getaway through the window, but he falls into a hogshead, which, becoming over turned, starts rolling down the hill. The beauty and her friends start out at full speed after the hogshead.

The sheriffs, having cornered the Uncle Tom's Cabin troupe on the edge of a steep bank, see the hogshead and the crowd rushing toward them, and in their efforts to avoid a collision, all are thrown down the bank. The beauty and her friends are heaped on top of the troupe and the sheriffs, the hogshead landing beside them, the force of its fall and weight of Fatty breaking it to pieces.

The Property Man, by some miracle escaping the slide down the bank, looks over the still forms and, grasping a stave of the hogshead, endeavors to bury them as they lie.

REX.

SIX MONTHS TO LIVE (Jan. 21).—While suffering from an attack of heart trouble, Howard Ellsworth consults a physician and learns that he has but six months to live. How to live so as to get the most out of his allotted time is the question with him now. His thoughts take him back to a time when he acted as escort to his fiancee while on her errands of charity to some drug fiends.

Thinking only of satisfying his craving for pleasure, no matter how short lived, he believes cocaine will afford him the most during his last six months on earth. He begins its use. The drug grips him in quick order. He forsakes his friends, everybody that will not cater to his passion for pleasure and goes down, down, down in the scale of society, until the bottom is reached. Then he finds out that the doctor made a mistake and mixed his case with the diagnosis of another man. He goes to see the doctor, bent on murder, but finds the old fellow already a victim of one of his own experiments.

Then, the office boy to Ellsworth pulls his manuscript from his machine and rushes in to his employer with this story—the climax.

THE TEMPTATION OF EDWIN SWAYNE (Two Parts—Jan. 24).—Edward Swayne, well dressed and refined in manner, is a gambler. He still retains a wholesome respect for the finer things of life, however, and, despite his irregular relations with Dado Scholl, a beautiful adventuress, Swayne would like nothing better than to meet a clean, wholesome young woman and to settle down.

Swayne and Davidson, a wealthy young man-about-town, visit Grissel's gambling house. After an evening's sport at the roulette wheel they are about to leave when they meet Grissel's niece, who has just arrived from a small country town near the great city. The child, for she is little more than such, does not realize that her uncle intends to use her as a "come-on" in the gambling resort, as a magnet to attract the world-weary roues who visit the gaming tables.

The freshness and beauty of the girl make a deep impresion on both Swayne and Davidson. Swayne thereafter visits Grissel's even more frequently and neglects his old flame, Dado. When Dado sends him a note begging him not to neglect her, Swayne replies that he will not see her again as he intends to marry Frances, if she will have him. That night he proposes to Frances. She accepts him.

Swayne's valet delivers his master's note to Dado, who flies into a furious rage. The valet, who entertains a secret passion for Dado, is easily made a tool for the execution of Dado's revenge.

Meanwhile Frances and Swayne are married. Weeks later Swayne finds Davidson despondent, broke, down and out. His passion for gambling has ruined him. Swayne decides to take the boy home and set him on his feet again, since he was the means of starting Davidson on the downward path. Frances is delighted with the plan, as it seems to prove to her that her husband has definitely put his gambling career behind him.

Time goes on. Davidson and Frances, of an age, play about the pretty garden and the house like two school children, drifting (although they do not realize it at the time) into a regard for each other that is warmer than friendship. Absorbed in his love for her, Swayne does not notice the attachment of the young people and the two themselves are equally ignorant of the real nature of their own feelings for each other.

Meanwhile Swayne is playing in hard luck. Funds are running low and Swayne decides to take one more flyer at the "kitty." He plans to gamble just once more and then buy a partnership in a good firm and stop forever. He leaves a note for his wife telling her of his intentions. At the door he meets a messenger with a note from Dado, saying that she is dying and begging him to come. Swayne hurries out and drops the note as he goes. The valet finds it. Jealous because Dado has sent for Swayne, the valet follows.

Swayne finds, upon arrival at Dado's home, that he has been duped and that Dado is in good health. Dado, when Swayne starts to leave, tells him angrily that he is a fool to love Frances, that she is too young for him and that even his valet can see that she is rapidly learning to love Davidson. Swayne, infuriated, leaves for home.

Meanwhile Frances finds the note her husband has left and begins to sob. Davidson tries to comfort her and awakens her love. The girl clings to him and Swayne returns to find them in a compromising position. Meanwhile, in Dado's apartment, the valet accuses her of double-crossing him. Dado assures him that she hates Swayne and begs him to avenge her on the man. Inflamed by his love for her, the valet follows Swayne to his home with a pistol already cocked in his pocket.

As Davidson is trying to explain matters to the enraged Swayne the valet creeps to the curtains in the library and shoots Swayne down. He drops the pistol near Davidson and the housekeeper, who runs in, thinks Davidson has murdered Swayne.

Davidson is arrested and Swayne taken to a hospital. An operation fails to save the wounded man and young Davidson is brought before him for identification as his assailant. Swayne, realizing that he is dying, decides to make Frances happy and declares that Davidson did not shoot him. Detectives decide that the evidence against Davidson is too strong to permit of his release, however, and he is detained.

The valet tells Dado that he has killed Swayne, but she drives him out in anger when she learns that he has killed the only man she ever loved. Dado then shoots herself in despair. The valet, in remorse, gives himself up and confesses. Davidson is released and Swayne passes away realizing that he has played his last game, but happy to have arranged for his wife's future as the wife of Davidson.

GOLD SEAL.

SMUGGLERS' ISLAND (Two Parts—Jan. 19).—Grace and Francis are engaged and, like most engaged couples, are most sensitive regarding their own tender feelings. They go to an island to spend their holiday. Starting out early of a morning the boy, Francis, wanders down the shore alone. He has a mild flirtation with one of the summer girls who shows him some beautifully-colored shells she has picked up on the shore. Grace sees Francis talking to the strange young woman and is piqued. From a distance it appears as if Francis has his arm around the young woman and Grace stalks pettishly away from the disagreeable sight, determined never to speak to Francis again.

After a few moments spent in deep thought on the hotel piazza, however, Grace decides to carry out a little plot she has evolved. Just for spite she makes the acquaintance of a handsome revenue officer in a splendid uniform. Together they stroll along the beach among the rocks with Francis, jealously, following close behind.

When Grace sees that Francis has ceased to watch her little flirtation, however, she quickly lets the revenue officer go his own way, and the latter, who thinks that he is making excellent progress with her, is obviously much astonished at her quick change of front.

Later Grace witnesses an assault made upon another revenue officer by a smuggler gang operating on the island. Although she thinks herself unobserved, one of the smugglers comes up behind Grace as she stands watching the cowardly assault upon the revnue officer, and binds and gags her. Fearing that she will tell on them the smugglers abduct the girl and take her, together with the unconscious revenue officer, on board their yacht.

An exciting chase follows between other revenue officers and the smugglers. The revenue officers sees the smugglers hurrying away in their fast motorboat and commandeer another high-power boat to follow them. At the point of a revolver they compel the owners of the boat to give chase to the smugglers.

Meanwhile the leader of the band of smugglers has imprisoned Grace in the cabin of his boat. His advances are odious and Grace struggles desperately with him as he attempts to force his attentions upon her. By brute strength the smuggler captain beats down her defence and forces Grace to her knees.

During this exciting scene in the cabin Francis and the revenue officers are hurrying to Grace's aid. Mile after mile is reeled off and the boat which the revenue officers have commandeered steadily continues to gain. Just when the smuggler's craft is within pistol shot the revenue officers discover that their supply of gasoline is running low. Before they can fill the tank their boat falls rapidly astern.

Grace, in her struggle with the smuggler, sees the approach of the revenue officers' motorboat and is dismayed when it suddenly begins to fall rapidly behind. Seeing a revolver in the cabin she takes advantage of the smuggler's absence to discharge the one remaining bullet in the weapon into the yacht's engine, effectualy disabling it. The revenue officers meanwhile fill their gasoline tank again and overhaul the smugglers' power yacht just as the smuggler captain again is attempting to kiss Grace in the tiny cabin of the smuggling craft.

A running fight between the smugglers and the revenue men follows ending in the capture of the smugglers. Grace and Francis meet again on the deck of the smugglers' yacht and banish their misunderstanding in a kiss.

BIG U.

THE DEAR OLD HYPOCRITE (Jan. 19).—Uncle George has money. His only relative is Agnes Wilson, from whose father, his brother, he is estranged.

Uncle George decides to test the worth of the girl and her husband. His lawyer writes Agnes a letter saying that the old man is almost stone deal, homeless and with only sufficient funds to bring him to her home.

Agnes and Tom consider the matter and decide that they can give the old man a home. Uncle arrives. The very first day he borrows money from Agnes to buy a cheap statuette from a peddler. When Tom comes home that night he brings the distressing news that his firm has cut the wages of its employees in half, owing to business depression. Yet the two young people decide to keep the homeless old man with them.

Tom goes on. The landlord demands the overdue rent. At last they can no longer remain in their pretty cottage. Tom has hired two rooms in the poor quarter of the town and they are to move the next day.

Agnes' father has come to visit them. He sees his brother and refuses to stay in the same house with him. Agnes persuades them to make up. The dear old hypocrite uncle delightedly shows his brother a deed from himself to little Georgie of the cottage. Troubles are over for the young Wilsons and for the two old men as well.

THEIR ISLAND OF HAPPINESS (Two Parts—Jan. 21).—Robert Belden comes into possession of a considerable fortune. His wife, Helen, is a rather plain, home-loving woman and does not care to assume the social duties to which her husband's wealth entitles her. Belden, however, enters into a life of social gayety, and his wife soon realizes that their interests have become widely divergent.

Belden soon comes to pay rather marked attention to one particular woman in the social set in which his wife could take her place but does not. Word of her husband's infatuation reaches Mrs. Belden and she reproaches her husband. Belden endeavors to shift the responsibility for the estrangement to his wife's shoulders and leaves home in a rage. Mrs. Belden, although she still loves her husband, decides that it will be best for her to leave.

Belden returns home to find her gone. Soon afterward the shallowness of the life he has been leading becomes apparent to him, and he makes every attempt to find his wife once more. Failing in this, he devotes himself to his business exclusively and amasses a fortune.

Ten years pass. Helen Belden is a nurse in the leper's colony on an island in the Philippines. She is not permitted to leave the island. Belden on a trip around the world stops off at Manila. Mrs. Belden reads of his arrival and, knowing that if she were to be found in her husband's embrace, he, too, would be returned to the lepers' island. She decides to carry out her scheme of revenge.

By bribing a Chinese fisherman she contrives to escape from the island and secures a room near her husband's in a Manila hotel. She secures entrance to her husband's suite after having 'phoned to the island, giving the number of the room in the hotel occupied by her husband as the place where she can be found. Belden is overcome with joy when he meets his wife after the long lapse of years. She holds him off from herself, however. Belden tells her with great emotion of his untiring attempts to find her and begs her forgiveness.

As Helen listens she is impelled to believe in his sincerity. She tells him of her life and her terrible purpose in coming to his room. As she sobs out her story a knock is heard at the door. The officers of the leper colony enter.

(Continued on page 430.)

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

HAVE YOU SENT YOUR SHIP OUT?

More men are waiting for their ships to come in than ever sent them out. Are you one of them? These men are waiting and waiting for results and fortunes to come to them, but they have done little or nothing to get the return. They have never sent their ships out. Some of them started with a ship of some kind or other, but it could not hold up under the strain. It sank in the middle of the voyage and they are still waiting.

We built our ship of sturdy material such as, good stories, good photography and co-operation. We launched this boat upon the high seas and she has returned to us laden with those people who have seen and been convinced and a "hold" full of public favor. Our material was strong and well put together —the return was assured.

Do not wait any longer. Make your reservations at once for that second section of the "KRITERION SPECIAL." It will carry you over the rough road to "Co-Operative Land" and you will be assured of that "return" for which you have been waiting so long.

Remember this train starts from our dock making its first and only stop at "Decision Junction" and then speeds on a clear track to "Co-Operative Land." Hop on.

KRITERION SERVICE

Sixth Floor

1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

Confidential Chat

We received many letters this past week asking us why we wanted you to get in personal touch with us, and we herewith set forth a few of our reasons.

It will help give you a better idea of the company's policies in all departments than is possible in any other way.

It will weld the forces on the outside with those on the inside of this business as nothing else can do.

It will create enthusiasm within you of the kind that makes men go out and fight, not only for us, but for themselves.

It will give you more knowledge and knowledge is power.

It will give you confidence in the men, methods and service of the company you will eventually do business with.

Last, but not least: It will prove to you that we do not have a program on paper, but on film.

We could write you volumes in letters and it would all be the truth, but you would take exception in a great many instances and let it pass over your head as publicity.

Go and see us at our exchanges and we will convince you of the service you will receive. We will not tell you about our product, but will show you our program on the screen. This does not mean that we will show you a few of our best subjects, it means that you may see the program as you will receive it. Not only for the first week's releases but the second, the third, the fourth, and so on for we have them on hand for your approval and our factories are working to capacity making our future releases. You will be enthused as others have been and we will be satisfied, for we know you will be convinced beyond doubt that ours is a service that stands for good stories, good photography and co-operation with you. A service whose producing companies have casts of well-known favorites directed by men of film knowledge who have proven by their previous works that they are capable of producing "quality films" such as the public demands.

This is Some of Our All-Star Talent

"Bert" Angeles	Alex. Frank
Mary Ruby	Justina Wayne
Harry Fisher	Craufurd Kent
Sidney DeGray	Will Cowper
Adelaide Bronti	Dixie Stuart
A. M. Kennedy	"Bob" Daly
Dorothy Davenport	Fritzi Brunette
Lee Hill	Edward Alexander
Jack Prescott	John Dillon
Chester Withey	Katherine Sheldon
Bruce Mitchell	Chas. K. French
Rena Rogers	Lucille Younge
Allen Fralick	Benj. Horning
"Bud" Rose	Harris Forbes
Smythe Addison	Tom Ward
Anthony Coldewey	Donald MacDonald
Eva Lewis	Helen K. French
Wallace MacDonald	Felix Modjeska
Olga Clark	Wm. W. Parsons
Marty Martin	Theodore Roberts
Mona Darkfeather	Frank Montgomery
Jack Livingston	Wm. Thorne

Our Exchanges are now open—get in touch with them

KRITERION SERVICE

Sixth Floor

1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK

(Continued from page 427.)
Helen tells them that Belden has not touched her and they start away with Helen their captive.

As they leave the room, however, Belden can control himself no longer and leaps forward. Taking his wife in his arms he kisses her ardently, telling the horrified officers that they now have two passengers for Leper's Island. The final scene shows Belden and his wife reunited silhouetted against an ocean sunset on their way to the island, dreaded by all others, but a haven of happiness to Belden and his wife in their declining years.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 148 (Jan. 6).—Mummers in Quaker City. Decked in newest creations, subjects of King Momus amuse thousands with their antics.—Philadelphia, Pa.

Kohlemainen Wins Again. Despite zero weather hundreds of athletes compete in Bronx road race.—New York City. Sub-title: Owen Wade, 54-year-old runner, still in the game.

Gorgeous Auto Festival. Parade of lavishly-decorated autos forms finest spectacle of its kind ever held.—New Orleans, La.

Famous Prosecutor Becomes Governor. Charles S. Whitman, who made a notable record as district attorney of New York City, becomes chief executive of the state at Albany, N. Y.

Made in America. Last word in women's fashions designed in New York City. By courtesy of Madame Yovin.

Sport in Mercy's cause. Athletic games and contests held to help collect funds for the Red Cross.—Sydney, Australia.

England Welcomes America's Gifts. Laden with toys and clothing sent by American people for Europe's war orphans, U. S. collier Jason arrives at Devonport, England. Sub-titles: Earl Beauchamp and guard of honor welcome the Jason. Loading trains with the presents.

Germany's Audacious Raid. Under cover of fog, German cruisers make daring dash through England's powerful fleet and bombard British coast towns, killing and wounding many. Subtitles: Scarborough Harbor and lighthouse after bombardment. Grand Hotel badly damaged by shells. Whitby and Hartlepool are targets for heavy shells. Cavalry patrolling sands at Scarborough.

Cartoons. By world famous caricaturist, Hy. Mayer of puck.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

AMERICAN.

THE ALARM OF ANGELON (Jan. 6).—Angelon, a poor Italian, after months of hard labor in America, saves enough money to send to Naples for his wife and children. He buys a postal order and in attempting to mail it at a fire box he is arrested and given his choice, either of paying a fine, the equivalent of his savings, or serving a term in prison. He sends the money to his family. When they reach New York, Angelon, still in jail, is not there to meet them. They fall into the hands of a padrone from whom they are rescued by Edna Lane, a young woman engaged in social service work. She finds Angelon's wife a position with an invalid Italian woman interpreter, and the children are sent out to sing and play in the streets. Angelon recognizes the voices of his children, whom he hears singing outside his cell. They discover him and run home to their mother with the news. Through Edna's help and that of Dan Grey her fiancee, a young attorney, Angelon is freed, and once more the family is happily united.

DOMINO.

THE SCRUB (Two Reels—Jan. 7).—Gordon Elliott, a student at one of the big universities, is unable to make the football team until his senior year. He is then awarded a position at center because of his superior method of passing the ball, though his lightness is against him. He overhears the head coach say that Dick Blackwood would make a better center if only he could master the pass. In his loyalty to the college Elliott teaches Blackwood the pass, thereby eliminating himself, not merely from the team, but also, as he supposes, from the the possibility of winning Marjorie Burgess, who has commanded him to return for his answer after he has played his first big game. The game is played and won, largely through the efforts of Blackwood, and he is a hero. At the banquet, where the letters are awarded, the victorious center tells the whole story of Elliott's sacrifice. Elliott wins one of the letters—and Marjorie's promise.

IN THE LAND OF THE OTTER (Two Parts—Jan. 14).—Ben Anderson, factor of the trading station, impatient with his daughter Anne's coquetries, calls all the trappers to him and promises to wed her to the one who brings back the most valuable catch of furs in the spring. Anne fancies herself in love with Henri Levesque, a Frenchman. So when he is reported to have brought in the biggest prize she is delighted. But the following day, Joe Eagle, a quarter-breed, reaches the station with twice Henri's catch, Ben insists that Anne marry Joe, but she swears she never could become the wife of the French Indian; and because he really loves her, Joe, who has overheard her protestations, hides half his furs under his cabin floor. Anne is married to Henri, but in a few months is very unhappy. He is a heavy drinker; he neglects her, and, at last, being penniless, he steals a bale of furs from the station. The factor sets Joe to catch the thief. He discovers the guilty man is Henri, and gives him a chance to leave the country. However, witnessing a heart-breaking scene between Henri and Anne, Joe sends word to the factor that he will find many furs in his (Joe's) cabin and to search no further for the thief. He then leaves for the south.

MAJESTIC.

BRANCH NUMBER 37 (Jan. 8).—Because James, a mounted policeman, is too poor to marry yet his sweetheart, Mary, gets a position secretly taking in bundles at a laundry. But one day the police officer comes to the place with his own bundle and, seeing Mary behind the window, is offended and goes away without speaking to her. That same afternoon an Italian chances to cast greedy eyes on pretty Mary. He goes into a saloon nearby and later, in a tipsy state, reaches for his laundry bundle to find that it contains celery. Someone in the saloon has exchanged bundles with him by mistake. However, in his befuddled condition, he goes back to the laundry branch to put the blame on the girl. Mary is just counting the money. He attacks her and she defends herself as best she can. Remorse, meanwhile has overtaken her policeman lover. He calls up to ask her forgiveness and when the receiver is knocked off the 'phone by the Italian in the scuffle James hears the commotion and gallops to the rescue. Some brother officers hurry to his assistance. The Italian is arrested—and James, who had believed Mary lacking in spirit and proper pride, discovers that she is a heroine.

PROBATION (Jan. 12).—Tom Miller's father, who is a judge, opposes a popular movement to win probation for first offenders. His son, Tom, is discovered by his father to be spending a great deal of time lounging about a pool room and is sharply reprimanded. Ridiculed by his young pals, however, as "papa's boy," he breaks his promise to the Judge and to his sweetheart, Helen Moore, and visits the pool resort in secret. A man is shot and Tom is accused of the crime. Under an alias he hopes to get through his trial and serve his time. But Judge Miller is transferred to the criminal department and Tom is recognized. He pleads probation. The Spartan father, however, sentences his son for five years. At the "pen" Tom overhears a plot against his father. He escapes and follows the crooks to his home, where they attack Mrs. Miller and Helen, who are alone. Tom is accidentally wounded by Mrs. Miller, while he is trying to defend her. His father, arriving, takes him for an accomplice of the crooks and orders him carried to a public hospital pending his return to the pen. Later, Tom and the nurse overhear the confession of the man who committed the murder in the pool room. Helen intercedes with the judge. The man's confession is accepted and Tom is vindicated.

PRINCESS.

CHECK NO. 130 (Jan. 8).—Harry Dana's married life is unhappy because his wife is suspicious and petulant. Discovering that his stenographer, Doris Hall, is ambitious to study art, he persuades her to accept a check for four hundred dollars to be spent for an evening course in modelling. Shortly afterward Mrs. Dana visits her husband's office and discovers in a bunch of vouchers, returned monthly by the banks, the checks in favor of the stenographer. Convinced that Dana is faithless, she purloins the check as evidence and secretly prepares to begin divorce proceedings. Doris has witnessed the removal of the incriminating check, but she hesitates to inform Dana. Later she learns from the stenographer employed by Mrs. Dana's attorney that a divorce is impending. Determined to prevent the wrecking of Dana's family life at any cost, Doris goes to the attorney and makes a confession of crime, declaring that she forged the check. Dana receives a note from the attorney. Placing it in his wife's hands, utterly puzzled, he hurries away. She is now convinced of her error in suspecting him. Taking the check from its hiding place, she chokes back a sob, permitting the bit of paper to slip to the floor. Before she can recover it the check is drawn into the fire and destroyed.

Dana, meanwhile, has learned the truth. He is trying to dissuade Doris from her sacrifice when his wife bursts into the office and tells of the destruction of the check. As the evidence is lost no one now can be found legally guilty. Mr. and Mrs. Dana leave together. Then Doris, who has momentarily disappeared, returns to receive the earnest compliments of Lawyer Morris and his son, Boyd, who is in love with her.

RELIANCE.

A NIGHT'S ADVENTURE (Jan. 6).—Dr. Watson, on his way East, gets off the train to stretch his legs at a way station, and being called to the aid of a section boss, who has broken his arm, he finds there is no other train East till morning. He gets a room at the Red Horse Hotel and to while away the time joins in a faro game, winning all the money in sight. Bland, the gambler, and his assistants, Jack and Bill, hate to think of the doctor getting away with so much cash, so they conspire with the hotel keeper to drug Watson's drink, inteding to rob him later.

The doctor, however, only pretends to drink the doped liquor, and when the gambler attacks him in his room he overpowers him with his hyperdermic needle and suceeds in escaping from the hotel, pursued by Jack and Bill. Watson finds refuge in the cottage of Granby, the section boss whom he has doctored. Already he has become much interested in his patient's pretty daughter, May. That night, in an attack upon the cottage by Watson's enemies, the gambler's accomplices, May is instrumental in saving the doctor's life. The rest of the story is eloquently implied.

THE LOST RECEIPT (Two Reels) Jan. 9.—John Powers, a struggling young manufacturer of explosives, borrows money from Colonel Stone, giving him a bill of sale of the factory. Later, when the amount falls due and Powers cannot pay, Stone refuses to renew the loan. The young manufacturer manages to pawn and borrow enough to raise the money. He pays it to Stone's clerk, who credits it by mistake to the wrong name, though he gives Powers a correct receipt. In putting the receipt into the safe Powers is called away a moment and a gust of wind blows the slip upon the floor. His little sister, Jane, picks it up and makes it into a curl paper for her doll. Powers, noticing the child's new toy, asks Jane where her doll came from, and when he learns that Lucy Stone, the Colonel's daughter, has given it to Jane he snatches it away and tosses it upon a shelf.

Meanwhile, Stone has discharged his careless clerk though without discovering that Powers's payment is wrongly credited. Supposing the bill still unpaid he takes possession of the factory. Powers has no redress because the receipt is missing. Thoroughly embittered, he determines to blow up the plant rather than see Stone profit by the business. Setting a lighted candle in a can of powder, he leaves the mill to its fate. Meanwhile, little Jane has been found by Lucy Stone and her father, crying for her doll. They go with her to the factory to recover the toy. Powers learns just in time where his sister is. Rushing back to the factory, he plucks the candle from the powder and hurries into the office. The receipt has been found in the doll's hair. Secure in his property, he and the Stones are reconciled.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Chapter 52—and last episode) (Jan. 11).—Margaret, looking from her boudoir window, fell under the spell of the outdoors. The early winter afternoon had broken in a flood of golden sunshine, and soon, attired in comfortable walking clothes, and taking with her Bouncer, her collie, she started for a tramp through the fields. The same lure of the open had enthralled that day a young society man of New York. In knickerbockers and walking jacket, shotgun in hand, he was proceeding on a jaunt through the woods. But Jack Stuyvesant was not in good shooting form, and a third clumsy attempt merely chipped a big piece of bark off an oak.

Our Mutual Girl was sitting on a boulder, amusing herself and Bouncer by throwing twigs and stones in a brook for him to recover—when the piece of bark fell into her lap. At the same instant, Jack Stuyvesant came bounding through the underbrush to see what had fallen to his gun. Face to face with each other, there was almost instant attraction. But Margaret had conventions to consider—and after talking awhile, they parted with never an idea that they should ever meet again.

That night Our Mutual Girl had a dream. She lived over all her experiences—her childhood on the Maryland farm, her year of shopping, sight-seeing, meeting celebrities, her little romances—but at the end of them all she seemed to see Stuyvesant's face, like the solution of a complicated problem. When the next morning came a note from Auntie Knickerbocker bidding Margaret return to the Fifth avenue house, her instinct told Our Mutual Girl that something real was going to happen. Well, she went—and that evening Auntie Knickerbocker introduced her to—Yes, gentle reader, to Jack Stuyvesant. And it ends in the way all girlhood romances should end—they started to live happily forever after.

THE TERROR OF THE MOUNTAINS (Jan. 13).—Dan Melton is in love with Daisy Dale, who, being of a coquettish disposition, permits

MR. EXHIBITOR:

We will show you how to make money.—
Not one week, but every week of the year.

RENFAX FILM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

Makers of Musical Movies

110 WEST FORTIETH STREET, NEW YORK

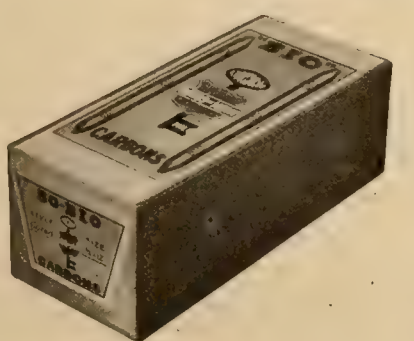
PITTSBURG, PA.: 417 Fourth Avenue CHICAGO, ILL.: 154 West Lake Street
COLUMBUS, OHIO: 312½ North High Street

RENFAX FILM CO.
110 West 40th Street, New York City.
Gentlemen:—Please send information regarding your Musical Movies.
(Theatre)
(Town)
(State)

BIO CARBONS

Arriving in New York Jan. 10, 1915

If You Wish to Have Me Produce a Bright White Light



Write or Wire

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

San Francisco
143 Second St.

New York
165 Greenwich St.

Milwaukee
114 Huron St.

Or All Live Film Exchanges

herself to become infatuated with Soapy Smith, gentleman gambler. Sheriff Melton is greatly worried by the continual holdups committed by Black Jack, a desperado, who has become the terror of the moutains. His excursions in quest of the bandit compel him to neglect Daisy somewhat. One day Daisy meets with an accident while riding and applies for assistance at a lonely shack in the hills. To her astonishment Soapy Smith opens the door. She accepts his invitation to enter. Once she is inside, however, Soapy betrays his real character and attacks her. Daisy's screams are heard by Morristette, a Mexican, who rushes in and intervenes. Smarting under the blow Soapy deals him, he gallops to town and informs the sheriff. On arriving at the shack to rescue his sweetheart Melton finds that Soapy Smith and the long-sought desperado, Black Jack, are one and the same.

ROYAL.

MARRIED BY INSTALLMENT (Jan. 9).—Mrs. Acre, a widow with ten children, reads the advertisement of a matrimonial agency and answers it, describing herself as "a widow with ten acres." Fritz Snell, a waiter, sends her the photograph of a handsome friend purported to be himself. They meet at the agency—and though he does not come up to the picture, Mrs. Acre accepts him and they are married. She then conducts home the expectant Fritz, who has visions of a fine little property awaiting him. He is is introduced, instead, to the ten children, and after washing for them, helping feed them and administering variously to their tenfold little needs, he rebels. Jumping on a passing freight, he makes his getaway, leaving the widow and her ten Acres weeping beside the track.

THANHOUSER.

AN INSIDE TIP (Jan. 10).—Whitey's gang of crooks has flourished on waterfront robbery because Tom, the district attorney's secretary, has kept it tipped from the inside. Jack Morrison, police reporter for The Herald, gets next to the gang for the sake of a story later. He is suspected, however, by the crooks; and Nell, a girl of the underworld, overhears Whitey and his pals plotting to make way with the new member. She decides to "squeal," as Jack has formerly defended her from insult. The police, however, won't believe her story. Meanwhile, the gang has got Jack in its power. They determine to drop him, gagged and bound, in the river under cover of darkness. Nell again appeals to the authorities, and this time the police sergeant believes her. She and the policemen give chase in a motorboat. They reach the craft containing the crooks just after Jack has been dropped overboard. Nell dives after him while a gun battle is on, and with the aid of one of the policemen she gets him unbound and into the motorboat. After the crooks have been rounded up, Jack's editor, who has been called to the police station, says that he will be responsible for Nell. But Jack relieves his chief of that responsibility.

THE SPEED KING (Two Reels—Jan. 12).—Alfred Atherton, an automobile enthusiast, is falsely accused by George Ranston, a rival in love, of cheating at cards. He is expelled from the club and disowned by his father and sweetheart, Lucy Randall. Mr. Randall, Lucy's father, however, gives the young man a chance to begin life anew in his automobile factory. Three years later, when Randall's daughters, Lucy and her younger sister Muriel, return from abroad they find Atherton greatly changed. He is no longer a young idler, but a dependable business man. A keen competition is instituted between the various automobile companies with the result that unless Randall's company wins the great race at the Brighton Motordome they will be forced to the verge of bankruptcy. Randall, however, is optimistic, as he has engaged the most skillful driver in the country. An accident at the last minute, however, disables the man. Atherton volunteers to take his place. He wins the race for the company and the love of Muriel. Soon after this the truth about the card cheating comes out. Arthur's father asks his son's forgiveness and, cleared now before the world, he marries Muriel.

KAY BEE.

THE DEADLY SPARK (Two Parts—Jan. 1).—John Peters is a wealthy gentleman whose daughter, Jane, has married Edward Marsdon against his wishes. Peters desired that she marry Ralph Miller, a business associate, and the girl's action has caused her father to disinherit her. Using Jane as his tool, Marsdon wins large sums at cards. Jane, however, discovers by accident a card sharp apparatus in Marsdon's sleeve and refuses to further aid. Because of this refusal, their circumstances become destitute. Marsdon forms a plan to rob the safe of Peters. Jane overhears this and writes her father an anonymous letter warning him. He is alarmed and goes into the garden where a couple of wiremen are fixing an electric wire which Peters narrowly escapes stepping on. This suggests the idea to him of wiring the safe in such a manner that a burglar placing his hand on the knob would be electrocuted. The wiremen agree to do the work and arrangements are completed and the safe wired. To decoy Peters from the house, Marsdon writes a note telling him that his daughter is very ill. Ralph Miller comes into the scene at this juncture and agrees to go for the girl himself. Peters, who has previously telephoned to the police, agrees to this plan. Miller leaves on his errand and the police arrive. They lie in waiting for the crooks, who come through the grounds. Marsdon enters the library, approaches the safe and is electrocuted. Meanwhile Jane has returned home with Miler and a reconciliation takes place between all.

A MIDAS OF THE DESERT (Two Reels—Jan. 8).—Jed Thompson keeps a supply store near the gold fields, and is cordially disliked by the miners because of his miserly ways. An epidemic of malaria breaks out and Jed sees his chance to get rich by selling quinine capsules at five dollars a dozen. He refuses to let Ray Knowles, who has no money, take any of the medicine on credit for his sick father, and sternly forbids Dora, his daughter, to part with any quinine except for cash. The next day Ray returns, pleading that his father is much worse. Dora, who is alone in the store, gives him the capsules. On returning and discovering her action, Jed Thompson remains to tend shop and forces his daughter to work the claim. Dora becomes ill from exposure. But Thompson is too stingy to waste quinine upon her. In her delirium she wanders to the Knowles cottage, where she is taken in and nursed back to health by Ray. Her father comes to claim her but the miners hold an indignation meeting—and then they give the miser his choice of selling out or being kicked out. He chooses the former, and starting with his pile across the desert, on finding a little gold in the sand he uses his last drop of water panning it. The old man dies of thirst and in his last delirious dreams it seems to him that everything about him has turned to gold.

BRONCHO.

THE SCOURGE OF THE DESERT (Two Parts—Jan. 6).—Pastor Holt of Arizona has a daughter, Ellen, and a son, John. John is inclined to be a trifle restless under the home discipline. The pastor gives John a sum of money to deposit in a bank at Grey Rock. This money is for the erection of a new mission Ellen meanwhile has sold her horse, Jim, to complete the sum necessary for the erection of same.

Bill Evers, a gambling house keeper, is in reality the "Desert Scourge," an outlaw. He buys the horse of Ellen from a trader, and while robbing the stage the horse breaks its tether and returns to the parsonage. John Holt arrives at Grey Rock and loses both the money and his watch at the gambling hall. The watch contains a picture of his sister, and Bill Evers is greatly smitten with the girl's appearance. He meets through an inquiry in the newspaper, stating that the horse has returned, Ellen Hold, and falls in love with her. She reciprocates his affection. John is sent to the bank where he says he deposited the money. While enroute he attempts to rob the stage to recover the church money he lost in gambling. He is wounded and the horse carries him home. Bill Evers, who is engaged to marry Ellen, is calling at the house. The posse follows the boy by a trail of blood and Bill Evers makes the great sacrifice of taking the boy's place and announcing his identity. He is removed by the posse but escapes, and the story ends in the reunion of Ellen and Evers.

MOTHER HULDA (Two Reels—Jan. 13).—The widow Boden has a step-daughter, Mary, whom she abuses, while lavishing every kindness upon her own daughter, Martha. A robber chieftain, who happens along, is much enamoured of Mary and buys her with a bag of gold from her stepmother. Then it is discovered that the girl has disappeared. The fact is, she has been transported to fairyland by way of the well, where she is closely observed by Mother Hulda, a wise old fairy, who decides that Mary is just the wife for Prince Charming. The Prince loves Mary and they are betrothed. Mary, however, has a longing to return once more and let her stepmother know that she is still alive. This is granted her. The Widow Boden treats her cruelly and this time she is handed over to the robber chieftain. Martha, meanwhile, has put on Mary's clothes and gone to fairyland. But her deception is found out by Mother Hulda in time to prevent her marriage with the Prince. Mary calls on her fairy lover for aid by means of a locket he has given her. He arrives, turns the trees into soldiers, and defeats the robber chieftain. Mother Hulda finishes up matters by changing the widow and daughter into stone. Then the Prince and Mary return to fairyland where they reign together happily forever after.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

PARAMOUNT.

THE GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST (Lasky-Belasco).—"The Girl of the Golden West" is an orphan who keeps the saloon in the California mining town of Cloudy during the days of the '49 gold rush. Her utter honesty and fearlessness command the respect of all the "boys." Of her many suitors, the one she is most disposed to favor is Jack Rance, the sheriff-gambler from New Orleans, who is somewhat less rough than the rest of the men.

At the time when the story begins the community is at a high pitch of excitement concerning the exploits of a city-bred road-agent, whose real name is Johnson, but who is known as Ramerrez and leads a particularly desperate band of Mexicans. In spite of the fact that $5,000 has been offered for his capture, Ramerrez holds up the Wells-Fargo stage, robbing all the passengers. While doing this, he receives a slight wound on the wrist and when his band disperses with the booty remains behind to bathe the injury. The "Girl" chances to ride by, is interested by her very first glimpse of the fascinating stranger, comes to his aid and binds up the wound with part of her bonnet string.

This is the beginning of the romance between the "Girl" and the road-agent, whom she knows only as "Mr. Johnson." Not knowing that the "Girl" is the proprietor of the Polka Saloon in Cloudy, but having heard that the miners leave their gold in the care of the woman who runs that place, Ramerrez plans to rob the establishment. He goes to the saloon himself in advance, and there meets Rance, the sheriff-gambler, whose jealousy at once becomes apparent and who is prevented from making trouble for the stranger then and there only because the "Girl" vouches for him.

From this point, exciting events follow in rapid succession. While Rance is following a blind trail for the road-agent, Ramerrez has an early morning breakfast with the "Girl" at her cabin. In attempting to leave, he is seriously wounded by Rance, and apprehended though the "Girl" seeks to conceal him in the loft. His presence is revealed by the dropping of his blood through the cracks of the loft. Rance and the "Girl" play cards for the life of Ramerrez, and the "Girl" wins by the ruse of changing her losing cards at the last moment.

After recovering from his wounds, Ramerrez is pursued and caught a second time. The "Girl" comes to his rescue at the moment when he is about to be hung for his crimes against the law, and the drama concludes with the "Girl" and Ramerrez leaving the Mountain to begin a new life.

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORP.

RUNAWAY JUNE (Episode No. 1—Two Parts—The Runaway Bride).—It is the wedding day of June Moore and the entire household is all confusion, excitement, and bustle, from Donnie, the pet collie of June, to Mr. Moore, June's father, uncomfortable and perspiring in his Prince Albert. Iris Blethering, June's bosom friend, accompanied by her husband, Bobbie Blethering, arrives to help June in her toilette, and a few moments later Ned Warner, the happy bridegroom, arrives. There is a short duration of nervous expectancy as Ned awaits the bride in the parlor, then June enters at the head of the bridal procession, and the ceremony commences. Just at the finish, Donnie, the collie, escaping from confinement in the woodshed, races into the parlor and June, regardless of her spotless white wedding gown throws her arms about him. After the wedding June's wedding garment is hastily put aside and she dons a traveling suit, while Ned, seeking to avoid the pranks of the guests, steals out onto the porch to await her. Upstairs, Mrs. Moore tearfully embraces June, in the last sacred moment of parting, then presses a purse filled with money into her hands. June, surprised, pouts, "Why do I have to think of money on my wedding

New Electric Fans
For Alternating Current, 110 volts, 16-inch Oscillating. Each $15.00
New Exhaust Fans
16-inch new Westinghouse.....Each, $15.00
22-inch new Westinghouse.....Each, 70.00
GEO. BENDER, 130 Centre Street, New York

ALLIANCE PROGRAM

IN THE SHADOW

ALLIANCE PROGRAM

FEATURING

GORDON DE MAINE and WILLIAM A. WILLIAMS

IN FIVE PARTS. PRODUCED BY THE EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO.

RELEASES

"THE LAST CHAPTER" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

"THE TRUTH WAGON" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
From the play by HAYDEN TALBOT

"THE LAST EGYPTIAN" with J. FARRELL McDONALD and VIVIAN REED
From the book by L. FRANK BAUM

"HEARTS AND FLOWERS" with MRS. THOMAS WHIFFEN
From the celebrated play of the same name

"THE MAN WHO COULD NOT LOSE" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

"THE HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
From the great American story by EDWARD EGGLESTON

"WHEN FATE LEADS TRUMP" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
From the novel by JOHN HYMER

"THE KEY TO YESTERDAY" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
From the novel by CHARLES NEVILL BUCK

"THE PATH FORBIDDEN" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
From the novel by JOHN HYMER

"AT THE OLD CROSS ROADS" with ESTHA WILLIAMS
From ARTHUR C. AISTON'S famous play

The word Alliance on a film is the exhibitor's guarantee of quality and assurance against mediocrity. You certainly want the best and sooner or later you will place the Alliance productions on your screen.

WHY NOT NOW?

EXCHANGES

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, 115 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. A. A. Weilland, Mgr. Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia (Kentucky exhibitors served from Cincinnati office.)

ALL THEATRES FILM AND ACCESSORY CO., INC., Owners of Alliance Exchanges. New York State. Buffalo office, 18 Chapin Block; New York City office, 126 West 46th St.; M. F. Tobias, Gen. Mgr.

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Eastern Feature Film Co., Inc., 57 Church St., Boston, Mass. New England.

ALLIANCE FEATURE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Mecca Feature Film Co., 130 West 46th St. Northern New Jersey.

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Vine and 13th Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia.

CASINO FEATURE FILM CO., Dime Savings Bank Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Michigan.

ALLIANCE FILM CO. OF TEXAS, 1905½ Commerce St., Dallas, Texas. Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas.

HYBAR FILM CORP., Forsythe Building, Atlanta, Ga. Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Florida, North and South Carolina.

CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO., 64 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. Illinois and Indiana.

NAT A. MAGNER CO., Pacific Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.; 218 Superba Theatre Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal. California, Nevada and Arizona.

DES MOINES FILM SUPPLY CO., 218 Utica Bldg., Des Moines, Ia. Iowa.

MONARCH FEATURE FILM CO., 12th and Wyandotte Sts., Kansas City, Mo. Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

ZENITH FEATURE FILM CO., Lyceum Bldg., Duluth, Minn. Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin. Milwaukee Office, 407 Manhattan Building.

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Noted Players Feature Film Co., 613 New Birks Bldg., Montreal. Jas. D. Goldie, Gen. Mgr. Canada.

ALLIANCE PROGRAMME FEATURE SERVICE. Exchanges located at 710 Northwestern Bank Bldg., Portland, Ore.; 1214 Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.; 809 Trent St., Spokane, Wash.; 27 N. Park St., Butte, Mont.; 607 Ideal Bldg., Denver, Col. Supplying States of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico.

Alliance Films Corp., 126 West 46th St., New York City

day?" but hurries out to Ned, who has been discovered by the guests and is being teased unmercifully. June and Ned make a dash for their limousine and escape amid a shower of rice.

In a drawing room on the train rapidly bearing the happy bride and groom off on their honeymoon, June contentedly nestles in Ned's arms. By accident, June discovers that she has lost her purse, and when Ned hears her exclamation of dismay he laughingly produces his bulky "roll" with bluff heartiness, and quiets her fears. The porter, catching sight of Ned's roll, almost loses his eyes staring at it, and Ned, smiling, tips him a dollar bill. Ned tries to force some money into June's hand, but she draws away. In fancy she sees herself a beggar, helpless, dependent upon Ned's generosity to supply her every want and necessity, and the thought is repugnant to her. Ned leaves the drawing room to dress as June falls asleep. Her dreams are troubled, and continually picture the woman absolutely dependent for money upon the man. She wakes as the train jars to a stop at Tarnville, and in a daze rushes from the train, pausing long enough just to take her coat and hat, and stands trembling and confused on the platform as the train rushes away.

Gilbert Blye was about to board the train when he saw June get off. He immediately drew back, and now, as June stands afraid, he stands aside, watching her sharply. June decides to return to New York, and finds the time of the next train on the bulletin board. Blye attempts to engage June in conversation, but is repulsed. Meanwhile, Ned discovers June's absence, and learns from a passenger that she left the train at Tarnville. Distracted, he gets off at the next station and takes an express back to New York, first learning over the telephone from the operator at Tarnville that June was seen to board the New York local, followed by a man with a black Vandyke. The operator tells Ned that the express sometimes passes the local just outside of New York. On the local, June finds she has no money, and sells her watch to an elderly couple. With this money, June pays her fare. The mysterious man with the black Vandyke buys the watch from the couple, and tenders it to June as a gift. She refuses to accept it, and he tells her that she may purchase it back when she is able. She takes the card he hands her, pockets it, and then refuses to notice him further. Smiling mysteriously, he takes the seat behind her and watches her. Just outside New York the express catches the local and they race along, side by side. Through a window, Ned sees the figure of June. Over her bends the black Vandyked man, assisting her on with her coat. In the station Ned frantically runs out to the street, just in time to have the door of Blye's taxi slammed in his face, and see June's taxi disappearing up the street. He jumps into a third taxi, and frantically orders his driver, "Follow them!"

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

ZUDORA (Episode Eight—Reels Fifteen and Sixteen—"The Mystery of the Chang Case").—Grown suspicious of her uncle, Hassam Ali, and impatient of the delays that he has thrown in the way of her marriage to John Storm, of a sudden Zudora determines to cut the Gordian knot by eloping with the man of her choice. Their plans are complete and the girl is in her room waiting for the time when Storm will call for her to take her away from the mysterious guardianship of Hassam Ali, when an event occurs which changes everything.

Hassam Ali has made the acquaintance of a certain Mr. Chang, a Chinese hypnotist and mystic of unusual powers. Seeing him place a boy in a condition in which the lad is alternately abnormally bright or stupid, at the will of the celestial, Zudora's uncle determines to use him as a tool in putting his niece out of the way and in gaining possession of the fabulously rich Zudora mine. Associated with Chang is Madame du Val, a strikingly handsome woman of shady reputation, and at Hassam Ali's invitation the precious pair come to his house, arriving just at the time when the elopement plans are complete.

Hassam Ali and Chang go to a room adjoining Zudora's and there the strange hypnotic power of the latter is exerted. Soon Zudora sinks under it, yielding obedient to the will of the hypnotist, just as Storm arrives at the house. Storm sees her at the window, where she has agreed to wait for him, but to his consternation she gives him no sign of recognition. Instead, she holds up a Japanese doll, as if in derision. As he waits in puzzled astonishment, Zudora disappears from her place at the window and the next moment Chang comes down the steps with Madame du Val, soon afterward being followed by Hassam Ali and Zudora. Before Storm can interfere the party are whisked away in their automobile.

Storm follows them and sees them enter a great house, the home of Chang and Madame du Val. Realizing that his fiancee is in serious danger, he goes to seek the aid of the police, while within the house Zudora is being placed in a curiously designed alcove which has a false wall, that can be slid in front of it at will. While she remains there, Hassam Ali dons garments similar to those worn by Chang, disguising himself to resemble the celestial in other respects also. He has just rejoined Chang and Madame du Val, when Storm and a squad of detectives force their way into the house. Chang leaps into the alcove and pulls the lever that closes the wall.

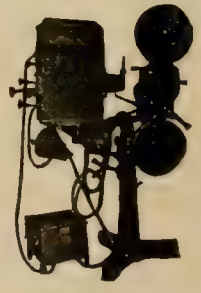
When the police enter they find only the disguised Hassam Ali and Madame du Val chatting and laughing together. They make a thorough search of the house, but without finding anything suspicious and are just about to depart, when suddenly a girl's voice rings out, which Storm recognizes as that of his sweetheart. Mystified, but assured now that they have made no mistake, Storm rushes at the disguised Hassam Ali, who calls for assistance. In the meantime the real Chang, hidden behind the false wall of the alcove, is overpowering Zudora. After a desperate struggle he succeeds in pinioning her arms behind her, but a fresh search of the house discloses nothing to the puzzled detectives and with Storm they are compelled to leave without locating Zudora's prison.

A hurried consultation between Hassam Ali and Chang, after the departure of Storm and the police leads to a decision to send Zudora away in the custody of Madame du Val. Meanwhile Storm, assured that his sweetheart is somewhere in the house, returns with the detectives, and a hand to hand struggle follows. Zudora, her hands bound behind her, thrusts them under a magnifying glass, which stands on a table in the alcove, and the sun's rays being concentrated upon her bonds soon burn them off. Hearing the struggle in the room outside, she pounds madly upon the wall and Storm, hearing the sounds, with the aid of the detectives batters down the walls and rescues her.

Hassam Ali, however, arch criminal of all, escapes, leaving Chang and Madame du Val to the tender mercies of the police.

POWER'S

LAST YEAR



SIMPLEX

We Filled 4,783 Mail Orders
From All Sections of the Country
These Orders Ranged From 15c to $2,000.00

THIS YEAR WE EXPECT TO DOUBLE IT

We Have Larger Quarters and Are Prepared to Meet Those Rush Orders with Prompt Attention

TRY US ONCE AND BE CONVINCED

Distributors for the Powers, Simplex,
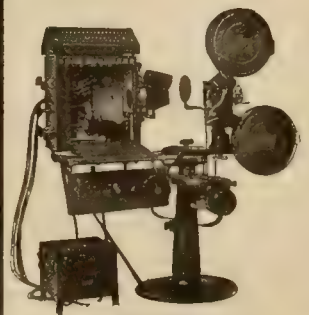
Edison, Motiograph
Machines

We Equip Motion
Picture Theatres
Completely



MOTIOGRAPH

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

19 West 23d Street, New York

The Largest Motion Picture Supply
House in America

EDISON

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MANAGER.—Picture and vaudeville manager, at liberty. Will go anywhere. Give details in first letter. W. F. S. GLAES, 220 Market St., Wilmington, Del.

PROJECTION ENGINEER.—Highest quality, can produce results. At liberty. Also studio work. J. C., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

AT LIBERTY—Manager, operator, and wife, A1 pianist; references exchanged; only reliable managers reply. THE PALMERS, 137 Front St., Deposit, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY after Jan. 15, director, long experience with best firms. Author and producer of comedies and farces. Exceptional record. Address J. D. G., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

REAL LIVE MANAGER—At liberty about February 1. Young, energetic hustler, with exceptional qualifications. Expert on equipment. Experienced in all lines; exceptionally strong on exclusive picture theaters. Nothing too large or too small. References furnished. Address R. L. M., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR, 8 years' experience on all machines, best recommendations, wishes position. H. LEVINE, 433 Miller Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CAMERAMAN desires position. Thoroughly capable, 5 years' experience with the best production companies. Can start immediately. Address C. A., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN, now with leading concern, seeks change Jan. 1; South or coast preferred; own camera. SOUTH, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MANAGER, experienced for movies; New England preferred. EDWARD, 308 West 27th St., N. Y. City.

OPERATOR, Conn. license, open for position; 3 years' experience; experienced in booking, capable of assistint management. Best character and ability; references. D. R. C., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN, with own camera, at liberty. Solicits either permanent or special job work any description. Southern territory; reasonable. Write me your wants. CAMERAMAN, 2078 College, Jacksonville, Fla.

OPERATOR—At liberty Jan. 15; 8 years' experience. Sober, does not smoke, married and reliable. Experienced with Power's and all machines. Good advertiser; best of references. Address J. M. V., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

ORGANIST—16 years, plays concert and popular music; picture playing and instruction. Anywhere with large house. H. BRACKEN DYE, Upper Montclair, N. J.

EXPERT CAMERAMAN.—Five years with camera, three in darkroom. Speak three languages, photographed throughout Europe, also America. Studio work also. V. S., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—A-1 pipe organ player by the Olympic Theater for moving pictures, Monessen, Pa. If you are one of the best answer and set your terms.

NEW YORK FILM CO. desires representative New York State to handle their features. Must be thoroughly experienced and furnish references. BENNED FILM CO., 110 West 40th St., N. Y. City.

WANTED—Executives, players and employers in all branches of motion picture business for new studio in Pa. (½ acre under glass). Experienced man with inventive ability wanted for mechanical dept. ETNYRE, Pittston, Pa.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

FOR SALE—Feature Film Exchange at Cleveland doing good business. Good reason for selling. M. S., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

FOR SALE—Combined winter and summer moving picture theater located in heart of Brooklyn. Beautiful auditorium of 600 seats, same number in comfortable airdome. Long lease at low rental. Recently built for investment purpose. Splendid opportunity for those desiring to enter the business. Address INVESTMENT, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EXHIBITORS—Double your receipts. Send stamp for complete plan. L. McPHERSON, 900 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—Half interest in opera house near Albany, N. Y. Running vaudeville and pictures. Or will trade my interest for straight picture house seating not less than 500. Address J. B., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FILM EXCHANGE—Invoices, $27,500. For sale at $3,500 cash. D. S., 514 Curry Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

WILL TRADE a $14,000 book, stationery and wall paper store for moving picture theater in Mississippi Valley or western states. Address owner T. W. BALL, Mexico, Mo.

A NEW YORK FILM COMPANY owning excellent money-making five-reel feature, with subject that is world wide, fine posters and photographs, desires representatives in every state to handle on percentage agreement. Must furnish bond, references as to film business ability and financial standing. Excellent opportunity for hustlers of the right sort. M. L. FORD, Rm. 504 Cedar St., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Coudersport, Potter Co., Pa., building lot, best location for modern picture theater, also picture house building and equipment; $3,500 takes all on your terms. Write quick, R. C. LLOYD.

THEATERS WANTED.

WE ARE desirous of obtaining grade A theaters everywhere, especially in Greater New York and its environs suitable for photoplay purposes. Houses now in operation or to be built to suit our requirements will be of interest. Correspondence solicited. PARAMOUNT THEATERS CORP., 331 Madison Ave., N. Y. City.

WANTED—To buy or lease M. P. theater in live town of over 10,000; must seat 500. State full particulars in first letter. L. T. HOULIHAN, care Tilford Theater, Murphysboro, Ill.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER seating 250, on main street; good business; no competition; best location in the northwest. Write for particulars. Address, ORPHOM THEATER, Polson, Montana.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER for rent in town of 1,400 population, shops working full time. Seven days, 5 and 10c; seating capacity 600. Equipment with everything ready to run moving pictures. Rent $50 per month. Write P. RUBIN, 160 Church St., Naugatuck, Conn.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Tent for summer, for moving picture shows and small vaudeville, about 40x80 feet. HARLEY E. POTTER, Portal, N. Dak.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.—Uses the Junior Professional camera tripods, perforators, printers, polishers, menders, developing outfit, lenses. Film titles, special camera work, private showroom, studio, darkroom, expert construction, repair, bonded guarantee. EBERHARD SCHNEIDER, 219 Second Ave., N. Y. City.

LATEST 1914 MODEL—Number 2 American with three extra magazines, changing bag, tripod with tilt and carrying case. Entire lot lists at $357.50. Price for quick sale, $275. Will ship C. O. D., with privilege examination. W. E. HANE, 537 E. Center St., Marion, Ohio.

WILLIAMSON TOPICAL CAMERA, Marvel tripod with panorama and tilt, 4 100 ft. magazines; Dahlmeir F 3.5 lens, cost, $141, only $80; good as new. RAY, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED—3, 4 and 5-reel features with paper; mention price and paper on hand; also want Keystone. WEINBERG'S FEATURES, 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

WANTED—3, 4 or 5-reel subjects; must have full line of posters. New features preferred. S. E. B., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

AN OLD-ESTABLISHED FILM EXCHANGE could handle a few more features on a commission basis to fill out a program. No junk. Best of references given. A. H., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

100 FEATURES.—For sale with 1, 3, 6 sheets original posters. Write or call for list. Wanted Keystone comedies. Federal Feature Film Co., 220 West 42nd St., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Licensed. Independent films, features, 2, 4-reels, paper 1's, 3's and 6's. Singles, paper, 1's, 3's. Comedies, dramas. Westerns, good condition. P. O. Box 857, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY to buy, very cheap, a number of features and commercial reels. Address W. L., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

IF YOU ARE looking for big bargains in 1, 2, 3 and 4-reel subjects with posters, address B. L. C., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

STATE RIGHTS, OKLAHOMA—Nine-reel feature, worked very little, good for a lifetime, $1,500, with copy. Paper, 5c a sheet. Last Days of Pompeii, Itala, three reels, in good first-class condition. Some paper mounted. Plenty available, $150. Address FEATURE FILM, 409 American Bank Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

4 AND 3 PARTS hand-colored Passion films for rent. Lecture on the Belgian war picture upon short notice. LUBACK, 1109 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FILM FOR SALE, in good shape, posters included. Send for list. Lock Box 691 Kalamazoo, Mich.

OLD WYOMING DAYS—3-reel, 1, 3, 6-sheet. Broncho bucking, steer roping. Good condition, $60. Shipped subject. A snap. DAVENPORT FILM EXCHANGE, Davenport, Iowa.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Cheap, Style G Wurtlizer motion picture orchestra, like new; used two months. Owner bought large style Wurlitzer instrument. Address G. W., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SCENARIOS WANTED.—Suitable for Comedy Films. WASHINGTON FILM CO., Seattle, Wash.

SUCCESSFUL SLIDE WRITING.—A chemical that enables you to write as easy on glass as on paper. No blurs. $1.00 box, enough for 500 slides. CHEMICAL GLASS DRYER CO., Grand Rapids, Minn.

THEATRICAL PRINTING—That pleases. 100 bond letterheads, 100 envelopes, $1.25 prepaid; cash with order. CUTLER & ROLLMAN, Reading, Pa.

INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURES MADE, features produced, furnish everything, make finest titles. Titles with letters chasing around forming name of your theater and announcements. RAY FILM CO., 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O., 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

OPERA AND FOLDING CHAIRS for all purposes at cut anti-trust prices; used chairs a specialty. New from ninty-five cents up. I can save you money. Tell me what you want. J. P. REDINGTON, Scranton, Pa.

411 LEATHERED UPHOLSTERED CHAIRS. Power's 6A motor-driven projector (complete); two 3 K. W. General Electric direct connected motor generators, many other things. Goods practically new. THEODORE PENNOCK, 2118 E. Genessee St. Syracuse, N. Y.

WE BUY, SELL AND EXCHANGE second-hand moving picture machines and films. Write for bargains. MONARCH FILM SERVICE, Memphis, Tenn.

MUST HAVE MONEY QUICK—Will sell any part of my theater, operated only 3 months and forced to close through poor business. Power's 6A with loop setter, $125; Simplex, $140; five-ply opera chairs, 75c; Ft. Wayne compensarc, $30; iron booth, underwriters' inspection, $25; Excello flaming arc lamps, $50 pair. All goods guaranteed good as new; will ship subject to inspection. GLEN ALFRED, 2110A Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

POWER'S MACHINE, $40; Edison underwriter model, $35; Hallberg economizer, $45; Model B gas outfit, $20; film cabinet holding 130 reels, $18; posters, 5c apiece. HOLDENRIED, 804 Sixth Ave., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Complete equipment indoor and open-air theaters, machines, lamps, booths, etc. Apply S. ECKMAN, 1051 Union Ave., N. Y. City.

BARGAIN—Power's and Edison machine parts for sale at sacrifice. ELECTRICIAN, 26 East 23d St., N. Y. City.

OPERA AND FOLDING CHAIRS—Large assortment, prices low, quality high. Catalogs free. Slightly used chairs, 75c. Will sell in small lots. ATLAS SEATING CO., 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Edison Model B moving picture machine, A-1 shape. Metal lined portable booth, 11x16 canvas screen, 2 110-volt D. C. desk fans, 8' and 12' Address N. J. SISTY, Surprise, Neb.

FOR SALE—Power's 6A machine, fine shape; Ft. Wayne compensarc, 180 chairs, like new; Majestic piano, two exhaust fans, three wall fans, Radium gold fibre screen; $500, or will sell separate. T. M. PATRICK, Savoy Theater, Olney, Ill.

WRITE OR WIRE—The Lears Theatre Supply Co., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo., the largest exclusive theater equipment concern in the West, for seats, all leading makes of moving picture machines, operating booths, curtains and all other theater accessories. They always have some slightly used goods in stock for immediate shipment and sell them at bargain prices. Folding chairs, 40c each up. Opera chairs, 60c each up. Moving picture machines, $50 each up. Send them an exact list of your wants and see why they sell them all.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 359
"AFFAIR OF THE DESERTED HOUSE, THE" (Kalem) 379
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS..... 384
ART OF EXHIBITION, THE..... 355
ARTIST FLAGG TO PICK A WINNER.... 377
ARTHUR ASHLEY IN VAUDEVILLE..... 371

BAMBERGER, LEON J..... 380
BEST PICTURES 341
BRITISH NOTES 353

CENSORSHIP IN SPOKANE..... 400
CENSORSHIP APPEAL IN SUPREME COURT 343
CENSORSHIP MEETING IN OHIO..... 408
CENSOR BOARD MEETS NEWSPAPER MEN 344
CENSORS FINE EXHIBITORS..... 405
"CHEF'S REDEMPTION, THE"..... 389
CHICAGO LETTER 350
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).. 368
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) 369
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES... 418
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES 420

"DEEP PURPLE, THE" (Peerless)..... 377
DIRECTORS' RESPONSIBILITY, THE.... 340
DOINGS AT LOS ANGLES..... 352

EVANSTON EDITOR THROWS LANCE.... 409
EXHIBITORS AND THE WAR TAX..... 343
"EXPLOITS OF ELAINE, THE" (Pathe-Hearst) 388

FACTS AND COMMENTS..... 339
FEATURE FILM STORIES..... 432
FEATURE RELEASE DATES..... 440
"FILE NO. 113" (Biograph)..... 347

GEORGE KLEINE'S "STOP THIEF" COMPLETED 358
"GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST, THE" (Lasky) 381

HANDWORTH OUT OF EXCELSIOR..... 381
HANSON, GLADYS 372
HERBERT BRENON BACK FROM COAST. 354
"HER MENACING PAST" (Thanhouser)... 376
"HIS LESSON" (Majestic)..... 348
HOLMES, HELEN 382
HORSTMAN WANTS TO RETIRE..... 396

IMPROMPTU COMEDY AT VITAGRAPH THEATER 345
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES..... 417
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES..... 438
INTER MOUNTAIN TRADE CONDITIONS. 346

JANIS, ELSIE 388

KEITH BUYS MAINE THEATER..... 397

LA PEARL, HARRY 349
LASKY GETS FAMOUS STAR..... 372
LEE, KATHERINE 375
LEOPOLD WHARTON, DIRECTOR..... 378
LICENSED FILM STORIES..... 410
LICENSED RELEASE DATES..... 442

MAILES, CHARLES HILL..... 347
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.... 390
"MASHER" NUISANCE UP AGAIN..... 401
McDOWELL, CLAIRE 348
"MILLIONAIRE ENGINEER, THE" (Imp.) 382
MISS PICKFORD GOES TO LOS ANGELES 345
MOTION PICTURE LAWS 357
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR..... 384

"NEEDS OF COMMERCE, THE" (Edison). 388
NOTES OF THE TRADE..... 393

PAPE, LIONEL 379
PATHE SAILS FOR EUROPE..... 242
PERKINS, SETH D..... 389
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT 361
PICTURE THEATERS PROJECTED..... 395
PROHIBITS CAFE PICTURES..... 403
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 363

"RESTITUTION" (American) 349
"RETRIEVING THE PAST" (Warner).... 380
"RUNAWAY JUNE" (Reliance)..... 374

SAMOLOFF, LEONID 376
"SAMSON" (Box Office) 383
SHELDON LEWIS WITH PATHE..... 356
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 442
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).. 438
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features)..... 440
SUNDAY SHOWS IN INDIANA..... 407

TAX MAY LAST TWO YEARS..... 398
THEBY, ROSEMARY 374
"TRUTH WAGON, THE" (Masterpiece).... 383

UNITED FILM SERVICE OUTLOOK..... 354
UNIVERSAL HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION. 343

"VICTORIA CROSS, THE" (Cosmofotofilm). 375

WHO HAS SEEN MRS. BARUCH?..... 376

"ZUDORA" NOS. 8 AND 9..... 378

TO ADVERTISERS.

ASBESTOS SUPPLIES.
JOHNS, H. W.-MANVILLE CO..... 426

CARBONS AND CARBON ACCESSORIES.
HOMMELL, LUDWIG CO..... 415
KIEWERT, CHAS. L., CO..... 431
REISINGER, HUGO 441

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
CUSHMAN MOTOR WORKS..... 449
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS..... 447
ERKER BROS. 448
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS..... 449
FULTON, E. E..... 447
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO..... 444
HALLBERG, J. H..... 411
MOORE-HUBBEL & CO..... 426
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO.. 434
L. C. SMITH & CO..... 448
SWAAB, L. M..... 446
STRELINGER, CHAS. A..... 426

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE..... 416
BRADENBURGH, G. W..... 448
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO..... 426
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO. 442
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE..... 447

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO..... 311
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.... 300
RELIANCE MOTION PICTURE CO....312-13
THANHOUSER FILM CORP..... 325
THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.....298-99
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.....301, 439

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO..... 445

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH 419
EDISON, THOS. A., INC..... 334
ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.....302-05
KALEM. 329, 338
KLEINE, GEO. 330-33
LUBIN MFG. CO..... 335
MINA FILMS 443
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO..... 451
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....336-37

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALBUQUERQUE FILM MFG. CO. (UNITED FILM) 425
ALLIANCE FILM CORP..... 433
BOSWORTH, INC. 319
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION CO.....326-28
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO..... 446
COSMOS FEATURE FILM CO..... 435
COSMOFOTOFILM CO. 321
CRYSTAL FILM CO..... 424
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....306-07
FEATURES IDEAL (UNITED FILM)..... 423
GAUMONT CO. (UNITED FILM)..... 423
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO..... 320
HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM CO..... 444
KRITERION SERVICE. 428-29
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO.308-09
MITTENTHAL FILM CO..... 425
NEILSEN, F. O..... 413
PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP..... 310
PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.....314-18
RAMO FILMS (UNITED FILM)..... 422
RANFAX FILM CO..... 431
SMALLWOOD FILM CORP. (UNITED FILM) 424
ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO. (UNITED FILM)..... 422
SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO..... 450
U. S. FEATURE FILM CO..... 437
WARNER'S FEATURES (UNITED FILM SERVICE). 324
WORLD FILM CORP.....322-23
WYANDOTTE FILM SUPPLY CO..... 448

MISCELLANEOUS.
ALL COMEDY FILMS, INC..... 426
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO..... 448
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO..... 412
BUTTS ADVERTISING CO..... 416
BENDER, GEO..... 432
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS. 435
COMEDY, CARE M. P. WORLD..... —
COMSTOCK PUBLISHING CO..... 426
CORCORAN, A. J..... 426
CRANE, FRANK H..... 426
EASTMAN KODAK CO..... 445
FRANKLIN, SIDNEY. 426
GUNBY BROS. 447
HUNTER-BRETON PHOTOPLAY EXCHANGE. 446
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.... 448
KESSELL ADVERTISING SYSTEM..... 448
KRAUS MFG. CO..... 445
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE..... 416
MUELLER, LOUIS. 426
McGUIRE, W. C..... 426
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO..... 426
NATIONAL TICKET CO..... 438
POWELL, FRANK. 437
SMALLWOOD FILM CORP..... 446
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO..... 415
STOCKTON'S SCRIPT WRITING SERVICE 449
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO... 448
WOHLGEMUTH, CHEMIST 395
WORLD FILM CORP..... 445

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C..... 415
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO..... 414
SINN, CLARENCE E..... 447

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO..... 449
ANDREWS, A. H., CO..... 449
HARDESTY MFG. CO..... 449
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO..... 449
STEEL FURNITURE CO..... 449
WISCONSIN SEATING CO..... 449

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO..... 418
GOES LITHOGRAPHING CO..... 446
MENGER & RING..... 414
NEWMAN MFG. CO..... 416
RAWSON & EVANS CO..... 448
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO..... 415

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO..... 447
POWER, NICHOLAS CO..... 452
PRECISION MACHINE CO..... 421

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO..... 444
GENTER, J. H..... 446
MILLER, R. A. & SONS..... 414

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
NIAGARA SLIDE CO..... 395
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO..... 448

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO..... 447

RELEASED JANUARY 11th BOOK FROM YOUR EXCHANGE

BEULAH POYNTER In Her Greatest Success

"THE LITTLE GIRL THAT HE FORGOT" A Five-Part Drama of intense heart interest and human appeal.

Cosmos Feature Film Corporation 126 W. 46th Street, New York City

FRANK POWELL

PRODUCER OF

Augustin McHugh's

"OFFICER 666" - - - - 6 Reels

Porter Emerson Browne's

"A FOOL THERE WAS" - - 6 Reels

Izrael Zangwill's

"THE CHILDREN of the GHETTO" 5 Reels

Forrest Halsey's

"THE STAIN" - - - - - 6 Reels

Address THE SCREEN CLUB, New York City

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS

The U. S. Feature Film Company of Oroville, California

PRESENTS

"The Folly of a Life of Crime"

A Six Part Feature

It has just been released and territory rights selling. The story of the world famous outlaws and train robbers.

SONTAG AND EVANS OF CALIFORNIA

Featuring George Sontag, one of the famous band who was lately pardoned from a life sentence in Folsom Prison. A thrilling story that will hold an audience spellbound to the last scene. Now playing to packed houses in California.

ALL OTHER TERRITORY OPEN

Beautiful four tone lithographs as follows:

24 sheet stands, 1 kind; 16 sheets, 1 kind; 8 sheets, 1 kind; 6 sheets, 2 kinds; 3 sheets, 2 kinds; and 1 sheets, 3 kinds.

U. S. FEATURE FILM COMPANY

Main Office, Oroville, Cal.

Eastern Representative, DOUGLAS R. JACOBS
Hotel Flanders, 135 W. 47th St., N. Y. City

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

UNIVERSAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Eclair, L-Ko, Rex.
Monday—Imp, Joker, Victor.
Tuesday—Big "U," Gold Seal, Nestor.
Wednesday—Animated Weekly, Eclair, L-Ko.
Thursday—Big "U," Rex, Sterling.
Friday—Imp, Nestor, Victor.
Saturday—Bison, Joker, Powers.

BISON.

Jan. 9—Custer's Last Scout (Two parts—Dr.).
Jan. 16—The Governor Maker (Two Parts—Modern—Drama).
Jan. 23—Old Peg-Leg's Will (Two parts—Mining Drama).

BIG U.

Jan. 12—The Useless One (Drama).
Jan. 14—The Hearts of the Brady's (Western—Drama).
Jan. 19—The Dear Old Hypocrite (Drama).
Jan. 21—Their Island of Happiness (Two parts—Drama).

ECLAIR.

Jan. 3—The Hermit's Secret (Western—Dr.).
Jan. 6—The Collingsby Pearls (Two parts—Society Drama).
Jan. 10—The Dummy Husband (Comedy-Dr.).
Jan. 13—Reunited (Two Parts—Domestic—Dr.).
Jan. 17—Romance in Bear Creek (Western—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Lone Game (Two parts—Western—Drama).
Jan. 24—The Clue of the Portrait (Drama).

GOLD SEAL.

Jan. 5—The Mystery of the Throne Room (My Lady Raffles Series) (Two parts—Detective Drama).
Jan. 12—A Woman's Debt (Two Parts—Dr.).
Jan. 19—Smugglers' Island (Two parts—Sea Coast—Drama).

IMP.

Jan. 4—Three Times and Out (Comedy-Dr.).
Jan. 8—She Was His Mother (Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—No release this week.
Jan. 15—A Gentleman of Art (Two Parts—Detective—Drama).
Jan. 18—On Dangerous Ground (Drama).
Jan. 22—The House of Fear (Three parts—Melodrama).

JOKER.

Jan. 4—Two of a Kind (Comedy).
Jan. 9—A Political Mess (Comedy).
—The Modern Poultry Farm (Edu.).
Jan. 11—The Butler's Baby (Comedy).
Jan. 16—Hubby's Cure (Comedy).
—Quaint Brittany (Educational).
Jan. 18—The Hicktown Rivale (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Fools and Pajamas (Comedy).

L-KO.

Jan. 10—Through a Knot Hole (Comedy).
Jan. 13—Thou Shalt Not Flirt (Comedy).
Jan. 17—Caught With the Goods (Comedy).
Jan. 20—Every Inch a Hero (Comedy).
Jan. 24—The Death of Simon La Gree (Comedy).

NESTOR.

Jan. 8—When His Lordship Proposed (Com.).
Jan. 12—A Maid by Proxy (Comedy).
Jan. 15—When the Mummy Cried for Help (Comedy).
Jan. 19—When Cupid Caught a Thief (Comedy).
Jan. 22—When the Deacon Swore (Comedy).

POWER'S.

Jan. 9—A Girl of the Pines (Drama).
Jan. 16—An Outlaw's Honor (Western—Dr.).
Jan. 23—Uncle Sam's Phenomenal Achievement (Educational).

REX.

Jan. 7—A Man's Temptation (Drama).
Jan. 10—Star of the Sea (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—Pawns of Fate (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 17—A Small Town Girl (Two Parts—Human Interest—Drama).
Jan. 21—Six Months to Live (Drama).
Jan. 24—The Temptation of Edwin Swayne (Two parts—Drama).

STERLING.

Dec. 24—Innocent Dad (Comedy)
Dec. 31—Love and Water (Comedy).
Jan. 7—Olive's Love Affair (Comedy).
Jan. 14—Those German Bowlers (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Dude Raffles (Comedy).

VICTOR.

Jan. 4—Terence O'Rourke, Gentleman Adventurer Series—"A Captain of Villainy (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 8—No Release this Week.
Jan. 11—My Lady High and Mighty (Two Parts—Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 15—Father's Strategy (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 18—Father's Three (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—No Release this week.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES.

Dec.—Damon and Pythias (Six Parts—Drama).
Nov. 16—The Master Key, No. 1 (Three Parts—Drama).
Nov. 23—The Master Key, No. 2 (Two Parts—Drama).
Nov. 30—The Master Key, No. 3 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 7—The Master Key, No. 4 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 14—The Master Key, No. 5 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—The Master Key, No. 6 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—The Master Key, No. 7 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—The Master Key, No. 8 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Master Key, No. 9 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Master Key, No. 10 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Master Key, No. 11 (Two Parts—Drama).

MUTUAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Komic, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Monday—American, Keystone, Reliance.
Tuesday—Beauty, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Wednesday—American, Broncho, Reliance.
Thursday—Domino, Keystone, Mutual Weekly.
Friday—American, Kay-Bee, Majestic or Thanhouser, Princess, Reliance.
Saturday—Keystone, Reliance, Royal.

AMERICAN.

Jan. 6—The Alarm of Angelon (Drama).
Jan. 11—Restitution (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 13—The Black Ghost Bandit (Drama).
Jan. 15—The Clubman's Wager (Drama).
—Producing a Nation's Pride (Edu.).
Jan. 18—Refining Fires (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Crucifixion of Al Brady (Western—Drama).

BEAUTY.

Jan. 5—In the Vale of Sorrow (Drama).
Jan. 12—The Spirit of Giving (Drama).
Jan. 19—A Girl and Two Boys (Drama).

BRONCHO.

Jan. 13—Mother Hulda Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Chinatown Mystery (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 20—A Lucky Blowout (Two parts—Drama).

DOMINO.

Jan. 14—In the Land of the Otter (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 21—The Still on Sunset Mountain (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—Through the Murk (Two Parts—Dr.).

KAY BEE.

Jan. 15—The Cross of Fire (Two Parts—Dr.).
Jan. 22—Sargeant Jim's Horse (Drama).
Jan. 22—The Man Who Died (Drama).
Jan. 29—Bottomless Pit (Drama).
Jan. 29—The Famine (Drama).

KEYSTONE.

Dec. 31—Hogan's Wild Oats (Comedy).
—A Steel Rolling Mill (Educational).
Jan. 2—A Dark Lover's Play (Comedy)
Jan. 4—Hushing the Scandal (Two parts—Comedy).

KOMIC.

Jan. 3—Ethel Gets the Evidence (No. 14 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy).
Jan. 10—Love and Business (Comedy).
Jan. 17—A Flyer in Spring Water, No. 15 of the "Bill" Series (Comedy).
Jan. 24—A Flurry in Art (Comedy).

MAJESTIC.

Jan. 10—Three Brothers (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 12—Probation (Drama).
Jan. 17—What Might Have Been (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—On the Table Top (Drama).
Jan. 24—The Better Man (Drama).

PRINCESS.

Jan. 8—Check No. 130 (Drama).
Jan. 15—Pleasing Uncle (Comedy).
Jan. 22—An Innocent Burglar (Drama).

RELIANCE.

Jan. 9—The Lost Receipt (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—Our Mutual Girl, No. 52 (Topical).
Jan. 13—The Terror of the Mountains (Dr.).
Jan. 16—One Flight Up (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Mutual Monographs.
Jan. 20—The Sea Brat (Drama).
Jan. 22—After Twenty Years (Drama).
Jan. 23—The Craven (Two parts—Drama).

ROYAL.

Jan. 2—Putting It Over (Comedy).
Jan. 9—Married by Installment (Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Unwilling Bride (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Her Hero (Comedy).

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 10—An Inside Tip (Drama).
Jan. 12—The Speed King (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 17—A Yellowstone Honeymoon (Drama).
Jan. 19—Craft vs. Love (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 24—The Dog Catcher's Bride (Comedy).
Jan. 26—Finger Prints of Fate (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Volunteer Fireman (Drama).
Jan. 31—Helen Intervenes (Drama).

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

Nov. 23—Zudora, Episode No. 1, "The Mystic Message of the Spotted Collar" (Two Parts—Drama).
Nov. 30—Zudora, Episode No. 2, "The Mystery of the Sleeping House" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 7—Zudora, Episode No. 3, "The Mystery of the Dutch Cheese Maker" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 14—Zudora, Episode No. 4, "The Secret of the Haunted Hills" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—Zudora, Episode No. 5, "The Case of the Perpetual Glare" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—Zudora, Episode No. 6, "The Case of the McWinter Family" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—Zudora, Episode No. 7, "The Mystery of the Lost Ships" (Two Parts—Drama).

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand.....$1.25
Ten Thousand.....$2.50
Twenty Thousand.....$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand.....$5.50
Fifty Thousand.....$6.50
One Hundred Thousand.....$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000 $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

Universal Weekly News

A page of vitally important news published by the Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1600 Broadway, New York, for the interest of all exhibitors

WEEK OF JAN. 16th NEW YORK CITY 1915

Have You Insured Your Business Against Failure For 1915?

YOU carry life insurance, don't you? You perhaps carry health and accident insurance, too. You certainly carry insurance against loss by fire. Have you ever thought of insuring yourself against loss in your business caused by poor service—junk subjects and a program of junk pictures? Do you realize that you CAN insure your business against failure by getting UNIVERSAL SERVICE? Isn't the success of your business as vitally important to you as the other things on which you carry insurance? Wouldn't it make you feel safe and secure and mighty good, too, to ABSOLUTELY KNOW that your business is going to flourish and increase in 1915? Wouldn't you like to be able to go home and sleep sound nights, free from all worry, doubt and fear of failure all through the year 1915 and future years? YOU CAN DO IT if you use the UNIVERSAL WEEKLY PROGRAM. Do you realize that THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM hits the masses, the majority of people as well as the classes? Don't you realize that you need C-R-O-W-D-S (which constitute both the masses and the classes)?

Do you or don't you know that the UNIVERSAL PROGRAM hits all your people at the same time? Don't you know that The UNIVERSAL PROGRAM of weekly releases is the ONE AND ONLY program that catches the majority? If you don't know it, if you are asleep to this colossal fact, for goodness sake, Mr. Exhibitor, WAKE UP. If you insure yourself against sickness or accident, or loss through fire, why not insure the success of your business by getting the world's most versatile, most fascinating, most remarkable program—The UNIVERSAL PROGRAM? Get in touch with your Exchange immediately for 1915.

Do You Want the Real Inside Facts of the Film Business?

OUR big 40-page UNIVERSAL WEEKLY is the one publication (issued each week) that dares to publish the real inside facts of the film business, telling the truth about things that you want to know and that Trade Papers don't, won't and can't tell you. If you want to know the real insides, read UNIVERSAL WEEKLY. It's crammed from cover to cover with things you ought to know, things that are of vital interest to your business problems and your success. If you don't get UNIVERSAL WEEKLY, we will send it to you FREE for 3 months on trial. Send your name and address and the name of your theatre to The Editor Universal Weekly, 1600 Broadway, New York. Do it this minute before you forget it.

Book from the Big, Smashing Universal Program which includes the following special features:

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

Seven splendid feature releases top the weekly bill of the ever ahead Universal Program. They present a varied range of vivid heart interest in which the silent drama runs the complete gamut of human emotions.

THE FLASH.—An absorbing story of love and villainy—faithful portrayal of a hospital operating room, the opiate needle as a woman's protector—and the climatic scene when the blind father is permitted by a divine Providence to regain his sight for a flash—hence the title—long enough to protect his daughter's honor. Two reel Rex Drama featuring Herbert Rawlinson.

THE AWAITED HOUR.—A tense and gripping depiction of a condemned prisoner's confession—the causes that led to his crime of revenge will sway an audience in sympathy—and the finale is worthy of the serious acting of the famous Imp Stars—William Welch and Violet Mersereau, whom it features.

THE CARDS NEVER LIE.—Given a handsome vagabond, an heiress, a jealous Gypsy girl, an unexpected fortune, and you have the ingredients of one of the strongest two-reel features that has ever fallen to the lot of Harry Meyers and Rosemary Theby. Whether or not the Gypsy's prophecy—"The Cards Never Lie," is to be fulfilled, holds the audience tensely spell-bound. Two reels, produced by the Victor Studio.

RIDGEWAY OF MONTANA.—A mining war furnishes the incidents of this drama of virility. An animated battle of wits between a large and small mine operator—thrilling explosion scene and a most satisfactory ending. The scenario by William McCleod Reime offers a great opportunity to William Clifford and Marie Walcamp.

HER BARGAIN.—To say that this shows Sydney Ayres at his best is almost to tell the story of the emotional complications that crowd scene after scene with human interest—the heroine playing opposite finds in this two-reel Big Universal Drama a particularly sympathetic role.

THE GIRL OF THE SECRET SERVICE.—Do not imagine from the title that this is a softly feminine drama—for the operative from whom the story takes its name is equal to any emergency—physical as well as mental—Grace Cunard in the title role meets the demand for action superbly. Two reels—Gold Seal Drama.

THE LURE OF THE WEST.—Western Drama, western atmosphere—the bigness and beauty of the land of the setting sun—crowd this two-reel Eclair Feature with absorbing romance. One of the best of the peerless productions for which the Eclair sets the standard.

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

1600 Broadway, New York

MISCELLANEOUS INDEPENDENT and FEATURE RELEASES

ALL RED FEATURE CO.

Dec.—The War Pigeon (Drama).

ALCO FILM CORP.

Nov. 23—The Education of Mr. Pipp (All Star Comedy).
Dec. 14—The Three of Us (Rolfe—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—Tillie's Punctured Romance (Keystone Six Parts—Comedy).
Dec. 28—Springtime (Drama).
Jan. 4—The Garden of Lies (Five Parts—Dr.).

ALLIANCE FILM CORP.

Nov. 23—When Fate Leads Trump (Excelsior—Five Parts—Drama).
Nov. 30—Hearts and Flowers (Cosmos—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec. 7—The Last Egyptian (Oz -Five Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Truth Wagon (Masterpiece—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Last Chapter (Favorite Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—In the Shadow (Drama).

APEX.

Nov.—When London Sleeps (Four Parts—Dr.).
Dec.—A Life at Stake (Five Parts—Drama).
Jan.—For King or Kaiser (Drama).
Jan—The Vultures of the Coast (Three parts—Drama).

BLINKHORN PHOTOPLAYS CORP.

Nov.—Jane Eyre (Whitman—Four Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Witness Invisible (Three Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Aviator Traitor (Three Parts—Dr.).

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS CO.

Nov. 19—The Walls of Jericho (Drama).
Nov. 29—The Thief (Drama).
Dec.—The Idler (Drama).
Dec.—Samson (Drama).
Dec.—A Fool There Was (Drama).
Jan—The Children of the Ghetto (Drama).
Jan—The Gilded Fool (Drama).
Jan—The Butterfly on the Wheel (Drama).
Jan—The World and His Wife (Drama).

COSMOFOTOFILM CO.

Dec.—The Black Spot (Drama).
Dec.—The Two Columbines (Drama).
Dec.—A Christmas Carol (Drama).

ECLECTIC.

Jan—The Bomb Boy (Pathe—Three parts—Comedy-Drama).
Jan—The Red Scar of Courage (Pathe—Two parts—Drama).
—A Storm on the Welsh Coast (Edu.).
Jan—Rastus' Rabid Rabbit Hunt (Comedy-Cartoon).
—Gingi—Southern India (Educational).
Jan—The Secret of the Mountain (Pathe—Four parts—Drama).
—Sugar Making (Cuba) (Educational).
Jan—The Life of Our Saviour (Pathe—Seven Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—The Exploits of Elaine, Episode 2 (Pathe—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan—The Old Thespian (Pathe—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan—Shot in the Fracas (Pathe-Comedy).
Jan—Nick Winter and the Mysterious Bank (Pathe—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan—The Birth of Plants (Pathe—Educational).
Jan.—The Price of Tyranny (Pathe—Four Parts—Drama).
Jan.—Ramiet and Julio (Pathe—Cartoon—Comedy).
—Malga, Southern Spain (Pathe—Educational).
Jan.—A Scratch of the Pen (Pathe—Two Parts—Drama).

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

Nov.—The Charlotte Street Mystery (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Adventures of Gar El Hama (Four Parts—Drama).

HEPWORTH.

Dec.—The Basilisk (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec.—Through the Valley of Shadows (Four Parts—Drama).

HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM CO.

Nov. 16—Joe Boko Breaking Into the Big League (Cartoon—Comedy).
Nov. 23—Aladdin Jones (Two Parts—Comedy).

HISTORICAL PICTURES CO.

Nov.—Indian Wars Refought by United States Army (Six Parts—Topical).

INTERNATIONAL MOTION PICTURE CO.

Nov. 16—On Belgian Battlefields (Four Parts Topical).

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA.

Dec.—Jules Porel-Serpent (Three Parts—Dr.).
Dec.—The Treasure of the Louzats (Four Parts—Drama).

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, INC.

Dec.—Should a Woman Divorce? (Five Parts—Drama).

KINETOPHOTE & K. & C. BOOKING CO., INC.

Nov. 23—The Spirit of the Poppy (Six Parts—Drama).
Dec. 7—The Span of Life (Five Parts—Dr.).
Dec. 21—The Little Jewess (Four Parts—Dr.).

LEEMUND FILM CO.

Dec.—The Robbers (Three Parts—Drama).

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM.

Jan. 4—Girl of the Golden West (Lasky-Belasco—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Dancing Girl (Famous Players—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—Aurora Leigh (Smalleys—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—It's No Laughing Matter (Bosworth—Drama).
Jan. 21—Young Romance (Lasky—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Goose Girl (Lasky—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—After Five (Lasky-Liebler—Five parts—Drama).

PHOTO DRAMA CO., INC.

Jan.—Time Lock Number 776 (Six Parts—Dr.).

THE E. & R. JUNGLE FILM CO.

Nov.—Children of the Jungle (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec.—Hunting the Real Python (Drama).
Dec.—From the Jungle to the Stage (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Jungle Cure (Two Parts—Drama).

SAWYER.

Dec. 20—Without Hope (Flamingo—Five Parts—Drama).
As a Man Sows (Aquilla—Five Parts—Drama).
A Factory Magdalen (Five Parts—Drama).
The Lady of Lyons (Five Parts—Drama).

STRAND FILM CO.

December—A Double Haul (Baco—Three Parts—Drama).
December—A Strange Adventure (Drama).

SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO.

Jan—Rescue of the Steffansson Arctic Expedition (Topical).

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORP.

Jan. 31—Runaway June (Reliance—Two Parts—

UNITED WARNERS.

December—The Love of Princess Yolande (Dr.).
Dec. 3—A Mountain Goat (Luna—Comedy).
Dec. 10—Shot in the Fracas (Luna—Comedy).
Dec. 17—Finished at Sea (Luna-Comedy).
Dec. 17—Rural Romeos (Luna-Comedy).
Dec. 21—The Adopted Daughter (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec. 24—His Neighbor's Pants (Luna-Comedy).
Dec. 24—The Chaser (Luna—Comedy).
Dec. 31—The Big Stick (Luna—Comedy).
Dec. 31—Too Many Wives (Luna—Comedy).
Jan.—The Heart of a Man (Drama).
Dec.—The Little Rebel (Drama).
Dec. 21—The Adopted Daughter (Smallwood—Three Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—Cupid Kicks a Goal (Smallwood—Comedy Drama).
Jan. 4—The Burglar and the Mouse (Smallwood—Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 11—His Doll Wife (Smallwood—Comedy—Drama).
Jan.—Are They Born or Made (Drama).

WORLD FILM CORP.

Dec. 7—Seats of the Mighty (Colonial—Six Parts—Drama).
Dec. 7—In the Name of the Prince of Peace (Special Release—Four Parts—Dr.).
Dec. 14—The Marked Woman (Shubert—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—As Ye Sow (Brady—Five Parts—Dr.).
Dec. 28—The Pit (Brady—Five Parts—Dr.).
Jan. 4—Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch (Calif. M. P. Corp—Comedy).
Jan. 11—Deep Purple (Lieber—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Mignon (Calif. M. P. Corp.—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—Wildfire (Drama).

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY

To acquire a unique book of compelling interest.

At the end of each quarter year, we have bound in book form every issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for the previous three months, including a complete index of all releases during that period.

The result is, instead of having individual copies of the publication accumulating for months and probably years, only to be misplaced or maybe lost, you have an interesting and attractive Library of Quarterly BOUND VOLUMES, bound in dark green cloth.

Sent on Receipt of $1.50, F. O. B. New York

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 MADISON AVENUE NEW YORK

ELECTRA

PINK LABEL

CARBONS

ON HAND IN MY WAREHOUSE A STOCK OF THE FOLLOWING SIZES:

3/4 x 12 cored	3/4 x 6 cored
5/8 x 12 "	5/8 x 6 "
5/8 x 7 1/2 "	5/8 x 7 1/2 "

CAN NOW BE SUPPLIED AT REASONABLE PRICES.

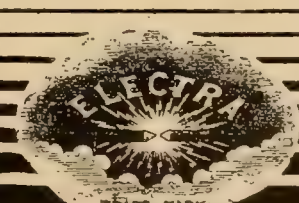
UNDER PRESENT EXISTING CONDITIONS I WOULD REQUEST THAT EXHIBITORS PLACE THEIR ORDERS DIRECT WITH THEIR EXCHANGES AS THIS WILL ASSURE A WIDER DISTRIBUTION OF THE STOCK ON HAND.

"ELECTRA" CARBONS
Are a Guarantee of Perfect Projection

HUGO REISINGER

Sole Importer

11 Broadway, New York City



LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.
Tuesday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.
Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.
Friday — Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.
Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 4—From the Shadow (Drama).
Jan. 5—Money (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 7—Playthings of Fate (Drama).
Jan. 8—The Barrier Between (Drama).
Jan. 9—A Safe Adventure (Comedy).
—The Fashion Shop (Comedy).
Jan. 11—The Girl He Brought Home (Drama).
Jan. 12—The Third Act (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—Getting Into a Scrape (Comedy).
—Near-Educational Series, "The Cheese Industry" (Comedy).
Jan. 15—The Inevitable Retribution (Drama).
Jan. 16—The House of Horror (Drama).

EDISON.

Jan. 5—Olive and the Burglar (Seventh of the "Olive Opportunities" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 6—Expensive Economy (Comedy).
Jan. 8—The Magnate of Paradise (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 9—The Girl at the Key (Drama).
Jan. 11—A Superfluous Baby (Thirteenth of Wood B. Wedd Series) (Comedy).
Jan. 12—Olive's Other Self (Eighth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
Jan. 13—Curing the Cook (Comedy).
—McGinty and the Count (Comedy).
Jan. 15—Lena (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Banker's Double (Drama).
Jan. 18—To Make the Nation Prosper (Drama).
Jan. 19—Olive's Manufactured Mother (Ninth of Olive's Opportunities—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Wonders of Magnetism (Educational).
—A Weighty Matter for a Detective (Comedy).
Jan. 22—Tracked by the Hounds (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 23—Mr. Daly's Wedding Day (Drama).

ESSANAY.

Jan. 4—Sweedie and the Sultan's Present (Comedy).
Jan. 5—The Gallantry of "Jimmy" Rogers (Comedy Drama).
Jan. 6—The Fable of the City Grafter and the Unprotected Rubes (Comedy).
Jan. 7—The Battle of Snakeville (Western—Comedy).
Jan. 8—Surgeon Warren's Ward (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 9—Broncho Billy and the Claim Jumpers (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office) (Western—Drama).
Jan. 11—Sweedie's Suicide (Comedy).
Jan. 12—By a Strange Road (Drama).
Jan. 13—The Fable of "The Fellow Who Had a Friend Who Knew a Girl Who Had a Friend" (George Ade Com.).
Jan. 14—When Slippery Slim Went for the Eggs (Western—Comedy).
Jan. 15—Dear Old Girl (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 16—Broncho Billy and the Sisters (Reg. U. S. Pat Office—Western—Drama).
Jan. 18—Sweedie and Her Dog (Comedy).
Jan. 19—The Misjudged Mr. Hartley (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Fable of Hifaluting Tillie and Her Plain Parents (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Sentimental Sophie (Western Comedy).
Jan. 22—The Lieutenant Governor (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 23—Broncho Billy and the Baby (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office) (Western Drama).

KALEM.

Jan. 4—Cast Up by the Sea (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 5—The Waitress and the Boobs (Comedy).
Jan. 6—The Scorpion's Sting (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 8—Put Me Off at Wayville (Comedy).
Jan. 9—A Leap from the Water Tower (Ninth of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Adventure at Briarcliff (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 12—A Bold, Bad Burglar (Comedy).
Jan. 13—The Stolen Ruby (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 15—A Boob for Luck (Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Broken Circuit (Tenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 18—The Leech (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—Cornelius and the Wild Man (Comedy).
—A Night in New Jersey (Cartoon Comedy).
Jan. 20—The Cabaret Singer (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—Cooky's Adventure (Comedy).
Jan. 23—The Fast Mail's Danger (Eleventh of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Dr.).

LUBIN.

Jan. 4—Patsy Bolivar, Series No. 2—Patsy's First Love (Comedy).
Jan. 5—The New Editor (Comedy).
—They Looked Alike (Comedy).
Jan. 6—Comrade Kitty (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 7—A War Baby (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 8—Love's Savage Hate (Drama).
Jan. 9—Feel My Muscle (Comedy).
Jan. 11—Patsy Bolivar, No. 3—Patsy at College (Comedy).
Jan. 12—Baseball and Trouble (Comedy).
Jan. 13—When Honor Wakes (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—The Friendship of Lamond (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 15—Out of the Storm (Drama).
Jan. 16—Mr. Stubb's Pen (Comedy).
—Spaghetti and Lottery (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Patsy Bolivar Series No. 4—Patsy's Vacation (Comedy).
Jan. 19—Gus and the Anarchists (Comedy).
—Cupid's Target (Comedy).
Jan. 20—Her Weakling Brother (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 21—The Shanghaied Baby (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—A Question of Conscience (Drama).
Jan. 23—Shoddy, the Tailor (Comedy).

MINA.

Dec. 31—The Siege of Liege (Comedy).
Jan. 7—Alias Greased Lightning (Comedy).
Jan. 14—Distilled Spirits (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Dare-Devil Harry (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Behind the Bars (Comedy).

SELIG.

Jan. 4—The Strange Case of Princess Khan (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 1 (News).
Jan. 5—A Militant Schoolma'am (Comedy-Dr.)
Jan. 6—In the Line of Duty (Drama).
Jan. 7—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 2 (News).
Jan. 8—The Strenuous Life (Farce-Comedy).
Jan. 9—Further Adventures of Sammy Orpheus (Drama).
Jan. 11—The Old Code (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 3 (News).
Jan. 12—Harold's Bad Man (Comedy).
Jan. 13—The Richest Girl in the World (Dr.).
Jan. 14—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 4 (News).
Jan. 15—The Snailburg Volunteers (Comedy).
Jan. 16—Robert Thorne Forecloses (Drama).
Jan. 18—His Fighting Blood (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 5 (News).
Jan. 19—Cactus Jim's Shop Girl (Western—Comedy).
Jan. 20—Between Matinee and Night (Drama).
Jan. 21—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 6 (News).
Jan. 22—Who Wants to be a Hero (Farce-Comedy).
Jan. 23—The Primitive Way (Drama).

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 2—In the Latin Quarter (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—The Fates and Flora Fourflush (Part 1 of the Ten Billion Dollar Mystery Serial—Treachery In the Clouds) (Comedy).
Jan. 5—Two Women (Broadway Star Feature—Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 6—Billy's Wager (Comedy).
Jan. 7—The Man, the Mission and the Maid (Comedy-Drama).
Jan. 8—The Smoking Out of Bella Butts (Comedy).
Jan. 9—A Daughter of Israel (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—Fates of Flora Fourflush, Part 2—Treasure Temple of Bhosh (Com.).
Jan. 12—A Mix-Up in Dress Suit Cases (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 13—The Hair of Her Head (Comedy).
Jan. 14—The Legend of the Lone Tree (Dr.).
Jan. 15—Chiefly Concerning Males (Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Sage-Brush Gal (Broadway Star Features — Special — Three Parts — Drama).
Jan. 18—The Fates and Flora Fourflush—A Race for Life (Part Three of the Ten-Billion-Dollar Vitagraph Mystery Serial—Comedy).
Jan. 19—The Evil Men Do (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Right Girl (Comedy).
Jan. 21—The Navajo Ring (Drama).
Jan. 22—Wanted, a Nurse (Comedy).
Jan. 23—War (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).

MISCELLANEOUS LICENSED FEATURES.

BIOGRAPH.

Oct.—The Charity Ball (Three Parts—Drama).
Oct.—The Power of the Press (Four Parts—Drama).
Oct.—The Genius (Three Parts—Drama).
Nov.—The Woman in Black (Four Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—Under the Gaslight (Four Parts—Dr.).

EDISON.

Dec. 19—Fantasma (Five parts—Drama).

ESSANAY.

Nov. 19—The Tell-Tale Hand (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec. 19—The Battle of Love (Drama).
Jan. 18—When Love and Honor Called (Dr.).

GEORGE KLEINE.

Oct.—The Secret of the Ring (Three Parts—Drama).
Oct.—The Song of the Soul (Three Parts—Drama).
Oct.—Judge Not (Four Parts—Drama).
Nov. 15—Julius Caesar (Six Parts—Drama).
Nov.—Officer No. 666 (Five Parts—Comedy).

KALEM.

December—The School for Scandal (Four Parts—Drama).

LUBIN.

Nov.—Eagle's Nest (Eight Parts—Drama).
Nov.—The Sporting Duchess (Six Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Spy's Fate (Three Parts—Drama).
Nov.—The College Widow (Five Parts—Com.).
Dec.—The White Mask (Drama).
Dec.—The Valley of the Lost Hope (Drama).
Jan.—The District Attorney (Drama).

SELIG.

Nov. 11—The Story of the Blood-Red Rose (Three Parts—Drama).
Nov. 30—In the Days of the Thundering Herd (Five Parts—Drama).
January—The Carpet from Bagdad (Five Parts—Drama).
January—The Rosary (Drama).
January—The Servant in the House (Drama).
January—The Ne'er Do Well (Drama).
January—A Texas Steer (Five Parts—Comedy).
January—The Crisis (Drama).
January—History of the World's Greatest War (Five Parts—Topical).

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street. Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York.
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

Something for Nothing

A wise and thrifty artisan once sought a profitable investment for the money he had saved from a life of honest toil. An advertisement of suburban property caught his eye. It was a beautiful word painting of a country estate, cool in the shadow of giant trees, calm in the music of a silvery brook and swept by balmy salt breezes from the sea! It was two acres in extent, rich in farm land and had a peach orchard—all for $800. Here indeed was a profitable investment—one that would furnish him a living and still leave a trifle of his savings. So he sought out the agent and made the purchase, paying the sum in full. But when he went to take possession he added his scalding tears to the waters of the swamp that formed his property.

Had this poor fellow stopped to reason it out, he would have realized that the proposition was impossible—but he jumped at a chance to get something for nothing and lost his all.

YOU, MR. M. P. EXHIBITOR, ARE OFTEN LIKE THAT MAN. FOR YEARS YOU HAVE BEEN READING THE ADVERTISEMENTS OF THE FILM DISTRIBUTORS AND ALMOST INVARIABLY THEY HAVE PROMISED MORE THAN THEY COULD POSSIBLY FULFILL.

Through the magic pen of the Ad. writer every multiple becomes a masterpiece; a dozen horses, twelve troops of cavalry; and a film that cannot under the best conditions bring in over $30,000 becomes an $80,000 production.

In single reel subjects you have been promised Rudyard Kipling, Sothern & Marlowe, stereoscopic effects and color photography, all for the standard rental price.

Stop and reason it out. Film makers are business men whose prime purpose is to make money. They have no intention of giving something for nothing.

They can't spend more than they take in—and if they do they are not altruists, but bad business men headed straight to failure.

The manufacturer, as a rule, gets a definite fixed price per foot for his prints. Against this income stands the actual cost of his production, his advertising, exploitation and overhead. He is bound to leave a credit balance and if he fools you into thinking he is spending more than he can make, you are looking for SOMETHING FOR NOTHING and will end up with the man who bought the swampland.

MINA Films pretend to be no more than honest value for your money, with a guarantee that they will never be any less.

There is some photography as good as you will find in MINA Films. But we are sure there is no better.

There are several actors as good as those who appear in MINA Films—but few, if any, so well adapted to comedy work.

The directors of MINA Films were engaged because they proved to be the best by actual test in their line, but there are two or three others who are doubtless just as good.

The producer of MINA Films has had such a thorough and long experience in picture making that he is able to make his money do more than most men can, and there is probably a gain in value here; but the real superiority of MINA Films lies in the thought that plans them.

MINA Films have the comic idea—they are clean and new and funny; equal to the best in all technical points, but far ahead in this. MINA releases will prove this to you.

If you really want funny pictures that never fall below a fair average and often go way above it, book MINA Films now through your nearest licensed exchange and include them in your regular exhibition. MINA Films are released Thursdays on the GENERAL FILM PROGRAM.

MR. LAEMMLE WARNS YOU AGAINST "CHEESE"

in films. And he will be just as emphatic in warning you against using some of the cheese-cloth which is being offered you for screens. Ask him what he knows about

"THE PEERLESS" DAY — AND — NIGHT SCREEN "THE PIONEER"

THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM

It takes more than a second-hand machine, a piece of "cheese-cloth" for a screen, and "cheesy" film to run a picture show. It requires brains, intelligence and a reasonable amount of common sense. When you learn how to carry water in a sieve, then you will know how to show a picture on "cheese-cloth." One is as easy as the other

THERE IS JUST ONE

SCREEN OF QUALITY — SCREEN DE LUXE

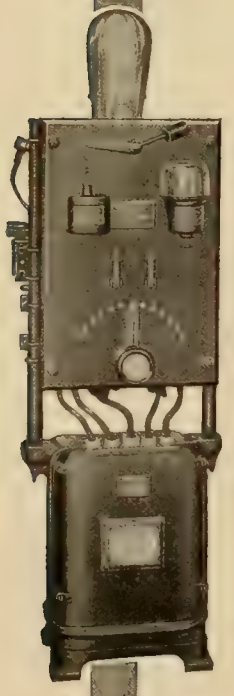
FOR CATALOGUES, SAMPLES AND TESTS, WRITE

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, Inc., 110 West 40th St., New York

LONDON PARIS BERLIN AND ALL PRINCIPAL AMERICAN CITIES TELEPHONE 7930 BRYANT



Don't Spoil a Good Film

To show a film right you must have direct current and to get direct current right you must use a Mercury Arc Rectifier. The pictures are brighter, clearer, whiter and without flicker; you soon get the reputation of showing good films as they should be shown—which means bigger box office receipts.

And the Rectifier saves you money on your current bills; many G-E Rectifier users voluntarily write that the saving is as high as 50%.

Write us for further particulars and look over booklet B3274 which is yours for the asking. And further our projecting engineers are always ready to co-operate with you.

General Electric Company

Sales Offices in All Large Cities

5278

COMEDIES

Six releases per month—Animated cartoons and comedy.

Terms on application, pictures subject to examination.

Historical Feature Film Company

105 WEST MONROE ST., CHICAGO

A clear picture

is as essential as a good scenario. Because the basic product is right the clearest pictures are on Eastman Film. Identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A FULL HOUSE

is what you're after. We can furnish the plan to bring "them" to you in droves. NO DULL NIGHTS for your house if you'll look into our up to the minute plan that will keep the business on the increase. A fully illustrated booklet now ready for YOU. It does not exploit any catch penny device, BUT A WELL TRIED and new departure of MERIT, which can be understood at a glance.

THE SILVER FRAME
we trim our eleven by fourteen pictures with has caught the fancy of the "live ones" who can see the advantages of a brilliant lobby effect. These are the little things that count.

52 LARGE PICTURES OF THE STARS 52

Hand colored, size 22 x 28 inches 75c. each—Framed, $2.50 each.

POST CARDS of all the players, 400 names, $3.00 per thousand; hand colored $10.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, size 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.

LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.

55 LARGE PICTURES HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14. Prominent players, $2.00 per dozen; in aluminum frames, 50 cents each.

Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

KRAUS MFG. CO., 220 West 42nd Street
12th Floor, CANDLER BUILDING

Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

Comedy Director WANTED

For concern manufacturing high class comedies only.

Give full information regarding previous employment. Steady employment.

Applications held in strictest confidence.

G. P., care M. P. World.

Increase Picture Quality Increase Your Profits

Picture patrons are critical of the films you show them. They know good quality, and they go where it is found. Along with good film service, you must have efficient lens equipment to hold your steady patrons. One sure way is to use

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

The finest detail in every picture thrown on the screen together with illumination of the utmost brilliancy are assured when Bausch & Lomb objectives are used.

Regularly supplied with Edison and Nicholas Power Machines.

Send for our interesting free booklet for owners and operators.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
566 ST. PAUL ST. ROCHESTER, N. Y.

SIMPLY A MATTER OF BRAINS

Regardless of whatever other manufacturers may tell you of their screens, the fact remains MIRROROIDE is the standard by which perfect projection is determined.

Over 8,000 MIRROROIDE SCREENS are in use today in Schools, Colleges and Theatres the world over.

Write to the others. Ask them how long they have been manufacturing their screens. Ask them about their resources.

Now a fair warning to imitators as well as exhibitors

MIRROROIDE is manufactured under basic patents pertaining to metalized cloth screens, and suits will be brought against all infringers. MIRROROIDE Cannot Crack, Peel, Turn Black or Tarnish. It is made in 3 Tints—Silver White, Pale Gold, Silver Flesh. 2 Grades—Medium and Heavy Matte. Perfect Projection Regardless of Angles or How Close Your Seats are placed.
Get Our Large Free Samples. Test Any Way You Desire. And remember, MIRROROIDE is sold under a 5-year Guarantee.

THE J. H. GENTER COMPANY, Inc. - - Newburgh, N. Y.

The Oldest and Largest Screen Manufacturing Concern in the World.

NOTE.—Master White at $10.00 a gallon is superior to any Curtain Coating in the world. Contains no glue, whiting or lime. It's guaranteed! 1 gallon covers a 14 x 18 surface. A child can apply it.

SCRIPTS WANTED

We require immediately two reel scripts, with the action well written out suitable for featuring a female star. Experienced writers are particularly requested to submit stories. A minimum of seventy-five dollars a story will be paid, although more money will be paid for stuff justifying the price. Prompt action guaranteed.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION
175 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK
John C. Brownell, Editor

You Watch

THE POSTERS MADE BY

Goes

CHICAGO

QUALITY AND SERVICE

ARTHUR HUNTER, Manager TED BRETON, Secretary

THE HUNTER-BRETON

PHOTOPLAYERS

EXCHANGE

Placing people of recognized talent. The only exchange in existence supplying STARS, LEADING MEN, LEADING WOMEN and DIRECTORS, CAMERAMEN

EXCLUSIVELY

Producers everywhere supplied at short notice
Artists of reputation, communicate.

1547 Broadway, New York Phone 1593 Bryant

LEWIS M. SWAAB

PIONEER SUPPLY HOUSE IN PHILADELPHIA

Principal Jobber in Power's, Simplex and Baird Machines

Mirror Screens, Motor Generator Sets, Mercury Arc Rectifiers, the Daylight Screen, Fire Extinguishers, Radium Gold Fibre Screens, Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, Power's Inductors, Ticket Choppers, Brass and Wood Poster Frames, Film Shipping Buckets, Carrying Cases, Asbestos Booths, Announcement Slides, Carbons, Oil and Cement, Exit Signs, Tickets, Pianos and Columbia Phonographs and SCREENCOAT, $3.00 per gallon will make an old screen new.

THE HOUSE WHOSE GUARANTEE IS WORTH 100%
1327 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ALLIANCE PROGRAM

One "Worth While" Feature Each Week

For

Illinois and Indiana

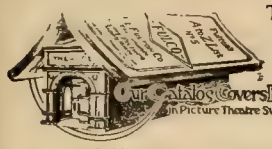
Controlled by

Celebrated Players Film Co.

Leaders in Filmdom's Progress

64 W. Randolph Street, Chicago

See Alliance Films Corp. ad. this issue for releases



The "Fulco" Book No. 5

NOW READY—ASK FOR IT

FITS YOUR POCKET

Most complete catalogue in existence of machines and supplies, involved in the presentation of

MOVING PICTURES

Buy the Best From the Best Place to Buy

E. E. FULTON CO.
152 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO
Sole Agents for the Wonderful "Guil Pastil"

QUALITY FIRST!!

YOUR NEGATIVE DEVELOPED, PRINTED, TITLED and SHIPPED within 12 hours.

5c. per foot complete

Local work given preference over all other.

6c. TITLES per foot

We lead, let those that can, follow.

GUNBY BROS., Inc.,
145 West 45th Street, New York City

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
Moving Picture Machines, Films and Chairs
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill.

Are You Tired

of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The

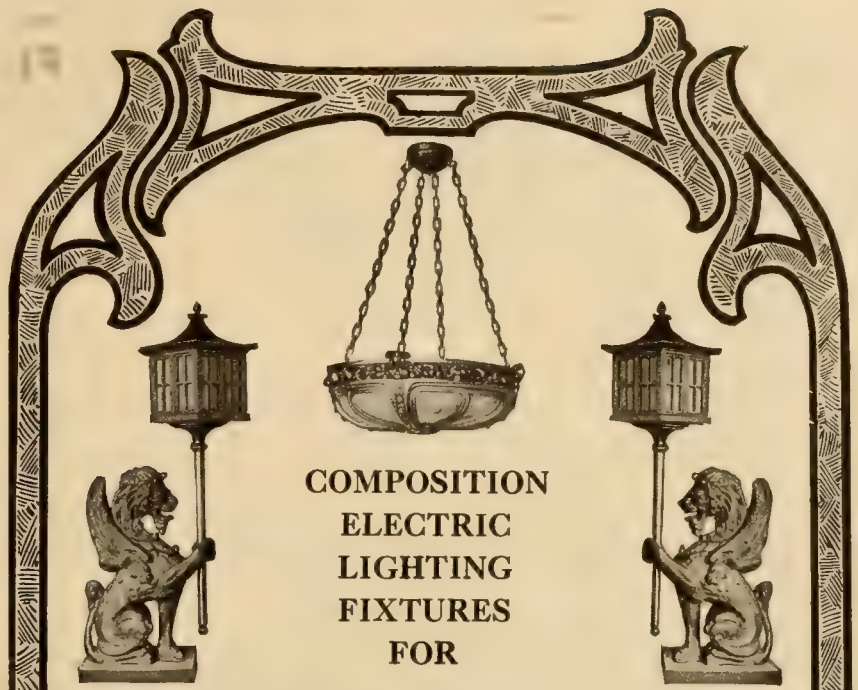
Orpheum Collection

contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:

No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3

Piano, (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts, each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1942 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.



COMPOSITION ELECTRIC LIGHTING FIXTURES FOR

MOTION PICTURE THEATRES

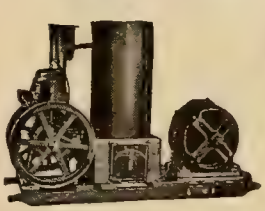
DESIGNED AND MANUFACTURED BY

The Decorators Supply Co., Chicago

SHOW ROOMS AND FACTORY LOCATED CORNER ARCHER AVE., LEO & LIME STS.

SEND US YOUR BLUE PRINTS, AND WE WILL WORK OUT THE MOST ARTISTIC AND EFFICIENT LIGHTING SCHEME

Send for Special Catalog of Ornamental Exteriors and Interiors for Motion Picture Theatres.



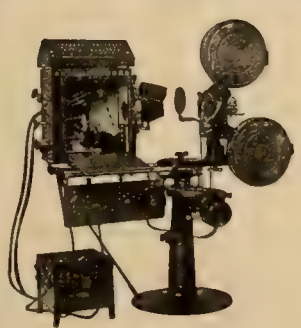
MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT

Used and highly endorsed by the United States Army. Biggest Sensation in the Moving Picture World. Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes:

"Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."

Write today for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.

(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.



THE LATEST MODEL MOTIOGRAPH IS A LEADER

For Rock Steady Pictures, Long Life and Small Up-Keep

Mr. Exhibitor—You cannot take a chance on a machine that is not made of the best material and with parts hardened. Competition is too keen. Every nickel and dime counts. You want a machine that is on the job at all times. THE MOTIOGRAPH IS A MONEY SAVER AS WELL AS THE BEST PICTURE PROJECTOR MADE. LET US PROVE IT.

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 W. Randolph St., Chicago

Eastern Office: 19 W. 23rd St., New York Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

THE ANSWER TO THE QUESTION OF ALL THAT PERTAINS TO MOTION PICTURE MACHINES - THEATRE EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES

Erker's FOR EVERYTHING

608 OLIVE ST. ST. LOUIS Mo

A. COX

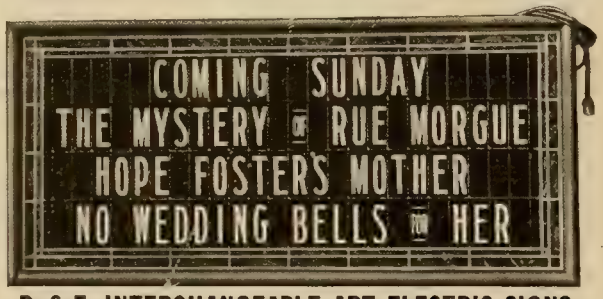
MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

10,000 SIGNS IN ONE



R. & E. INTERCHANGEABLE ART ELECTRIC SIGNS

The most attractive and practicable sign ever manufactured. Furnished with as many lines of lettering as desired. All or any part of the lettering can be white, red, blue or green. A strikingly handsome sign night or day. Write for descriptive circular and prices.

Rawson & Evans Co., 711-12 W. Washington Boulevard, Chicago

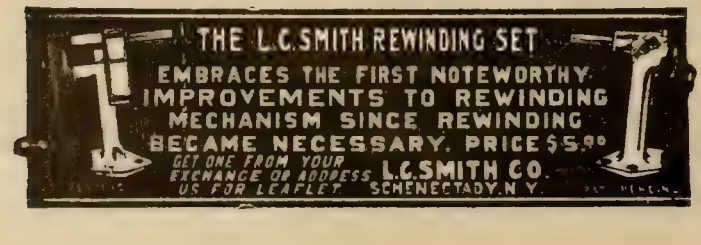
We Can Equip Your Theatre Complete

We are Distributors for the Power's, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex Machines, and Genuine parts, also Poster Frames, Indirect and Semi-Indirect Lighting Fixtures, Tickets, Screens, etc.

We sell for cash or on the easy payment plan.

Write today for our new catalog just off the press.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY,
160 No. Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

JET BLACK FILM LEADER

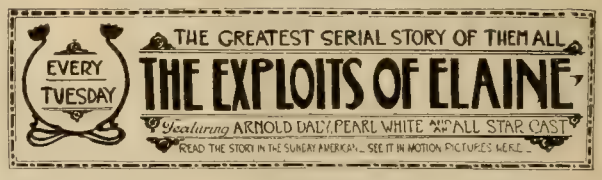
ONE CENT PER FOOT

PERFECT PERFORATIONS. NEVER BEEN RUN.

Industrial Moving Picture Company
223-233 West Erie Street - - - - CHICAGO

Business-Bringing Banners

Hand Painted, Beautifully Colored, Attractive, Artistic



EVERY TUESDAY
THE GREATEST SERIAL STORY OF THEM ALL
THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE
Featuring ARNOLD DALY, PEARL WHITE AND ALL STAR CAST
READ THE STORY IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN... SEE IT IN MOTION PICTURES NEXT...

This is a sample of our 12-foot Muslin Banner for $1.10, sent by return mail after receipt of your copy and M. O. Substitute any wording you desire and we supply an exclusive, elaborate design. One Sheet Cards at 75c.; three for $2.00. Send for catalogue.

Kessel Advertising System
71 West 23rd Street New York City

G. W. BRADENBURGH

FILMS IMPORT AND EXPORT 902 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Most Reliable in America. Terms to buyers: 25% cash with order, balance C. O. D., privilege of examination.

A SMALL SELECTION FROM OUR STOCK:

Name	Description	Length ft.	Maker	Price	Adv.
Exposure of the White Slave Traffic	Drama	3500	G. N.	100	1-3-6
The Devil's Gap	Drama	3600	D. B.	150	1-3-6
Ill-Gotten Gains	Drama	3250	Cines	150	1-3-8
Satan	Drama	5000	Amb.	200	1-3-6-9
Asta Nielsen Up to Her Tricks	Comedy	5000	Special	200	1-3-6
Asta Nielsen Cry of a Child	Drama	3000	Special	150	1-3-6
Asta Nielsen Spanish Blood	Drama	5000	Special	200	1-3-6
For the Queen's Honor	Drama	3000	Amb.	80	1-3-9
Custer's Last Fight	Western	2200	Bison	70	1-3-8
Officer and Gentleman	Drama	3000	Vita	90	1-3-6
St. George and the Dragon	Myth	2700	Milano	150	1-3-6
Black Ship	Drama	3000	Dragon	100	1-3-6
Sensation of the Age	Drama	3000	Chariot	125	1-3-9
Jess	Drama	4000	Kennedy	125	1-3-6
Night on the Atlantic	Drama	3000	German	120	1-6
Elsie Venner	Drama	3000	Kennedy	100	1-3-6
Across the Danger Line	War	3000	Monarch	75	1-3-6
Hearts of the First Empire	Drama	2000	Vita	50	1-3-6
Charlotte Corday	Drama	4000	Kennedy	125	1-3-6
Mexico	Western	4000	Kennedy	125	1-3-6
Diamonds of Destiny	Drama	4000	Imperator	125	1-3-6
Red Powder	Drama	4000	Apex	100	1-3-6
'Neath the Lion's Paw	Drama	3400	Gau	160	1-3-6

POSTERS AT COST. State number required. Special Bargain Parcels: 5000 ft. assorted subjects, including feature and comedy, $25.00; 10,000 ft. assorted subjects, including 2 features and Keystone, $50.00; 25,000 ft. assorted subjects, including 3 features and 2 Keystones, $75.00. Nothing too large; nothing too small.

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists for Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

1025 Film Exchanges, U. S..... $4.00
109 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S..... 1.00
210 Moving Picture Machine and Supply Dealers stating line of goods handled..... 1.50
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries.... 3.00

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams St., Chicago. Established 1880.

The Siege and Fall of the Alamo.

The Cradle of Texas Liberty

Historical Picture in FOUR PARTS, showing in their battles how David Crockett and Jim Bowie made history. A picture of interest to old and young. Full of thrills. Full of action. A box office winner. Book it. Write or wire for open time.

Wyandotte Film Supply Co., COLUMBUS OHIO

THE PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITUR E CO
North Manchester, Ind.

Opera Chairs
Folding Chairs
Complete Line
Prompt Shipments
Write for Catalogue
With Direct Factory Prices

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON

HIGH Quality

LOW Price

Opera Chairs
immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office
782 Mission St.

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

The HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

BOOKLET 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA
733

See the New "1915" Models, After Jan. 1st

"UNLIKE THE ORDINARY CHAIRS"

ADDRESS:
THEATRE CHAIR SALES DEPT.
NEW LONDON,
U. S. A. WISC.

CASTEEL THEATRE CHAIRS

MADE ONLY BY
WISCONSIN SEATING FACTORIES

FACTORIES IN NEW LONDON
PT. WASHINGTON
SHEBOYGAN
U. S. A. GRAFTON

Stockton's Scriptwriting Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

REV. E. BOUDINOT STOCKTON, S.T.B.
161 So. Arlington Ave., East Orange, N. J.

REAL QUALITY CHAIRS FOR QUALITY REEL SHOWS

Ask for FREE booklet V-2 upholstered Veneer Seating V-3
If you are interested in Motion Picture Theatre Seating

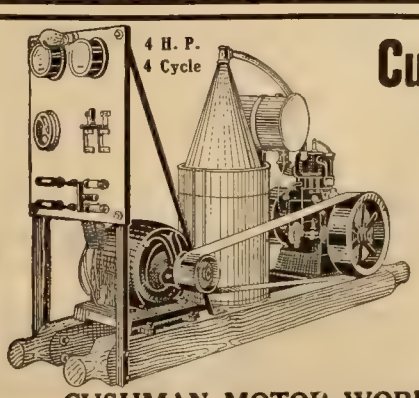
send ground sketch and we will draft for you FREE seating plan showing the most economical arrangement of seating for your theatre.

American Seating Company

Display Rooms and Installation Service
14 E. Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK
Boston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Forty Other Large Cities



4 H. P.
4 Cycle

Cushman Lighting Plants Get the Crowd.

Cushman throttling governed engines give steady voltage. It's cheaper to make your "juice" than to buy it. You get a good light at arc, which makes clear, bright pictures. Extremely light in weight. 4 H. P. complete plant weighs only 575 lbs. Not the cheapest, but cheapest in the long run. Get information describing exclusive features. It's free.

CUSHMAN MOTOR WORKS, 938 N. 21st St., Lincoln, Neb.

FEATURE FILM BUYERS
BEST TERRITORY GOING FAST

Endorsed by American Museum of Natural History and National Geographical Society

Rescue of the Stefansson Arctic Expedition

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL AND NATIVE LIFE IN SIBERIA
ANIMALS OF THE FROZEN NORTH

THREE FEATURE PICTURES IN ONE

THE ENTIRE WORLD KNOWS ABOUT THIS WONDERFUL PICTURE AND IS WAITING TO SEE IT

AN UNLIMITED AMOUNT OF ADVERTISING MATTER

Good, strong, lithographs—1, 3 and 6 sheets—photos, heralds and, in fact, everything for lobby or exterior advertising.

Stefansson Starting on His Last Dash North Over the Ice. Is He Alive or Dead? (Since starting, the party has not been heard from.)

WIRE OR WRITE AT ONCE

Here's a feature that will win for you, no matter where you are located. It has a special "punch" for each section of the country.

The Greatest Moneymaker Ever Released

Short, Snappy Scenes of Infinite Variety. This subject has already received more newspaper and magazine publicity than a hundred other features can ever expect to have.

SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO.

Suite 401, World's Tower Bldg., 110 W. 40th St., New York City.

1015-1016 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.

Selig

EXCITING, THRILLING AND INTERESTING SCENES

THE WORLD'S GREATEST WAR

NOW RAGING IN EUROPE

Shown in Five Reels of Motion Pictures Now Being Released Through General Film Co.

Selig Regular Program for Week of January 18-23

A Selig Two-Reel Drama of Kentucky RELEASED MONDAY, JANUARY 18

HIS FIGHTING BLOOD

Written by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

An intensely dramatic and emotional tale based upon the incidents in a Kentucky feud. It is the story of a dreamer who finds that personal courage and boldness are necessary to retain the love of his sweetheart. Spurred by affection, his manhood awakens and he performs marvelous feats. He defeats his rival and wins his sweetheart. The forest and mountain scenes are admirably reproduced. THOMAS SANTSCHI and BESSIE EYTON are featured.

More European War Pictures

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 95

RELEASED MONDAY, JANUARY 18 ONE REEL

The very latest consignments of war pictures taken on European battlefields—released through the General Film Co. First time shown in America.

A Selig Western Comedy

Cactus Jim's Shop Girl

RELEASED TUESDAY, JANUARY 19 ONE REEL

TOM MIX and his company of irrepressible cowboys portray characters in a western comedy that are irresistible as laugh creators. TOM MIX is as acrobatic as ever.

A Selig Drama

Between Matinee and Night

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20 ONE REEL

An actor visiting the criminal courts in search of "types" runs into a set of queer complications, which, upon being followed up, develop into a tragedy and release a friend from the coils of an adventuress. A most interesting story.

European War Pictures.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 96

RELEASED THURSDAY, JANUARY 21 ONE REEL

Still more up-to-date war pictures direct from European battlefields, taken by our intrepid camera men during the fighting. First time shown in America.

A Selig Farce-Comedy.

Who Wants To Be a Hero?

RELEASED FRIDAY, JANUARY 22 ONE REEL

A rollicking story of the adventures of a fictional nobleman, whose services are in demand by the generals of two opposing factions. He nimbly jumps from one side to the other and preserves his loyalty to both sides. A screaming farce.

A Selig Drama.

The Primitive Way

RELEASED SATURDAY, JANUARY 23 ONE REEL

THOMAS SANTSCHI and BESSIE EYTON, assisted by their supporting company, appear in this remarkable picture, which tells the story of a spoiled beauty who wants a "real man" for a husband. She gets him.

Brilliant 4-Color Selig Posters Ready for Shipment on all Releases.
Order from Your Exchange or from This Office.

ALL SELIG RELEASES THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.

The Selig Polyscope Company

Executive Offices, Chicago, Ill., 20 E. Randolph St.

TRADE S MARK

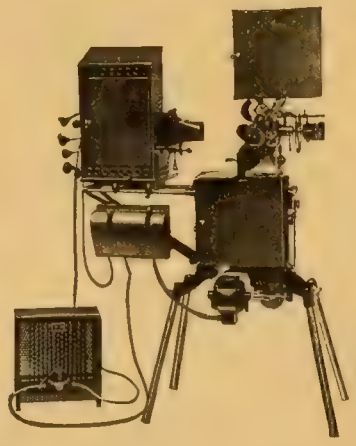
The Heart of a Motion Picture Projecting Machine is the Intermittent Movement

ITS operation is divided into two parts, periods of rest and motion.

Quicker motion permits the longer period of rest of each picture.

The longer the period of rest, the greater the definition of each picture, resulting in greater definition for the whole.

One of the many exclusive features of POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6 is its cam and pin cross intermittent movement, by means of which all this is accomplished with minimum of wear and tear on the film.



Catalog G gives full details.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City

Vol. 23, No. 4 January 23, 1915 Price 10 Cents

H. C. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Mignon" (California).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

ZUDORA IN THE TWENTY MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Zudora has been brought into this sensational Thanhouser serial photoplay —greater than "The Million Dollar Mystery."

James Cruze plays the newspaper reporter hero with all of the action that made him famous in The Million Dollar Mystery.

Here is the cast for this stupendous production:

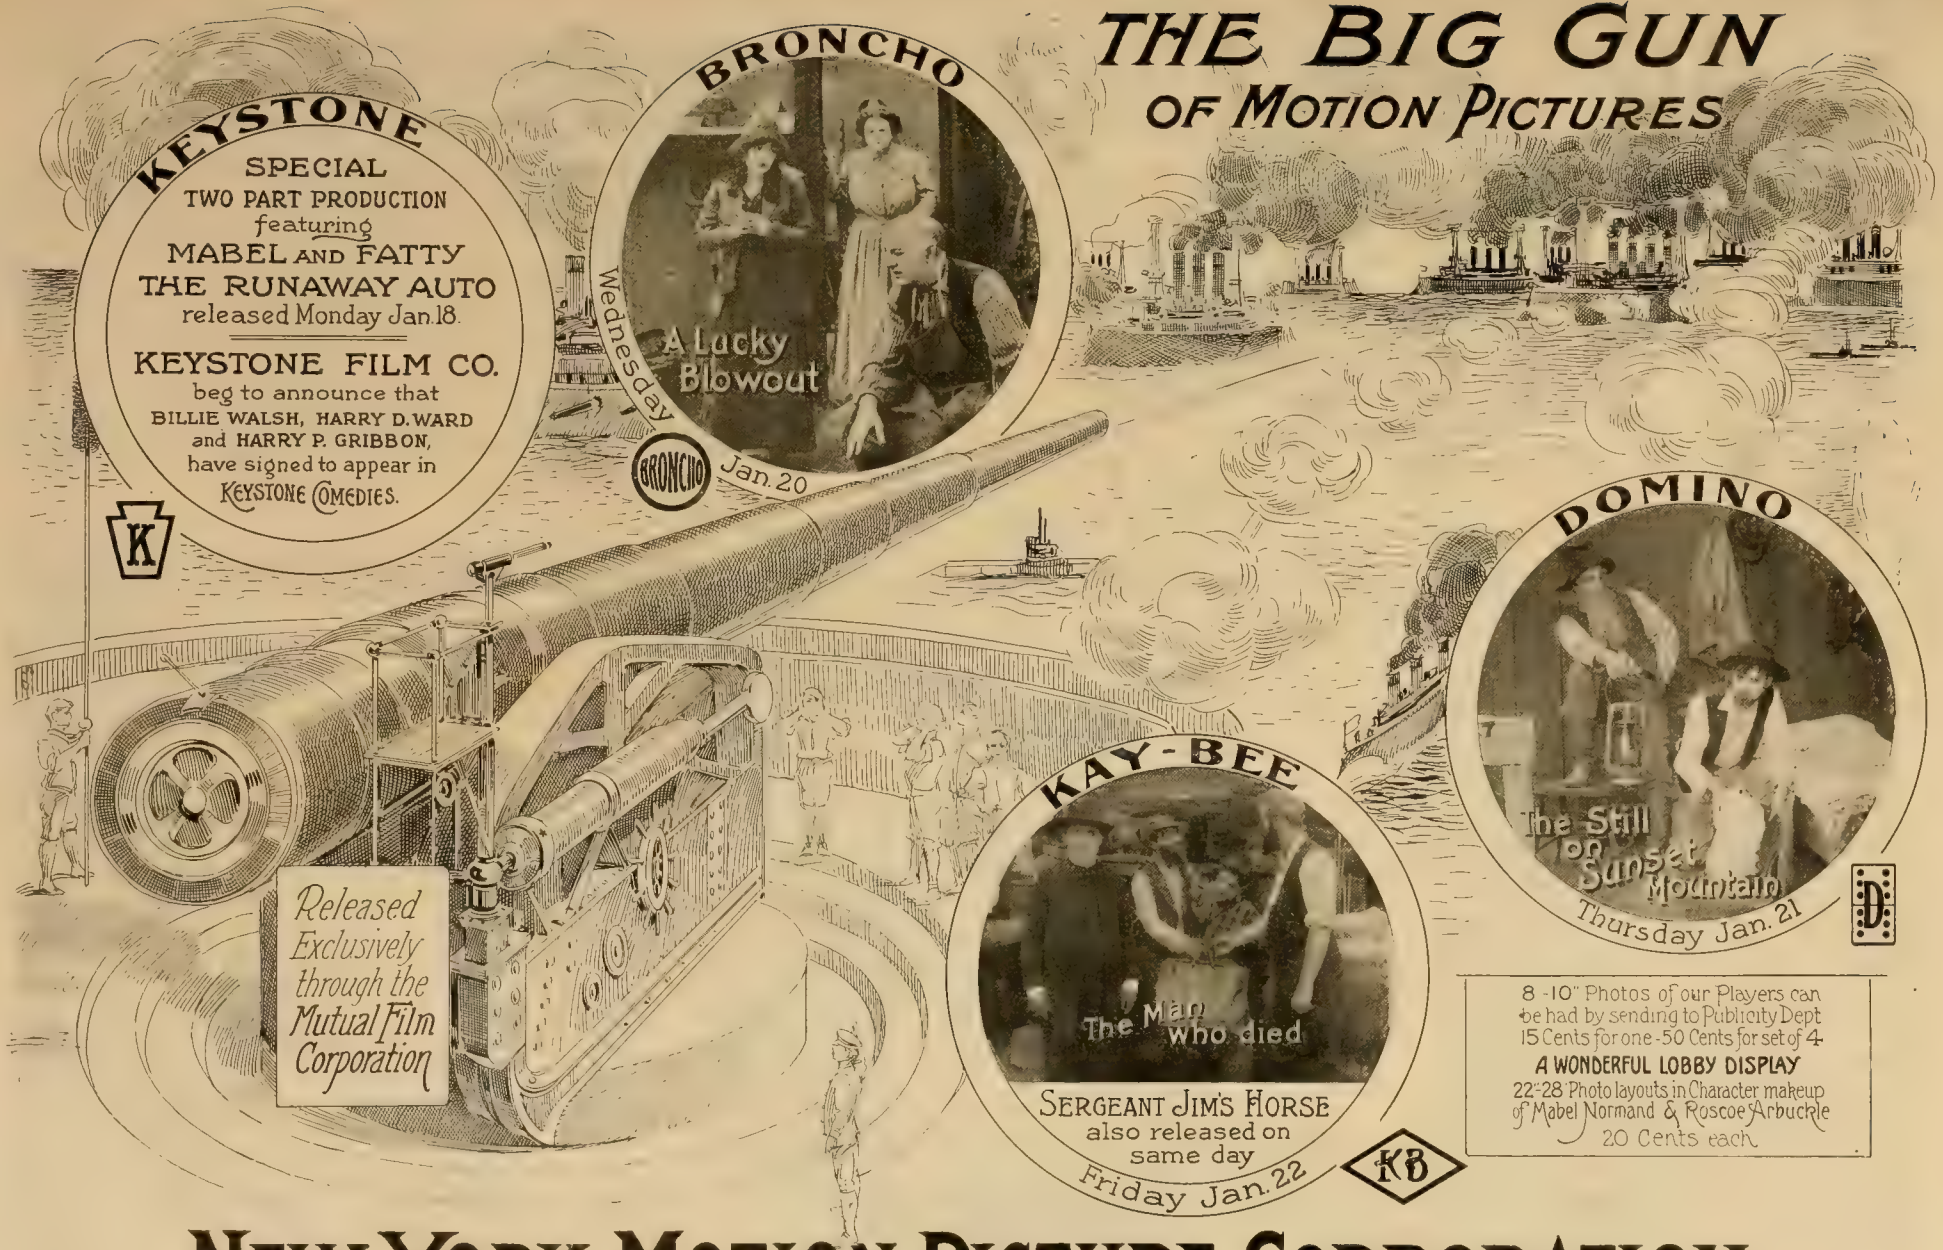
Jim Baird, a reporter,	James Cruze
Zudora, owner of mines,	Marguerite Snow
John Storm, a lawyer,	Harry Benham
Tom Hunt, a detective,	Sidney Bracy
Capt. Radcliffe, gentleman crook,	Frank Farrington
Madam DuVal, a woman of the world,	Mary Elizabeth Forbes
Mrs. Ramsay, with whom Zudora lives,	Jane Fairbanks
Mr. Bruce, smooth as velvet,	Morgan Niblack

Thrills, Thrills, THRILLS—a constant chain of exciting events. A freight train loaded with powder explodes! There's a wonderful automobile chase with James Cruze clinging to a cab! The Woman of Mystery appears! These startling surprises mean PACKED HOUSES for you.

If you haven't seen Episodes 9 and 10 of Zudora in The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery, go to the nearest Mutual Exchange and ask our representative to show them to you. See them! Book them.

Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation
71 West 23d Street
New York City, N. Y.
Representatives at all Mutual Exchanges in the United States and Canada

THE BIG GUN
OF MOTION PICTURES



8-10" Photos of our Players can be had by sending to Publicity Dept
15 Cents for one - 50 Cents for set of 4
A WONDERFUL LOBBY DISPLAY
22-28 Photo layouts in Character makeup of Mabel Normand & Roscoe Arbuckle
20 Cents each

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

KESSEL & BAUMANN, MANAGERS.

LONGACRE BUILDING, 42d STR. AND BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Advertising Thieves and

Attention—Habitual swipers of other men's brains—ideas, copy and advertising features—kindly sit up and take notice. Here is another brand new, smashing original, first-aid-to-exhibitors idea—direct from the Universal Film Mfg. Co., as per usual. Conceived in the spirit of co-operation for the Universal exhibitor's benefit.

ANOTHER FASCINATING TERENCE O'ROURKE STORY
A CAPTAIN OF VILLANY
VICTOR 2 REEL DRAMA
WITH WARREN J. KERRIGAN
Finer Than Ever
is the next "Terence O'Rourke, Gentleman Adventurer" film. It is thrilling and dashing, and Jack Kerrigan is, indeed, the hero in "A Captain of Villainy." This daring actor has once more shown his movie fan friends what a capable actor he really is.
"A Captain of Villainy" deals with customs and scenes in Tangiers, Africa, and Jack looks very picturesque and handsomer than ever in his white flannels. The wonderful street scene in Tangiers, built specially for this film, is one of the most remarkable feats ever attempted in movieland.
You will beam with delight when you see Terence O'Rourke in "A Captain of Villainy."
(This space for your Program, name of your Theatre, etc.)
This Cut 28c.
Postage, 7c.
Order No. 311.
MOVING PICTURES UNIVERSAL

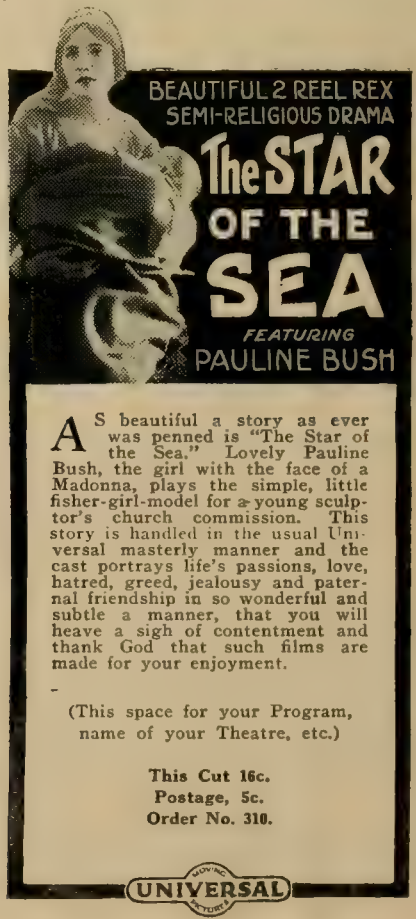
It's Simply Another Idea

A Genuine Universal Idea

To Help Universal Exhibitors Get the Money

EVERY Universal Exhibitor is strong for the Universal. He knows that every week in the Universal Program he gets the cleanest, cleverest comedies, the best staged and most thrilling dramas, comedy dramas and melodramas, the leading stars of the film world, and the unapproachable Animated Weekly, the biggest, brightest and best of them all. He knows that in helpful co-operation he gets ten times as much as his competitor across the street who does NOT show Universal Pictures.

DON'T FAIL TO SEE THAT GREAT PICTURE
THE MYSTERY OF THE THRONE ROOM
BEAUTIFUL GRACE CUNARD, THE HANDSOMEST AND BEST-DRESSED GIRL IN THE MOVIES, MORE ALLURING THAN EVER IN "THE MYSTERY OF THE THRONE ROOM", GOLD SEAL TWO-REEL DRAMA
"THE MYSTERY OF THE THRONE ROOM" is a thrilling tale of a scatter-brained queen who ruled not for very long. But she made things hum while in power.
Wonderful Grace Cunard and Francis Ford are responsible for this remarkable picture. One surprise follows the other and the delightful ending is a great revelation.
(This space for your Program, name of your Theatre, etc.)
This cut 28c.
Postage, 7c.
Order No. 309
MOVING PICTURES UNIVERSAL
WITH GRACE CUNARD AND FRANCIS FORD



BEAUTIFUL 2 REEL REX SEMI-RELIGIOUS DRAMA
The STAR OF THE SEA
FEATURING
PAULINE BUSH
AS beautiful a story as ever was penned is "The Star of the Sea." Lovely Pauline Bush, the girl with the face of a Madonna, plays the simple, little fisher-girl-model for a young sculptor's church commission. This story is handled in the usual Universal masterly manner and the cast portrays life's passions, love, hatred, greed, jealousy and paternal friendship in so wonderful and subtle a manner, that you will heave a sigh of contentment and thank God that such films are made for your enjoyment.
(This space for your Program, name of your Theatre, etc.)
This Cut 16c.
Postage, 5c.
Order No. 310.
MOVING PICTURES UNIVERSAL

Copy-cats, Take Warning!

Nothing on earth can prevent you from stealing it, hide, tail and tallow, but—here and now in The Moving Picture World for the week of Jan. 23, 1915, we place ourselves on record as the originators of the exhibitor's helps now first exploited on these pages. With these few words, gentlemen, we confidently await your action.

We Furnish These Great Feature Cuts Every Week—Begin Using Them Immediately

EVERY Universal Exhibitor knows he can find out anything he wants to know about boosting his own business from the Universal Weekly, published by this company. He knows that whenever the Universal hands him a new booster, it is only a question of time until his competitor comes trailing along with "something just as good." EXHIBITORS EVERYWHERE. THIS BRIEF TALK WILL TELL YOU HOW THE UNIVERSAL GIVES YOU THE BEST PROGRAM AND HELPS YOU CROWD YOUR HOUSE. Write today to the editor of the Universal Weekly, and it will be sent you 3 months FREE. After that you'll want the Universal Program and co-operation. Do it now. Mention your house.

THRILLING 2 REEL BIG U WESTERN DRAMA ON DESERT SANDS
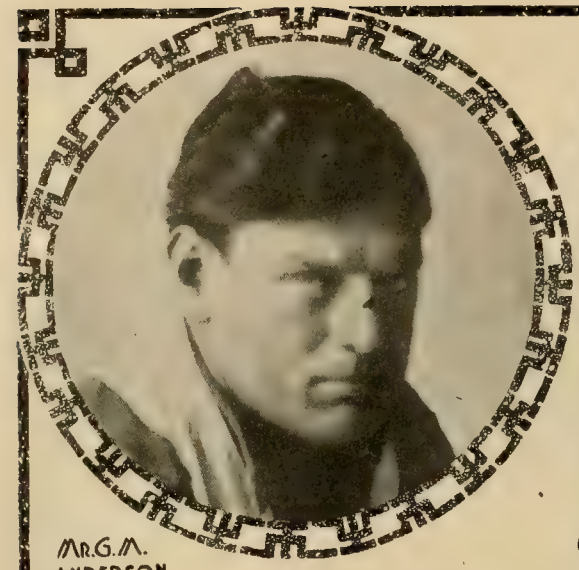
FEATURING SIDNEY AYRES
HANDSOME SYDNEY AYRES, NEW UNIVERSAL ACTOR, IN "ON DESERT SANDS," MORE THRILLING AND APPEALING THAN EVER.
A STIRRING, vivid story of the plains, the redskin and gambler of the early frontier days is the two-reel Big U drama, "On Desert Sands." Handsome, debonair Sydney Ayres has furnished movie fans with a picture which they will never forget. It is full of gripping situations, unusual settings and human interest.
(Name of your Theatre, Program, etc., in this space.)
This Cut 16c.
Postage, 5c.
Order No. 305.
UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

DELIGHTFUL VICTOR 2 REEL COMEDY DRAMA
"MEN AT THEIR BEST"
THIS photoplay, "Men At Their Best," features Harry C. Meyers, actor and director; Rosemary Theby and Brinsley Shaw. The story depicts both the sordidness and the sweetness of life in a powerful manner.
(This space mortised for theatre name, etc.)
This Cut 28c. Postage, 7c.
Order No. 312.
UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

YOU'LL LAUGH YOURSELF SICK
Cupid in a Hospital
L-KO COMEDY
WITH CHAS. DUDLEY, BILLIE RITCHIE & LOUISE ORTH
NO, this doesn't mean that Billie is Cupid. But Billie Ritchie plays the funny man, and that ought to be enough for any one. "Cupid in a Hospital" is so excruciatingly funny, so humorous and comical that the tears will roll down your cheeks, your sides will ache and you will haw-haw for hours after you have seen the film.
Billie Ritchie—but why go on?
Isn't it enough to just say that he is "let loose" and does just as he pleases throughout the picture?
The last we heard some one wrote Billie to allow intermissions while his films were being exhibited so that folks can catch their breath between laughs.
"Cupid in a Hospital" begins and ends with funny situations which are indescribable. You will long for more like this.
(This space for your Program, name of your Theatre, etc.)
This Cut 28c.
Postage, 7c.
Order No. 308.
UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES



MR. G. M. ANDERSON

ESSANAY is now offering to exhibitors three of the greatest stars the photoplay world has ever seen—the "A.B.C." of drama and comedy—Mr. G. M. Anderson Mr. Francis X. Bushman and Mr. Charles Chaplin

MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

Mr. Anderson has made "Broncho Billy" the best known of any photoplay character.

Mr. Bushman has been voted the most popular actor and dramatic star in the world.

Mr. Chaplin, the most wonderful comedian ever seen on the screen, is in himself a guarantee of ESSANAY QUALITY.

MR. CHARLES CHAPLIN

ESSANAY

"First to Standardize Photoplays"

PRESENTS

Mr. G. M. ANDERSON

Known all around the world as "BRONCHO BILLY"

in "WHEN LOVE AND HONOR CALLED"

By FRANK BLIGHTON, Author of "What Happened to Mary?"

and "THE TELL-TALE HAND"

Mr. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

The man voted the world's most popular photoplayer

IS PRESENTED IN

"THE BATTLE OF LOVE"

By Mrs. WILSON WOODROW

"IN THE GLARE OF THE LIGHTS" and "THE PLUM TREE"

THESE three-reel complete prize mystery plays, produced in conjunction with The Ladies' World, have been pronounced by exhibitors as the greatest successes in the motion picture world.
"WHEN LOVE AND HONOR CALLED," the latest mystery play and released January 18, is a thrilling drama of frontier life, with a love plot that touches the depths of the heart.

RELEASED THROUGH THE FEATURE DEPARTMENT OF THE GENERAL FILM CO.

SIX-A-WEEK

Released Monday, January 25

"Two Hearts that Beat as Ten"

This release is a scream from beginning to end.

Released Tuesday, January 26

"At the End of a Perfect Day"

A heart-gripping story that is certain to please.

Released Wednesday, January 27

"The Fable of the Syndicate Lover"

By GEORGE ADE

Don't worry about the family. Probably they have brought her up to get her married off.

Released Thursday, January 28

"When Slippery Slim Bought the Cheese"

One of the funniest comedies ever released.

Released Friday, January 29

"The Ambition of the Baron"

(IN TWO ACTS)

A thrilling and picturesque photodrama with Mr. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and Miss Beverley Bayne.
Adapted from the Smart Set Magazine.

Released Saturday, January 30

"Broncho Billy and the False Note"

(Reg. U. S. Pat. Office)
A western drama featuring Mr. G. M. ANDERSON.

"One Wonderful Night"

(In Four Acts)

MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN is presented in this thrilling drama that is filling theatres everywhere.

"The Good-for-Nothing"

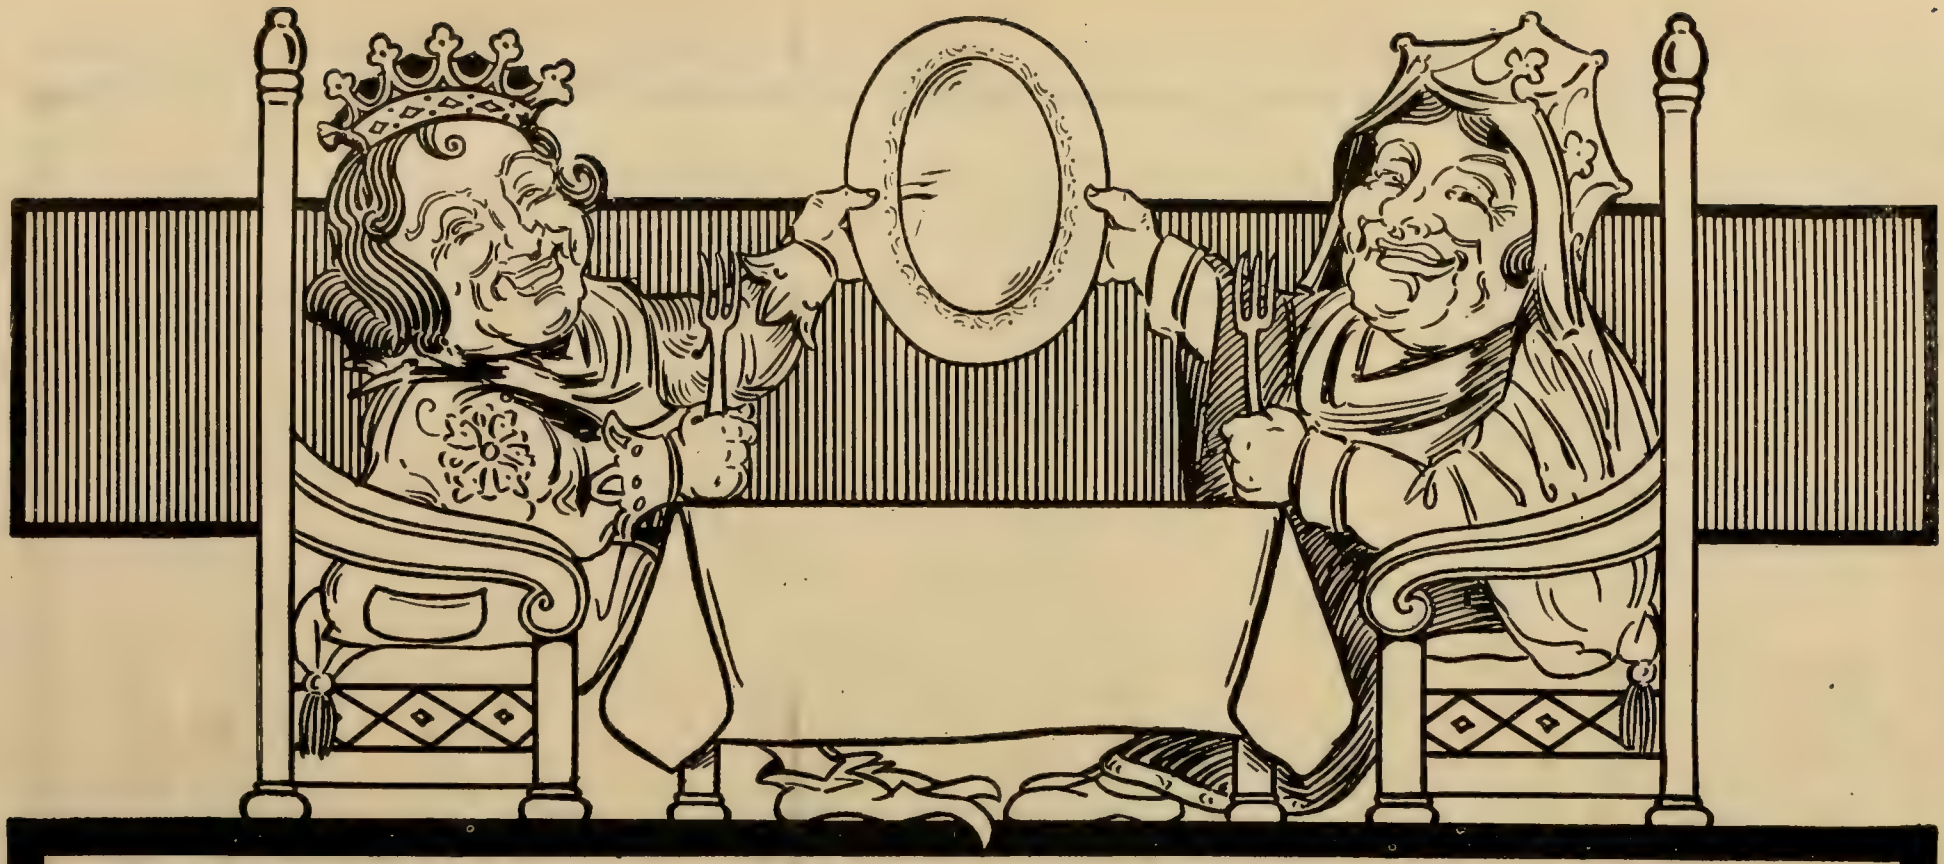
(In Four Acts)

MR. G. M. ANDERSON is presented in this emotional drama of a wayward son that touches the hearts of all.

ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago
Laboratories and Studios—1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN LONDON—PARIS—BERLIN—BARCELONA



Jack Spratt
Could eat no fat
His Wife could eat no lean
And so betwixt the two of them
They licked the platter clean

YOU HAVE NOT LICKED
THE MOVING PICTURE PLATTER CLEAN
UNLESS YOU ORDERED

RUNAWAY JUNE

By George Randolph Chester

FROM THE SERIAL PUBLICATION CORPORATION
REPRESENTATIVE IN YOUR MUTUAL EXCHANGE
PRODUCED BY RELIANCE
15 INSTALLMENTS 2 REELS
RELEASED JAN 13TH

PARAMOUNT

DANIEL FROHMAN PRESENTS

MARY PICKFORD

AS

"MISTRESS NELL,"

THE GREATEST HEROINE OF HISTORIC-ROMANTIC DRAMA,— AN ELABORATE PHOTO-VERSION OF THE CELEBRATED PLAY,

By
George C. Hazelton Jr.

IN FIVE PARTS
RELEASED FEB. 1ST.

PRODUCED BY THE

FAMOUS PLAYERS

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President
DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director
EDWIN · S · PORTER, Technical Director

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PICTURES

Forthcoming Attractions

February

MARY PICKFORD in "MISTRESS NELL,"

The Noted Romantic Drama by George C. Hazelton, Jr.

Released February 1st.

JOHN EMERSON in "THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE,"

Martha Morton's Popular Comedy-Drama

Released February 11th.

GABY DESLYS in "HER TRIUMPH,"

The Celebrated International Star's First and Exclusive Appearance in Motion Pictures

Released February 8th.

WILLIAM H. CRANE in "DAVID HARUM,"

A Faithful Film Version of the Distinguished Star's Greatest Characterization

Released February 22d.

"THE LOVE ROUTE,"

Edward Peple's Sensational Comedy-Romance Triumph

Released February 25th.

A quintette of remarkable consistency and variety—a group of subjects that in every respect adhere to the traditions of

FILM COMPANY

Executive Offices

213~229 WEST 26TH ST.

NEW YORK

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PARAMOUNT

JESSE L. LASKY
PRESENTS

EDITH TALIAFERRO

IN

YOUNG

FOUNDED ON THE SUCCESSFUL PLAY
By WM. C. DE MILLE

JESSE L. LASKY

220 WEST 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, Pres. SAMUEL GOLDFISH

PICTURES

A DRAMA OF ROMANTIC YOUTH

ROMANCE

RELEASED JAN. 21

FEATURE PLAY CO.

NEW YORK CITY

Treas. and Gen. Mgr. CECIL B. DE MILLE Dir. Gen.

Paramount Pictures

To the Exhibitors Paramount

IF you were aware of the plans and intentions of the Paramount organization for benefiting you, you would cooperate immediately.

Paramount was not designed to push on to you pictures that are unfit.

Paramount is designed to select for you pictures that are superior, and to eliminate the unfit ones.

You are not so safe in booking at random after Paramount has combed the field for its customers as you are booking with Paramount, whose one aim is, and whose success depends upon, making yours known as the best motion picture theatre in your community; and the Paramount Efficiency Service can do this, and make the Paramount Franchise worth real money to you.

To be more specific and bring our point to you more forcibly, the Paramount Reviewing Committee has refused ten pictures that were

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pict
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST
NEW YORK,

who do not show Pictures

not good enough for its (Paramount) standard, and not good enough for Paramount exhibitors, and each one of these pictures has been accepted by others who have proclaimed them as the "biggest ever"; and you, Mr. Exhibitor, who do not run Paramount, are paying more for the privilege of booking these pictures individually, loss of time and other things considered, and you do not realize that pictures superior to these are the natural thing on the Paramount Program.

The existence of your business in the future depends upon your ability to reason, and to connect with those forces that stand for the perpetuation of the industry.

No one familiar with Paramount can doubt our intentions. If you are not familiar with the Paramount plan, and wish to learn more, please write us, and mark your letter for the personal attention of the President, and your letter will receive a degree of attention that is a novelty in the motion picture business—a degree of attention that will be required from all exchanges in the future.

Paramount Pictures

ures Corporation
FORTIETH STREET
CITY, N.Y.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Two-part feature release for SUNDAY, JANUARY 24

THE BETTER MAN

DOROTHY GISH
Who will be seen soon again in Majestic releases

A comedy-drama from the Saturday Evening Post short story by George Pattullo

COMING SOON

A new series of releases featuring the charming little comedienne

DOROTHY GISH

DOROTHY GISH DESIRES TO THANK

Thousands of friends in all parts of the world who telegraphed and wrote their kindly sympathy, after the automobile accident which nearly cost her her life but from which she is now happily recovered.

MAJESTIC AND KOMIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic and Komic releases)

PROBATION (1 Reel Majestic). Release date Tuesday, Jan. 12.—A drama showing how a stern judge became a convert to the policy of probation in the treatment of criminals. Not as well acted or produced as would have lived for a Majestic.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN (2 Reel Majestic). Release date Sunday, Jan. 17.—A powerful picture story along an original line, excellently put on, featuring Mary Alden, Jack Conway and Spottiswoode Aitken. The degenerate aunt of a little boy teaches him to become a criminal and sees him facing the electric chair. In a vision she sees "what might have been" and is led to confess.

A FLYER IN SPRING WATER (1 Reel Komic). This is No 15 of the "Bill" series and one of the best, featuring Fay Tincher.

ON THE TABLE TOP (1 Reel Majestic). Release date, Tuesday, Jan. 19. An exciting melodrama telling how a pair of swindlers were caught through a strange clue, cleverly followed up.

THE BETTER MAN (2 Reel Majestic). Release date, Sunday, Jan. 24. A George Pattullo Western drama, different from the conventional Western pictures. An English nobleman finds that an American cowboy is "the better man" and gracefully retires in his favor.

A FLURRY IN ART (1 Reel Komic). Release date Sunday, Jan. 24. An interesting as well as humorous comedy-melodrama in which stolen jewels and an artist's portrait lead to complications that end as they should.

Bromide Enlargements of Majestic Stars for Lobby Display

(Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Fay Tincher, Robert Harron, Wallace Reid and others.) All sizes and shapes up to 5 ft. high. 5 x 7, 15c. each; 8 x 10, 25c. each; 11 x 14, 40c. each; 14 x 17, 50c. each; 22 x 28, $2.00; 20 x 60, $2.50; 28 x 42, $3.00. Order direct from Majestic Studio, 4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., or from any Mutual Exchange.

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Studios, 4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Office, 29 Union Square West, New York City

Mutual Movies MakeTime Fly

ABOVE ALL QUALITY

MUTUAL PROGRAM

FILM

SAWYER

CORPORATION

1600 Broadway, New York

"AS A MAN SOWS"

THE RECORD-BREAKING FIVE-REEL "AQUILLA" PRODUCTION
MOST THRILLING MODERN SOCIETY DRAMA EVER MADE

——COMING SOON——

"THE WIFE OF A THIEF"

ANOTHER SOCIETY DRAMA—LOTS OF ACTION—EXCITING SITUATIONS—
NOVEL PLOT—THREE GREAT REELS

——COMING SOON——

THE FIRST RELEASES OF THE

LIBERTY M. P. CO., of San Mateo, Cal.

WHO WILL MARKET EXCLUSIVELY THROUGH SAWYER

ALWAYS A BIG DRAWING CARD

"A FACTORY MAGDALEN"

EDYTH TOTTEN IN HER OWN GREAT DRAMATIC SUCCESS
500 THRILLS IN 5 REELS

DISTRIBUTING OFFICE FOR NEW YORK CITY AND NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

COLOSSUS FILM CO., 110 W. 40th St., New York

ZONE OFFICES

ATLANTA—Hybar Film Corp., Forsyth Bldg.
ALBANY—Terwilleger and Shackett, 29 No. Pearl St.
BOSTON—Phoenix F. F. Co., 129 Columbus Ave.
BUFFALO—Terwilleger and Shackett.
CHICAGO—Union Film Co., 164 W. Washington St.
DETROIT—Casino F. Co., 2206 Dime Bank Bldg.
DALLAS—Dallas Film Co., Andrews Bldg.
KANSAS CITY—Interstate F. F. Co., Gloyd Bldg.
MONTREAL—Allied Features, New Birks Bldg.
LOS ANGELES—Nat. A. Magner, Inc.
DENVER—"Sawyer."
MINNEAPOLIS—Sherman F. F. Service, Temple Court Bldg.
PHILADELPHIA
Interstate F. Co., 1304 Vine St.
Fairmont F. F. Exchange, 23 N. 9th St.
OMAHA—"Sawyer," 1404 Douglas St.
SAN FRANCISCO—Nat. A. Magner, Inc.
SALT LAKE CITY—"Sawyer."
NASHVILLE—Anderson F. Exchange, Vanderbilt Bldg.
ST. LOUIS—"Sawyer."
PITTSBURGH—"Pittsburgh-Sawyer Co."
SEATTLE—"Sawyer."

PATHÉ

THE MYSTERIOUS SUPER-CRIMINAL IN

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE

is arousing a perfect fever of interest. Who is he? When and how will he be caught? These are questions everyone is asking. The greatest detective stories in America are now made into the greatest motion picture serial ever produced. The result is an amazing success.

BOOK ELAINE NOW AND SAVE YOURSELF FUTURE REGRETS.

THE PATHÉ EXCHANGE, INC.,
(FORMERLY THE ECLECTIC FILM CO.)
110 WEST 40th. ST. NEW YORK.

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE

THE FROZEN SAFE

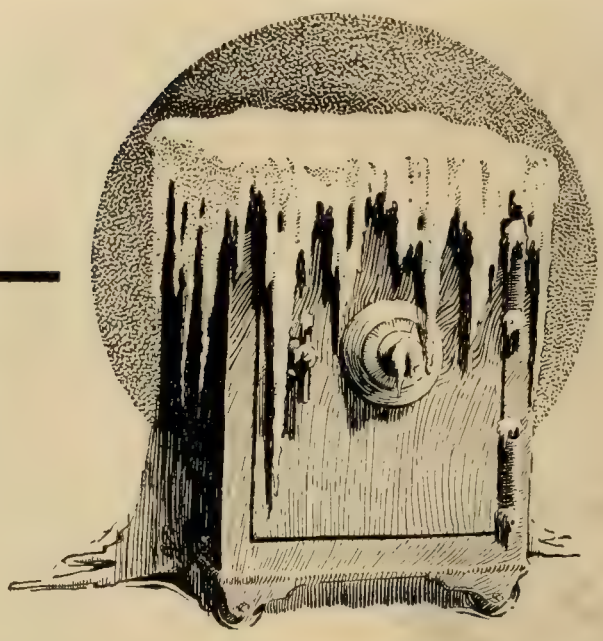
furnishes a new thrill – a new surprise in the fourth episode of ELAINE. A most modern, burglarproof safe opened by means of a strange and wonderful method right before your eyes! Nothing seems to be impossible to the super-criminal and even the great Craig Kennedy cannot bring him to justice.

BOOK ELAINE NOW AND SAVE YOURSELF FUTURE REGRETS.

THE PATHÉ EXCHANGE, INC.,

(FORMERLY THE ECLECTIC FILM CO.)

110 WEST 40th. ST. NEW YORK.



The amazing advertising campaign now being conducted in a multitude of newspapers all over the country on is actually reaching between two and three millions more people than any publicity campaign on any motion picture serial ever made!

The Exploits of Elaine

What does that mean to you? It means that right in your own territory thousands of people are reading of ELAINE and want to see the pictures and IF THEY CAN'T SEE THIS GREAT BIG SERIAL IN YOUR HOUSE THEY WILL GO WHERE THEY CAN.

The stellar cast and fascinating story would alone constitute a feature of extraordinary drawing power, but with the additional vast publicity behind it it is simply IMMENSE.

BOOK ELAINE NOW AND SAVE YOURSELF FUTURE REGRETS

PATHÉ EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE:

Atlanta, 61 Walton Street
Dallas, 202 Andrews Building
Chicago, 5 South Wabash Avenue
Minneapolis, 109 Kazota Building
New York, 115 East 23rd Street
Boston, 3 Tremont Row
Los Angeles, 114 East 7th Street
St. Louis, 3210 Locust Street
San Francisco, 67 Turk Street
Syracuse, 214 East Fayette Street
Pittsburgh, 715 Liberty Avenue
Cincinnati, 217 East 5th Street
Cleveland, 622 Prospect Avenue, S. E.
Portland, 392 Burnside Street
Philadelphia, 1235 Vine Street
New Orleans, 910 Gravier Street
Washington, 7th and E Streets, N. W.
Kansas City, 928 Main Street
Denver, 16th and Larimer Streets
Omaha, 1312 Farnam Street
Seattle, 810 Third Avenue
Salt Lake City, 68 South Main Street

The Pathé Exchange, Inc.

(Formerly the Eclectic Film Company)

110 W. 40th St., New York

PATHÉ
"AN EYE FOR AN EYE"
A fine Pathe-Balboa American drama in four parts, showing for the first time successful night photography. The happiness of the western ranch home is broken up by a handsome and unscrupulous stranger. To save her sister's name and give vengeance where vengeance is due, a young girl is willing to sacrifice much. A picture that is bound to please. 1-3-6 sheet posters.
PETE THE PEDAL POLISHER
An American one reel comedy. The hostler is a flivver as a bootblack. On the same reel with "The Valley of Chamonix", a beautiful scenic. 1 sheet posters.
QUEEN AND ADVENTURER
A Pathe historical drama in four parts. A wonderfully sumptuous production with a superb cast and based on the life of Mary Tudor, Queen of England. A film of absorbing interest. 1-3-6 sheet posters.
THE PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.
(Formerly the ECLECTIC FILM CO.)
110 W. 40th St., New York.
Night Photography in "AN EYE FOR AN EYE"

California Motion Picture Corporation

Presents

Beatriz Michelena

—IN—

MIGNON

A Film Dramatization of the famous Grand Opera as adapted from Goethe's masterpiece, "Wilhelm Meister."

The most artistic work ever seen on the screen

Released on January 18, 1915

Produced under the personal supervision of Alex E. Beyfuss.

Scenario by Chas. Kenyon, author of Margaret Illington's "Kindling."

EXCLUSIVELY DISTRIBUTED BY

World Film Corporation

LEWIS J. SELZNICK
Vice-Pres. and Gen. Manager

After months of unremitting effort, Secret Service agents discovered the man who was making the most dangerous counterfeit money that ever fooled the public.

The net was drawn about the criminal—but he escaped, carrying with him a bullet wound. With the detectives completely at sea, Kalem's Girl Detective tackled the case. The outcome is shown in

The Affair of the Deserted House

Released Wednesday, January 27th—The First Two-act Episode of

The Girl Detective Series

This series, the most sensational detective stories ever filmed, is being released in Kalem's REGULAR SERVICE. In addition to solving mysteries which have baffled the police, Kalem's Girl Detective will solve for you the problem of doing record-breaking business.

Every Wednesday, a Two-act Episode will be released. Get in touch with the nearest licensed exchange and arrange for the entire series before the other fellow gets it.

Special 1, 3 and 6-sheet, four-color Lithographs—the kind no person can pass by—for every Episode

LUBIN

PRESENTS

Multiple Reel Masterpieces Ready and About to Be Released

EDWIN ARDEN and ROMAINE FIELDING in Mr. Arden's great drama, EAGLE'S NEST
Directed by Romaine Fielding.

ROSE COGHLAN and ETHEL CLAYTON in the popular comedy drama, THE SPORTING DUCHESS
By Cecil Raleigh. Directed by Barry O'Neil.

THE VALLEY OF LOST HOPE a powerful drama featuring ROMAINE FIELDING
By Shannon Fife.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY by CHARLES KLEIN and HARRISON GREY FISKE a great drama
With Dorothy Bernard. Directed by Barry O'Neil

THE WHITE MASK a drama by CLAY M. GREENE featuring LILIE LESLIE
Directed by Joseph W. Smiley.

GEORGE ADE'S famous comedy, THE COLLEGE WIDOW directed by BARRY O'NEIL and featuring ETHEL CLAYTON and GEORGE SOULE SPENCER.

NOW SHOWING TO CROWDED HOUSES EVERYWHERE

By arrangement with Fred Mace

EVELYN NESBIT THAW and her son Russell William Thaw in THREADS OF DESTINY
A Drama by Wm. H. Clifford. Directed by Joseph W. Smiley.

and

The laughing hit of the year, PATSY BOLIVAR a series of 14 reels, one every Monday. By CLAY M. GREENE

Posters by A. B. C. Print Cleveland

Dodgers by Hennegan Print Cincinnati

SIX REGULAR RELEASES EACH WEEK

"Patsy Bolivar" Series No. 4 }
"Patsy's Vacation"—Comedy, } . . . Monday, Jan. 18th

"Gus and the Anarchists" } Split Reel Comedies
"Cupid's Target" } Tuesday, Jan. 19th

"Her Weakling Brother"—Two-Reel Drama, Wednesday, Jan. 20th

"The Shanghaied Baby"—Three-Reel Drama, Thursday, Jan. 21st

"A Question of Conscience"—Drama, Friday, Jan. 22d

"Shoddy, the Tailor"—Comedy, Saturday, Jan. 23d

SPECIALLY DESIGNED ONE, THREE, SIX AND EIGHT SHEET POSTERS

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street

LUBIN

ANNOUNCES

ON EVERY ALTERNATE WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY AFTER JANUARY 21st

A SPECIAL 3 REEL FEATURE will be released at the same price heretofore charged dealers.

and

BEGINNING FEBRUARY 1st, ON ALTERNATE TUESDAYS and SATURDAYS

SPLENDID ONE REEL COMEDIES

Featuring

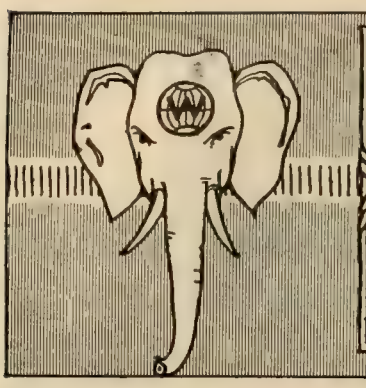
ARTHUR JOHNSON and LOTTIE BRISCOE and on the alternate date of the same week

ETHEL CLAYTON and JOSEPH KAUFMAN

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street



SHUBERT AND DYREDA FEATURES

WORLD FILM
Exclusive

Lewis J. Selznick

BEATRIZ MICHELENA

IN

"MIGNON"

From the famous opera. Adapted by Ambrose Thomas from Goethe's Masterpiece, "Wilhelm Meister." Scenario by Charles Kenyon, author of Margaret Illington's "Kindling."

An opera that has had half a century of success on the stage, wonderfully produced and beautifully pictured.

In 5 Acts

PRODUCED BY CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

Released Jan. 18

EXCHANGES AT

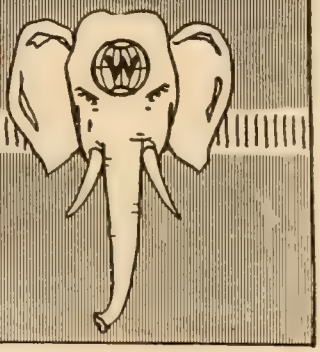
Boston	Cleveland	Denver	St. Louis	Seattle	San Francisco
Buffalo	Cincinnati	Pittsburgh	Los Angeles	Omaha	Salt Lake City
Chicago	Detroit	Indianapolis	Philadelphia	New York	Washington
Atlanta	Dallas	New Orleans	Kansas City	Minneapolis
Canada—Vancouver	Toronto	Winnipeg	Calgary	Montreal	St. John, N. B.

HOME OFFICE: 130 WEST 46TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY

EDELMAN

CORPORATION
Rights to all
Vice Pres & Genl. Mgr.

Wm. A. BRADY
Picture Plays, Inc.
CALIFORNIA
MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION
FEATURES



Lillian Russell
IN
"WILDFIRE"

By GEORGE BROADHURST and GEORGE V. HOBART

A master production of the famous racing play

Lillian Russell's greatest stage success

In 5 Acts

Released Jan. 25

"MONEY"

A gripping melodrama. Produced by
UNITED KEANOGRAPH FILM MFG. CO.
Fairfax, Cal.

Featuring

Carlotta de Felice

Scenario written and pictured by James Keane

Released Feb. 1

For Release Jan. 18th

THAT BEAUTIFUL AND HISTORIC DRAMA
OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

Du Barry

with

Mrs. Leslie Carter

IN THE TITLE ROLE

A MAGNIFICENT AND COSTLY PRODUCTION STAGED IN EUROPE AMID THE FAMILIAR SCENES OF THE FAMOUS STORY!

A CAST OF SUPERLATIVE EXCELLENCE, INCLUDING HAMILTON REVELLE AS DE COSSE BRISSAC, CAMPBELL GOLLAN AS COMTE JEAN DU BARRY, AND RICHARD THORNTON AS KING LOUIS XV.

A DRAMA IMMORTALIZED BY THE BLOODY EVENTS OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION, FORESHADOWED BY THE GAY AND EXTRAVAGANT LIFE OF LUXURY-ENERVATED VERSAILLES, AND THE SENSATIONAL AND ROMANTIC RISE OF MME. DU BARRY FROM MILLINER'S MODEL TO THE STRONGEST FEMININE FIGURE IN THE DESTINY OF FRANCE!

ARRANGE YOUR BOOKINGS EARLY. BE THE FIRST IN YOUR LOCALITY TO SHOW MRS. LESLIE CARTER IN HER GREATEST SUCCESS—A BOX-OFFICE MAGNET OF UNQUESTIONED POWER.

A splendid line of lithographs, heralds, press stories, cuts, photographs, etc.

BOOKING NOW THROUGH THE KLEINE OFFICES

New York
226 W. 42nd Street

Boston
597 Washington St.

Los Angeles
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.

Pittsburgh
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.

Chicago
166 N. State St.

Dallas
238 Saner Bldg.

Minneapolis
210 Temple Court Bldg.

Seattle
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

Toronto
56 King St., W.

Atlanta
43 Moore Bldg.

Denver
405 Railroad Bldg.

Philadelphia
1309 Vine Street

San Francisco
653 Pacific Bldg.

GEORGE KLEINE

"Your 'Officer 666' Got Me $1,000 On the Day"

SAYS E. H. HULSEY, OF THE QUEEN THEATER, DALLAS, TEXAS. "MY HOUSE SEATS 776 AND ADMISSION WAS AT TEN AND TWENTY CENTS. I STOPPED SELLING TICKETS AT NINE O'CLOCK AND TURNED AWAY $200.00. DELIGHTED? WHY, OF COURSE I AM!"

SAYS JOSEPH H. GILDAY, OF THE FAMOUS WILLIS WOOD THEATER, KANSAS CITY: "WE PLAYED 'OFFICER 666' TO SPLENDID BUSINESS ALL WEEK. I CAN ENDORSE IT AS A GOOD, WHOLESOME PICTURE FOR ANY AUDIENCE!"

"AN IMMENSELY SUCCESSFUL PICTURE. I PLAYED IT THROUGH MY CHAIN OF THEATERS TO PACKED HOUSES EVERY PERFORMANCE," SAYS FRANK SCHAEFER, OF CHICAGO, WHO CONTROLS THE BIG GARFIELD, CENTURY, KEYSTONE, CRYSTAL, PLAZA, LYCEUM AND STAR!

"Officer 666" Is the Fastest Booking Feature In America

It's founded on the melodramatic farce by Augustin MacHugh. Under the Cohan & Harris management it played four hundred and eighty-eight American cities. Everybody's heard of "OFFICER 666." That's why it's the "fastest" booking feature in America.

If you haven't played it, just a 'phone call or a postal card will bring our representative.

Through the Kleine Branch Offices

New York
226 W. 42nd Street

Boston
597 Washington St.

Los Angeles
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.

Pittsburgh
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.

Chicago
166 N. State St.

Dallas
238 Saner Bldg.

Minneapolis
210 Temple Court Bldg.

Seattle
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

Toronto
56 King St. W.

Atlanta
43 Moore Bldg.

Denver,
405 Railroad Bldg.

Philadelphia
1309 Vine Street

San Francisco
653 Pacific Bldg.

Read on ↓

GEORGE KLEINE

COMING

THAT FUNNIEST OF FARCES
FOUNDED ON THE COHAN & HARRIS SUCCESS
FROM THE PLAY BY CARLISLE MOORE

STOP THIEF

In Five Parts—Featuring

MARY RYAN and HARRY MESTAYER

Supported by a notable cast of the original artists who made "Stop Thief" famous!

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

NELL JONES (the Maid).....MARY RYAN
JACK DOOGAN (the Thief).....HARRY MESTAYER
MR. CLUNEY (Fiance).....Harold Howard
MR. CARR (an absent-minded father).....Albert Tavernier
DR. WILLOUGHBY (who also expects to wed).....William Boyd
MRS. CARR (Mother).....Auguste Burmester
JOAN (Dr. Willoughby's Fiancee).....Della Connor
MADGE (Cluney's Fiancee).....Marguerita Boyd
THE DETECTIVE.....Dan Moyles
THE CLERGYMAN.....Soldine Powel

Ready Soon—Watch for Future Announcements!

Through the Kleine Branch Offices

New York
226 W. 42nd Street

Boston
597 Washington St.

Los Angeles
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.

Pittsburgh
509 Lyceum Theatre

Chicago
166 N. State St.

Dallas
238 Saner Bldg.

Minneapolis
210 Temple Court Bldg.

Seattle
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

Toronto
56 King St. W.

Atlanta
43 Moore Bldg.

Denver
405 Railroad Bldg.

Philadelphia
1309 Vine Street

San Francisco
653 Pacific Bldg.

GEORGE KLEINE

EDISON FILMS AND EDISON SERVICE BETTER THAN EVER

Married at Last
"Vance Coleman and Olive"
In "OLIVE'S OPPORTUNITIES"

EVERY TUESDAY one of this series is released

THE SERIES:

1. A GYPSY MADCAP (Nov. 24th)
2. THE GIRL OF THE ROAD (Dec. 1st)
3. THE ROSE AT THE DOOR (Dec. 8th)
4. THE VANISHING OF OLIVE (Dec. 15th)
5. OLIVE IS DISMISSED (Dec. 22nd)
6. THE LESSONS OF THE FLAMES (Dec. 29th)
7. OLIVE AND THE BURGLAR (Jan. 5th)
8. OLIVE'S OTHER SELF (Jan. 12th)
9. OLIVE'S MANUFACTURED MOTHER (Jan. 19th)
10. OLIVE IN THE MADHOUSE (Jan. 26th)
11. OLIVE AND THE HEIRLOOM (Feb. 2nd)
12. OLIVE'S GREATEST OPPORTUNITY (Feb. 9th).

(Completing the series)

MABLE TRUNNELLE, who has so brilliantly sustained all through this wonderful series the intensely interesting character of "Olive the Madcap Gypsy," and "Edward Eale," who has equally well taken the part of "Vance Coleman," the society swain, madly infatuated with her, plight their troth in an ideal church wedding in the concluding, twelfth installment, to be released February 9th.

"Olive's Opportunities" is a photoplay of high order that may confidently be commended to a most critical and appreciative audience. The interest increases from reel to reel. Start the "Olive's Opportunities" series at once.

COMING EDISON RELEASES:

Wed. Jan. 20—The Wonders of Magnetism—Educational	400 ft.
Wed. Jan. 20—A Weighty Matter for a Detective—Comedy	600 ft.
Fri. Jan. 22—Tracked by the Hounds—Drama	2000 ft.
Sat. Jan. 23—Mr. Daly's Wedding Day—Drama	1000 ft.
Mon. Jan. 25—Joey and His Trombone—Comedy	1000 ft.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.

239 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

All Edison films are approved by the National Board of Censorship and released through

THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S PROGRAM Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday of each week.

VITAGRAPHS

VITA LAUGHS — LIFE PORTRAYALS

"Flora Fourflush"

PART III. "A RACE FOR LIFE"

Comedy .....MONDAY, JAN. 18

She outwits the diabolical plots of the villain, rescues her lover and he and she receive a jewel of priceless value. Presenting CHARLES BROWN, L. ROGERS LYTTON and CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.

"The Evil Men Do"

Drama, 3-Part Broadway Star Feature

TUESDAY, JAN. 19

A thrilling and stirring story of duplicity and deception. A powerful and impressive illustration of the day of reckoning and retribution. Presenting MAURICE COSTELLO.

"The Right Girl?"

Comedy ..... WEDNESDAY, JAN. 20

Jack, in his efforts to find her, gets in wrong with the police, his friend's wife and the hired girl. His friend has his share of the trouble and Jack is cured of all serious intentions. EARLE WILLIAMS, ANITA STEWART and WILLIAM DUNN are the cast.

"The Navajo Ring"

Drama .....THURSDAY, JAN. 21

It reunites a man with his family, after years of separation. It reveals his reformation and prosperity and brings joy to all. An all-star cast.

"Wanted—A Nurse"

Comedy .....FRIDAY, JAN. 22

He wants the right kind. When he gets her he marries her and you can't blame him. When you see her you can see the reason. SIDNEY DREW as the patient.

"War"

Comedy in Two Parts.....SATURDAY, JAN. 23

War enters into family relations. It is worse than General Sherman said. Scars and bruises healed, peace is declared. Laughter is heard and the din of battle is hushed forever. FLORA FINCH, HUGHIE MACK, KATE PRICE and JAY DWIGGINS are in it.

SIX A WEEK

"THE SLIGHTLY WORN GOWN"
Comedy .....Monday, Jan. 25

"LIFE'S GAME"
Two-Part Drama .....Tuesday, Jan. 26

"THE HOMECOMING OF HENRY"
Comedy .....Wednesday, Jan. 27

"THE BARRIER OF FAITH"
Drama .....Thursday, Jan. 28

"THE CHIEF'S GOAT"
Comedy .....Friday, Jan. 29

"UNDERNEATH THE PAINT"
3-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature....Saturday, Jan. 30

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX-SHEET POSTERS.

The Vitagraph Company of America, E. 15th St. & Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

PRODUCED BY THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA || PRESENTED AT THE VITAGRAPH THEATRE N. Y. CITY

RELEASED

A MILLION BID	5 PARTS
GOODNESS GRACIOUS	3 PARTS
MR. BARNES OF N. Y.	6 PARTS
LOVE, LUCK & GASOLENE	3 PARTS
CAPTAIN ALVAREZ	6 PARTS
SHADOWS OF THE PAST	3 PARTS
BINGLES' MELODRAMA	3 PARTS
MY OFFICIAL WIFE	5 PARTS
UNCLE BILL	3 PARTS
THE PAINTED WORLD	3 PARTS
FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT	5 PARTS
413	3 PARTS
THE WIN(K)SOME WIDOW	4 PARTS
THE TANGLE	4 PARTS
THE LOCKED DOOR	3 PARTS
SYLVIA GRAY	4 PARTS
THE LITTLE ANGEL OF CANYON CREEK	5 PARTS (From Book)
THE MAN BEHIND THE DOOR	4 PARTS

COMING

THE FUNNIEST PLAY IN YEARS
THE 4-PART LAUGHING COMEDY

C. O. D.

From the Play by FREDERICK CHAPIN
With
HARRY DAVENPORT, HUGHIE MACK, CHARLES BRAWN, WILLIAM SHEA, EULALIE JENSON, EDWINA ROBBINS

THE 5-PART HISTORICAL DRAMA
ADVENTURE DURING THE REIGN OF KING JAMES II OF ENGLAND

HEARTS AND THE HIGHWAY

Picturized by JASPER EWING BRADY
From Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's Novel
Featuring
LILLIAN WALKER as LADY KATE
DARWIN KARR as SIR HARRY

For Terms and Particulars Apply GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S Special Service
By Arrangement with Broadway Star Feature Co. (Inc.)

The Girl Detective Series

Two-Act Episode for Wednesday, February 3rd

The Apartment House Mystery

Who killed Rodger Hastings? How did the slayer manage to carry the body to the roof of the apartment house without detection? Who owned the button found in the dead man's hand? This is the mystery Kalem's girl detective solves after the police confess themselves helpless. Nothing supernatural or miraculous about her work—just remarkable detective ability. This episode will make your patrons eager to see all which are to follow. Arrange for it at the nearest Licensed rental exchange.

We have given special attention to the 1, 3 and 6-Sheet, 4-Color Lithographs. Get them.

Other Kalem Releases for Week of Feb. 1st

The Swindler

A Two-Act Episode of the

Alice Joyce Series

Blinded by Harris' wealth, Bess marries him after jilting Tom. Her discovery of her husband's get-rich-quick enterprises; Harris' fate at the hands of his outraged victims; Bess' nobility in repairing the wrongs he had caused—these are some of the incidents which make this of tremendous appeal.

Released Monday, February 1st. Strong scenes on the 1, 3 and 6-Sheet, 4-Color Lithographs.

The Insurance Nightmare

It is easier to dodge the Grim Reaper than to elude an insurance agent who is determined to get your signature to an application. Poor Fosdick finds that they pursue him even in his dreams!

Released Tuesday, February 2d.

The Hicksville Tragedy Troupe

If ever you have taken part in amateur theatricals, if ever you have seen an amateur performance, get this screamingly funny comedy. What happens to Vincent, the ribbon-counter hero, will cause your patrons to declare this one of the funniest farces they have ever seen!

Released Friday, February 5th.

The Escape on the Fast Freight

An Episode of the

Hazards of Helen Railroad Series

Not another actress in motion pictures possesses Helen's amazing courage. Not another series in filmdom contains one-half as many sensational features as this. The leap from a bridge to the top of a speeding train; the battle on the roof of a car; the fall into the river, and other daring feats keep the excitement at fever heat.

Released Saturday, February 6th. Strong 1 and 3-Sheet 4-Color Posters.

Kalem Company

235-239 West 23rd Street New York City, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 592.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, January 23, 1915.

Facts and Comments

ONE of the wide-awake men who travel about the country trying to book or sell films recently returned to New York after an extensive trip which had taken him through many rural communities. In speaking of vice and drug films purporting to depict conditions in the big cities he told the writer that the people in the smaller towns did not want to see such films because they could not understand them. To them the action of drug fiends, so painfully elaborated by "expert directors," seem not only strange and unintelligible, but positively disgusting. In view of this evidence, it seems to us that the bringing of such a film into a town where "refined vices" are unknown, is like distributing germs and microbes in a healthy climate. We do not think it at all likely that such exhibitions will result in any wholesale debauching of sound men and women, but it is not beyond the law of probabilities that some one foolish person may have his or her curiosity aroused and be led to evil practices. Such an event is much more likely than that any good will come of drug and vice film exhibitions in the cities.

* * *

THE noted Philadelphia producer who has asked the dramatic critics of his city to make themselves at home in his studio and who invites them to witness all his big features has set an example which may well be imitated by all his colleagues. The advantages of such a plan are twofold. In the first place, the film released from this studio will receive an extraordinary amount of public attention. In the second place, the constructive criticism and the suggestions of the reviewers who have had a good training on the daily press are bound to be beneficial. No one feels the value of friendly and intelligent criticism more keenly than the ambitious and conscientious producer. Only producers of a low standard of intelligence, untroubled by the ethics of the business, object to honest criticism. To those who like to sell in the dark and in a hurry the reviewer who takes a serious view of his task is about the most unwelcome person on earth. In theory they all "welcome honest criticism." In practice they can only tolerate it when it is applied to the other fellow.

* * *

EVEN in these war-ridden days, when the cable claims the lion's share of the front page, the attention paid to the development and the various aspects of the motion pictures in the daily press is distinctly on the increase. From many clippings which our friends and readers are kind enough to send to us from every part of the country, we note that much space is given to the motion picture on the editorial page. A widely circulated paper on the Pacific Coast, after discussing the motion picture as a "new social influence," sums up the situation in this sensible observation: "Unquestionably, the motion pictures are going to play an increasingly important part in the life of the country, but we must guard against a mercenary abuse on the one hand and a too puritanical restriction on the other if they are to attain their greatest value." It would be easy to fill page after page with such comments. We point out the fact here because it proves again that the motion picture is safe in the hands of the public. No other amusement is as close to the people as the motion picture and no other amusement is under a keener and at the same time friendlier supervision than the motion picture.

* * *

LIKE most big cities, New York suffers from intermittent waves of crime and scandal, and the daily press, which is free from all censorship, never fails to accentuate and illuminate the horrible events. For a clean record of the news, omitting all tales of crime, we have to turn to the motion picture weeklies. We have seen scores of these weeklies and they have all been singularly and gratifyingly free from the portrayal of contemporaneous crime. They have amply demonstrated that it is possible to inform the public of all important current events without specializing in crime stories. We have received so much valuable advice from editors telling us how to produce the best pictures that we feel justified in reciprocating. We ask the heroes of yellow journalism all and singular to watch the motion picture weeklies and take their cue of what is fit to print from the news-screen.

Suggestive Interiors

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

INTERIORS? What is their meaning in the general makeup of a motion picture? Those devoted to public service have a definite design, are in a general way appropriate to the purposes of the story. Not so with those devoted to private use. Far beyond their general appropriateness is a characteristic more profound and less understood, which might be defined as a reflective individuality, indicating as they do the means, tastes and habits of those who own or occupy them. This is especially true of chambers which constitute part of a home.

A man's dwelling is ideally the one place where he rests after his work, his refuge in time of trouble, his only security in times of peace, where his forces are revived, where he is renewed during his ceaseless struggle. It is ideally his biding place, on which he often expends a certain amount of his energy to assure the comfort and happiness of his family. Its general structure is generally his, though woman may be largely responsible for its decorative treatment. If it is his alone, it should very naturally reflect some of his striking traits and aid in establishing his personality. If the home is wholly of woman's making, the same is true so far as she is concerned.

There is little doubt that the average man would prefer a home of independence and natural beauty, such as is found in the country, but he is usually compelled by circumstances to do the best he can with a boxed in set of rooms. Nevertheless, his sense of beauty can be revealed in them, his refinement of character or the lack of it, his occupation, his tastes, almost his very soul where infinite pains are taken to reveal character. Even in setting up a "poor room," necessarily limited by the owner's poverty, there are essential differences of character to be considered, especially where the place is one of long-established residence.

Take, for instance, the interior of a gold miner's shack. No matter how extreme his poverty, or how long he has been in that condition, his mind is fixed on attaining sudden wealth, and he can only regard his habitation as a temporary one. Its fittings are those of immediate utility. Now contrast it with the hut of an old farmer bowed down by incessant struggle to wreak a living from ungenerous soil. The interior of his home will show in every nook and cranny the saving tendency of one who accumulates a lot of trifles because they might "come in handy" some day. These two are mentioned in illustration of what rises in importance as the characters of a play ascend in the social scale.

Let us consider the library of a scholarly man. It is apparently a simple matter to furnish one for the screen story, but a great deal depends on the occupant's complex character and habits, and it is fine art on the part of a scenic director to help make a character stand forth with cameo-like distinctness by skillful selection of background. The library may be distressingly stiff and repulsive with fine furniture, indicating to the audience, whether rightly or not, that a self-made individual, one unaccustomed to refinement in earlier life, is the occupant. On the other hand, a simple change of furniture and its arrangement, even transferring what is provided in the first case, will indicate the hospitable, charming and tasteful residence of a man of superior initial standpoint.

In real life, a man may not express himself in his rooms because of future plans. In screen life it is desirable that he should. While studying his conduct from in front to get his measure, we may be materially assisted by little evidences in the background of what he is thinking about or has done in the past. Even the floor coverings have their stories to tell—they may be the keynote to an entire decorative scheme.

If a woman's boudoir is to be shown, it is not a bad idea to consider the rug first and develop the room from it, the curtains, chair coverings, cushions and decorative ornaments. There are appealing ideas of harmony, arrangement and texture to be considered, and even then the sympathetic touch may be lacking. I recall that when working in a studio neither the director nor I was satisfied with a boudoir scene—there was a lack of artistic finish—until he went to the property room and brought forth a long-stemmed artificial rose and a slender vase. These placed on a small table gave the whole room a new charm and afforded the occupant new opportunity.

I used a faded and drooping rose in a glass of water, several of the petals fallen on the table, as a symbol in the opening of a five-reel play, showing immediately after a faded and drooping woman seated at that table in a demoralized state of mind. Tiny things of that kind count because they are felt. The impression made by them is of a subconscious kind, but they are none the less effective in the silent drama. I do not agree with Mr. Belasco that the art of moving pictures is that of pantomime. The revelation of thought and feeling is a matter of suggestion than of obvious action.

Mr. Belasco should know better. He has been in the habit of placing his stage plays before the public in a manner that might well be called problematical. He uses light and shade and color effects for the subtle purpose of introducing an idea by indirect means, well aware that the connection between harmonious ideas has the result of enforcing them. If atmosphere counts at all in the stage production, how much more it counts in that of the screen, where the eye alone is addressed.

Griffith, Blackton, Porter and many other men of artistic taste and keen sensibilities engaged in motion-picture production instinctively utilize that action of an idea which brings another idea to mind. There is nothing new about suggestion, but its modern application in moving pictures seems to be an essential part of them, a psychological secret of their success. It is not confined to words and gestures, but includes backgrounds. Even the smallest detail of interior furnishings may be made significant. It is the more valuable when it operates to excite the imagination of an audience and put that audience into a sympathetic and receptive state of mind.

To fully appreciate the bearing of silent and motionless evidence of character on our impressions of an individual, simply recall the impressions of a house or office upon entering it for the first time. Our subconscious mind is never more alert. We are aware of a certain effect on our general conception of the occupant. If such were not the case, men would not fit up gorgeous offices, nor women take such pains to make the home representative. Such is exactly the case when we watch a screen story. We enter the living rooms of characters, or their working rooms, and begin unconsciously to size the people up from their surroundings. Addison says of Virgil, "He loves to suggest a truth indirectly and let us see just as much as will lead the imagination into all the parts that lie concealed."

"Educational" Lights and Shadows

By W. Stephen Bush.

RECENTLY one of the big producing companies released a feature in which a subtitle referred to the importance of using pasteurized milk for newborn babies. Nothing in the film showed even the rudiments of the pasteurizing process; the reference was solely in the subtitle. There was a reference to pasteurized milk and its importance in the brief synopsis of the story sent to The Moving Picture World. This synopsis was read by an official in the Treasury Department. He and his department were interested in the subject and he wrote to the company which is marketing the picture asking for further details. He also pointed out in the letter that there are many subjects of great interest to the government, subjects which concerned the physical and social of all of Uncle Sam's family, which were suitable for film treatment. "We have no knowledge, at least no expert knowledge, of kinematography," the letter went on substantially, "but if you can put us in communication with the right people we will be in a position to use the kinematograph in various ways for the benefit of all people interested in sanitation and hygiene." The letter, I am glad to say, will in all likelihood lead to splendid results.

We do at times refer in a general way to the uses of the screen as an educator, but we do not always do full justice to the subject and pause long enough to appreciate these uses more in detail. The fact is that many motion picture men in all branches of the industry have relaxed in their enthusiasm for films of an educational tone and character. With many of them the very classification "Educational" has become decidedly unpopular. Nor would it be just to blame them for this attitude. Not long ago one of the pioneers of the educational picture, a man well fitted by training and taste for specializing in educational films, in sizing up the "educational branch" of kinematography, used this apt phrase: "You will find any work that you do in connection with educational films laborious and unprofitable. The demand has all the seeming of a deluge. When it comes to handling the films the dealer's increment is petty and unsatisfactory." He voices in well-chosen language the universal sentiment in moving picture ranks. He points out the decrease in the manufacture of "scenic, industrial and scientific films" and attributes it most reasonably to a decrease in the demand. The producers cannot exist unless they cater to a demand with money back of it, and if the demand for any particular kind of pictures shows a falling off it would be suicidal for the producer to persist in it. One has to be a Carnegie, a Rockefeller or a Sage to experiment with educational kinematography.

Men and women whose information is lamentably small, especially in proportion to their desire to stand in the limelight, are largely responsible for the apparent "deluge" of demand. To hear them talk one would think that the schools and churches are aching to be supplied and ready to pay handsomely. Only a short time ago a well-meaning but perfectly misguided clergyman stood up before a gathering of his professional brethren and in touching accents bewailed the woeful lack of educational films. I happened to be present, and even a most gentle and kindly cross-examination of the learned person made it plain that he did not know what he was talking about. We have had educational film bureaus and the best we can say of them is that they have succeeded in making "both ends meet." "Making expenses" is the most optimistic of verdicts.

Does this mean that the educational film has no future? Does it mean that we must wait for years before we can hope to see the kinematograph installed as the most important adjunct of teaching in any and every grade of school? Does it mean that the undoubted falling off in the production of educational films is not merely a transient phenomenon, but a permanent condition? Does the general public reject the educational film? In spite of all the forbidding indications that we have just pointed out we would be loath to believe that the educational kinematograph must cease or even curtail its activities.

Indeed, signs are not wanting that the dawn of the new era to which we have been looking forward with such pathetic patience is not far off. If you ask me for my grounds of hope I call your attention to the vast improvement in the personnel and morale of the exhibitors of motion pictures. There is room for the picture of educational tone, but it takes the hand of an expert to select and then to place the picture properly on his program. If you ever go to The Strand and watch the audience during the showing of educational pictures which run for an entire week you will learn a whole lot if you are interested in the art of exhibition. There is the most obvious and pleased interest, and it is in nine cases out of ten followed by applause. You may say that audiences of the type frequenting The Strand are unusual. This in a measure is true. I know of no reason, however, why similar theaters in other cities cannot make similar use of the educational picture. Of course, the exhibitor making his selection would have to be guided by correct judgment and not by mere labels. The picture selected must fit in well with the program and must have a perfect musical accompaniment. With these conditions carefully fulfilled it is safe to predict a larger area for the motion picture of educational character in say half a hundred important houses in different parts of the country. This would justify producers to cater to these exhibitors. It will result in competent camera men with an eye for the picturesque as well as the instructive being sent into places where Nature is lavish in her charms or where man and his family are most interesting. No time table releases will be expected; a mass of good material will be accumulated and a process of selection and elimination and, above all things, of assembling will be employed. Look at the undeniable success of the men who specialize in travelogues and who of late have made the motion picture take the place of the slide. Why cannot the high-class motion picture house have its travelogues even if at first they come in homeopathic doses and experimental instalments? I remember that such efforts were made in the very earliest period of motion picture development. Even then they were attended with a measure of success. With an improvement in audiences in theaters and in exhibitors a more ambitious attempt backed by the best of material promises an even greater success. It is proposed by one of the great producing companies to organize a special camera service for the supply of the best scenic and travel films obtainable. Most opportunely South America will be the first field. The motion picture cannot render a greater service to civilization than the joining together in bonds of better understanding and livelier sympathy of the two continents of the New World.

Pearce Contradicts Neff

The National President Denies That He Said Anything to Warrant Statement Given to New York Telegraph.

IN the Sunday edition of the New York Telegraph, published January 10, appeared a statement coming from M. A. Neff, former president of the National Exhibitors' League, purporting to express the policy of the present executive head of the league on certain important questions. President Pearce takes immediate and very proper exceptions to the interpretation put upon his conversation by Mr. Neff and he has dictated the following contradiction thereof:

"By the token that 'silence gives consent,' I cannot permit the article Mr. M. A. Neff published in the New York Telegraph, under date of Sunday, January 10th, to go without a flat contradiction of almost everything in it. My reason for this is simply that I didn't say it, nor anything like it, nor anything that could be construed to mean anything like it. If Mr. Neff thinks I did, then his memory is woefully faulty—or the construction he was pleased to place on my statements so totally at variance with my plain purport, that there is no room for argument—nor even an honest difference of opinion.

"The article referred to reads as follows:

After a conference with M. A. Neff, on Thursday night, President M. S. Pearce of the M. P. E. L. of A. has determined that he will not interfere in the matter of the calling of a State Convention in New York, this despite the statement to the effect that he intended so to do, which has already been printed in another publication.

"And again, in the last paragraph, which reads as follows:

In the case of the New York convention Mr. Pearce realizes that the national organization has no authority to call State conventions over the heads of the local officers, as the various State branches operate under separate charters.

"In the volume of duties that devolve on me as the National President of the League and my own private enterprises, I'm far too busy to dig down into the motive back of what any man pleases to say, but must content myself with simply what he does say, without inquiring into the cause. Any exhibitor who is a member of the league, and even in the slightest acquainted with the constitution, does not have to be told that whenever the welfare of the league is at stake, the national executive board has full authority to call a meeting in any state, and act with general supervision and power, on all matters pertaining to the league. For the benefit of those exhibitors and members who don't know this, I'm stating the fact now! It isn't necessary to advise Mr. Neff of this fact! He knows it! He knew it when he gave out the above interview, and he knew that I said nothing of the sort, but rather, I can, if necessary, call such a meeting in New York, preside over it myself, and act with the national board in whatever direction the best interests of the league dictate. This is what I told Mr. Neff. This is all Mr. Neff heard. How Mr. Neff got it twisted into the above quoted statement, I haven't, as I say, time to inquire—but the fact remains that such a statement was never made to him by me on last Thursday night, nor on any other night, anywhere, or any time.

"In the center paragraph of the article as published in the Telegraph, Mr. Neff has the following to say:

Mr. Pearce has also decided, Mr. Neff declares, that he will take no action in the matter of shifting the scene of the Ohio convention from Columbus to Cleveland. The former city was chosen by the Ohio exhibitors because the State Legislature will be in session at the time of the convention.

"Mr. Neff is wrong again! It takes a cultivated imagination to see how anybody can get anything like the above out of what I really said to Mr. Neff on this point, which was ALL I had to say on the matter—as follows:

"'That if the Cleveland Local of the Ohio State Branch of the M. P. E. L. of A. felt that the State Branch was not treating them right they had a perfect right to take the matter up with the Executive Board of Ohio, and if, after doing this, they were still dissatisfied with the treatment accorded them, they could then appeal to the National Executive Board, which would hear all the evidence and render a decision that would be absolutely impartial and fair to all concerned.'

"There is hardly anything one dislikes quite so much as having words put into one's mouth, unless it be to have statements entirely reversed—constructions placed on phrases which were never contained in those phrases as originally spoken—and remarks charged up to one which are as diametrically opposite to one's real views as are the north and south poles.

"Mr. Neff doesn't need to be reminded that I did not make the statement that he publishes as coming from me. He knows it better than anybody else. He also knows that what I really did say to him, I have stated above entirely plain and simple in point and effect, and I would thank everybody, and Mr. Neff in particular, that in the future, whenever they feel called upon to quote me at all, to be just one-half as careful to repeat correctly what I say as I am to get my facts correct before I state them at all.

"Personally, I dislike anything that smacks of a controversy—that might possibly grow into a quibble—or threatened to develop into a quarrel, but I dislike this far less than I do having any man take plain, everyday statements of mine, couched in plain English, and delivered so directly that a child could understand them, and distort, change and actually reverse my meaning, without my knowledge, or without so much as 'by your leave.'

"I'm inclined to be very charitable, and say that Mr. Neff simply 'didn't understand'; didn't get my meaning; didn't catch the drift of my remarks at all; as that's so much better than accusing any man of wilful misquotation, but I'd appreciate it if every one would understand that I'd be obliged for the privilege of making my own statements, which I'm entirely able to do, at any proper time, or any proper topic, without running the chances of having them turned directly about through repetition by others."

MARION S. PEARCE.

It was hoped that when Mr. Neff voluntarily declined re-election to the office of National President and pledged his support to the incoming president, Marion S. Pearce, that the way was cleared for the establishment of harmony in the organization. We know that President Pearce has shown great patience with the disaffected factions and has given them every opportunity to settle their differences. That they have not condescended to do so up to this writing is unfortunate. In view of that fact and the remote probability that they will get together within a reasonable time, it would seem quite within the right of the National President to exercise his prerogative and adjust matters according to his best judgment, with the aid of the National Executive Board.

Surely it is not within the province of Mr. Neff to say what President Pearce shall do or, for that matter, to quote him for publication on matters of this nature, one way or the other. It is for the president, and for him alone, to say what he will do; for anyone else to put words in his mouth is an assumption of authority and a breach of courtesy. For this Mr. Neff, right or wrong, owes President Pearce an apology.

CLAUDE PATIN RETURNS.

M. Claude Patin, secretary general of the Eclair Company, who left New York some months ago to join his regiment on the fighting line in France, returned January 15 on the S.S. Rochambeau. While at the front Mr. Patin served as interpreter with the British forces in the north of France. Later, upon taking the required medical examination, Mr. Patin was excused from further service on account of defective vision. This made it possible for him to return to his position with the Eclair Company.

With Mr. Patin comes Mr. and Mrs. Chautaut. Mr. Chautaut is a director of the Eclair Company, and will produce Brady-Shubert pictures at the Peerless studio in Fort Lee.

BUREAU OF EXPLOSIVES TO HOLD HEARING.

On account of a serious accident which occurred on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, near Chicago, on November 24, attributed to motion picture films, it is declared that a very strong feeling has been aroused among railway officials that immediate action looking to the prevention of such accidents should be taken. The subject has been taken up by the Bureau of Explosives and Col. B. W. Dunn, Chief Inspector, has issued a call for a conference to be held at the office of the bureau, 30 Vesey street, New York, on Monday, January 18, at 11 o'clock. All parties interested are invited to be present.

GILBERT M. ANDERSON IN TOWN.

Gilbert M. Anderson, of the Essanay company, known to photoplay fame as "Broncho Billy," and the pioneer of western character players, has been visiting New York City for the past week. He was staying at the Claridge. He intended to return west on Wednesday, stopping over at Chicago for a day. Mr. Anderson said his trip was a business one. Asked as to the acquisition by his company of Charles Chaplin, the comedian, he said that the newcomer would work in Chicago under the guidance of Director Robin. Mr. Robin has for five years been with Mr. Anderson in the west.

Clickman Talks on Conditions.

Progressive Chicago Exhibitor Says Volume of Business Has Increased Wonderfully Since Christmas.

THE motion picture show business has improved wonderfully since Christmas, says Ellis F. Glickman, Chicago exhibitor. According to the reports received by Mr. Glickman from his three Lake City theaters, he estimates the increase to be from 20 to 25 per cent. Dr. Shallenberger, of the Thanhouser company, who was in conversation with the Chicago man at the Mutual offices in Twenty-third street, agreed with him, and said that the letters he is receiving bore out the statement.

Mr. Glickman is in New York on a busines trip and is making his headquarters at the Friars. He has had wide experience as an actor and manager—twenty-seven years of it before turning his energies to the exhibition of motion pictures. He came to the picture field with definite ideas as to what he was going to do, and one of the foremost of these was to please the men and women and children in the neighborhood of the house he wanted them to patronize. He has had his battle and he has been rewarded with success. He admitted that one of the trials of his life was raising money to pay the second month's rent for his first theater. Today he has three theaters, and they are jointly playing to a patronage of about a hundred thousand persons a week.

Mr. Glickman's houses are the Palace, seating 1,600; the Bijou, seating 1,400, and the Wabash, seating 1,700. "What service do I use?" he said in reply to a question. "Well, I try to use everything that's good. For a base I take the Mutual and Universal programs, and these I amplify with features of the better sort. We select what we construe as the cleaner stuff from all the different programs and the features as well. We do not take a picture because one or another particular star may be featured in it or because it may be an adaptation of this or that particular play. What interests us is whether or not it will appeal to the patrons of our houses. That is enough.

"We don't accept as final criticism what may come from manufacturers, exhibition men or individual newspaper men, but from those who pay the nickel or the dime at our box offices. In other words, our representatives at each house ask our patrons as they are leaving the theater what they think of the show. We ask little Johnny just as we inquire of the merchant, and from the replies the manager learns very definitely the likes and dislikes of his people. We find that as a rule there is a remarkable unanimity of opinion as to the merits or demerits of a subject, the only difference being in the form of expression. We have finally come to the conclusion that the cleaner the stuff, the less straining for sensational effects, the more the picture appeals. The picture that contains heart interest, human interest, and is devoid of melodrama is of course more difficult to work out, but it is far superior as entertainment.

"I don't believe the big picture is the one with sensational incidents. I believe the big picture is the one that will stir the heart, that will bring to the minds and the eyes of men and women the simple, every-day matters of every-day life. A well-told story of a poor boy earning 60 cents a day selling newspapers will reach more hearts than will an ordinary story of kings and queens.

"You know there are occasionally exhibitors who will go to their exchange and their first remark will be: 'Let me see the paper.' I believe that is a serious mistake. When I go to an exchange the first thing I say is: 'Let me see the picture.' If this picture appeals to me it will appeal to my patrons. I am uninfluenced by the size of the subject or the prominence of the players featured, but I am influenced by the dramatic tendency and quality.

"Every picture house has got competition. I started in a small way, in the smallest possible way. I had a hard time to pay rent, but the people gradually came to me. My second month's rent, by the way, was the problem of my life. I believe an exhibitor should never cut his show, regardless of the number of persons who may be at his doors. If your program calls for six reels, run six reels, and run them in the proper number of minutes. Don't jump a thousand feet of film through a machine in eight, ten or twelve minutes because you need the space. Never abuse your audiences, because they are your meal ticket."

D. W. GRIFFITH IN NEW YORK.

David W. Griffith, producer-in-chief of Mutual features, is in New York City on a flying trip from Los Angeles. It is said Mr. Griffith came east on business connected with his great production of "The Clansman," to the making of which he has devoted a great deal of attention in the past few months. Mr. Griffith will be in New York two weeks.

Theatre Company Expands.

Department of Amusement Concern Developed Into a Separate Corporation Capitalized at $100,000.

WHEN the Satchwa General Amusement Enterprises, which has offices in the Mining Exchange Building, Salt Lake City, Utah, was formed some time ago, the incorporators of that company little thought that their film making department, one of the many departments of the Satchwa Enterprises, would eventually develop into a corporation itself, notwithstanding the attention it was given.

Such was the case, for recently the officers of the Satchwa Enterprises filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of the State of Utah for a company capitalized at $100,000. The officers of the new concern, the name of which is the Satchwa Film Corporation, are: Briant S. Young, president and general manager; George Klenke, vice-president, and F. E. Havens, secretary and treasurer. Frederick Moore and F. M. Palmquist are directors in addition to the officers, who also act as directors.

Before the new corporation was formed the film department of the Satchwa Enterprises had produced a number of pictures—on an average of one a week. The American theater of Salt Lake City recently showed one of them entitled "Big Heart," which took very well with the audience. This was also the reception of several of their other productions. The enthusiasm accorded their pictures further actuated the efforts of the Satchwa Film Corporation, and now considerably more energy is being expended in the making of their subjects.

Preparations are already under way for the enlarging of the studio and laboratories. An energetic business campaign is being inaugurated for the acquisition of a number of additional actors, actresses, cameramen, etc. It is said that a number of eastern film companies are negotiating for the output of the Satchwa Corporation.

Ohio Convention.

President Neff Invites All Members of the Trade to Attend —A Big Meeting Promised.

THE Ohio Convention to be held in Columbus at the Southern Hotel, on the 9th and 10th of February, promises to be the largest ever held in the state of Ohio. Visiting delegates from Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia will be present.

The newly-elected United States Senator, Warren G. Harding, will address the convention if he can possibly be there, also Governor Frank B. Willis, Hon. John J. Lentz, and Chief Building Inspector of Ohio, T. P. Kearns, have been invited to address the convention.

The convention will be called to order at 10 a. m. Tuesday morning. Every exhibitor in the state, whether he is a member of the league or not is invited to attend. An open session will be held each day and an opportunity will be given for exchange men, manufacturers and non-members of the league to address the convention.

We wish to receive the advice and co-operation of everyone in the state connected with the motion picture business. A motion picture will be taken of the convention and also in front of the State Capitol. The convention will march from the Southern Hotel to the capitol and call upon the governor and the legislature.

Every exhibitor should be present and co-operate with the league in at least showing the state officials and the legislature that the exhibitors of Ohio are interested enough in their own business to attend conventions and protest against unjust laws being enacted. All the exhibitors of the state of Ohio ask for or desire is a fair and square deal the same as other business men.

Any manufacturers who desire to give an exhibit will not be disappointed in the large attendance of the convention. The Ohio convention is under the same management that it has always been held under and this assures a large attendance, and profit to all who give exhibits. Anyone wishing to give a display of their goods will please write M. A. Neff, 1002 Longacre Bldg., New York City, or W. R. Wilson, Columbus, Ohio.

Cincinnati Local No. 2 met at the "Cinton Hotel," on Wednesday, January 6. There was a large attendance and everybody was enthusiastic over the coming state convention to be held in Columbus in February. A large delegation will attend from Cincinnati. F. L. Emmert, president of the local; Otto Ludeking, J. J. Huss, G. H. Cruse, J. Huebern, Lem. S. Miller and George Hill are the committee of arrangements to provide special car and refreshments for the delegates to attend the convention.

M. A. NEFF, President.

Aubrey Kennedy In Town

Here to Assist at the Launching of Kriterion Program—Tells How Organization Was Formed.

SEVENTY per cent. of the motion pictures produced in the United States are made on the Pacific Coast, is the estimate made by Aubrey M. Kennedy, general representative of all Kriterion factories. Mr. Kennedy is now on a business visit to New York, taken primarily for the purpose of being present at the inauguration of the program of the Kriterion, which is set for January 15. Mr. Kennedy has established a sort of record as transcontinental commuter, having made eight round trips across country in the past twelve months. On one of these he was away from Los Angeles nine days and eight nights, remaining in New York but twelve hours.

"We started to make the Kriterion program on the Coast on September 1, 1914," said Mr. Kennedy on Tuesday, at the offices of the company at 1600 Broadway, "and we have been steadily at work ever since. We have lost but three days out of the last sixty in Santa Barbara by reason of rain. In Los Angeles in that time we have lost a week and a half. Up to October 15 we had five companies engaged. On that date we added nine more, and fourteen is the present number. We have now on hand 180,000 feet of negative. I believe this is a world's record for a new organization."

Mr. Kennedy referred to the opening of the Pacific Coast studios of the Universal company. He said that at that time, when he was general manager for Mr. Laemmle, it took him nine months to get his organization in the shape the Kriterion is in today. Naturally he ascribes his present progress to his past experience.

"Another item of interest," continued Mr. Kennedy, "we have not working for us in Los Angeles or Santa Barbara—and the fourteen companies are equally divided between the two locations—a single director or leading man or woman who has had less than two years' experience in his or her particular line with one or more of the standard companies. Some of them have had up to five years' experience. Since I have been in New York I have talked with a dozen exchange men who have seen our pictures for the first two or three weeks' releases, and they have told me they have not seen a single leading player they have not previously known on the screen. As I have been making pictures on the Coast for five years naturally I know the picture men and women. Probably a great majority have worked under me. So in making up our companies I had a great advantage in personal acquaintance with directors and players.

"I am in New York for two purposes. Aside from being present at the opening of the program it is my intention to take back to the coast with me three new companies. These I am now selecting. I am concerned more in getting 'the goods' than I am in the matter of expenditure. I am taking my time. I think we will be able to turn out extremely good films. The comments I have so far heard on our product have been very satisfactory.

"Our reason for selecting Santa Barbara as a place for the making of pictures is because we believe it to be 25 per cent. superior to Los Angeles—from the standpoint of scenery and of economy of operation, on account of the close proximity of locations. You can get everything in the way of a structure from a factory to a five-million-dollar hotel; a million dollar Italian villa, a sheep ranch with approximately 8,000 sheep on it; mountains 5,000 feet high and foothills, ocean, docks, beach—and all of these within a traveling time of twenty-five minutes by automobile. In Los Angeles it takes an average of an hour to gain a desired location. We estimate a saving of 20 per cent. in time, and in pictures, of course, as in everything else that is money.

"We will begin releasing eighteen reels weekly on January 15. May 1 we expect to increase this output to twenty-one reels weekly. With our 180,000 feet of negative ahead we have enough to last us for ten weeks. We have ten subjects for each brand That's a position no other program was ever in. It makes an ideal situation, because it will enable us to balance our program.

"Naturally in the past months we have been working under forced draught. While the results have been good, personally I know that we can do better, and we will get very much better results now that we do not have to go at the speed we have been using. Yes, I am one of those who believe in the story. I put that factor ahead of all others in the making of a motion picture."

At the Strand Theater for the week of January 17 the principal soloist will be Mme. Kutschera, prima donna of the Royal Opera House, Brussels, and the Grand Opera House Paris. Thornton D. Urquhart, the tenor, will sing a return engagement.

War Censors Pigeonhole Orders

Code Name of "Warfeature" Is Sufficient to Sidetrack Important Communications from United Film Service.

WAR censorship is making itself felt in the motion picture industry. Rigorous account kept of all cablegrams sent to cities of the belligerent nations by non-combatant governments has resulted in the confiscation of twenty or more under-ocean messages sent by the United Film Service to its London office, say the officials of that concern. The cable address of the United Film Service is "Warfeature," a contraction of the term Warner's Features, by which the United Film Service was known before it augmented the scope of its productivity in placing on the market daily single and double reel releases as well as feature films.

The censors, trained to seize upon anything in the list related to the war, in strict and primitive adherence to their instructions, evidently placed the United Film Service's cable address on its proscribed list and filed away or destroyed messages intended for the London office, it is reported. Letters arriving weeks after the sending of these cables, complaining of failure to receive films which have been ordered, gave the home office of the United Film Service in the Leavitt Building its first intimation of the war censor's activity. J. A. McKinney, general manager of the United Film Service, on receipt of this information, immediately made preparations to place the matter before the Washington government and secure a release of the pigeonholed cablegrams.

On account of the closure of all of the leading legitimate theaters, with an exception or two, coupled with the low schedule of admissions to picture theaters in effect, motion picture houses in London have been playing to capacity almost invariably, and the demand for films has been great. This condition has been especially favorable to a further expansion of the market for American-made films in London and other cities and provincial points in the British Isles. In consequence the loss to any American firms whose shipments to England have been delayed or canceled because of the intervention of the war censors is especially heavy. A rough estimate made by an official of the United Film Service placed the loss sustained by the concern he represents because of this condition of war at $100,000.

RALPH INCE TO REMAIN WITH VITAGRAPH.

Although the New York Motion Picture Corporation got Ralph Ince to sign his name to a contract giving his services to that company for an indefinite period, it is now definitely decided that he will remain with the Vitagraph Company for whom he has produced a number of excellent feature pictures. Just what caused Mr. Ince to change his mind is not disclosed, but he did and the principals of the New York say that they will make no effort to hold him to his agreement.

VICTOR HERBERT A PICTURE ACTOR FOR A DAY.

The following picture shows a scene from "In the Shadow," a recent Excelsior release on the Alliance program. If one looks closely at the left-hand corner of the photo the genial bulk of the melodious Victor will be seen, and at his side, Henry Blossom, the famous playwright is seated.

Scene in Which Victor Herbert Appears.

It happened this way. Mr. Herbert and his guest, Mr. Blossom were making an auto pilgrimage through the Lake Placid section of the Adirondacks, where the studio of the Excelsior players is located. With true Bohemian hospitality they were entertained by the thespians. When the work for the day began the musician and playwright joined in and enjoyed novel experiences immensely.

A Double Exposure Camera

David Horsley Invents Device that Simplifies Cameraman's Problem—Has Done Other Things.

DAVID HORSLEY, who is something of an inventor of motion picture apparatus, has just perfected a camera which takes two exposures and makes two separate double-exposed negatives at one time. Mr. Horsley has been working over this idea for a long time, and is greatly elated over his success. The new duplex double-exposure camera is already in use in the Centaur studios in Bayonne and has demonstrated its thorough practicability in actual test. The possibilities opened up by Mr. Horsley's device are almost without limit. Both the vision and the scene are made at one time and either or both may be faded in or out by an independent controller. The mechanism is operated by a spring motor, which can be set to any speed from one to twenty-four that may be desired. This motive device enables the camera man to give his attention to the more important details in photography. The duplex negative is made merely as an insurance against any defect in, or accident that might happen to, a single negative, such as static, scratching, errors in the developing, etc., thereby obviating the necessities of costly retakes.

David Horsley.

Some of the effects that have already been accomplished with the new camera are most weird and startling. In one protean comedy several different human heads change and alternate on one body with startling rapidity. And the illusions are said to be perfect. In another test a lion is seen eating peacefully out of the same plate with a little girl.

Another great advantage as great in its way as the effects is the time and money which will be saved by the Horsley camera over the double exposture method now in general use.

In the first place, as both the scenes and visions are made at one time and in one location, the same light is used for each. Under the present method, scenes and visions are made at different times and the negative has to be rewound with exactness, and the acting in the second exposure timed with minute precision. Any error, however slight, will spoil the entire effect, and the work has to be done over and over any number of times, until the combination has been accurately obtained. The Horsley camera, by making both exposures on the same film at the same time, entirely eliminates these wastes and uncertainties, and proportionately reduces the cost of production.

Another unique feature which adds wonder and broadens the scope of Mr. Horsley's invention, is a device which registers the words spoken by the character right on the picture, so that speeches and necessary subtitles are read as the scenes are being unfolded.

Mr. Horsley was the first independent manufacturer, and within six years has advanced from a little one-room studio to the possession of one of the largest and most important plants—a combination factory and studio—in this country. His equipment in the Centaur Film Co. at Bayonne includes, in addition to the studio and commercial plant, machine and carpenter shops, and a silver precipitator and smelter through which he recovers from fifteen to twenty thousand dollars worth of silver from the exhausted hypo, raw stock perforations and discarded films.

Mr. Horsley's first great success as a producer was achieved with "Mutt and Jeff." These one reel comedies are said to have reached a weekly distribution of 47 copies and to have cleared over $60,000 for their maker. Mr. Horsley then erected the Nestor plant, with which asset he entered the Universal Film Co. His holdings in that organization today are considerable.

Last spring Mr. Horsley resumed the producing of one-reel comedies, and quite recently he purchased the Bostock show, one of the largest collections of trained wild animals in existence. These animals are now in Los Angeles, where they will soon be exploited as an independent show enterprise, and in motion pictures.

These achievements have been important in themselves, but it is as the inventor of such superior mechanical devices as the electric film polisher, the durable step printer, the 1,000 ft. continuous printer with automatic light shift, the axoimetre (talking picture attachment), and other practical inventions culminating in the new double exposure camera that the genius of David Horsley is revealed in full.

"The White Mask"

A Lubin Melodrama That Is Unconventional in Which the Unexpected Happens.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

I SINCERELY believe that this feature will be highly acceptable to the great masses of moving picture patrons. It has a strong plot, though somewhat intricate. Instead of a hero we have a heroine of very pleasing appearance, considerable histrionic skill and an engaging and sympathetic personality. Lillie Leslie in the triple role of the Duchess of Granville, The White Mask, and Mrs. Julia Dean holds the center of the screen from the first inch of film to the last, and she forms the connecting link between the various and sometimes divergent parts of the story.

The play abounds in sensations, all of which develop naturally in the course of the story. The action being laid in two continents, there were plenty of opportunities to emphasize the advantages of the screen over the stage. These opportunities were utilized to the fullest. Much of the action centers about the court of the Belgian King Leopold. The scenes in this part of the play are particularly fine, the settings being notable for richness and elegance and painstaking correctness. Gilbert Ely gave a startlingly faithful impersonation of the late King of the Belgians.

Scene from "The White Mask" (Lubin).

The story quickly awakens and amply sustains the interest of the spectator. Its original construction and its screen adaptation are exceptionally good. Another merit of the play is its novelty and its departure from conventional melodramatic lines. Here, the unexpected happens, rather than the expected and interest of the spectator is never permitted to flag. The title, which may be said to be "fetching," is the name given to a mysterious dancer, famous for her skill, but determined to withhold her identity from the general public, and therefore wearing a white mask every time she appears on the stage. The effort on the part of many admirers of the woman to penetrate the mask and discover the dancer's identity forms part of the action in the play. Joseph Smiley, who directed the play, also took the part of the villain, and he would be a cruel critic, indeed, who would want a more desperate villain. He deserves great credit both for his acting and for his intelligent and conscientious work as a director.

KLEINE MAKES "THE COMMUTERS."

The George Kleine studio at 11 East 14th street, New York, has been busily engaged filming "The Commuters." An original cast under the direction of George Fitzmaurice is rapidly completing the famous stage comedy.

Pictures of South America.

The Paramount Equipping a Camera Expedition for the Benefit of Its Program.

AN AMBITIOUS project well in line with its progressive policy has been undertaken by the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Arrangements have just been completed and work will be begun immediately on a series of special and extraordinary travel pictures made expressly for the Paramount program. Mr. Hodkinson, the president of the corporation, has always been outspoken in his belief that the right sort of travel picture made and selected with a special reference to American taste ought to take well with the sort of audiences who delight in Paramount programs. He has therefore decided to engage C. L. Chester, who has done some interesting travel work for the Edison and other companies, and send him in charge of a corps of camera experts into South America. Mr. Chester is well acquainted with South America, having traveled over every part of it, both on the East and West and much of the interior. He has a keen eye for picture values and his work with the camera has always been notable. The expedition will travel on a special and extensive itinerary of its own and will record all the natural wonders of South America with glimpses of its social, its political and its sporting life. Indeed, every phase and aspect of the great continent and the people who inhabit it will find adequate record on the film. The intention is to select what is most picturesque and most striking in the fauna and flora of South America and to present a pleasing picture of a country which is so little known to Americans. The great revival of interest in South America which has come with the commercial opportunities of the present day makes these pictures opportune and doubly interesting.

The expedition will leave within the next few days and, after a brief visit in Florida, will proceed to Central America, which is rich in natural curiosities and in interesting phases of native life. Then will follow Brazil with its vast unexplored interior; the Argentine Republic, which affords such fine opportunities, will next be visited; there will be a dash further south, possibly into Patagonia, then the trip across the Continent on the railway connecting Buenos Aires with Valparaiso and then up the Pacific coast by slow stages back to the States. The expedition will be gone about nine months.

"We want to give our audiences," said Mr. Hodkinson, "the best and most interesting travel pictures possible, and we thought it best to begin with our South American neighbors. I feel confident that these pictures will be entertaining in the best sense of the word. The way the audiences in The Strand appreciate the travel and scenic numbers on the program is significant and I like to think typical of such audiences everywhere. We have made arrangements with a magazine of national reputation to describe our expedition, to record with an expert pen all its doings and to illustrate by a series of photographs the various points our expedition is covering. The Moving Picture World will receive the best of our still photographs for the benefit and information of its readers."

UNIVERSAL TAKES OVER SUBMARINE MOTION PICTURES.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has gained control of the Williamson Submarine Motion Pictures, which depict some scenes, incidents and adventures taken at a depth of from sixty to a hundred feet under the surface of the water. The Universal Company has arranged with the Williamson Brothers, the inventors of that scientific marvel, the submerged photographic chamber and the originators of the under-sea photography, to exploit those sensational pictures.

The Universal is forming many companies which will be sent out at once all over the United States and Canada. Each company will consist of a lecturer, operator, manager and advance agent. The route will be laid out and booked like any touring dramatic attraction. The appeal of these submarine pictures to the public is past belief. Whenever they have played a return engagement the business has been just as great as when first shown—capacity business in both cases.

The Universal Company has not only arranged with the Williamsons to exploit their present submarine pictures, but is negotiating for control of all new films, which they may turn out. Already plans are under way for a new expedition for pictures which it is confidently expected will surpass the astounding uniqueness and thrill of the present film.

Kleine Shows "Du Barry."

Two Record-Breaking Audiences Applaud the Many Beautiful Scenes of the Famous Play in Pictures.

IF THE attendance at the complimentary exhibitions of George Kleine's six-part production of "Du Barry" on Sunday evening and Monday morning, January 10 and 11, at the Candler theater, can be taken as an indication of the drawing power of that feature when it is offered at regular picture theater admission prices, then Mr. Kleine should be pleased with the prospect for success.

Sunday night's exhibition was for the members of the theatrical profession, and the turnout was so large that two performances had to be given. At the first the house was filled to capacity—about 1,200 persons—and a most enthusiastic audience it was. Repeated applause was given the numerous and beautiful screen pictures. At the conclusion of the first showing the house was cleared as quickly as possible and more than 1,000 persons, who had been waiting in the outer lobby, quickly filled the seats.

On Monday morning a trade exhibition was given which was attended by fully 1,000 exhibitors and other motion picture men and more enthusiasm was let loose. As a result the New York office of George Kleine reports that it secured up to Wednesday bookings covering about 50 days, with numerous inquiries by letter and telegrams.

Sunday night's audience was a typical New York first-night crowd, not as resplendent as it might have been on any other night in the week, but it was representative. Of the players who appeared in the picture Hamilton Revelle, who directed the production and impersonated the King, was present. Mr. Kleine and several members of his executive staff did duty as a reception committee.

A review of "Du Barry" will appear in a subsequent issue of the Moving Picture World.

Antarctic Pictures.

Sir Douglas Mawson Brings to New York Remarkable Views of South Pole Regions.

SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON, K.B., D.Sc., B.E., the famous Antarctic explorer, arrived in New York City on Tuesday, Jan. 5, with what is declared to be the most marvelous motion pictures ever taken of the polar regions. These pictures were taken during his recent voyage of exploration and according to Sir Ernest Shackleton are "enthralling in their interest," and they tell a wonderful story of adventure, heroism, and endurance, covering a period of three years' research work in the frozen polar regions during the course of which both companions of Sir Douglas, Lieut. B. E. S. Ninnis and Dr. X. Mertz, lost their lives. Dr. Mertz died of privation, and Lieut. Ninnins met a tragic death by falling with his sledge into one of the many treacherous crevasses that are a constant menace to the explorer. This "Death Hole" is shown in the films as well as all the strange animal life as it exists at the Pole.

The nesting place of the Antarctic Petrel, long a mystery to scientists, was discovered by Sir Douglas, and the pictures show this rookery with its millions of bird inhabitants, making a motion picture record intensely interesting and of great value to science.

Sir Douglas will make a lecture tour of the United States under the management of Mr. Lee Keedick, and the pictures will be used to illustrate his wonderfully interesting story and bring out situations and facts that seem so improbable that words can not do them justice.

The first showing in New York City will be conducted under the auspices of the American Geographical Society and the American Museum of Natural History, at Aeolian Hall, 34 West 43rd street, on Sunday, January 17, and bookings have already been closed for all the principal cities of the United States and Canada.

CONCERNING "THE GRAIN OF DUST."

Editor "The Moving Picture World."

Dear Sir:—I note on page 380 of your issue of January 16, 1915, an announcement that "The Grain of Dust," by David Graham Phillips, is to be produced in motion pictures by William Fox, or the Box Office Attraction Co.

Negotiations to that end were had by me in behalf of Mrs. Carolyn Frevert, Mr. Phillips' sister, with Mr. Fox in December, but terminated on December 24, because of our inability to agree as to terms. Since that time they have not been renewed and the Box Attraction Company's announcement is contrary to the facts. Yours truly,

JOHN L. LOCKWOOD.

The foregoing is confirmed by the Box Office Attraction Company.

To Sell Shares to Exhibitors.

Lewis J. Selznick Plans to Give Picture Men Opportunity to Acquire World Film Stock.

UP at the offices of the World Film Corporation Lewis J. Selznick is clearing decks preparatory to opening up an advertising campaign, the chief slogan of which will be "How to Make Money," with Mr. Selznick personally explaining how wealth, small or large, is to be accumulated. As he remarked on Wednesday, "I have been making a lot of money for a lot of fellows, and I am now going to tell exhibitors how to do what I have previously shown a lot of other men in the film business. I propose to carry a page of advertising each week which will be devoted to a special letter to exhibitors. In that weekly announcement I am going to point out how the World Film proposes to do big things.

Lewis J. Selznick.

"I think I have demonstrated what we can do up here from a money making point of view by placing the World Film in the foremost rank as a big concern, through accumulating over two million dollars in contracts with exhibitors throughout the United States within three months, with three thousand exhibitors. There are ninety-six of these in New York City alone. When I started with the World Film there were some men who thought I had put something over when I secured an alliance with the Shuberts. Following that, however, came William A. Brady, then Blaney, then Liebler and Armstrong, then the California Motion Picture Company, then Dyreda, then Charles K. Harris. Also there have been such subjects as 'The Seats of the Mighty,' the Bertlevyettes by the L. & O. Film Company, the great Selig suffrage picture, 'Your Girl and Mine,' and 'In the Land of the Head Hunters,' etc.

"We have made a marvelous success. I want to tell the exhibitors that we have given them these things, and that we want to give them more and more. But the most remarkable thing we have accomplished is this: The par value of a share of World Film Corporation stock is $5. Without having yet paid a dividend or having made a statement that stock is now selling in Wall Street above par. I submit to you if I could sell $1,750,000 in stock to shrewd bankers, men who check you back forty ways before they put down their money, then it must be their opinion that I have a winning proposition.

"One of the reasons for the success of this company has been the participating plan with its employes. Now we propose to let exhibitors share profits with us. We are going to sell World Film stock to them at $5, even if in the open market the price should advance to $10. This ground-floor proposal will be extended to every exhibitor and employe of an exhibitor who uses World Film service. Men tell me I have succeeded in the film business. If I have it is because of two things—liberality and quick action. I have been willing to share profits with others who could contribute to the making of those profits and I have moved fast—I have consummated deals while others were talking about them. You'll hear the particulars next week."

Mr. Selznick's enthusiasm in his share-selling project is born out of his success in interesting men of large means in his plans. Giving him credit for believing in the ultimate success of the World Film and its allied concerns and the ability of those interests to pay a reasonable dividend on the capital invested The Moving Picture World questions the advisability of listing the shares of any amusement purveying corporation among the "good things" for even an exhibitor to buy.

It is not intended to infer that the World Film is to be classed with known "stock jobbing" propositions. On the contrary, the World Film Corporation is a going concern, actually transacting business with many exhibitors and providing a class of feature pictures that measure up to the product of any other company and it is, in all probability, as much entitled to sell some of its stock to the motion picture public as is the United States Steel Corporation to the public at large. Yet it is a matter of common knowledge that the history of "industrials" is unsavory with such scandals as over-capitalization and directorial extravagance, not to say criminality, which leads the Moving Picture World to express the hope that the motion picture business may be spared from anything of a similar character, which stock-selling propositions so frequently lead to.

"Runaway June."

Second Instalment of New Reliance Serial Makes Us Better Acquainted with "The Man with the Black Vandyke."

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE "Man with the Black Vandyke" cannot be said to improve on acquaintance. His wife, too, has become implicated in the plot of the story, and also a questionable type of young woman who comes into prominence at a party given by Gilbert Blye (of the black vandyke) in the ballroom at Rector's. A very splendid setting and a distinctly Bohemian atmosphere has been given her entry into the story, which marks not only an era in the hunt for "Runaway June," but also an unpleasant difference between Blye and his rather unprepossessing wife. The role of the questionable young woman, "Tommy" Thomas, by the way, is played by Margaret Loveridge, and that of Mrs. Honoria Blye, by Miss Rica Allen.

Scene from "Runaway June" (Mutual).

One Orin Cunningham has also stepped into the game in an attractive scene at an exclusive club, and is interesting as one of the types of the play. This role is taken by Charles Mason.

And in the meantime, June has arrived in New York after having sold her watch on the train, for the purpose of supplying herself with money, and has been unconsciously pursued by the "Man with the Black Vandyke" in one auto, and her husband in the other, has been taken in by her friends, the Bletherings, is pursued thither by her husband and parents, has stolen out the window, and is off again on another chase; and all because her "mere man" husband made the mistake of offering his bride of independent spirit some money.

The new serial promises to be interesting. It is well staged, well costumed, and altogether interesting. A preponderance of subtitles is perhaps its only fault, if fault there be.

CINEMA CAMERA CLUB BALL A SUCCESS.

The motion picture cameramen, organized as the Cinema Camera Club, held their second annual ball at the Palm Garden on Friday evening, January 8. The event was a very enjoyable one and was attended by a large number of motion picture players and producers. The committee of arrangements in charge of the function were Arthur A. Edelson, chairman; John Arnold, Al. Armsbaker, Philip Rosen and Edward Horn. On the reception committee were Henry Bredeson, William S. Forsyth, Irving Willat, Ollie Leach, Edward Wynard, John Van de Broek, Otto Brautigan, Hall Young, Eugene Cugnet, Carl Gregory, A. Lloyd Lewis, William C. Marshall, M. M. Robinson and William C. Thompson.

Five Biograph Releases

Product for the Week of January 25 Makes Up a Well-Balanced, Quality Combination.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN LAST week's issue of this journal there was a review of the two-part Biograph release for Tuesday, January 26, "File No. 113," a strong drama adapted from the detective story of Emile Gaboriau. The single-reel companions of this multiple for the week of Monday, January 25, are for the opening day the split subject carrying "Diogenes Weekly No. 23" and "The Boob and the Baker." On January 28 "Milady's Boudoir" will be released; January 29, "Her Slumbering Conscience," and January 30 "The Dancer's Ruse." Monday's subject is devoted to farce comedy, Thursday's is a comedy-drama, and Friday's and Saturday's are both dramas. In all of these there is an evenness in quality which is notable. It speaks well for the producer, this attention to the old standard thousand-foot lengths, which, after all, still are and probably will continue to be the backbone of the motion picture business with the great majority of exhibitors.

Scene from "The Boob and the Baker" (Biograph).

"Diogenes Weekly No. 23" is a gentle satire on the news weekly. Plainly there is no malice in the old man, as we may judge by the expression on his face when he crawls out of his tub. At a reception he takes pictures as Jan Rickey, hungry Hungarian violinist, makes his first bow and scrape before society. That his bow does scrape is apparent as his audience dwindles. There is humor in the titles as well as fun in the pictures, as we see from the announcement that "At Lakewood, N. J., all of the upper ten pin their faith on I. M. Fatt to win the bowling championship." What Fatt does to the pins and with them would make the Simon Pure article envious. Diogenes takes in other sights with his grotesque camera before he crawls home.

Scene from "The Dancer's Ruse" (Biograph).

"The Boob and the Baker," on the same reel, is filled with the sort of fun so greatly in demand and likewise so difficult to create. The mirth is continuous, and unusually hearty. Russell Powell is the fat man who wanders into a bakery and gets into an altercation with a boob. Dave Morris is the Boob, and he is the real thing—there's no doubt about that. He investigates the money drawer from the front of the desk; he makes his selection of cigars and of cakes, and you wonder not so much where as how he puts them away. His troubles really begin, however, when he intimates to the boss that a certain young woman has most positively charmed him. It just happens to be the boss' wife. A loaf of bread containing a bag or more of flour lands on the head of the Boob. Killed, he seems to be. The baker stows him into the great oven, the better to remove some of the more material evidence of the crime. Flames have no terror for the Boob, however, for he gets out very sleepily and crawls into a trough of dough, lays down and slumbers. It's a good, soft bed; it should be—there's more than a barrel of flour in it. Don't miss the Boob, for you'll miss a laugh if you do.

"Milady's Boudoir" is a pretty and an interesting picture. Isabel Rea has the part of the young woman who during the day appears in a show window as the mistress of a beautiful home and is garbed in elaborate gowns. She gets into difficulties when she is seized with a longing to spend just one night in the surroundings to which she is accustomed in the day and which are so different from her little quarters at her boarding house. How she loses her position, saves a young man from posibly going to jail and gets the same young man and a home like her boudoir are all very logically told and also furnish a delicate "punch" at the conclusion.

"Her Slumbering Conscience" is a strong drama in which the leads are finely played by Charles H. Mailes and Mary Malatesta. It is a story of a dream as we discover to our surprise at the close—and also to our inward satisfaction. We understand the significance of the title following the most interesting and cleverly handled denouement.

"The Dancer's Ruse," the release of Saturday, is perhaps the more pretentiously staged, which means that it is unusually well staged. The story is of Russia, of how Lydia, a dancer, succeeds in getting her Nihilist brother out of prison, even out of the hands of a shooting squad, about to execute a death sentence. Claire McDowell has the role of Lydia. Charles H. West is the brother, Frank Evans the governor and H. A. Barrows the sweetheart of Lydia. It is the latter who assumes a disguise which so closely resembles the governor that he is enabled to give the order freeing the brother. It is most convincingly done. We see the two men in the same room—there is no subterfuge of double exposure—and the effect is all the more remarkable. "The Dancer's Ruse" is a fine picture, and marks the concluding release of a week's strong program.

GRANDSON OF FRANK MAYO WITH BALBOA.

A very quiet, unassuming young man came to the Balboa Company of Long Beach, California, a short time ago and asked for a chance to act in motion pictures. He secured the opportunity on his general appearance and the statement that he had had some experience "on the other side." He was placed with one of the companies and made good in his first picture. It then developed that he is a son of Edwin Mayo and the grandson of Frank Mayo, of "Davy Crockett" fame, after whom he is named. He has all the earmarks by which first-class material is judged and motion picture circles will hear a lot about him as the time goes on.

ARCTIC PICTURES AT THE STRAND.

Commencing Sunday, January 17, the Strand theater, by special arrangement with the Arctic Film Co., Candler Building, New York City, will have as a star attraction pictures taken by Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt in Alaska and the Arctic regions. W. C. Clark, a member of the expedition, will lecture on the pictures and tell of the habits and habitat of these wild animals and the many difficulties to be overcome when stalking them to get close enough with the moving picture camera to show the animals on the screen.

Of special interest is the vessel of the expedition passing Muir Glacier with its wall of ice 800 feet high; in another part of the picture the salmon are seen swimming under water and being bailed out and put into scows and taken to the canneries; the pictures of Bogoslof Island show thousands of Stellar sea lion puppies scampering around the tripod. Interesting and thrilling are the walrus; they are shown here tossing and rolling about among the ice floes within ten feet of the camera. They have a prehistoric goblin-like appearance with their gleaming ivory tusks, small, beady, round eyes and bristled snouts. They live exclusively on clams, which they procure by diving down through twenty or thirty fathoms of water to the bottom of the sea. Many walrus carcases were given to the starving Eskimo and their dogs. Over a thousand of these wolf-like dogs are seen fighting in a bunch for a portion of the walrus meat thrown to them by the natives.

"Suspicious Characters"

An Amusing One-Reel Edison Travesty of the Burglar Photodrama.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Jim, a burglar.....William Wadsworth
Bill, his hungry pal.....Arthur Housman
Mr. Ebstein.....William Bechtel
Mrs. Ebstein.....Cora Williams
Rachel Ebstein.....Margaret O'Meara
A Rich Man.....Frank A. Lyon
The Policeman.....James Harris

EXHIBITORS who claim that many of the photoplays are overweighted with sub-titles and those extremists who think it high art to omit sub-titles altogether should give the "once over" to "Suspicious Characters," visualized by director Charles Ransen. The story is amusing in its own way, but it gains tremendously from bright remarks between pictures, in fact, they, not the action, will stimulate most of the laughter with which it is sure to be received. They are very pat, give lustre to the uncut stone, and contribute materially to the purpose of the comedy. The best rule for sub-titles is that of common sense. Use good ones whenever they improve the visualization, and leave them out if they do not. There are practically no other rules or restrictions.

Scene from "Suspicious Characters" (Edison).

Bill and Jim are two hungry burglars. They assemble the tools of their trade and prepare to break into a pantry. They select that of a rich epicurean, Mr. Ebstein, and proceed to "jimmy" a window. A timid policeman saunters up, regards them with suspicion and gets in their light. They reproach him. "Aint youse got no manners? How can we see to git in?" He apologizes and saunters away. They also accuse Mrs. Ebstein of exhibiting a lack of lady-like consideration when she pulls down the shade of the window where they are working. She flies upstairs and informs Mr. Ebstein. Meanwhile, the burglars enter and set to work opening a safe in which Mr. Ebstein has just deposited the family jewels. It happens that while he was so occupied, his little daughter Rachel crawled into the safe, so there is an act of heroism in store for the burglars. While they are using their tools on the iron box, the policeman returns and enters the window they have "jimmied."

"What are you guys doing?" asks the cop.

"We are piano tuners," reply the burglars.

"Oh, I see," replies the policeman, and he politely exits as he came. He returns again to the great annoyance of Bill and Jim and one of them declares, "That cop is a pest. Let's take the safe home." This they proceed to do, and they are holding it high in air when Mr. Ebstein rushes in with a revolver. "Hold up your hands," he cries, "and you're safe!" They thereupon drop it to obey. Ebstein complains to the policeman, pointing out the burglar tools and marks of the yeggs. The cop nods intelligently. "Oh," he reassures Mr. Ebstein, "I've got my eye on them."

So it continues, a parody on the solemn and melodramatic. Though far from being the best that could be written on such a subject it is a step in the right direction. People are weary of the burglar play. They are weary of being compelled to witness night after night the poor barren subject thrust upon them without any "raison d'etre." Just as Voltaire made merry over institutions and ideas that had fallen into decay, just as Lucian ridiculed ancient beliefs and antiquated myths, so may satire and ridicule serve a really good purpose in ridding us of a lot of rubbish in photoplay releases and help us to get rid of falsehood masking as truth. The average scenario writer, and one would reason from what is being shown on the screen the average director, is about as keen an observer of actual life as the little boy who studied a cow ruminating in a field and told his mother that he had seen one chewing gum. The gentlemen to whom I refer as scenario writers and directors seem at times to be misguided by appearances.

Bosworth's Hypocrites at Long Acre Theatre

THROUGH arrangements made between Harry Reichenbach for Bosworth's, Inc., and H. H. Frazee, owner, Bosworth's famous production of Lois Weber's daring creation, "Hypocrites" will open at the Long Acre theatre next Monday evening as a first-class attraction.

S. L. Rothapfel, of the Strand, will stage "Hypocrites" and a large chorus and orchestra, in addition to a Wurlitzer organ, will be installed.

"Hypocrites" will be shown at admission prices ranging from twenty-five cents to one dollar evenings, and fifty cents high matinees. There will be two shows daily.

"Hypocrites" proved one of the most artistic, daring and sensational of motion picture productions. The story in brief, tells of the carving from stone, by a Friar, Gabriel, of his idea of Truth, a nude woman. This image is presented to the city. At the unveiling, the populace, shocked by the nakedness of truth, kills its author. Two thousand years elapse and Gabriel reincarnated, is seen as a modern minister, delivering a sermon on hypocrisy. Gabriel is then visited by his image, in human form, still unclothed, and the image leads him through life, shows the excesses of present-day frailties and the reflex sides of love, politics, modesty, society, religion, family life, etc. Withal it is a most ingenious and startling production and should attract great patronage on Broadway.

Myrtle Stedman in "Hypocrites."

Harry Reichenbach, now with Bosworth, will handle the exploitation of "Hypocrites" throughout the United States. He will give it the same attention, from publicity and productional standpoints, that made him so favorably known when with Henry B. Harris and other producers.

TEACHING ANIMALS TO POSE.

Not content with showing how each human actor must do his stunt, Edgar Lewis, the picture director of the Box office Attractions Co., also specializes in showing the quadruped members of his stock company how they should perform before the screen.

One of the scenes in "The Gilded Fool," in which William Farnum is now being starred, shows the interior of a New York apartment late at night; windows open, fair maid asleep, French poodle reposing in the cushioned depths of a wicker chair. Through the window comes the sound of a piano played in the usual "four a. m." style. Dog wakes and joins in the concert to the best of his ability, making lady, who displays her peevishness by bouncing out of bed, jerking down the window, returning to bed, pulling covers up over ears and both dog and maiden again retiring to the arms of Morpheus.

To have the dog assume the proper pose required considerable work on the part of Mr. Lewis, but after numerous personal demonstrations he has succeeded in making Mr. Poodle pose for the camera just as cleverly as his biped co-laborers.

"The Exploits of Elaine"

Third Episode of the Pathe-Hearst Serial Loses Nothing by Way of Suspense.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THREE well-dressed gentlemen have now appeared on the scene minus their identities, and have succeeded in stirring things up generally in the jewelry store of Stuyvesant Martin, dropping a show-case full of jewels to the floor below, and after the firing of several shots and the throwing of a bomb which might have been fatal in its effect, have made their getaway, leaving a breathless audience.

It has been divulged that they are accomplices of the "Clutching Hand," and also that the identity of the "Clutching Hand" is unknown, even to his associates. "Craig Kennedy" has, in another attempt to interefere with the private business of the "Clutching Hand," been treated to a blow on the head which leaves him on his back on the dark street while his auto and Elaine are confiscated. A few scenes later we are horrified to see Elaine bound hand and foot and placed in a discarded boiler which lies near the water at the docks.

Scene from "The Exploits of Elaine" (Pathe).

Of course, the real thrill of the episode comes when the rescue of Elaine is almost due, and by means of a series of flashbacks we are tortured into a belief that her pretty head will be totally submerged by the incoming tide before the rescue corps reaches her.

But in due time a certain welding works is forced to open its doors, and Craig Kennedy accompanied by an expert workman appears on the scene in time to cut a hole in the top of the great metal prison of Elaine, and bring her unharmed out into the open again.

Three episodes have passed and gone their way, and we are now launched at a breakneck speed into one of the best of its kind in the matter of serials.

One of the most noticeable points about "The Exploits of Elaine" is the manner in which it is being directed and put together. Too much praise cannot be given to the clean-cut methods employed, and the smoothness and consistency of the action.

Creighton Hale has taken his place in the cast as Jamieson in this episode, and has done so with good effect.

PIERCE ATTENDS OPENING OF RICHMOND'S STRAND.

Bosworth's special representative, Carl H. Pierce, left for Richmond, Va., on Thursday to attend the opening of the new Strand Theater there. The Strand is backed by the Norfolk capitalists, J. C. and H. C. Hofheimer, who are opening this theater with the Paramount program.

While this is a new venture for the capitalists in question, they are entering upon their project with the idea of making the Strand the premier show-house of the South.

Mr. Pierce expects to remain about ten days, returning in time to attend the first public showing of "Hypocrites" at the Knickerbocker ball-room in behalf of the Belgian Relief Fund under the auspices of Mayor Mitchel, Norman Hapgood and other prominent New Yorkers, on the sixteenth of the month.

Paul Scardon

EIGHTEEN years ago in far away Australia, a boy of fifteen, created a sensation as a contortionist and started on a professional career that has placed the name of Paul Scardon on programs with the greatest stars of the present generation, in every phase of theatricals, and the value of this diversified experience is shown by the finish that characterizes his present work in Vitagraph pictures.

Paul Scardon.

From vaudeville, Mr. Scardon went into pantomime and then played for five consecutive years in dramatic productions with J. C. Williamson, touring New Zealand and Australia. Leaving Australia for a tour of the United States with Nance O'Neil, the company stopped at Honolulu, and had the unique experience of playing a matinee at ten o'clock in the morning in order to make connections with the boat for this country. It was while in San Francisco with this company that Mr. Scardon made the acquaintance of D. W. Griffith, a meeting that later resulted in the former appearing in Biograph films for some time.

After playing Shakepearian roles with E. H. Sothern and appearing with Mrs. Fiske in her last revival of "Becky Sharpe," he became stage manager for the company playing her successful comedy, "Mrs. Bumstead Leigh," and then, with this wide experience to his credit he entered the field of motion pictures; to use his own words, "the final and highest form of dramatic expression."

A thorough master of the art of make-up and an artist, accomplished in all branches of dramatic work, Mr. Scardon, during his four years of picture portrayals, has contributed to the art some of the finest characterizations ever reflected on the screen. He was a member of the first Majestic stock company, and during his connection with the "Independents" refused many offers to "direct;" preferring to wait until he felt complete master of every detail of the work. It is hoped that the time is not now far distant when his accumulated knowledge of dramatics will be devoted to the pictureplay through the wider scope of a directorship.

LEADING PLAYERS SUPPORT JOHN MASON.

The leading man and woman of two contemporary Broadway successes appear in the supporting cast of a legitimate star in the film version of a celebrated play. This unusual combination of stellar talent is included in the Famous Players Film Company's five-part screen adaptation of the international dramatic success, "Jim the Penman," by Sir Charles L. Young, in which John Mason is presented in the title role. The two distinguished members of the cast in support of the star are Margaret Leslie, leading woman of the current stage triumph, "Outcast," and Fred Perry, leading man of the dramatic sensation, "On Trial."

When John Mason announced his intention of making his first appearance in motion pictures, in the renowned role of "Jim Ralston," whose clever pen wrote the success of Sir Charles' greatest play, the news was received in theatrical and motion picture circles with some surprise, as Mr. Mason had previously refused many offers from leading film concerns, and his acceptance of the Famous Players contract was judged as another indication of the esteem in which that concern is held by the foremost artists on the legitimate stage.

The Famous Players have greatly extended the interest of this notable drama by studied amplification of the more intricate elements of the plot, which the wider scope of the screen make possible, and John Mason portrays a more interesting Jim Ralston than has ever been offered in any of the stage presentations of the famed character.

"Mignon"

Grand Opera Furnishes Basis for Five-Part Picture with Beatrice Michelena in Role of Mignon (California Motion Picture Company).

By Hanford C. Judson.

THE chief charm of this story of Mignon lies in the character and untutored, sweet innocence of the young woman herself—she is youth personified. It is just an incident taken from "Wilhelm Meister," Goethe's great masterpiece which, as a whole, is pretty dull reading; but this part is considered one of the most charming things in literature. The story as told of the scenes of the picture is true to the character; has much of the flavor of the great German story, and is more vivid and much more exciting. The beautiful leading woman intelligently blocks out the part rather than distills its essence for us. She is absolutely in focus on the character only at times and this keeps a bit less gripping the middle scenes of the picture where the story's action runs more slowly than at the opening and closing. The whole shows excellent direction; the scenes, backgrounds and much of the acting are fine.

Scene from "Mignon" (California).

One of the distinctly good things in it is the playing of Musette, the gypsy girl who commits suicide. Wilhelm Meister and "the actress" are also well played, although the latter, some may think, should have been a less coldly calculating woman. The picture opens with the meeting of Lothario, who has a wife and little girl at home, with Musette, the gypsy. He deceives her and when it all comes out and she kills herself, Lothario's wife, an invalid, dies. The gypsies steal Lothario's daughter and he, losing his mind, wanders as a minstrel in search of her. The middle scenes, several years later, show how Wilhelm finds her ill-treated and buys her from the gypsies. He is a gentleman of leisure who (the picture leaves this part obscure) is led by a deep interest in Hamlet to make friends with a troupe of players. A petty princeling invites the players to act as a fete for his guests. The guest of the players, Wilhelm, the gypsy girl and the wandering minstrel; her real father, are all at the fete. The action here is not exciting until the crazy minstrel sets the house on fire. He and the girl run away together and come by accident to his castle, where he is recognized and gets his mind back and there's a happy ending. It is funny how really great poets often close their stories happily, even among the bitter Greek dramatists.

It is surely an instructive and really valuable offering and, as a whole, does its makers credit. We, ourselves, enjoyed it much. Ambrose Thomas prepared the scenario and the direction was in charge of Alex. Beyfuss.

FAY TINCHER'S ANNIVERSARY.

With her appearance in the Griffith-Mutual two-reel drama, "The Love Pirate," now released in the Mutual program, Fay Tincher celebrated the first anniversary of her entry into the world of moving pictures. Just a year ago she performed before the motion picture camera for the first time in her young life when she took the part of the siren in "The Battle of the Sexes," a part similar to the one she assumes in "The Love Pirate." It was during the rehearsals for the former drama, strangely enough, that D. W. Griffth discovered Miss Tincher's ability as a comedienne since when she has appeared in the "Bill" series and other comedies directed by Eddie Dillon.

Pearl White

ON a certain broiling hot day in July, 1894, a travel-soiled, perspiring and weary traveler on horseback in the Ozark Mountains of Missouri, halted his stumbling nag in front of a lonely log cabin, some fifteen or twenty miles from the nearest railroad station. It was the first habitation he had seen in six miles. It stood near the trail in a stump-dotted clearing of only a couple of acres or so, and certainly had little to recommend it in the way of beauty or convenience. A gaunt hog was rooting among the stumps, and an aged, tired-looking mule rested his head on the top rail of the rail fence and surveyed the traveler with a mild surprise. The cabin door opened and a tow-headed little girl dashed out to the traveler, dug into the turf with one bare foot and then, looking up at him in a perfectly self-possessed manner, invited him to "light for a while, stranger, an' rest yo'self."

Pearl White.

The traveler complied and thus was initiated into the mysteries of cornpone, "hogbelly" and chicory coffee. That night, in response to the questions of his kindly hosts as they sat in the dim candle-light of the cabin the traveler informed them that he was connected with a traveling company of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" players, that he had been compelled to go to the county seat on business and was now on his way to rejoin his company by cutting across country.

The eyes of the tow-headed child snapped when she heard that the guest of the family was connected with a theatrical company. "Mister," she piped, "I can act," and then the astonished traveler saw the midget assume an oratorical posture and heard her repeat a scene from "Hamlet," word for word. It was crude, of course, very crude, but it made a deep impression upon the theatrical man. He turned to the child's parents and at once offered to give the budding genius a chance with his company at the fabulous salary of "5 a week and grub." Much as the poor mountaineers disliked parting with their only child, the emolument was so stupendous that they were carried away and the next day as the traveler ambled away on his rejuvenated horse, behind him perched a little girl with a blonde top. Pearl White had embarked upon a theatrical career.

For a year she played "Little Eva" with the wandering company. Then she heard from her parents that they had moved to the metropolis of Greenridge (population 287), and wanted her with them. So she left the stage for awhile and put in six years in school. Apparently her desire for the footlights had died a natural death, but one day a circus came to the county seat and the White family took it in. The smell of the sawdust came sweet to the nostrils of the girl and the pink fleshings and glittering spangles aroused the old fever in her heart. She slipped away from her parents and at the end of half an hour came back with the news that she had asked for and received "a job with the show." That same night when the circus men "folded their tents like the Arabs and silently stole away," Pearl was with them to put in several years as a bareback rider. Then came an opportunity to go back on the stage where she has been ever since, playing, as she expresses it, with some of the best and some of the worst companies in existence.

Several years ago she received a tempting offer from the Pathe Freres American stock company to appear in pictures. That determined her profession and with Pathe she has been ever since, with the exception of short intervals.

When the "Perils of Pauline" was started Miss White was selected for the role of Pauline, and certainly no better selection could have been made. She took chances that very few men would have taken, and today has the reputation in the Pathe studio as being the nerviest of women.

"The Lieutenant Governor"

An Essanay Photoplay in Two Parts, in Which Love, Jealousy and Politics Commingle.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

A TENSE story, adapted from the Smart Set Magazine, invests "The Lieutenant Governor," by Essanay, with well-sustained interest throughout. The treatment of the pictured story by Director Joseph Byron Totten, who also impersonates the scapegoat (Russ Cook) in the cast, carries out the intention of the original; namely, that the spectator is supposed to be viewing a version of occurrences that have taken place.

In the opening scene we see a prisoner in his cell talking through prison bars with his lawyer, who tells him that there is no escape from punishment for the crime he has committed, and that he will be executed on the morrow. The vision follows, and in the closing scene the first is repeated. In this last scene a dissolving view is added, which shows the happy lovers, whom the prisoner has been instrumental in uniting, fondly embracing each other. This will appear gruesome, unless it is remembered that it represents the picture in the mind of the man who has sacrificed himself for their happiness and who is happy in that thought.

Scene from "The Lieutenant Governor" (Essanay).

In my mind there is a fear that a wrong impression may be created in the minds of unthinking people when they view the scene in the office of the Governor, after that official has been slain by the pistol shot of the murderer. We see the people who have benefited most by the death of the Governor grasping the hands of the man who committed the crime, while his victim lies reclining, dead, in the same room. It is in bad taste to say the least of it, and the handshaking might better have taken place outside the room of death. As it is, the impression may be created that crime is being condoned.

This small matter, however, while it may detract from the claim of careful direction, does not impair the strength of an otherwise well-filmed story.

The spectator will be pleased with the able talent seen in the cast. The lead, the part of the Lieutenant Governor (John Hamilton Barclay), is very forcefully sustained by Eugene O'Brien. This is Mr. O'Brien's first appearance in moving pictures and we hope it will not be his last. He chanced to be playing the role of Lieut. David Graham in "Kittie MacKay," at the Princess theater here, when "The Lieutenant Governor" came up for production by Essanay and he was offered the chance to make his debut on the screen. He will have made so many friends before the run of this photoplay has closed that his call to moving pictures may already be taken for granted.

Miss Ruth Stonehouse is seen to excellent advantage in the part of Helen Rathbun, daughter of the millowner and fiancee of Lieut. Gov. Barclay. She shows fine spirit in the McGrath proposal scene, and the ejection of the insolent ward heeler creates a rush of emotional approval. The Dennis McGrath of Lester Cuneo is the living prototype of a low, daring, unscrupulous ward politician. It rings so true that one unconsciously hates and despises the man. Director Totten does fine character work in the part of Russ Cook, the moral weakling. Harry Dunkinson and John Cossar merit favorable mention in the parts of Charles Rathbawn, the millowner, and Salvado, the millworker.

Russ Cook, lovable but weak in character, takes to drink after he has proposed to and been refused by Helen Rathbawn, daughter of a rich millowner. Helen accepts the suit of Lieut. Gov. Barclay, and while Cook knows of their happiness there is no hatred in his heart, for he loves them both. Next comes Dennis McGrath, corrupt political boss, to sue for Helen's hand. He is refused with disdain and plans the ruin of the millowner, Chas. Rathbawn. He causes the millhands to demand higher wages and by his political power prevents the Governor from calling out the militia to protect the mills when the men walk out.

Lieut. Gov. Barclay instructs the millowner to fight, and all the disaffected employes are discharged. McGrath then accuses Barclay of inciting reprisal, and engages one of the millhands to shoot him. Russ Cook overhears the plot and disarms the would-be murderer, while he himself uses the pistol to kill the Governor.

I overlooked to mention that the Governor is well impersonated by Sidney Ainsworth. The release date is January 22.

Margaret Wycherly

ANOTHER star of the legitimate stage—this time the Shakespearean branch—has been won over to the motion picture stage. She is Miss Margaret Wycherly, who is featured in the George W. Lederer Stage Filmotions' six-act photoplay, "The Fight." The play was written by Bayard Veiller, who also wrote the other noted success, "Within the Law," especially for Miss Wycherly. Therefore when George W. Lederer obtained the film rights for the drama, which was such a sensation at the Hudson theater last season, he stipulated that Miss Wycherly play the lead. She refused. It required considerable cajolery to get her. Now she is anxious for her part in the next picture.

Margaret Wycherly.

"It was altogether different from anything I had any idea of," explained Miss Wycherly. "Why, it requires the highest art of acting to appear before the camera. On the legitimate stage your audience gives you the cue as to how you are getting over your part, but that silent camera has you guessing so that you are always bending every energy to appear before it as you would before a Lyceum audience.

"And the play itself! Why, it is to my way of thinking the only correct method of interpreting the meaning of the play. I was particularly pleased when Mr. Veiller wrote 'The Fight' for me and gave the character of Jane Thomas such a strength, but since seeing the screen version I realize how insignificant the legitimate production must have been as compared with the film presentation. In the Hudson theater production we came on the stage and told of exciting and wonderful incidents that had occurred off stage. The audience had to take our word for it that they had taken place. I thought at the time how splendid it would be if the audience could see the things described. And now they can.

"Yes, indeed, I am a strong supporter of the silent drama from now on. I hope, too, to see some day all of Shakespeare's plays enacted before the camera, because I realize that in them there is a better field than on the legitimate stage. Since I played in 'The Fight' I have counted myself fortunate in having such accomplishments as ability to swim, to dance, to skate and to run a motor car."

The tinting of the picture was done this week and a private exhibition or two will be arranged, after which "The Fight" will be released, and the director as well as president of the corporation, George W. Lederer, feels confident that his first production will establish him firmly in the motion picture producing field.

DINNER TO CHARLES RAY.

The De Luna Club, an organization composed exclusively of Inceville actors, gave Charles Ray a dinner recently and the leading man proved himself "some" post prandial orator.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

"The Lady of the Snows" Secured by Essanay.

MRS. EDITH OGDEN HARRISON, wife of Mayor Carter H. Harrison, of this city, has completed her first scenario for moving pictures. What is more to the point, she has already disposed of it, and has signed a contract with the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company for its production.

The story of the photoplay is adapted from Mrs. Harrison's novel, "The Lady of the Snows," and the subject will be of three-reel length. The novel was published in 1912, and has gone through its fourth edition. As is known by many, "The Lady of the Snows" is a love story, in which an English heiress and a member of the Northwest mounted police are the chief characters.

"If my first novel is a success as a picture play, as I hope it will be, I probably shall release 'Princess Suzanne' next, and then follow with the 'Fairy Stories'," Mrs. Harrison said in an interview.

"I chose the Essanay Company because it is a Chicago concern, and the production will be made right here in the city, where I can watch its progress. An eastern company offered better financial inducements, but I feel I have taken the right course."

Chicago Fashion Show in Moving Pictures.

Chicago's Fashion show, this year, will be held in the First Regiment Armory from Feb. 8 to 13, under the auspices of the Garment Manufacturers' Association. The association, by means of moving pictures taken at the show, brings before every section of the country the latest fashions of the countries of the world.

The interior of the armory will be transformed for the occasion by means of elaborate scenic and tropical effects, with a fountain in the center of the great hall around which 300 models will walk, displaying the new spring and summer creations. The receipts of the opening night will be devoted to the Emerson House Settlement. Among the well-known Chicago society women who are patronesses are: Mrs. Potter Palmer, Jr., Mrs. Lockwood Honore, Mrs. Richard T. Fox, Mrs. George C. Hixson, Mrs. Thomas J. Prindiville and Mrs. William A. Yager.

Lectures will be delivered on subjects pertinent to the exhibit, and concerts will be given every afternoon and evening by the orchestra of the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

George Ade Delights an Invalid with Pictures.

George Ade, whose "Fables in Slang" have made him both rich and famous, paid an original compliment to a friend, Mrs. W. S. McCrea, of this city, Thursday night, Jan. 7.

Mrs. McCrea, who has been a partial invalid for the past year, had never seen a moving picture show. Mr. Ade, armed with a moving picture machine, an operator, a large white screen and other paraphernalia, went to the McCrea home at 716 Lincoln Parkway and presented some of his slang fables in pictures, as produced by the Essanay Company.

"It was delightful," said Mrs. McCrea, "and I appreciate so much the thoughtfulness of Mr. Ade. I always admired his 'Slang Fables,' and to see them pictured on a screen was a great pleasure."

The beautiful hall in the McCrea home was turned into a moving picture theater for the occasion, and many friends were present, who enjoyed the presentation of the pictures as keenly as did their hostess.

Globe Trotting Boy Located by Moving Pictures.

Wonderful in scope and minute in observation is the eye of the moving picture camera. In the midst of a crowd in an excited, throbbing street gathering, it can single out the face of a boy who is being mourned by his mother thousands of miles away and lead to his discovery.

Richard Considine, Jr., is the name of the boy in the case. He is just 12 years old. His latest escapade in the field of adventure began several months ago, when, with 10 cents in his pocket, he left his home in Austin, near Chicago, and since then has visited Denver, spent three months as mascot and bugle boy of the Fourth regiment of marines in San Diego, several weeks in Mexico with a detachment of the revolutionary army, and is now in San Francisco taking in the sights of the Panama Pacific Exposition grounds while sight-seeing is cheap.

John Considine, brother of the wanderer, was looking at a news film Thursday night, Jan. 7, at the Baird Theater, in Austin, a suburb of Chicago. A scene showing Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco selling papers on the street for the benefit of Belgian war sufferers was shown. Almost in the front row John saw his missing brother, Richard.

John jumped over a couple of seats and ran to his mother, Mrs. Jennie Considine, 17 North Lockwood avenue. The Mutual company reproduced the picture for John and his mother, and they are positive in their identification, and the police of San Francisco have promised to find Richard and send him home.

"When Richard was ten years old he disappeared and later wrote me he was taking the baths at West Baden," said Mrs. Considine. "He is a lovable boy and travels without difficulty because he makes friends so rapidly any one is willing to pay his way to hear him talk.

"He is very large and looks to be eighteen years old. The captain of the marines in San Diego wrote me Richard had been with them three months before he admitted he had any parents. When the captain threatened to send him home, Richard disappeared, leaving a note saying he was going to the San Francisco fair.

"He can leave home without a cent and be in the next state the next day. This last time he left with only a dime, but I received a card saying that he was in Denver four days later.

"Hereafter I will believe the stories I read about finding lost relatives through the pictures, and I am going to the theater every night until Richard comes home."

Mal-Odor Bombs Exploded in Comet Theater.

The latest outrages by means of mal-odor bombs took place Monday night, Jan. 11, in the Comet moving picture theater, at 925 Belmont avenue, this city. Two bombs were exploded in the theater, which resulted in a panic among the audience. A riot call was turned in to the police station and when the police arrived about 300 persons, who had been almost stifled by the fumes, had made their way through the exits to the street. The explosions occurred in different parts of the house, and two men were seen running out a moment later.

From what can be learned, the owner and manager of the Comet discharged a union operator named Forrest Butcher, on Sunday night, Jan. 10. Butcher had refused to obey orders, hence his discharge. A non-union operator, Joseph Hircz, was then put in his place.

It is believed that members or sympathizers of the Moving Picture Operators' Union are responsible for the bomb throwing. It is remarkable that every time an outrage of this kind is perpetrated the guilty miscreants are permitted to escape. In this case nearly 300 people were seated in the theater, and out of that number not one attempted to prevent the escape of the vandals. If only one of them could be caught these outrages could be placed where they belong.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Andrew J. Cobe, general manager of the Alliance Program, spent a few days in Chicago the early part of last week and then returned to New York.

* * *

R. Clayton Diggins, formerly owner of the Regent Theater, 6746 Sheridan road, this city, called at this office one day last week. Mr. Diggins is now looking for a location for a moving picture theater, either in Chicago or in the South.

* * *

E. P. White, who recently purchased the Regent Theater from R. Clayton Diggins, called at the World office last week. The Regent has a seating capacity of 800, and an admission of 10 cents is charged for programs of General Film service. Mr. White formerly owned the Alcazar Theater, in Livingston, Mont., for four years.

* * *

F. L. Fraser, owner of the Palace Theater, Mendota, Ill., visited us one day last week. The Palace seats 300 people, and an admission of five and ten cents is charged for a program of four reels of General Film service. Special features are run at the Palace every Monday, consisting of the Famous Players, Eclectic and the General, at admissions of 10 and 20 cents, for six reels. Mr. Fraser stated that he ran "The Spoilers," "The Christian" and Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter," at 25 cents admission, and did very good business with the first named. The Palace and the Princess are the only two moving picture theaters in Mendota. The Princess runs Universal programs. Business at the Palace is very good.

John Hardin, manager of Eclectic's Chicago office, has stated that all exchanges in the Mallers Building were not closed on account of the fire in the General Feature Film Company's office, as was stated in one of my brevities in the issue of Jan. 9. The fire department, Mr. Hardin says, closed only the offices of the General Feature Film Co., where the fire broke out. The misinformation was given a representative of the World in the General Feature Film Company's office.

* * *

Bruce Reynolds, advertising manager of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., of Cincinnati, spent Saturday, Dec. 19, in Chicago and returned to his home city the same evening.

* * *

M. F. Brown, part owner of Class A Theater, Seattle, Wash., arrived in the city Saturday, Jan. 9, and remained for four days, after which he left to visit Kansas City, St. Louis and Denver. W. H. Smyth is Mr. Brown's partner in Class A Theater and also manages the house. Class A is a first-run five-cent house, offering five and six reels at that price, a great extravagance in my opinion, especially in a city like Seattle. Mutual programs have been used until recently, when General Film service was installed. The policy of the house is to give patrons the best service possible, without regard to make. Mr. Brown takes no active part in managing Class A Theater, but devotes most of his time to his interests in the publishing business. He informed me that the Mission, a modern and beautiful new house, seating about 1,200 people, was closed several weeks ago, and that it had been taken over by Jensen and Von Herberg, while he was on his way from Seattle to Chicago. Jensen and Von Herberg are owners of the Alhambra and the New Liberty Theaters, and it is their intention to reopen the Mission in a few days.

* * *

At the close of the second week's run of the Williamson Submarine Pictures, it was shown by actual count that 53,951 persons had viewed the pictures during that time. Ten presentations were given New Year's day, and nine of these were to actual capacity, while the tenth brought the total attendance for that day up to 5,350. The management states that on the day following New Year's, the attendance showed an increase of 500. It was thought that when "Neptune's Daughter" had its phenomenal twenty-four weeks' run at the Fine Arts Theater, last year, the box office records would stand unchallenged for many months to come. However, the Submarine pictures have smashed all former records. These pictures will remain at the Fine Arts Theater until Feb. 1, when they will be presented in some other large house, probably.

* * *

George L. Broy, of San Francisco, who purchased the Canadian rights to "The Spoilers," made a call one day last week. Mr. Broy intends to open offices in Toronto and Montreal under the firm name of Broy & Whitehead. He left for Canada Monday, Jan. 11.

* * *

Mrs. Sam Bowden, who, with her husband, runs the Auditorium Theater, Glen Ellyn, Ill., called at the World office last week and renewed subscription for the paper. The Auditorium has a seating capacity of 300, and runs only on Tuesdays and Fridays of each week. Admission is 10 cents for four reels of General Film service (which is shown on Fridays) and of serial pictures, which are run on Tuesdays. Glen Ellyn has a population of 1,500, and the Auditorium is the only moving picture theater there. Mrs. Bowden stated that they did very good business with "The Million Dollar Mystery."

* * *

A. Schiff, who, with his brother, owns the Ashland Theater, 1656 West 12th street, and the Grand Theater, 1525 South Crawford avenue, made a call at the World office last week. East house has a seating capacity of 300. Admissions at both houses is five cents for four reels, and 10 cents when six reels are shown. The programs consist of Mutual service and special features. "The Christian" was shown at the Ashland on New Year's day to very good business, at admissions of 10 and 15 cents. "Lola" (World Film Corporation) is booked for Jan. 24, at an admission of 15 cents. Business at both houses is good, Mr. Schiff stated. He renewed his subscription for the Moving Picture World.

* * *

Charles F. Young, at one time on the editorial staff in the Chicago office, is now chief operator at the Grand Theater, 411 East 43d street. The Grand is owned by James R. Cahill and seats 600 people—400 on the ground floor and 200 in the balcony. Mutual and Universal programs consisting of six reels, are offered for 5 and 10 cents. The big feature "Cabiria" was run Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 9 and 10, at 15 and 20 cents to excellent business. Very satisfactory results prevailed at this house throughout the holiday season, and at no time was business slack preceding the holidays. A three-piece orchestra plays specially selected music for the pictures. James Cahill, Jr., son of the owner, and Mr. Young paid us a pleasant holiday visit one day last week. Mr. Cahill, Jr., alternates with Mr. Young in the operating room. The Grand management has received many compliments on its carefully selected programs and fine projection.

* * *

Miss Mary Pickford, the adorable in film land, stopped over in this city at the Hotel Sherman for a few hours on Wednesday, Jan. 6, on her trip to Los Angeles, where she will begin work under a new contract with the Famous Players Film Co. Miss Pickford was made much of by the Chicago press, all the leading dailies devoting considerable space to interviews with the diminutive moving picture star. Miss Kitty Kelly, of the Chicago Tribune, in an article, figured out that Mary's pay this year will be at the rate of $990 per pound of the little star's weight, or 20 cents a minute, based on continuous work for 24 hours a day, throughout the year 1915. Accompanying Miss Pickford West were: Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Co.; Marcus Loew, moving picture theater and vaudeville circuit magnate; Morris Cohn and Joseph Schenck, general manager of Mr. Loew's numerous enterprises. The party left for the West on a Santa Fe train Wednesday evening.

* * *

The Consumers Feature Film Corporation has just completed a handsome private projecting room adjoining their offices in the Mallers Building. All the laws governing projection booth, etc., have been strictly complied with. Thirty opera chairs have been installed in the room.

* * *

G. M. Anderson, secretary of the Essanay Film Mfg. Co., and world-famed for his "Broncho Billy" series in moving pictures, arrived in the city Christmas eve, to spend the holidays with his wife and baby. Mr. Anderson left for New York January 2, and is expected to return Tuesday, Jan. 12.

* * *

An ordinance creating a board of censors of moving pictures in Oak Park, a suburb of this city, was introduced and unanimously adopted at a weekly meeting of the board of trustees of the village Thursday evening, Jan. 7. The board of censors will be composed of nine members. President Einfeldt, who introduced the ordinance, will select the eight other members, subject to the approval of the board of trustees. Pictures passed by the Chicago Board of Censorship will not be inspected. The ordinance was put in effect immediately.

* * *

"The Dancing Girl" was given its opening presentation at the Ziegfeld Theater, Saturday, Jan. 9. Florence Reed, the famous emotional actress, who reaped considerable fame in the Broadway successes, "The Typhoon" and "The Yellow Ticket," appears in the titular role.

* * *

Beginning Wednesday, Jan. 13, Dwight Elmendorf, lecturer, raconteur, artist and traveler, will deliver the first of a series of lectures on five popular tours illustrated by moving pictures and color slides, at Orchestra Hall. The United States, northern and southern Europe, India, the Garden of Allah, the Panama Canal, etc., are some of the subjects that will be screened and talked about.

* * *

The five candidates who have received the highest number of votes in the "Sue" contest ran the totals up amazingly last week, which was the second of the voting contest. The votes for the first five highest now stand: 28,460, 26,585, 26,060, 23,405 and 17,840.

EDISON NIGHT IN NEWARK.

After a long automobile ride over the rough roads of Jersey, the Edison artists, Marie La Manna, Miriam Nesbitt, Bigelow Cooper and Marc MacDermott reached Proctor's Park Place Theater in Newark last Monday night, where an exhibition of the Edison five-reel feature "Fantasma" was given, together with "The Long Way."

The occasion was heralded throughout Newark and the neighboring towns for many days in advance of the appearance of the Edison stars. A large crowd attended and the spacious theater rang with applause as the artists were individually introduced from the stage.

Doings at Los Angeles

PRODUCERS HAVE been extra lucky the past week, only two rains came, and they were during the night and early morning and, on the days following, everyone was at work by noon. The weather is fairly good, but several days have been partially lost on account of fog.

* * *

Del Henderson and the Biographers are here a hundred and fifty strong, and the studio is now a lively place with directors, scenario writers, actors and property men skipping about, getting cleared for action. The big director never stopped work on the trip out, a railway comedy being produced on the train. At Albuquerque a comedy of 500 feet was done in an hour while the train waited its leaving time. Six directors are here, Henderson, Travers Vale, Ed. Morrisey, George Morgan, Wray Physioc, George Reem. Lee Dougherty is a busy man as managing director, and his work seems to be everywhere. This company used a special train costing $25,000. It was made up of 7 Pullmans, 3 baggage cars, and 2 scenery cars. Albert Glassmire is in charge of the new scenario office and is assisted by Gene Lewis, Miss M. B. Havey, and half a dozen other authors. Much improvement has been made here, executive offices, wardrobe department, director's quarters, and new dressing rooms being added. A new projection room was built, and one complete new stage, while another was practically rebuilt. Everywhere a general air of improvement is seen. The whole place was well overhauled and cleaned up. Production in the west is to be larger than before, so the troupe was sent here earlier this year, and will remain longer, until early summer.

* * *

Director J. P. McGowan, of the Kalem railway company, is out again, but in a wheel chair. The injured producer this week was able to take a short spin in his machine, and went around the city greeting old friends. He will be unable to walk for many weeks. His company, headed by Helen Holmes, is as busy as ever finishing "The Open Draw," one of the most hazardous of this series. At the studio James Horne is doing "Mrs. Churchill's Poodle," a detective drama of two reels. The plant is being cleaned up and a few changes made. The diffusing system is being changed and the property rooms have received additions.

* * *

The Sterling Co. has ceased production and all the employees given their two weeks' notice. Fred Balshofer is on his way to the east to arrange for a new release, or a new line of pictures. The studio is to be retained for a probable new company. Ford Sterling has severed his connections with the company and will probably join or start another company.

* * *

Olga Printzlau-Clark, the scenario writer who recently joined her husband, Hal Clements, directing at the St. Louis Motion Picture Co., in Santa Paula, while riding a spirited horse the other day suffered serious injuries from which she has not yet recovered. The animal became frightened and ran away, and in retaining her seat the daring rider became so exhausted that she suffered a nervous shock which caused an internal hemorrhage. She is suffering great pain, but will probably recover in a few weeks.

* * *

The Masterpiece company has treked to its new home in Hollywood, 1339 Gordon street, where it is busy doing "Jack Shanty," the story of the Canadian northwest. The company, with Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, will soon go to the Yosemite and the upper streams of the Sacramento river to film many scenes for this story. The new plant will be fully completed in a short time, and will have a glass covered stage, electric lights, and all the modern production equipment. The area is nearly half a block, and is well located.

* * *

Carlyle Blackwell was the delighting toastmaster at the weekly dinner at the Photoplayers. The Favorite Player was "there" with good entertainment and a good crowd turned out to hear him. Many old faces were seen at the club and the organization seems to be on the rise of late, and everyone is talking about the big ball for next month. It will be a sure enough eclipse of any ever previously held. The bulletin board here looks like a pepper tree, a combination of red and green, so many Season's Greetings telegrams having been received.

* * *

Daisy Smith, formerly with the Vitagraph Western as scenario revisor and writer and who lately was with the U. S. company at San Diego, has departed for that city to edit for the new J. Arthur Nelson Picture Co., which opens in the southern city on the 20th of January. The company will produce well-known books, the scenarios to be written by Miss Smith.

* * *

Charles Clary, the well-known heavy and leading man, has left his old company, Seligs, and is awaiting another engagement. Mr. Clary will remain here until another proposition is closed. He will be remembered in many of Selig's best pictures, "The Adventures" series being his best, when he played with Kathlyn Williams.

* * *

The Navajo company is busily engaged on a picture featuring Wallace MacDonald. It is "When Sleep Rules," and is a startling psychological study, written by Mr. MacDonald. The company is busy at its studio near this city and everyone is working all the time.

* * *

Mary H. O'Connor, the scenario writer, has again gone to the American to do a number of big features for that company at Santa Barbara. Many good scenes for "The Lure of the Mask" by Harold MacGrath will be done right in the city. Some good locations are to be used for the Monte Carlo scenes.

* * *

Mr. Lasky has done nothing but work since he came here this last time. Now a big library of 2,000 volumes is being put in, a building having been erected for that purpose. A librarian has been engaged to take care of the big book case. The volumes are for the reference of directors and technical workers. In this library everything can be found, from the formula of how to make yellow smoke to what the pre-historic men used to write on. Details will not be overlooked in the least in Lasky pictures, and accuracy is to become a studio word. Rita Jolivet is here to work in "The Unafraid." Edith Wynn Mathison also came west to do "The Governor's Daughter." Cecil deMille has completed "The Warrens of Virginia" and will start immediately on "The Case of Becky" with Blanche Sweet featured.

* * *

The "Terrence O'Rourke" series featuring J. Warren Kerrigan, has been suspended on account of the damp weather. Mr. Kerrigan is to be seen in "Smouldering Fires," a modern drama, with Vera Sisson opposite.

* * *

Eddie Lyons, who left hurriedly a few days ago to reach the bedside of his mother, who was seriously ill, received a wire while en route that his dearest friend had passed away. He went on east, and will return in a few weeks. Mr. Lyons had just planned to bring his mother west when she was taken from him.

* * *

T. H. Ince has returned with Mack Sennett from San Diego, where the two veteran producers put on a show at the exposition which opened on New Year's day. The concession was a sure enough winner. It shows the production of moving pictures and was well patronized by the sight seers. Tom Chatterton is now directing a company at Inceville. Scott Sidney and a company of 30 players went to the Exposition city to do some pictures for the N. Y. Co. Bessie Barriscale received a barrel of apples from a farmer in Utah as a Christmas present.

* * *

The Los Angeles Times says "Fritzi Scheff will appear in the film version of 'Pretty Mrs. Smith' for the Oliver Morosco Film Co."

* * *

Director Martin at the Selig zoo is working on an animal serial story of an eccentric inventor. The animals are brought logically into the story, although it would seem that they did not belong there. A big explosion is one of the many thrillers of the story. Tom Santschi has started a one-reel animal comedy, which is said to be a real comedy. The Selig men are erecting a big, long street for a series picture to be directed by Mr. MacGregor. There are two-reel installments, each story to be complete in itself. Each is to be a comedy.

* * *

Harry Tudor and Charles Fais, of the Bostock Jungle and Arena, are about the two busiest men in this city. Already the high wall has been erected around the big enclosure and the cages are all finished. Landscape gardeners and decorators are busy finishing the yards while the big auditorium is fast nearing completion. Work will start soon on the studios and the opening is fast approaching. The local people are anxiously awaiting the formal opening of this big jungle show.

CLARKE IRVINE.

Little Things That Count Big

Minor Incongruities in Motion Pictures Noted by a Critical Observer—A Few Tips to the Director.

By Clement H. Congdon.

WHEN a wife breaks up a happy home she always explains that Friend Husband "neglected the little things of life." Very few red-blooded men who have the bill-paying habit as a regular disease grasp the "little thing" idea. It is an art common to those who tie ties perfectly and to those who always make social calls during the business hours of men. Right or wrong, sane or insane, true or false the "little things" argument looms up big in the ways of the world, and so long as women are sticklers for the "little things" to the degree that they are willing to cut away from good providers for the little-thing fellow it might be well for the purveyors of films, from producer to resident manager, to sit right up and take notice of "the little things."

When the women put the high sign on the films the reels will relegate to the tank towns and the big game will be over. The women are all in line now. All of them are boosters. The best advertising on earth is a pleased woman's tongue, and when these lifters and boosters are transformed into knockers and killers it will be by the neglected "little things."

The average picture audience is made up of a most heterogeneous combination of humanity. Every nation is represented along with every avocation of life. There is an expert on the job who can pass upon every reel better than any Board of Censors. The man who knows is always before the screen with his money paid and, being an expert, he can pass upon "the little things."

In one feature film a scene in a telegraph office is shown. The girl operator is pictured as sending with the telegraph key while holding a conversation with another player in the scene. Every telegrapher in the world knows that this is an impossible feat. Almost any good operator can carry on a conversation while receiving, but none can do it while sending. A single word like "yes" or "no" might be uttered by the sender and the sender can be talked to while sending but he, himself, cannot carry on a conversation.

The use of telegraph blanks often strikes the snag of "little things." There is one blank for sending and quite a different blank used for receiving messages. It is a common thing to see a telegram praying for money sent "paid" when the hero has a second before shown that he had no money. If sent collect the writer ought to add one word to the count. A ten-word message sent in the regular way would read "10 paid" or merely "10" without the quotation marks. If sent collect the same message would read "11 collect" without the quotation marks. The word added in the count is a check upon both operators to the end that there may be no mistake about collecting the money from the recipient. A careful producer would see that the messenger delivering a collect message really collects the money. In cablegrams the system of counting is different. In every cable the count includes every word transmitted including names, addresses and signatures. All words of more than 15 letters count as two words.

Automobiles figure to such an important extent in all pictures that it is a grave error to overlook "the little things" in their marking, license numbers and make. It is extremely unlikely that three cars used by enemies would have serial license numbers as shown in one photoplay. It is absurd to show a man leaving the St. Regis in New York in a car bearing a California license tag and it is quite as ridiculous to have a four-cylinder 1912 model overtake a 1915 six-cylinder with a big handicap.

In prison scenes it is not uncommon to see a sealed letter handed to a convict in stripes. Every man who has done time knows that no sealed communications ever reach a man behind the bars.

Costuming ought not to be neglected the way some players lapse in this important matter. In several reels long periods of time are supposed to pass between certain scenes but the hero comes along with identically the same suit of clothes from hat to spats.

Whenever a physician is shown on the screen he is pictured as carrying a bag common only to doctors who make a specialty of obstetrics. No discrimination seems to be shown between picturing physicians and surgeons. Very few physicians, except homeopaths, carry any bags with them. All surgeons do, but it is a cabin bag and not the obstetrical case usually shown in films. Where two physicians are shown in the same scene the senior carries all the equipment. In actual practice the junior always bears the burden.

In "Lola" a private ambulance is used for a public accident case. The police everywhere are prohibited from calling a private ambulance for obvious reasons. This kills the film for every cop, doctor, nurse and hospital attache familiar with the usages.

It is a common thing to see an Italian using a bowie or hunter's knife when everybody knows that the stilletto is the weapon of the "wop."

One notable photoplay shows a Catholic prince wearing a Knights Templar sword. This error must offend both the Roman Catholics who note it and surely the Masons who are certain to see it.

In the great Burns Counterfeiting film the newspaper shown bears date eight years after the crime was committed. The date is so conspicuous on the film that it hurts the atmosphere of the progressing play.

Train orders are usually shown as being delivered to train conductors whether the engineer is in sight or not. All train orders must be delivered to the engineer and when he is shown it hurts to omit this routine.

It is a common fault to have the same penman write all the notes and letters shown on a reel and the same typewriter suffices for three or four concerns.

Clocks are great offenders. The hands often point at the same hour for all lapses of time—everything happens at exactly 2 p. m., according to the clock shown.

The picture hero who stops after each shot to reload a Winchester repeating rifle helps a lot to make sportsmen weary.

In "Her Sister" an aisle manager wearing a fifty-cent hat s pictured as living in a palatial tropical residence with servants and acreage. As aisle managers earn fully sixteen a week it would be just as well to have him live on the sixteen a week scale.

When convicts are discharged from picture prisons the good, kind warden always hands them a single banknote. In the real place it happens that the convict usually has a knife, a bunch of keys, a card-case and other traps coming to him along with his earnings which cannot always total to a case-note unit.

Stenographers spend entirely too much time over a forty-word letter taken down in dictation. As most bank presidents and merchant prices dictate at the rate of 150 words a minute it is an error to prolong the period of dictation when the letter written is to be immediately shown. Every blonde typewriter present knows the mistake and comments upon it to the hurt of the play.

Policemen making a strictly military salute is funny. The cops have a police salute which is quite different from the regulation military courtesy.

Corpses with closed mouths figure in films, but not in dead houses or hospitals. A bandage is always wound around the head under the jaw.

In actual business all checks, notes and drafts for enormous sums are always protected by a stamping or perforating device. In the picture world they dash off $250,000 just like that. Every business man present knows that no check calling for a fabulous sum of money should be issued or paid when the face of it betrays that it was written under duress, the influence of liquor or by one "just foolin'". A neat bit of detail can be worked into a check giving scene by attention to the usual details.

Adding machines are present in every bank, counting room and large office in real life, but never in a film place of business.

The door of John Breck's office still shows the soap marks of the sign painter, despite the fact that John is supposed to have been in business a year or so.

The "little things" herein pointed out have marred photoplays for the observing and for the knowing, and as most of the defects are born of carelessness they might be corrected without any great strain upon mind or purse of the producers.

SPECIAL EXHIBITION OF "DU BARRY" AT CANDLER.

George Kleine becomes sponsor to another innovation in film exploitation when the beautiful Candler Theater, New York, throws open its doors Sunday evening, January 10th, for a special exhibition of his film, "Du Barry," exclusively for the entertainment of the theatrical profession. Tickets for this entertainment can be had as long as they last upon application to the George Kleine Attractions office at 226 W. 42d street.

The following Monday morning, January 11th, at 10:45 a. m., another exhibition will be held for the motion picture trade. Exhibitors, newspaper men and others interested are cordially invited. "Du Barry" will be released January 18.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

Damon and Pythias.

MR. M. WINKLER, musical director (Brooklyn, N. Y.), says: "Nothing can ever be perfected unless it is consistently and convincingly developed, and I hope that the Moving Picture World, as a promoter of perfecting everything concerning moving pictures, will publish the following. As a constant reader of the Moving Picture World I have had the pleasure of reading Mr. Nat E. Solomon's article regarding music of the Universal production of Damon and Pythias.

"As a leader of several good orchestras and a musician who always did and will favor the better grade of musical compositions, I will say that Mr. Solomon's program does not measure up to the standards nor does it fittingly illustrate in musical form the stirring scenes, classical dances, games, battles, etc., with which this story of human friendship abounds.

"First Reel:—The first reel opens with a beautiful scene of ancient Greece—400 years before the Christian era. These scenes are concluded by a letter from the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, and the rest of the reel introduces the actors who posed for this play. Mr. Solomon uses 'Cocheco—an Alaskan Love Song,' and 'The Persian Princess' (an Oriental waltz—amateur style, Witmark edition) to represent these wonderful scenes in musical language. In my oponion von Weber's 'Jubel Overture' is much better fitted for these scenes. It opens with an effective and melodious 'cello solo and closes with 'America' (or 'God Save the King'), the music to this last being the same as the opening ode of the 'Knights of Pythias.'

"Second Reel:—This reel contains a Veil Dance and the writer would be glad to know what Mr. Solomon played for this dance, as I cannot see anything suitable for it on his program. I have used the famous 'Veil Dance' by R. Aronson—published by Carl Fischer.

"Third Reel:—Mr. Solomon suggests 'Kathleen Waltz—Hesitation' (think of it— a 'Hesitation Waltz' for an ancient classical Grecian scene), and the 'Vampire Waltz'—Will Rossiter, publisher. No further comments are necessary, but compare the above numbers with 'Sigurd Jorsalfer Suite'—Greig-Roberts, and the 'Tone Poem,' by Arthur Pryor.

"Fourth Reel:—At the head of his legions, Pythias returns to Syracuse a conquering hero, and is greeted by an admiring populace. Mr. Solomon chooses 'Zallah,' an Egyptian Intermezzo, instead of using something of a joyous, victorious character. I played Fucick's 'Entry of the Gladiators' followed by Koelling's famous 'Chase,' to be played for the fetes and games arranged in honor of Pythias.

"Fifth and Sixth Reels:—Damon is thrown into prison; Pythias begs Dionysius the Tyrant for pity. Damon asks to go and see his wife and child, Pythias becomes his hostage and Damon is given until sunset to return.

"'Flower of Love Waltz,' 'Gold and Silver Waltz,' and two little concert numbers are Mr. Solomon's chosen numbers to describe the above scenes. I used L. Oehmler's 'Cleopatra Suite.'

Sunset hour arrives: crowds gather about the execution place; everybody is hoping that Damon will return. The wonderful bright melody 'Bright Star of Hope' (V. Robaudes) is the music I used for the above scene—no Love Mood's Waltz. Sunset is seen—Pythias lays his head upon the block—the axe is lifted to strike—just as Damon falls into the arms of his friend. Arthur Pryor's 'After Sunset' is exactly fitted for this scene, and concludes my program." (Mr. Winkler incloses his program, which is appended.)

Program for "Damon and Pythias,"

Specially selected by M. Winkler.

1. Jubel Overture—von Weber. Play for entire first part, repeating if necessary.

Part II.

2. Dawn of Hope (by J. De Casella).
3. Scenes Pittoresques (by J. Massenet).
4. Veil Dance (E. Aronson). Play this in tempo allegro moderato as long as dance lasts.
5. Garden of Love (E. Ascher). Until end of Part II.

Part III.

6. Sigurd Jorsalfar Suite (E. Greig) until the fire scene and battle starts.
7. Hurry No. 3 from M. L. Lakes Motion Picture set.
8. Minuet (H. Paradis).
9. Tone Poem (A. Pryor) until end of Part III.

Part IV.

10. Entry of the Gladiators (J. Fucick).
11. The Chase (C. Koelling).
12. Berceuse (E. Greig).
13. Cleopatra Suite, Parts I and II (L. Oehmler) until end of Part IV.

Part V.

14. Cleopatra Suite (L. Oehmler).
15. Bright Star of Hope (V. Robaudi) until end of Part V.

Part VI.

16. March and Procession (L. Delibes).
17. After Sunset (A. Pryor) until end of picture.

Friendly criticism is the life of this department; comparison of methods and interchange of ideas have done more for the development of music for the picture than anything else. Mr. Winkler has given us a dignified musical program—on the whole, a higher grade of music than that suggested by Mr. Solomon. Indeed, the criticism bears upon the grade quite as much as upon the character of the setting—and for this there is often a reason. I also like to get away from the ordinary waltz stuff—particularly in the higher class pictures; such music sounds "common" while the picture is supposed to be above the common. Mr. Winkler's program is elevated—above the ordinary—as it should be in accompanying a picture above the ordinary.

But there is often something to be said in extenuation for the other side. The facilities for selecting, arranging and playing appropriate numbers of the better grade are not always the same in the smaller cities as in the larger centers. Of course, the "Hesitation" was a misfit; for the matter of that, any of our ballroom music is out of place in a scene or story of ancient times. The waltz, two-step-tango, -trot, etc, etc., are intensely modern in suggestion and are not in keeping with stories of olden times—particularly the classics.

However, I hope this will not deter Mr. Solomon from writing again—Mr. Winkler, too—we're glad to welcome you both into the circle.

A Sound Effect Man.

Mr. Carl Leon Shugert, of Drain, Oregon, sends a picture of himself among his traps, and this:

"Speaking of music and effects, I don't think the music in the Portland Oregon picture theaters is surpassed anywhere in the country. All use piano, organ and drums and effects. Have used this kind of music for the last seven years, and the Portland people won't have any other. Mechanical music and orchestras don't suit." (If your musicians class the orchestras with the mechanical music there must be a reason for it; and it is no wonder they don't suit.—Ed.)

Carl Leon Shugert with His Instruments.

"The piano players are great fakers and play without notes all kinds of music for the pictures. Both they and the drummers are artists and receive very good wages. I make all my own effects. We get exact imitations of auto exhaust and siren, train puffs and all air effects, with compressed air in a 2-hp. motor and air compressor. Storage tanks are located in basement. I have all kinds of mechanical effects and water, wind, rain, thunder, etc. If these are handled correctly they bring out the picture, but if not handled correctly they spoil it. I am at the 'Electric Theater' in Portland. Have been around the country a great deal, but have not heard the picture music and effects of this city equaled elsewhere."

Mr. Shugert's picture looks like one end of a music store. The drummers in Portland must receive a pretty good scale to afford an outfit like the above. We have heard before of your Pacific Coast music and effects; also about that compressed air arrangement. Some correspondents would like to know more about that. Perhaps Mr. Shugert will kindly enlighten them. How is it made—how is it worked —what is the approximate cost, etc.?

BISON PLAYERS BACK AT HOLLYWOOD.

Henry McRae, Marie Walcamp and their company of 101-Bison players have returned to Hollywood from the Sierra Nevada mountains, where the snow and winter scenes of "Ridgeway of Montana" were produced. Miss Walcamp helped make fires, hauled lumber and cooked during the week-long sojourn of the Bison players in the mountains.

INDIANS CAPTURE MOUNTAIN LION ALIVE.

An incident in the Salisbury Animal Pictures, which is considered one of the most remarkable feats ever accomplished, is the roping, treeing and capturing of a wild mountain lion alive.

The animal had been treed by the dogs, and took his last stand in a tree, some of the branches of which overhung a brawling stream. A half-breed Indian trapper, a member of the party, undertook to climb the tree and dislodge the lion by poking him off the limb to the ground, but the animal was not so easy. He finally climbed to the extreme end of the limb overhanging the stream, and finding it impossible either to rope the lion or dislodge him, the hunter lowered his rope to the ground and called for an axe. This he hauled up and chopped the limb, hurling the lion into the icy waters of the rushing stream far below. Here, the men, up to their waists in water, were waiting with their lassoes. True to its mark goes one of the ropes, and after a fierce struggle in the water with the four men, Mr. Lion is captured and carried away. These pictures will be handled by Sol Lesser for California, Nevada and Virginia.

THE SMALLEST DONKEY IN AMERICA.

The accompanying illustration shows the smallest donkey in America, or on this continent, with its owner, little three-year-old Donald F. Pribyl, the only son of John F. Pribyl, the personal representative of Wm. N. Selig.

The donkey is of Abyssinia stock and is five years old, full grown. It was sent to Master Donald as a Christmas present in December, 1913, by Lorenz Hagenbeck, of Hamburg. As is well known, Mr. Hagenbeck is one of the present owners of the greatest collection of wild forest and other animals in the world.

Little Donald Pribyl and His Abyssinian Donkey.

Life Photo's First Year.

Reports Made at Annual Meeting Show Satisfactory Results —Officers Elected.

AT THE first annual meeting of the stockholders of the Life Photo Film Corporation, held January 7, 1915, at the offices of the company, 220 West 42nd street, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Edward M. Roskam, president; Bernard Loewenthal, treasurer; Jesse J. Goldburg, secretary; Francis H. Tobias, first vice-president, and L. Abrahams, second vice-president.

A financial statement of the affairs of the company was presented to the stockholders, made by the auditors of the company. Although the company had been unfortunate in the past year, having encountered such difficulties as their eviction from the 101st street plant by the fire department, and the opposition on the part of the various Boards of Censors throughout the country to the releasing of "The Ordeal" at the present time, the financial affairs of the company are more than sound, showing a substantial net profit on the business of the year, in addition to which the assets of the company at present exceed the total capital stock of the corporation by more than 75 per cent.

Messrs. Loewenthal and Goldburg, who manage the affairs of the corporation, with respect to the producing end of the business, point with pride to the fact that on the top of changing conditions in the motion picture market, and at times a chaotic condition of affairs, the company released seven five-part masterpieces, "The Banker's Daughter," "The Greyhound," "Northern Lights," "Capt. Swift," "Springtime," "The Avalanche" and "A Modern Magdalen," all adaptations from stage successes, and each with a Broadway star featured in the production.

Mr. Roskam, who manages the affairs of the laboratory end of the Life Photo Company's business, reported that the plant of the company, for the past three months, has been working day and night on two shifts, in order to complete the large number of orders for prints placed with the company by other manufacturers.

The policy of the corporation for the ensuing year was definitely planned. It will continue the manufacture of adaptations from stage successes, featuring in each production a Broadway star, and to increase the output of the company to two productions a month. This is to commence as soon as the repairs are completed to their new and model studio, being erected adjacent to their laboratory at Grantwood, N. J.

It was further determined that no stock of the corporation was to be sold to outsiders, and to continue the policy of running a close corporation.

If appropriate arrangements cannot be made with a releasing concern or programme concern to take over the entire output of the Life Photo Film Corporation, the releases of that company will be sold on state right basis, the officers of the company believing that the time has again arrived when the demand for the purchase of productions on a state right basis justifies the company going back to that policy.

Several manufacturers have been in communication with the Life Photo Film Corporation, to the end that a working agreement may be entered into, pooling the productions of the various manufacturers, to be disposed of to certain exchanges throughout the United States, on state right terms.

CARLYLE BLACKWELL DELAYED.

Carlyle Blackwell, who was expected in New York at this time, has found it necessary to postpone his trip until some time in the future. The press of business at the studio in Los Angeles has been so great that he finds he is unable to leave. Such of his friends as had expected to see him in New York will be glad to know that his trip is only postponed for the present and not abandoned.

WORLD FILM PLAYERS GO TO FLORIDA.

The World Film Corporation is sending Fred Mace and the entire "What Happened to Jones" company to Jacksonville, Fla., to take the exterior scenes of the photoplay that is being made now from that famous George Broadhurst farce. The interior scenes have been made at the Fort Lee studios of the World Film Corporation, and Mr. Mace hopes to complete the work within two weeks while in Jacksonville. In the company that has gone south are the following:

Mary Charleson, Chester Barnett, Josie Sadler, William Mandeville, Chas. A. Mason, Joe Daly, Mrs. Henry M. Blossom, Caroline Rankin and Leon Horgan.

There is another World Film company working in and near Jacksonville, Fla., under the direction of Mr. O. A. C. Lund. This company is making "The Butterfly," in which Howard Estabrook is being starred.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Prices Again.

WRITING on the subject of higher prices an exhibitor near New York writes:

> As an advocater of higher prices of admission for exhibitors of motion pictures, also a subscriber of your valuable paper every week, I wish to call your attention to this enclosed ticket which is found on the streets and hallways of our city, offering two matinee admissions for five cents.
>
> This is a new way of advertising, and I think that there should be some way, such as exchanges refusing to rent their films to such as this place is.
>
> This man could get the same prices as I myself get—5, 10 and 15 cents, 5 and 10 afternoon, 10 and 15 evenings. But in order to cut my throat he charges 2 for 5.

This is not a new way for advertising for matinee business. For a long time the City theater here used to have men up and down the block giving out cards that would admit with five cents up to noon. Others in many places have done the same thing. If the matinee is a new scheme or the matinee reduction card is the scheme of a newly opened house or a new management, it is not bad if not kept up so long that the people demand it. We take it that in this instance it is a continuous scheme designed to kill the other man's business.

Of all the densely stupid performances of which the incompetent manager is too often guilty, the worst is the effort to gain success through "putting the opposition out of business." The man who runs his own house properly has all he can do without worrying about the other man's trade, and if he will concentrate on his own patronage, he will not have to worry about the other fellow's. No matter what underhand tactics are resorted to, it is always the survival of the fittest, and the fittest is not the man who wants to "hog" all the business by killing off the opposition. It is barely conceivable that persons of intelligence might be willing to pay five and ten cents for a proper sort of bill. It is probable that they will not be interested in a card that offers two matinee admissions for a single five cent piece. More, if the house is in good territory, the cut rate will bring to the theater a class of patronage that will drive away a ten cent audience. This is a bad time to cut prices. The trend is toward larger prices and better bills. The really adroit manager will take advantage of that fact and not select this time to offer a two and a half cent show. To build up a matinee business there are many vastly better methods.

Get the prices up, keep them up by giving more for more money, and there will be fewer failures.

For Christmas.

The Hennegan company did not send out a Christmas card this season. Each patron got fifty-two of them not counting the joker. And the cards were of the first quality and not plastered all over with the Hennegan name, the latter appearing only on the cover. Of course a firm dealing in advertising ideas is to be expected to show good ideas in its own advertising, but even at that they made a record.

An Elixir.

J. F. Cubberley, of the Zenith Feature Film Company, Duluth, sent his clients a well-printed booklet titled "The Zenith Feature Film's Company's Elixir of Life," which is compounded of the films of the concern and advertising. Ideas of the latter cover about a dozen pages, credit being given this department for much of the material adapted. It is a compact compilation and the best Christmas gift a live wire manager could possibly receive. But Mr. Cubberley should take a dose of his own medicine. He lets five perfectly good blank pages get by without advertising.

A Full Page.

The Royal-Grand, Marion, Ind., took a full page in the local paper for the Christmas announcements, and it was a full page in a double sense, for it carried several thousand words of matter. But because it was well planned it was far more readable than a fifth of the copy would have been in display. Very little of the matter arose above ten point and most was boxes of straight reading matter in eight and ten point with eighteen and twenty-four point one line heads. Lately we commented on another full page display that was discouraging because it contained so much matter, but that was on account of a diversity of sizes and styles of type. Here, with a more uniform make up, it was possible to get the vital part of the message in a few lines or as much more as you might be interested in. It is not so much what you do as how you do it that counts, and this is well done, because its author recognized the fundamental fact that the eye must not be scared away before attention is attracted. It is possible to read the entire page without a suggestion of fatigue where a mere jumble of type would produce a headache.

Went Gunning.

O. L. Meister, of the Vaudette, Milwaukee, issued a double service Christmas Card. One-third of a fifteen inch card was folded over to meet a picture of Mr. Meister firing a gun, the puff of smoke on the fold containing the Christmas greetings. Opening up the card the gun was retained, but now the discharge was the reels of Mutual film aimed at the Public as represented by an ample German, behind whom competition was in retreat. The drawing was spirited and the result was probably far more effective than a formal card would have been.

Can It Be?

It's pretty hard to believe Ben L. Morris, of the Sprague Amusement Company, Bellaire, Ohio, when he writes:

> We have recently joined in a movement here to put up the price from five to ten cents, which is some movement for a poor man's town with a population of 12,000. We have four theaters here, all of them could be classed as first class.
>
> The writer inspired the following editorial written by the editor of one of our daily papers. Of course the fact that we patronize the advertising department had a little to do with it, but I think it is a pretty good effort, and one that will go a long ways toward the support of the movement here.
>
> So far it has made good.

Do you realize what that means? Here are four houses in a town of 12,000, and instead of trying to cut each other's throats they are getting together in a movement to raise the price. We hope we do not wake up and find that it is all a dream. Just think of it! Four—f-o-u-r—level-headed managers in one town, all willing to let the other fellow live and help them to make a living! It's better than trying to do up a couple of the weakest, but it takes men of sense to do it. The editorial drops the entire column and is too long to be given here and, anyway, it is merely a resume of arguments already printed.

Why not talk to your brother managers (not "opposition," but brother managers, please), and keep on talking until you convert them?

Farrar's First.

Steve Farrar, of Eldorado, Ill., was bound to drop into journalism in the long run, and he's made the plunge. He writes:

> Enclosed you will find the first issue of The Casino News. Look it over and pass judgment on it. I want to make this do me all the good it possibly can, and will therefore appreciate any weak points you can point out in this my first effort. I will be glad to exchange with any of the boys that get out programs. I would have liked to have gotten out a program myself, but the printers here have no machines, and where the type is all set by hand it's a hard proposition, and an expensive one. Will mail you number two if you care to look at it. Will try and make it better.

The Casino is a one sheet printed on both sides. The full program runs in the center of the first page with several readers and a third page advertisement of the big feature (in this case he's just getting around to Samson), there is a column of "Steve Says," bits of personal gossip, near-epigrams and chat, a Question and Answers department in which he asks his own questions so as to be certain he can answer them, and a lot of display stuff. The chatty stuff is good and we think that the News will be cheaper than a program and at the same time do more good. There is room enough for some commercial advertising, though in the first issue the house gets all of the space with the exception of a couple of classified advertisements. We want to be put on the mailing list for more than the second issue.

Help! Help!

Now comes the second issue of Steve Farrar's Casino News, and Steve starts to educate his patrons. He says a lady wanted to know why he charged extra for a special, and so—

> I explained to her that it cost the film company about twelve cents per foot to produce the ordinary picture, but that it cost them five times that amount to produce this picture.

It will tickle Carl Laemmle almost to death to learn that it only cost him $600 a reel to put on Samson. We are willing to bet he tells Steve to use the brains, etc. Any takers? Very well, don't blame you. If Steve can turn out Samsons at sixty cents a foot, they'll fire Bernstein and give him the job.

Using the Brains.

Get this line from the insert in a recent Universal Weekly:

> The colors are so blatant that when this 24-sheet is put up on the billboards it will kill every other poster within half a block. We have tried it out and the effect is startling.

About the best location in New York City is the New York end of the Brooklyn Bridge. These posters kill the whole quarter mile of display, it is so vilely blatant. You may miss all the rest, but you can't help seeing this. It runs after you. It is intentionally an artistic crime, and it does its murderous job. You can get a supply free for the posting. Get them. There never was a poster with a louder voice. But keep them away from the front of your house or it will kill the rest of your display.

Beardsley and Caran d'Ache never did anything more bizarre. It is not artistic in coloring. It is quite the reverse. It lacks artistic conception, but it can be plainly heard half a mile away, and it makes the word Universal known. Let your house lobby reflect the artistic side, but if you have to go out and fight the canned soups, three-dollar shoes, now marked up to five, and the rest of the stuff, it's well to be pronounced, and if there was anything more pronounced than this the Board of Health would interfere—all of which is to be condensed into the three words, "most effective advertising."

On the other hand, we do not agree with Mr. Laemmle that the best house front display is fifty-seven varieties of posters. Use a good display but not an excessive one. Put the surplus on the boards away from the house.

Summons His Patrons.

The advertising manager of the Central theater, Hot Springs, Ark., has sprung something new in a "subpoena" requiring the recipient to "witness" a performance of "The Stain." The form is not given here, for forms differ, but any lawyer friend can give you a blank summons in the form used by local courts, which you can adapt to suit your own purpose, or a law stationer can print them for you. Care must be used to hold closely to the proper form, and yet avoid contempt of court. Substitute your own name as Judge.

This is a better device than the fake telegram. Distributed in plain white sealed envelopes, the effect will be best, but they can be used in many ways; if you have a uniformed house officer, for instance, you can let him distribute them in the offices and to store keepers. The sample is made out in the name of the Central Censor Court, which does very nicely.

The writer, who does not give his name, also sends in some clever newspaper stuff written by Alberta Claire, who got her name in the papers a couple of years ago as "The Girl from Wyoming." It is readable stuff and masked advertising, therefore doubly effective.

Not a "Fall Guy."

Frank B. Payne, of the Crescent theater, Adrian, Mich., sent us his photograph as Ford Sterling in a street ballyhoo he did. We ran the cut and in the next mail Mr. Payne got a two-page, single spaced letter from a school of acting taught by mail. Although the writer naively says: "If I can help you to an income of $500 a week, I shall be more pleased than helping you to one of $50," Mr. Payne did not "fall for the bunk," but is going to keep on running the projection machine as per usual. It was one of these schools that lately assured Edwin August that he could make a good actor of himself with their aid by investing $30, but this school will graduate you for $15.

Likes It.

Steve Farrar—it really isn't necessary to add of Eldorado, Ill., has started the autogobile in the fourth issue of his Casino News. Here is the paragraph:

> Out in a little town in Massachusetts called Gardner, lives a fellow named Stanton. One day, when he had nothing else to do (this fellow doesn't have much to do anyway, just manages a successful picture show), he got his ingenious brain to working, and the result was that he built and patented a one-horse power Autogomobile that caused the people of Gardner to set up and take notice.
>
> Stanton grew famous over night. In fact this machine was such a novelty and success it attracted the attention of one, Epes, an advertising expert, in New York City, and he wrote Mr. Stanton and secured the job of press agent for this wonderful one-horse power Autogomobile. One of his advertisements attracted the attention of Steve and he wrote in and secured the Illinois state rights for same. A sample will arrive in Eldorado this week and Steve will have it out on the streets demonstrating. It has the Ford crying for help already, and it is predicted that it will be the greatest car out this year. Watch for it.

In another column he adds that it will go a hundred miles on a gallon of gasoline. It will go longer than that if they keep the cork in and do not let the horse drink it.

Steve writes that he thinks that number four is the best issue yet, and we agree with him. A new sheet always will shake itself down into better form as experience is gained. He also writes it keeps him thin to run two houses and get out a paper. He is invited to come east and hang around our office a couple of days.

If you want to exchange issues, send yours to the Casino theater, Eldorado, Ill.

Watch for Williams.

Steve adds he was glad to see that we wrote up Bertram Williams in a recent issue. We did not mention names, but, in view of the fact that a fresh batch of complaints have come in, it seems to be wise to warn managers against a person calling himself Bertram Williams. He had black hair at last accounts (his own is red) and he seems to have dipped into the managers from the Gulf pretty far north. His last performance was a supply combination. When last heard from he was en route for Santa Fe, from Trinidad, Colorado. It is only recently that he got married and wrote us that he had turned over a new leaf.

Saying Something.

Paramount Pickings, the house organ of the Famous Players Star Feature Film Service, Minneapolis, is running a series of letters from a veteran exhibitor to his son. When they get all through with the series it might pay to reproduce them in cheap book form for general sale. But here is a paragraph that can't wait, because it covers the ground so completely:

> Remember my child that the day of the flaring, unattractive, glaring "nickelodeon" front has passed. It belongs to the day of the cheap prize fight pictures and the fifty foot "chaser." It can have no place in the house that is profitable and up-to-date. Let your key-note be "Refinement in display"; a lobby that will attract and invite; let flowers (artificial or natural) statuary, good paintings or pictures of the leading film artists adorn your lobby walls and floor, and of these have only a few. Let your announcements of "Coming Events" be neat and dignified; don't have a hodge-podge of shrieking paper adorn the walls of either your "front" or of your lobby. Lithographs are excellent in their proper sphere, but they were never intended for a lobby display. Don't have a "barker," nor resort to the "circus" tactics to attract your audience. Let everything in your house, both within and without, suggest tone, class and quality, and they will attract and draw far stronger than in the old days.

Of course if you stick to the dime museum stuff it won't interest you, but for the general theater, and most particularly for the neighborhood theater, this tells the whole story. Try and make them realize that it is a theater and not merely a show. They will enjoy the performance more if you bring them to that understanding.

Post Card Programs.

It seems like old times to see the Proctor name in connection with the Griswold, Troy. It was one of the Jacobs and Proctor houses when we were still in school and never dreamed that later on we would be doing the Proctor press stuff. H. R. Emde, the local manager, sends in the post card reproduced below. It makes an excellent medium because he knows how to get a lot in a very small space. About 1,800

Week of Dec. 7
Bulletin No. 2
Proctor's Griswold
Continuous 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.
PRICES
11 a. m. to 12.30 p. m. 5c. Matinee 10c. Evening 10c, 15c
MON. & TUES. WED. THURS. FRI. SAT. SUN.
Dorothy Dewson
Lydia Barrett
"Little Nell"
HIS TRYSTING PLACE

of these are mailed out weekly. These are printed on the Government post cards, doing away with a lot of stamp affixing, and are sent to a select list of business and professional people. Probably the entire weekly cost does not exceed $25, including addressing, and it is bound to take hold. We have seen nothing better in the line of nutshell advertising.

Here's An Old Friend.

It's been more than a year since we had anything from Miss Dolly Spurr, of Marion, Ind., but she is none the less welcome and we hope she is back to stay. She has organized the Mutual Theater Company since she last paid a call, and is "President and General Manager" now instead of "sole manager." But she's still hustling and she builds up a Hennegan program cover to eight pages and takes every page for the house, arguing that it will do her as much good as any one else. She writes:

> I find this a good investment, as the front and back covers are attractive and the program advertises itself to the patrons.

The only suggestion we might make is that a page of house talk, of the sort she used to write, should find a place in the pages; perhaps two pages, one about the house and another page of running comment on the bill for the week. She dates her days, of course, runs gossip of the stars, and gets you interested in the film instead of running a long synopsis.

Her letter head, too, interests, for it is tasteful and good. The paper is brown with brown and purple ink (not too much purple) and the typewriter ribbon matches the brown printing ink. This does not reach many of the patrons, but if we had a house and as nice a letter head, we would send out a circular letter just to show them the way we do things. Good stationery is just as much an advertisement in its way as so many agate lines in the newspaper, though few exhibitors seem to realize that fact.

Likes It Himself.

J. N. Cason, of the Opera House, Sylacauga, Alabama, sends in a house program and suggests that it is about the neatest little program for a town of 3,000 that we can find. We won't make it quite as strong as that, but it's a nice little issue and as clean looking as the floor in a New England kitchen—if you were ever in one. We imagine that the printer takes himself out and buys himself a drink every time he gets one out, just because he knows he deserves it. It's not a pretentious issue, nor is it striking in any way, but it's been made by a workman and not by a man who is a printer because he has to eat. The ink is black and the impression is good, there is no elaborate type display, but it is all well balanced. The days are not dated, as they should be, but each day is distinct and by itself, though they are run three to the page, double column and Tuesday and Friday have to turn the column. If you want a small, neat and effective program, perhaps Mr. Cason will send one if you provide the return envelope, but impress on your own printer the necessity for following this good example and not trying to improve on it. We don't blame Mr. Cason liking it. We like it, too.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopsis be criticized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return, stamped envelope is enclosed.

Dots and Dashes.

GETTING the Coroner's goat was a very complete proceeding at the last inquest. He reverted to the discussion of the Ed-Au the previous Saturday on the more ample script that should give characterization, and immediately a chronic hair-splitter at the other end of the table got up and announced that he no longer used short sentences spaced by dashes, but long sentences with periods and colons and semicolons and things like that. Back of him came Marc Edmond Jones to remark that he had had to cause his assistant (he has one now) to stop using dashes, as he found that translating his fluent phrasing into dash-broken sentences was confusing, as dashes were made to take the place of "ands" and "buts." Then Miss Justice rose to remark that she gave a literary flavor to her scene writing and found it helped the director.

Of the three Miss Justice was most nearly right, but all were wrong. She was not able to write action as action, so she described the action in phrases. She is primarily (still) a fiction writer and finds that the best form of expressing her thoughts, so she uses that instead of studying how to write in action, and have the action tell what she puts into words.

Mr. Jones, who is not a fiction writer, learned to write in action, but did not learn to express himself clearly in action. In action there are no ands and buts, properly speaking. Each action stands by itself and is not linked with another. In action it is not that "Jim tries to kill John, but Harry prevents him." Instead "Jim draws gun, determined to kill the slayer of his sister—Harry springs forward—grasps his wrist—wrests the gun from him." That is action without ands and buts, and is more intelligible to the director, who does not want to read a novel, but merely gain a knowledge of the action that tells the story. The dash is suggested in preference to punctuation marks to separate the individual actions, but it is not the dot or the dash that makes a story, it is writing in action, clear, understandable action, that counts.

The time is rapidly approaching when directors will be willng to accept a detailed plot of action. They will be willing to accept more assistance from the author, but photoplay aspirants will never be able to be helpful until they are ready to drop quibbles over technique and make the technique of form subservient to idea and common sense. Correspondence schools seek to teach technique of form because it is all that they can hope to teach. Pupils quarrel over the technique of form because it is all their limited mentalities will permit them to understand, but in due course people who write must come to understand that a photoplay is a story told in action and therefore written in action. It can be written wholly without the use of dashes, but if it is written in long sentences it is too apt to be descriptive writing rather than action, and so does not greatly help the director.

Bannister Merwin does not write with dashes. He does write in action, giving the essential mental impulses that govern that action, but he does not write descriptive matter to replace action, but to supplement it. We hope presently to be able to reproduce portions of one of Mr. Merwin's scripts to show his style which is at once complete and yet compact. It will not be possible for all to copy successfully ihs style, but it will enable them to write without dashes and yet not regard the mere omission as a credit and a mark of individuality.

Inquesters—Important.

At the first meeting of the Inquest Club in 1915, it was decided to return to the Savoy theater as a place of meeting, the Herald Square management having given no heed to a request for a slide, which has resulted in too much confusion, so, commencing Monday, January 18, the meetings will again be held at the Savoy.

If You Live in Philadelphia.

Perhaps Philadelphia may have an Inquest Circle after all. The original coroner has returned to that city and expresses a willingness to try it again. His address will be sent on receipt of a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Another of Those Things.

Now comes another of those things. Taking a suggestion from this department, the new "league" in combination with a "corporation," will inaugurate an independent copyright office, sales bureau and legal bureau, the latter to prosecute "flagrant" offenses and prevent others by moral force "when the league becomes important enough"—if it ever does.

The old correspondence school scheme is now left to the strong arm contingent as "coarse work." The really clever man who wants the money of credulous script writers now runs a clearing house, a revision bureau and now comes a proprietary league.

Pittsburgh Reports.

Frank Howard Clark, of the Pittsburgh Inquest Circle, reports on the work for the year as follows:

The Pittsburgh Inquest Circle is well along in its second season and in flourishing condition. We have the following membership to report: Miss Bee M. Aarons, Mrs. Margaret Keller and the Messrs. B. Morgenthau, Wm. F. Ablett, J. A. Painter, J. E. Kevan, E. W. Matlack and Frank Howard Clark. In addition to this active membership of eight, we also have on our non-resident roster: Mrs. A. H. McCovern, Erie; Mrs. Ruby Myer Reed, Port Vue; Mr. Harry W. Sudds, Butler, making a total of eleven earnest workers. During the course of the year we added some new ones and dropped others—these latter did not show the proper amount of interest. Our membership will have increased, no doubt, before the season is finished, as there are a number on the outside now seeking admission. What we want are pluggers—not dead-heads—and the new ones as well as the old ones must show a flash of something if their name is to be added or kept on the roll call. The sluggard is likened unto the male bee—and this type has no welcome midst our little crew. We work shoulder to shoulder, and our motto: HELP ONE ANOTHER still holds good, but—it is at times necessary to weed out the wheat from the chaff, both in the interests of the fellow-members and the parties themselves, as those that will not work only retard the progress of the rest of the crowd. We believe in being frank and telling a man he is hopeless as a writer rather than have him chasing a will-of-the-wisp in the belief that he is a second O. Henry or such. It means to him a saving thereby of several years of his valuable time, a hundred and one heartaches, a ton of paper and postage and all the rest that goes with the game. We believe it's a good policy. Our non-resident members drop in on us occasionally and are at the same time kept in touch with things by means of correspondence. Scripts are exchanged for criticism and market hints and much valuable data is passed back and forth.

Mr. Matlack still presides as Coroner by unanimous and hearty consent. Mrs. Keller was kind enuf to present the coroner with a sure-enuf gavel, so he now rap-raps the meetings to order and rap-raps for adjournment. It also comes in handy to rap somebody on the head to quell a too boisterous argument. We thank Mrs. Keller for her thoughtfulness. Miss Aarons, who is the press agent for the Nixon theater here in town, was also kind enuf to offer us the use of her office where we now hold our meetings. We do not have any of Mr. Keene's Chop House in Pittsburgh—just common, every-day saloons—so New York has at least one advantage over Pittsburgh. If there were but men in the crowd we might sit around a table with a foaming brew before us and do battle, but, as we are luckily blessed in having some of the gentler sex with us, we must, perforce, be upon our "dignity." We also thank Miss Aarons.

Our experience of last year in the matter of conducting the Inquest meetings has proven a good groundwork on which to base the manner of proceedure this season and the best way in which to get the best results. The members have seemed more interested in perfecting their own scripts rather than taking in a show and commenting on it afterwards, so we have arranged our schedule accordingly. Here is our order of business: We meet at 8 o'clock. From 8 to 9 we have an individual talk from every member around the board. Each one is allowed so many minutes in which to relate his woes, pass along some good advice, market tips or anything else he cares to talk about. In this manner everyone has a chance to say something, and it must be across the board that the others may have a chance to benefit by his remarks. (Last year the crowd had a tendency to split up into groups and gossip—much was lost thereby that should have been heard by all concerned.) The coroner then sums up the remarks of the members and makes any comments that he may see fit to make, winding it up with some well-chosen and sound advice. Argument is then held, pro and con—and the limit allowed is one black eye—usually made by the coroner's gavel—in self-defense.

From 9 to 10 the coroner reads some member's script—with remarks and mutual criticism from the gallery. Each member has his turn to bring a script—Mr. "A" first and Mr. "Z" last—as the members' names may be in alphabetical arrangement. It is always decided upon at the meeting before who is to bring the script at the next meeting, it being the coroner's job to issue this mandate. If there is anything wrong with the script that is being criticised, the owner thereof certainly knows it by ten o'clock, as everyone has had a chance to throttle said script until it is a lifeless mass of pulp and typewriter ink. We haven't yet found one perfect story—but we are improving.

From ten until ten-thirty we have a general discussion on anything that anyone wants to talk about, this half hour being devoted to a more friendly and sociable chat. Photoplays we have witnessed the last two weeks back may be commented on. (We meet every two weeks.) Then again, Matlack may spin a railroad yarn or recount some thrilling experience of his pioneer days on the road. Miss Aarons may tell us of the attractions that are coming to the Nixon or discuss drama from the legit. point of view. Mrs. Keller, who has traveled the country over with some big shows, can also be counted on for an amusing or interesting anecdote. Ablett, who is in the barrel business is glad to talk "barrels," or Painter, "steam laundries"—and so the talk goes At 10.30 someone says, "Let's go out and have a drink"—the motion is carried by storm (the ladies excluded of course), the coroner's gavel raps and we adjourn!

So endeth our second annual report.

A Real Campaign.

We are glad to learn from Russell E. Smith that the Photoplay Authors' League is not confining its campaign against the schools to the Script alone. They are directly approaching the advertising men on newspapers and magazines, the magazines such as Printers' Ink and the associations. There always will be schools and revisionists and all the other fakes, but most of them can be starved out if fraudulent advertising is refused by the popular press. In this direction the League is doing good work.

Sterling Wants.

Harry Wulze, who used to be comedy producer for Balboa, has gone over to the Universal to edit for the Sterling brand. He writes:

> Of late we have been flooded with scripts that contain lengthy scenarios, and which are absolutely of no use to us whatever in the matter of scenario. All we require, and desire, is a brief synopsis, and we now have five producing companies in the field, so our needs are larger than ever before.
>
> I would be very glad to have you announce through the medium of your 'Photoplaywright' section of the Moving Picture World the above statement, and also that we are in great need of child comedies, but no "Dog" stories. I might add that I have but recently joined this company, having formerly been directing comedies for the Balboa Company of Long Beach, and previous to that I was associated with Fred Mace.
>
> Conditions out here on the coast make water stories undesirable at present, for we feel the chilly winds and cold about as much as if we really had the snow to go with it.

It might be well to make a note of what Mr. Wulze says about cold water, even when you write dramas. The water is just as cold for the dramatic actors as a comedy player.

Help a Little.

If you want to help a little in the many-sided crusade against schools take the time to write the publishers of the magazines printing the ads of the fake schools. Tell them you are surprised to see your favorite publication helping downright swindlers to cheat their readers. A few hundred such letters will leave an impression on any publisher except a couple we know.

Practice.

Came lately a lady who has studied short-story writing in two universities. She had a photoplay script. It was not an interesting story. She had taken a year to write twelve and has sold none, and for good reason. She has taken an average of one month each to develop a one-reel story. She has worked with infinite pains, bringing to the task the trained mind of a college-bred woman, but she has been laboring for twelve months over technique and technique alone. That was where she erred. Technique is all right in its place, but technique is the servant of idea; not its master, and the most perfect technique in the world will not cover to trained eyes the lack of idea.

So now she is going to write many plots, so many plots, indeed, that she'll write some good ones and writing the good ones she will realize how bad some of them are, and so she'll train her judgment.

A perfect technique is necessary to the perfect story, because in perfect technique alone can the perfect story be perfectly told, but first learn to get ideas and then learn to put them in proper form. The man who has a building lot can always borrow the money with which to build a house, but a three-story house without a place to put it is a most embarrassing thing to have around. First get the ideas, which represent the lot, then build with technique.

Fading.

From the number of letters received it seems to be in order to write another paragraph on fades. We are moved to this determination mainly by a writer who states it as his impression that a fade is "a recalled scene occupying one-half of the screen while the running scene takes the other half." Not even a little bit like it.

A fade means to fade, but in photoplay a fade may be down or up; which is not according to the dictionary. A scene is "faded down" or "faded in" or "faded into." Each has its own meaning.

Fade means the gradual changing from the brilliant picture to blackness or vice versa. Originally the fade was used only at the end of a play to avoid the abrupt change from the dramatic moment of the climax to the censorship tag. The picture slowly faded from the screen. The fades in the film were all "into" the next scene, a dissolving effect in which one picture was gradually superimposed upon the preceding one. But this meant that the film showing the end of Scene A, for example, had to be turned back into the top box to serve as the start of scene B. The last few feet of A were run as the diaphragm of the camera was gradually closed. Then the same piece of film was used to start B, while the diaphragm was gradually opened. The film had to stay in the box until both scenes were made or double printing in the printing room had to be resorted to.

Now, instead of taking all that trouble, a scene is faded to blackness and the next scene (which is made entirely independent of the other) is increased from blackness to full light, and when joined the two scenes are divided by a period of decreasing and increasing illumination.

In writing you write at the end of a scene—Fade down. At the beginning of the next "Fade in." The camera man does the rest.

There Are Limits.

We want to warn a few readers that there are limits to the offer to reply by mail to inquiries. We absolutely bar the question that asks, "Please tell me how to write photoplays." Then, too, we do not regard ten or twelve questions, each requiring a lengthy paragraph in reply, as being within the bounds, and five letters in two weeks is just as bad. We are genuinely interested in this correspondence feature, but when you take your pen in hand, please don't make it a hog pen. It is better to use a typewriter and moderation.

For Manufacturers, Too.

If you want to learn something take a sheet of paper and try and write down the names of plays that live year after year. See how many of them are lurid. Think of the number of versions of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," think of "The Old Homestead" outlasting even Denman Thompson. Think of "East Lynne" and plays of that type, and then see if you can remember back to "Mrs. Warren's Profession." It does pay to be clean, for that is what makes the most lasting impression; not that "East Lynne" and "Ten Nights in a Barroom" are soaked in sweetness and light perhaps, but they are not filthy for the sake of mere filth. The one bright red play that has lasted is "Camille," and this is because this is the test piece by which all actresses are judged.

Numbering Close Ups.

Here's an inquiry that may interest others. The writer asks:

> In making a scene plot, say two certain scenes are as follows:
>
> 14 (Interior Doctor's Office.)
>
> 37 (Close up of Interior Doctor's Office, as 14.)
>
> Suppose there are several like 14 and several scenes titled like 37, do you denote the two sets in (I mean scenes) as follows:
>
> Interior Doctor's Office, in 14, 16, 21, 24, 27, 35, 39.
>
> Close up of Interior Doctor's Office, in 37, 40, 45.

Now the idea of the scene plot is this: the director makes all the scenes in one set at one time, and if he sticks to the script, he checks off the number of each scene as made and gets the number of the next. The scene plot shows the number of sets required. The close-ups of the doctor's office are in the same setting as the big scenes, and should be numbered in rotation. The director can tell from the plotted action which scenes are close-ups. The proper way to write down the scenes would be to say:

Physician's office—14-16-21-24-27-35-37-39-40-45.

But this gives a wrong idea, for as a rule a close-up comes between two other scenes in the large set, or, if you will, a scene and a "back to." It is the general practice that a close-up means three consecutive numbers in one set.

And it is worth while noting the growing tendency to use the close-up. This was very intelligently handled in a recent Kalem when, to borrow an expression of a writer, "they shot all over the darned room," and got strongly effective results.

For an illustration let us say that the scene is laid in the Senate Chamber in Washington. Hawkins, a newcomer, is trying to force through a bill "for the relief" of his sweetheart's father. Jorkins, one of the old Wheel horses and senior senator from the same state, seeks to defeat the bill because of his dislike for the girl's father. Hawkins is to make his big speech.

To show the matter adequately would require a tiresome stay in the same big set. One or the other of the leading players would be too far from the camera to show up well. In this case the large scene would show the floor of the chamber, but instead of holding the action there it would flash back and forth between the two men, to the girl and her father in the balcony, and perhaps to the press gallery where Hawkins' friend, a correspondent for the home paper, helps to swing the tide. All of the players would be seen in the occasional big set, but there would be a succession of close-up pictures of the principals, with an occasional return to the big scene. It would be perhaps a three-hundred-foot scene, yet divided up into perhaps twenty-five or thirty sections, avoiding monotony. They would all be in the same set, but here, for the greater convenience of the director, it would be better to lay out the scene plot in this wise:

Senate Chamber—36-45-51-58-60
" " close up of Hawkins—37-40-44-46 52-54-57
" " close up of Jorkins—39-43-47-49-53
" " close up of girl—38-42-48-55-59
" " close up of press gallery—41-50-56

The ditto marks would show it to be all the same scene, but the many close-ups could be picked up easily. Where only a few are used this is not necessary.

Following the Crowd.

Very lately a man shot his son-in-law, not knowing that he was his son-in-law. To save his life the daughter went upon the stand and testified to her own shame. It was a truly dramatic situation. BUT if we had a decent price for every one of the scripts that will be written on that theme within the next three months, we would be able to build a few libraries that would make the Carnegie ones look like dog houses. And probably not one of these will be purchased because the editors will be afraid that some other studio will utilize the idea before they can.

And in the same paper reporting the acquittal were probably several hundred paragraphs each containing the germ of a good idea. Don't follow the crowd if you want to lead the way.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles have been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department one dollar.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study. Canadian should send P. O. M. O., or coin only.

Question No. 68.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theatre managers looking for high-class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Suppose you were projecting a 15 foot picture and had the choice of a 50 and a 100 foot throw, which would you choose, and why would you make that selection? Suppose the choice were between 50 and 125 feet; 50 and 150 feet, or 75 feet and 125 feet? Give your reasons in each case.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 62.

I am rather up a stump on Question 62 Roll of Honor, because all of you were careless and none gave the matter sufficient study. You must remember, gentlemen, that these questions are for the purpose of inducing you to study, and some of the very simple looking ones are hard; that is to say, hard in the sense that you have got to do considerable thinking to get all the points. For instance: I think that, outside of Brother Turner, only one of all those who answered the question thought of looking at their rheostat as a possible source of the second fuse blowing.

However, although incorrect on some points, I believe that Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; A. C. Stewart, Waitsburg, Washington; John Solar, Watertown, New York; G. D. Bullock, Hobart, Indiana; Byron Stokes, Weatherford, Texas; J. I. Roberts, Nashville, Tennessee; H. W. Seward, Reading, Pennsylvania; William J. Crane, Nashville, Tennessee; Horace D. Good, Reading, Pennsylvania; L. W. Carroll, Lancaster, New Hampshire; U. K. Batten, Berwyn, Pennsylvania; Montreal, Canada; and Arthur W. Turner, East Templeton, Massachusetts, should be included by the reason of the fact that they have all shown a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the subject.

I have selected the reply of Arthur W. Turner as being, everything considered, best for publication.

Reply to Question No. 62.

(By Arthur W. Turner, East Templeton, Mass.)

The Question:

Suppose a fuse blows. You install another, and it also blows. Tell us, in detail, exactly how you would then proceed. Suppose a fuse blows after being installed a short time, and the performance is kept up, each new fuse lasting, say, fifteen minutes. The fuse is not overloaded, and you find the circuit to be free from any fault. What would you then look for? What is the best kind of fuse for projection circuits—fuses inside the operating room, I mean—and why are they best? What should be done with used (blown) cartridge and plug fuses?

What is meant by "boosting a fuse," and what ought to be done to the operator who boosts his fuses with copper wire or anything else? Show, by diagram, how you would arrange so as to instantly cut in a new set of fuses if a fuse blew on your projection circuit. Show us, by diagram, how you would arrange to rectify the polarity if it were suddenly changed at the power house.

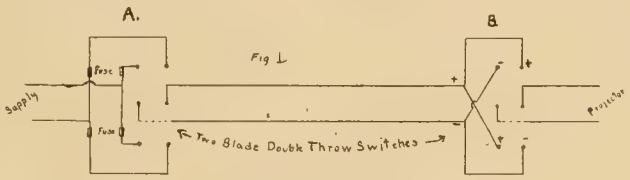
The Answer:

Taking the projection circuit for example, when a fuse blows there are two conditions to be considered, viz: did the fuse blow upon striking the arc, or upon throwing in the main switch. If the former I would examine the resistance and see if some of the coils had not become grounded to the frame or to each other in a way to cut out or eliminate a portion of the resistance. (If you were using an economizer you should, under that condition, examine and test it for short circuit or ground. Ed.) There should be sufficient resistance to stand a short circuit across the carbons, therefore the trouble would lie in the rheostat. If the fuse should blow upon closing the main switch I would immediately look for a short circuit or a ground heavy enough to amount to a short circuit. If a fuse should blow when the circuit was working as usual, and I installed another fuse and it instantly blew, I would follow the conductors from the arc lamp back to the fuse block looking for ground or short, also for trouble in the rheostat. If this same condition obtained on the incandescent circuit I would conclude that the trouble might be (a) fuses heavily overloaded; and to determine this I would estimate the current as closely as possible by counting the incandescent lamps or estimating the motor pull, if any there be. This, however, would hardly be a possible condition if a fuse had been carrying the circuit for some time; (b) a ground, or (c) a short circuit, either of which can be tested for in the usual way by magneto, bell and battery or test lamp.

In case of the fuse blowing after it had been in ten or fifteen minutes I would attribute the cause to its melting out through mechanical heat, probably generated by a loose contact. A loose connection on a fuse block may easily generate sufficient heat to melt a fuse after a time.

A cartridge fuse is best, I think, for use in the machine room. They are easily installed and easily removed, also they are built for higher amperage than plugs. When they blow out there is a wider gap and less chance to maintain an arc if a higher voltage current should get crossed with the theatre wires.

Boosting a fuse is very similar to the action of the fireman who, when he saw steam escaping from the safety valve, took his ash hoe and held the safety valve to "save the steam." When a fuse blows there are so-called operators who will take a piece of copper wire, a hair pin or any other electrical conductor and put it across from terminal to terminal under the new fuse to help carry the current. I have heard it said that that fireman ought to have had his head blown off when there was no one else around to get hurt, and I don't know why that same thing should not be applied to the fuse booster.



The attached diagram answers the last two questions. I have arranged the whole thing on one circuit, as it would be very naturally placed if both were wanted. A is the double throw switch with two sets of fuses, and B is the polarity changer.

[The brother's data on the kind of fuse is not at all complete, but his answer, taking the thing all around, was the best of the lot. Personally, the editor prefers link fuses for the projection circuit, for two reasons: first, they are cheaper and fairly easy to install; second, it is harder to boost them without the trick being detected, although, of course, it is possible to make a piece of copper wire look like fuse wire by coating it with solder, but nobody but a confirmed idiot or lop-eared jackass would do anything of that kind. As to the main switchboard incandescent fuses, why as between plug and cartridge it is a matter of individual preference; one is just as safe as the other, but the cartridge makes a neater looking board, but, as I remember it, they cost more, and there you are. Ed.]

Saved Him Many Times Its Cost.

J. V. Jensen, Los Gatos, California, says:

As a starter I wish to say that I have a copy of your Handbook, and it has saved me many times its cost. Our theatre is small—200 seats. We use a motor-driven Powers Six A and the distance of projection is 60 feet, taking current through a G. E. mercury arc rectifier. Pictures are fairly clear, but the definition is not quite as good as it might be at the left edge. Have tried putting a paper ring in the lens, as suggested in the Handbook, but it don't seem to help much. Understand that the pictures are good, and no complaint has been made, but I am desirous of giving the best possible results. Is there not some other remedy I could try? We are using the Universal program and are well enough satisfied with it, except that the films are quite dirty. Have seen a film cleaner, made in Binghamton, N. Y., mentioned in the department. Could you give me the company's name, also the price? Would also like to know if there are any operators who have tried film cleaning machines. What preparation is there one can use for cleaning films? In closing I wish to add that the projection department is certainly, in itself, worth the entire subscription price of the Moving Picture World.

With regard to the lens matter, first I assume that your machine sets central, sidewise, with the screen; if it does not, then that is where the trouble lies, and you can probably remove it by loosening the aperture plate, slipping a strip of paper under one side and clamping the plate down on the paper, the idea being to bring one side of the plate farther away from the projection lens than the other to compensate for the difference of the distance to one side of the screen from the lens to the other side of the screen. See page 332 of the Handbook for illustration of my meaning. You will have to experiment as to the necessary thickness of the paper and what side it needs to go on. If your machine sets central with the screen, I should suggest that in all probability your lens system is out of line, and would refer you to page 227 of the Handbook, where the best system I know of for lining the lens system is both described and illustrated. I think the film cleaner address you seek is the Mortimer Film Cleaning Company, Portland, Me. The price of this cleaner is, or was, $10.00. No, I know of no preparation suitable for cleaning film, except that it be used with a special and very costly machine. I, myself, would like to have reports from operators who have used film cleaners. I believe I asked for something of this kind once before and did not get it. Cannot some of you come across with that particular piece of information?

Optical Matters.

Our old friend, John Griffiths, Ansonia, Connecticut, is here again, and, as usual, with good stuff. To my way of thinking the operators owe Brother Griffiths a debt of gratitude for his addition to the fund of lore on optical matters.

> With reference to the Million Dollar Pier Mystery, I hiked over to the theatre this morning and carefully measured two 7½-inch condensers which erred, if in any way, by both being of slightly longer focal length than a 7½. I then set my crater 4 inches from the back condenser and adjusted the same so that the planes of the condensers were 2¼ inches apart. I then moved the lamphouse so that the distance between front condenser and aperture was 18¼ inches, making a total distance between crater and aperture of 24½ inches. I then struck my arc, and, instead of getting a spot, found I was on a back focus, and had to advance my crater to 3⅛ inches from condenser to get a spot 2 inches in diameter, so there you are. Either I am up a tree or Friend Paxton is using condensers of longer focal length than he claims to be doing. Have Brothers James and La Grow been trying this out? Maybe I am twisted, or there is a typographical error somewhere in the official data, either in distance between crater and aperture or crater and center of lens tube, the latter distance being printed the smaller of the two, which is, of course, impossible. (Right you are. It should be 32 instead of 23 inches between the crater and the lens. The figures got reversed somehow. Ed.)

> I am sending a diagram which illustrates the basis of my formulas for finding the length of the light cone and the distance between condensers and aperture. The reports submitted by J. H. Heise, page 1838, December 26th issue, supports the theory that this is a suitable form of cone of light to use. He reports distance between condenser and aperture 16½, and diameter of spot 2 inches. The table says distance between C and A 16¼, size of spot 2 inches, the difference between 6½ meniscus and 6½ plano is accounted for by the arc being nearer to the back condenser. I previously showed that the meniscus had an 11½ per cent gain in light over the plano, the difference between 11½ per cent and the 25 per cent which Mr. Heise claims is due, I believe, to the angle of the cone of light coinciding with the angle of the objective lens. See diagram. The total light that reaches the screen is contained in the angle shown on the right of the line representing the plane of the aperture, and any rays that are not directed towards the apex of the angle (the apex or converging plane in point may be a small rectangular plane instead of a point) cannot arrive at the screen, thus there is great loss of light if the angle of the beam of light does not approximately coincide with the angle of the lens.
>
> In the diagram the dimensions of the condenser light are the same that the tables call for with a 4-inch objective lens. Note that the outline of the cone is parallel to the virtual focus of rays received and transmitted by a 4-inch objective lens. The rays of light projected by condensing lenses are more or less confused in direction, owing to the spherical aberration. As yet I cannot think of a shape of cone that would convey a greater proportion of effective rays to the screen than the one illustrated.
>
> Angles shown represent the virtual focus of the rays that ultimately reach the screen, but they are intercepted by the lens factors and have their actual focus at a point beyond the lens. Nevertheless, from the point where they focus the rays diverge directly at the same angle describing their virtual focus.

I guess Brother Griffiths has me up a stump. We are getting down to some mighty important and very interesting data, but I am obliged to confess that I cannot quite follow it. As I understand the diagram, the cone for the 4-inch lens would not come to a point between the factors of the lens, but in front of them. Now, if this is correct, it upsets our apple-cart entirely, and spills all the apples out on the ground, because all the authorities have heretofore claimed that the condenser cone must come to a focus at a point approximately half way between the front and back of the objective, and, as I remember it, that is Brother James' idea, too.

The thing that gets my nanny, however, is what the exact relation between the condenser and the objective is anyhow. If we assume that the rays from the condenser go right on through the objective and focus at a point outside the objective and then spread out again, what good is the objective anyway? My theory and understanding has always been that the condenser merely condensed the light and delivered it to the objective, but that the moment the light struck the back surface of the back factor of the objective lens the office of the condenser was finished, and from there on the objective was the whole thing. But this, it seems, is not true. I will be mighty glad when Friend Griffiths or some one else comes forward with a really intelligent understandable explanation of the exact relation as between the condenser and the objective. The darned things appear to be married all right, but I don't know who in thunder performed the ceremony or whether they are living together as man and wife or merely exist under separate maintenance.

Would Not Show.

M. J. Hoover, Franklin, Indiana, orders a question book and says:

> Suppose I arrived in a town where I was to put on a show, one night stand, at 6.30 P. M., the show to start at 8.15, and found the high tension a. c., with transformer already heavily overloaded by current supplied to other customers, the next transformer being about two squares away; the power company failing to make any provisions for me and I having only 250 feet of cable. On connecting up and striking the arc the incandescents go dim and remain that way, the voltage finally falling so low that you could not strike the arc at all; resistance one 25 ampere 110 volt rheostat in series with the arc. This did not happen to me, but to a friend. What would you do in a case like that?

Why, the answer is quite simple. I would not give a show—I would not even attempt to, because the chances would be largely in favor of burning up the transformer and having to pay for it, and if the lines are high tension there would be no way of getting current except through a transformer. I assume that, as you say, the transformer is already heavily overloaded without your arc.

The brother also asks a question concerning the connecting of resistance in series with a compensarc, which, on page 163 of the Handbook, is pronounced undesirable by its manufacturers. He also sends a sketch, but I don't think the matter of sufficient importance to justify the expense of having a cut made. Answering briefly: the resistance can be connected in series with the arc on the secondary of the transformer (on the compensarc), but it serves no good purpose and tends to set up more or less trouble in the transformer. If the transformer is of the proper voltage there is no earthly need of resistance, and, aside from any other question, it represents waste. If the brother will explain a little more explicitly what he is trying to get at I will be glad to go into the matter more deeply. Neighbor Hoover says: "The Handbook is simply grand." He also recommends the printing of the questions and answers.

Cleaning Sprockets.

Raymond J. Davenport, Seymour, Texas, writes:

> I illustrate herewith a quick and easy method for cleaning dirt and grease off the sprockets, without in any way injuring their face. Just apply the cork to the sprockets while the machine > is running, without the film in, of course. I have found this method to be very practical.

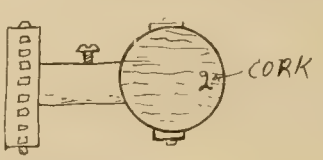

FIG 1

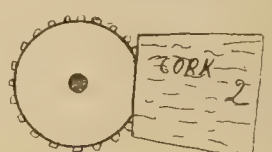

FIG 2

I presume Brother Davenport just holds the cork and let the teeth dig a groove, or a groove might be cut with a knife. Undoubtedly this would clean the sprocket face very thoroughly, except between the teeth. I think, however, on the latter account, I would still prefer the old toothbrush-and-kerosene method.

Figures Reversed.

In the article concerning the Million Dollar Pier Lenses, page 1837, December 26th issue, an inexcusable error occurred. I do not know who was originally to blame, but it was my fault in not catching the thing in the proof. "Distance from crater to center of projection lens 23 inches" should read 32 instead of 23.

An Awful Noise.

Chester Faust, Charleston, Illinois, says:

> I wish to get into the ring of fans. I have run a Powers Six A for fourteen months, projecting a 9-foot picture at 70 feet. We take current through a compensarc working on 60 ampere notch. Have one of the mechanical speed controls, but it makes an awful noise. The motor runs rather smooth when the disc is not touching the friction wheel, therefore the trouble is in the control. I have adjusted the tension, but it does not seem to help. Can you tell me how I can remedy the trouble?

I am referring your letter to the Nicholas Power Company with request that they take the matter up with you. I presume inasmuch as the machine has been running for fourteen months that it requires a renewal of the material in the disc wheel, which has no doubt become flattened in spots. You are quite right, I believe, in presuming the difficulty to lie in the friction wheel.

Correspondence Course.

Pennsylvania has the following to say concerning the course of the American Correspondence School.

> Some time ago an operator made disparaging remarks regarding the course of the American School of Correspondence. I would like to give my opinion. I have been in the game four years, and before taking the course bought your Handbook—both the old and the new. I was the first one in the city to get them and believe I am the only operator in this city who owns one. Have studied them good and hard. It was with the idea of improving my knowledge of electricity that I took up the course of the A. S. of C. which costs $25.00. So far as acquiring much knowledge of electricity be concerned it was a failure, but of other things I learned a good bit, especially about the mechanism. It taught me things I did not know, too, particularly the different styles of intermittent movements, such as the beater, the claw and others. On the whole I do not regret having taken the course, because it has broadened my knowledge of projection. And now, while I am boosting, I might as well say that the Handbook did more for me than the course, and I go through it often to keep its lessons fresh in mind; also I am always on the lookout for the World, that I may study the projection department; and I do it pretty thoroughly, too. I take great pride and pains in putting the show on without stops or breaks, and it is no cinch either, as I get four reels of about thirty-day stuff and another anywhere from one to six months old. Notwithstanding this, however, by careful inspection I average about one stop a month. True, I do not get paid for inspecting the films, but I look at it this way: Some day there might be an opening for a first-class, well paid operator, and if I deliver the goods here I may be the guy. Do you see the point? I have bought a diary and, beginning with the new year, am going to conscientiously mark down everything that happens, such as stops, breaks and their causes, shadows and discolorations, and any other faults in my picture which will better the projection if corrected. At the end of the year my book will tell me whether I have lived up to the resolution I shall make January 1st, and that is to put on the best picture in this city.

Say, my brother, that is a new wrinkle, and a mighty good one, too, if it be followed out carefully—the diary matter I mean. I can conscientiously recommend this proposition to the fraternity at large. Put a piece of paper in front of you, with pencil attached, and, being perfectly honest with yourself, record every discoloration, every run-it-too-slow, or run-it-too-fast, regardless of the cause, every break in the show, and, in fact, everything that tends to mar the result on the screen. Do that, and do it honestly and conscientiously every day for one week, and on Saturday night it will be interesting to look back and see how many faults you have committed. Also it cannot but be beneficial, but the value of the whole scheme hinges on your being absolutely honest with yourself in marking down the faults. The resolution of the brother to put on the best picture in his city is a good one, and a mighty good one, too. If all the operators in that particular city made the same resolution, and backed it up with performance moving pictures would be enormously popular in that city in a very short time, provided, of course, the managers did their part in assisting their operators by providing repairs, necessary current, etc. This letter is one that every operator can read with benefit. As to the film you sent it was simply awful.

Up Against It.

I have just finished reading a three-and-a-half-page typewritten single-space letter from a certain operator in a certain city in a certain state, and I would like to publish every word of it, because it is mighty good, mighty, mighty good reading, and it might bump some of the keep-it-to-yourself ginks and shake them out of their fossilization, at least for a minute. I will quote sections of the letter, even though crowded for space. In the first place he says, with regard to the publication of the questions and answers: "The man who wants to 'cram' for an examination will get the dope, if actually wants it bad enough, and I don't care what kind of examination he passes by this method he will be all the different kinds of an idiot when he lights in an operating room, and totally unable to deliver the goods, even though he does have his little stolen license. However, by that time he will probably begin to discover how little he really knows, commence to try to find out what all the dope he crammed for examination really means, and in course of time may become a real operator and be of real service to his community and his manager. But that can only come after he has digested the thing he learned parrot fashion. And now here is a good one for you. When I first came to this town a manager wanted some information I knew was contained in the Handbook, so I loaned him mine, but some Mr. Scared-of-the-Other-Man-Getting-Knowledge reported the matter to the union, whereupon I was immediately ordered to get the book and not let him or any one else have it again. Since that time, however, I have transferred to another local and I will now do as I blinkety, blankedy please about that book, and if any seeker after knowledge wants to borrow it he can have it. It was that man's reference that caused the manager I am now working for to send for me to take the chief job here in the largest house in the city. But there are some of the boys even in this local who cannot understand the proposition of letting anyone else learn anything about projection that they can possibly keep to themselves. They are not bad boys really, but I think, to say the least, they are following a mighty poor process of reasoning, because when you seem to try to suppress knowledge you immediately increase the curiosity and the desire of the uninformed to know."

The brother then continues, and brings up a question about light. Much as I would like to publish it, however, I simply have not space. But I want every man of you who read the foregoing to rub your noses on it—you who are opposed to the spread of knowledge, I mean. Every word of it is absolutely true. You might just as well try to stop the sun from shining as to try to oppose spread of knowledge. It cannot be did, it never has been done, it never will be done, and it never ought to be done, and I believe that, more and more the men are beginnning to understand that proposition. None of the advanced unions would even dream of attempting to try such a thing. Imagine the silliness of the action of the union in instructing the brother to get the Handbook back and not loan it to anyone again. Why, a six-year-old boy would have more sense than that or if he did not then he ought to be spanked for not having acquired it.

Huh! Well, I Dunno.

Chief Operator of the Healy theater, Fort Worth, Texas, who forgot to sign his name, sent in samples of film with the puncture between the sprocket holes, and a very positive statement that he had removed the door of the casing of his Simplex machine and had, on a number of occasions, watched the lower sprocket climb the track on one side only, and produce this damage. I promptly sent his letter, together with the film samples, to The Precision Machine Company, and now have their reply, which reads:

> After minute examination of the three samples submitted we fail to understand how this damage could have been done by a Simplex. As you know, the film travels through the Simplex with the emulsion side next the sprockets, therefore, if either of these samples had run off in the manner claimed, they most certainly would have been indented on the emulsion side, which proves conclusively that the damage was caused by some other make of projector where the film is moved by the sprockets bearing against the celluloid side. The only possible way this could happen on a Simplex machine would be in event that the operator was projecting from the rear of the screen, in which case the film would be reversed, with the celluloid side next the sprockets. In view of the fact that you are publishing this matter we believe it would be no more than fair to publish our views.

It certainly would not. I am not out to "knock" anybody's machine. I have no friends in matters of this kind, but simply want to get at the truth. If the Simplex is doing this damage we want to know it, to the end that the cause be located and remedied; if some other machine is doing it we want to know that, too, for the same reasons. One thing we are mighty certain of, and that is the damage is being done. Fort Worth is very positive in his statements. We will now be glad to hear from him further, with an explanation of how the Simplex can have made the puncture on the celluloid side.

A New Book.

Professor Simon Henry Gage, and Professor Henry Phelps Gage, of Cornell University, are authors of a new 731 page book which sets sail under the title "Optic Projection."

The Professors Gage are both well known workers in the field of science, and Professor Henry Phelps Gage was, in days gone by, a correspondent of this department. It now becomes my duty to review this work, and very naturally, since I cannot give unqualified approval, it is not altogether a pleasant task.

Briefly, to the operator and manager I would say if you seek a book purely as a practical help in your practical everyday work "Optic Projection" leaves considerable to be desired. If, on the other hand, you seek a book to add to the library, in which will be found much valuable data, as well as many things of more than passing interest, and a book which can be studied with profit, then I think "Optic Projection" will be found well worth its price, $3.00.

I was particularly pleased with the way the Professors Gage started to deal with spherical aberration in lenses, though disappointed in their not having carried the explanation of its results far enough.

In so far as it deals with the moving picture projector the book is of small practical value to the operator or manager. There is valuable data, however, on the electric arc, accompanied by some very interesting photographs. The action of light through lenses is dealt with at considerable length and, taken by and long, the operator will make no mistake in adding the book to his library. Its main fault is the same we find in all the books gotten out by men who however learned they may be, are not practical moving picture operators—have not served an actual apprenticeship in a moving picture theater machine room. They do not realize what it is the operator and manager wants; they are unable to separate the non-essential from the essential and commit the error of giving prominence to the thing that, from the operator's point of view, is unimportant, and condensing into a paragraph the seemingly simple thing which is, from the operator's and manager's point of view, deserving of many pages.

To show how non-practical operator authors will err, on page 422, paragraph 589, the following occurs: "Rule for setting or timing the shutter. If the streak or travel ghost appears above the letters of the title, the shutter is too late, turn it slightly forward on the shaft."

Now, the practical operator knows that this direction would only be correct for shutters running in a certain direction, but some shutters cut the light from above while others cut it below, and the direction which would be right for one would be exactly wrong for the other.

Another thing: In many cases "Optic Projection" uses the metric system, usually accompanied by the English equivalent, and this is, I believe, not a very desirable practice from the operator's view point. When the English equivalent is not given it is quite confusing.

In closing, I repeat: My advice to operators is, purchase the book, not as a practical help in your practical work, but purely as an addition to your library. It contains much of value and the price is very reasonable for a well-bound book of that size.

New Union Formed.

A. J. Walden, Union City, Tennessee, writes:

It is sometimes since I wrote our department, but here goes. Enclosed find twenty-five cents for a question booklet to add to my library. I am the proud possessor of the Hawkins set, the Hawkins Electric Dictionary, and, best of all, your Handbooks. Projection here is improving slowly, thanks to yourself and the Moving Picture World. The stage employes have organized a local, known as 582 I. A. T. S. E., with eight members, and, of course, I at once fell in line, but a provisional charter was the best we could get with that number of men. I have been giving the carbons made by the National Carbon Company a thorough trial for the past sixty days and find them to be very excellent indeed. In fact, I think they are superior to the imported article. Why could we not have had these all the time?

For the very simple reason, Brother Walden, that it is difficult for an American manufacturer to compete with the foreign manufacturer, since foreign labor is very cheap, and the transportation charges do not amount to much. The foreign manufacturer can actually make carbons, ship them half way around the world, pay import duty, and still sell them as cheap or cheaper than can the American manufacturer. I am glad to know that you are organized. My compliments to 582 and its members. It isn't the kind of charter you have, but the use you make of your organization that counts.

Johnson and Dobson Get Good Positions.

From Toronto, Canada, comes the following:

I presume, Brother Richardson, you will be pleased to know that two of your aforetime correspondents, Johnston and Dobson of this city, are working together in a new house which has just opened. Johnston secured the position of chief operator; Dobson is his assistant. The house is the Photodrome, located in the heart of the city, seating 400. It has a very large operating room, with almost perfect machine positions. The equipment is two motor-driven Powers Six A machines. There are large air vents and, in short, it is probably the best operating room in the city. The screen is of plaster, outlined in black, with an outside border of brown, which gradually dissolves into the tan wall color. Brother Johnston was in New York City recently and tells me he had the pleasure of meeting you, as well as Brother James of Camden. I believe that Johnston and Dobson will pull off some stunts in projection with their new equipment. If they can't do it nobody here can, as they are both bugs on the subject.

I am glad to know that Brothers Johnston and Dobson have secured good positions, because they are progressive men who have the right dope and the correct ideas. They are a credit to the Toronto union. I am sure that the majority of Toronto men are progressive, too. There is, of course, as in other cities, a certain leavening of the dog-in-the-manger type. They are honest, however, or at least it would be uncharitable to believe otherwise, but, also, they are sadly mistaken, and unfortunately their error operates to hold things back to some extent—to prevent or retard the progress of the profession of operating.

My compliments to Brothers Johnston and Dobson, and to the other Toronto men, be they progressive or otherwise. I am broad-minded enough not to blame the opposition and to recognize the fact that some of the things which we now recognize as the finest in the world met with bitter opposition in their beginning. As a matter of fact, at its inception the public school system met the bitterest kind of opposition. Those who opposed it put up some very plausible arguments, even as those who oppose the dissemination of knowledge of projection put up some apparently plausible arguments, but the man who would today oppose the public school system would probably be examined as to his sanity, and a few years hence the operator who opposes the education of the operator or the spread of knowledge of projection will also be considered at least being rather "queer."

Light Ray Action.

John Griffiths, Ansonia, Connecticut, says:

Page 1072, November 21st issue, in the article entitled "More Optical Dope," you ask further enlightenment as to my meaning. You say that it would be absurd to assume that the rays from the picture come to a focus before entering the lens. But that is precisely what I mean nevertheless. Now, on the face of it, it seems impossible for the rays from a flat surface, such as a picture screen, to come to a focus without the aid of the lens, but when we consider that the rays are reflected in all directions, not only from the screen as a whole, but from each minute portion of the same, we see that even a pin head held in any part of the auditorium receives rays from every portion of the picture screen. Now, these rays, which have their converging point at the pin head, must begin to diverge at this point on account of the wide base from which they come, and it is thus we get "pin head photography." There is a point in front of the lens which coincides with the focus of the front factor of the lens, and all rays passing through this point are projected through the lens to the film in the aperture, and it is only through that small point that rays reflected back from the curtain can reach the film in the aperture, hence we get a sharp image of the picture. It is thus that reflected light, diffused light, or any source of light the direction of which is not controlled by mirrors, lenses, etc., will find a passage through the lens through the point of focus. I may be wrong in surmising that this is the essential difference between photography and projection; that in projection we force the light through the lens in a certain direction, whereas with photography it finds a natural way through the invisible point called focus.

Well, I am not going to comment on this very much. I am publishing it mainly by reason of the fact that questions of this kind tend to make us think, to bring out new points, and to broaden our knowledge of light action. What Brother Griffiths says with regard to the pin-head, and pin hole photography is quite true; also it is quite well known. But I am not at all certain that the same thing applies with relation to the front focus of the projection lens, because there are certain other factors which enter, and their study is interesting. For instance: granting that the rays which strike the pin hole point of front focus will pass on back through the lens and be projected to the film, still that assumption does not clear the matter up at all, because of the fact that other rays from the screen are striking the whole surface of the lenses, and rays from every infinitesimal portion of the screen are striking every infinitesimal portion of the lens, and very naturally they will pass on back through the lens. If your point of invisible focus was really a hole in the opaque screen which cut off all the other rays, then I would say, right; but, as a matter of fact, nothing of that kind occurs, and if only the rays which meet at the point of focus pass through the lens, then, in the language of our Hibernian friend, phat th' divil becomes of the rays that strike the front surface of the lens itself. Your explanation of this particular proposition is ingenious, Friend Griffiths, but I personally don't think it quite explains. For that reason you are cordially invited to explain your theory a little further.

How About It?

A. W. Turner, East Templeton, Massachusetts, contributes the following:

Attached is diagram of a system I proposed to our manager for the outdoor place where I operated last summer. He did not think I knew what I was talking about, and I want your opinion. I find I can get a special transformer which, with the three-wire system, would give either 60 or 120 volts. I proposed to connect the lighting system across the two outside wires, and thus get 120 volts the same as was used in former years, and which would be all right for the motors and incandescent lamps; then I would use one outside wire and the neutral for the projector, which would give me 60 volts, that being what I think you recommend. As the light company would put in as small a transformer as could possibly carry the load, I have shown the single-blade, double-throw switch which would throw the projection circuit over to the other side and thus save the transformer from over heating. Our manager did not think he could afford a compensarc, as there were not more than fifty nights in a season, so I worked out this scheme. The company would furnish the transformer, of course.

Certainly the thing would work out all right, and by using the 60-volt side you would save wattage equal to 120-60=60 volts times amperes at the arc, as against 120 volts through resistance, but you would have to have a transformer large enough to carry your projection arc on one side, and, inasmuch as you would be compelled to use at least 40 amperes to get anything like good illumination, that would be 60×40=2400 watts. You would, of course, have to use resistance enough to consume the difference between 60 and 35, 35 being the a. c. arc voltage, therefore you would still be wasting 25×40=1000 watts in resistance, still assuming the amperage to be 40. I see no reason why your scheme would not work very well indeed if the transformer is large enough, and, as I before said, you would save considerable. As against an economizer you would still waste 1 K. W. multiplied by hours per day multiplied by days multiplied by price per K. W. hour during the season.

Brother Turner then goes on to say that a superintendent of a high tension plant, who is a graduate of M. I. T. (whatever that is), told him that on alternating current, under the conditions laid down in question 56, if one took hold of one of the wires of a. c., one would get a decided kick.

Very possibly that is true. I do not know, but if you will look at question 56 again you will see that under the conditions it could not possibly be a. c., because I distinctly said if you pick up a "positive" or a "negative," and you could not do that with a. c., because each wire is alternately positive and negative a great many times a second. Of course, you could hardly find d. c., wires charged at 10,000 volts, but the question was only a theoretical one anyhow.

OPERATORS Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

420 Pages Illustrated

By F. H. Richardson

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

OLIVE AND THE BURGLAR (Edison), Jan. 5.—The seventh of the "Olive's Opportunities" series. A pretentious picture of melodramatic nature, containing some powerful action, including a thrilling chase. This is a well made picture and is one of the best of the series. It is worth seeing.

THE GALLANTRY OF JIMMY ROGERS (Essanay), Jan. 5.—Adapted from The Smart Set Magazine. This picture is a fine little comedy. One would think that it was of a serious nature in the first scenes, but a surprise at the end is greeted with uproarious laughter. The picture is one of the best and will grace any program. It is well made and acted.

THE WAITRESS AND THE BOOBS (Kalem), Jan. 5.—A hilariously funny comedy, concerning how two fakirs succeeded in hoodwinking almost the entire inhabitants of a backwood's town; then left them to their fate. This is a splendid release and will make any audience laugh.

THE NEW EDITOR (Lubin), Jan. 5.—The plot of this comedy takes place in a newspaper office, concerning an editor and his troubles. It is quite amusing and is well acted. An average comedy release. On the same reel with "They Looked Alike."

THEY LOOKED ALIKE (Lubin), Jan. 5.—A comedy of the rough and tumble order, including characters made up of tramps and burlesque policemen, with some very comical chase scenes. It certainly gets over for laughs. On the same reel with "The New Editor."

A MILITANT SCHOOLMA'AM (Selig), Jan. 5.—A western picture play written by E. R. Coffin and produced by Tom Mix, who also plays one of the parts. It contains in its plot comedy and dramatic interest. Leo D. Maloney, as the schoolma'am, makes a great hit, dressed in feminine attire. The acting is well done and the photography is adequate.

EXPENSIVE ECONOMY (Edison), Jan. 6.—A comedy burlesque picture, using as the theme of the plot the "tipping" question, or the man who refused to tip. It is quite an original idea and the characters play their parts with intelligence. It is most laughable to see the trouble the non-tipper gets mixed up in. It is a well produced offering.

THE FABLE OF THE CITY GRAFTER AND THE UNPROTECTED RUBES (Essanay), Jan. 6.—Another of George Ade's irresistible comedies, with the scenes laid in a country town, where three city con-men migrate to bunco the inhabitants, whom they imagine are rubes and easy. It is most interesting to see how the rubes put one over on them and get their coin. The scenes are full of human nature. This is one of the best of the George Ade series.

IN THE LINE OF DUTY (Selig), Jan. 6.—Beautiful scenes which have been admirably photographed embellish this picture. The plot contains interesting and exciting material. Marion Warner and William Stowell play the leading parts. The plot reminds one of the Mary Fuller series. Miss Warner's plot is that of a society editor on a newspaper, and it is very interesting to see how she lands a scoop, also the society burglar. She does excellent and natural work. The support is adequate. Exhibitors will find this release a good one.

BILLY'S WAGER (Vitagraph), Jan. 6.—A very funny comedy by L. F. Gottschalk, produced by Lee Beggs. Wherein a young man makes a wager at a social function, he being wealthy, that he can start out penniless and earn his own living for one month without help. He wins the bet, but he meets with many stern adventures. Billy Quirk has the star part, supported by Constance Talmadge, Temple Saxe, Jack Brawn and others. It is very laughable, especially where he is refused admission into his own house, on account of his disreputable appearance. A splendid comedy picture.

PLAYTHINGS OF FATE (Biograph), Jan. 7.—A more than satisfying picture, beautifully produced. It contains many things that are unusual in its construction and the characters are all of a high class. The cast is as follows: Charles H. Mailes, Augusta Anderson, Katherine Lee and Kate Bruce. Little Katherine Lee does some beautiful work as the little child, and adds greatly to the merit of the picture, although the entire cast deserve mention for splendid work, as also does the director and cameraman. An unusual offering.

THE BATTLE OF SNAKEVILLE (Essanay), Jan. 7.—Slippery Slim and Mustang Pete certainly put up a great comedy battle in this picture, assisted by others, with potatoes and tomatoes, and not only bombard themselves but the sheriff and almost the entire population of Snakeville. Finally the fire hose is brought into operation and the battle is ended. This is a great laugh producer.

ALIAS GREASED LIGHTNING (MinA), Jan. 7.—Another of the adventures of Count Verace, which is filled with cracking good comedy. He has bad and good luck. Is mistaken by the police for "Greased Lightning," a desperate crook. After inheriting a fortune, he elopes with his best girl. They escape their captors and there is a chase which is full of thrills and ludicrous situations. The punch is the explosion of a powder mill. This is a splendid comedy, worth seeing.

THE MAN, THE MISSION AND THE MAID (Vitagraph), Jan. 7.—Written by George Randolph Chester and produced by Theodore Marston. This is a very entertaining story with a plot full of beautiful little episodes, that the director has handled splendidly, and the ending relieves a suspense regarding the fate of the girl. Dorothy Kelly and James Morrison have the leads, supported by a splendid cast. The characters are all human beings. The acting, photography and the settings are above criticism.

THE BARRIER BETWEEN (Biograph), Jan. 8.—This is rather an unusual story, the theme of which is not the most wholesome, but it is handled with such delicacy by the director and actors that it does not offend. It contains quite a little suspense. The cast is made up of Franklin Ritchie, Isabel Rea, W. J. Butler, Curtis Cooksey and Hector V. Sarno. It is finely produced in every respect, regarding detail. An average offering.

PUT ME OFF AT WAYVILLE (Kalem), Jan. 8.—A Marshal Neilan comedy which contains originality, triteness and many things which are wide open to criticism. However, it gets over for many laughs. The scenes are principally laid on board a train and are very strenuous. The acting is well done, as is the photography. It is a very good comedy.

LOVE'S SAVAGE HATE (Lubin), Jan. 8.—A story of Mexican love and hatred, which is filled with scenes of bloodshed and carnage. The characters are made up of Mexican rebels, brigands, etc., which in the closing scene annihilate each other in an awful battle, in which dynamite is used. The redeeming qualities are the strenuous work of the actors, scenery and photography. Melodrama lovers no doubt will enjoy this offering.

THE STRENUOUS LIFE (Selig), Jan. 8.—An exceptionally funny story, written by Roy L. McCardell. It is a burlesque on the feature thrillers. Lyllian Brown Leighton, Elsie Greeson, Lee Morris and William Scott handle the characters with admirable conception. It is well worth seeing.

THE SMOKING OUT OF BELLA BUTTS (Vitagraph), Jan. 8.—This is a rattling good comedy, written by Fred R. Ashfield and produced by George D. Baker. The cast is Flora Finch, who plays Bella Butts, Hughie Mack, Betty Grey, Jack Brown, Jay Dwiggins, George Stevens, Edwina Robbins and others. The women of Hicksville, headed by Bella Butts, inaugurate a crusade against the smoking habit. It is all very funny, particularly to see how the women succeed in getting themselves into trouble, especially Bella Butts. A fine laugh maker.

A SAFE ADVENTURE (Biograph), Jan. 9.—A comedy which certainly made the audience laugh. It contains some advice to those who sell their safes to be sure and empty them before so doing. But had Mr. Bond done so, there would not have been anything to laugh at. On the same reel with "A Fashion Shop."

A FASHION SHOP (Biograph), Jan. 9.—On the same reel with the above. While not quite so mirth provoking as the previous one, it contains some funny situations. It is quite original in its conception and any audience will enjoy it.

THE GIRL AT THE KEY (Edison), Jan. 9.—One of the series of the life of "The Girl Who Earns Her Living." While but an ordinary release, it contains quite a few thrills. Agnes, the telegraph operator, is saved by her sweetheart from being crushed by a train. Afterwards she learns that bandits have cut the wires and are going to hold up the night express. She gets on a hand-car and after some exciting incidents, arrives in time to warn the train crew of their danger. A fair offering.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE CLAIM JUMPERS (Essanay), Jan. 9.—Featuring G. M. Anderson as a prospector. It is not quite so strong an offering as some of the Broncho Billy's series, but there is some fine scenery, a race in a stage coach and a scheme which has been made by three claim jumpers, to oust Broncho entirely fails. A mild release.

THE LEAP FROM THE WATER TOWER (Kalem), Jan. 9.—This picture drama has been reviewed at length by Hanford C. Judson, in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 201, issue of Jan. 9, 1915.

FEEL MY MUSCLE (Lubin), Jan. 9.—A comedy filled with such ridiculously funny situations that the audience greeted it with continuous laughter. It concerns a vaudeville team, who fail to make a success, and the endeavors of the husband to make good are the cause of all the merriment. A good comedy offering.

FURTHER ADVENTURES OF SAMMY ORPHEUS (Selig), Jan. 9.—Instead of charming away rats and children as did the Pied Piper of Hamelin, Sammy with his flutes subdues lions, charms a pirate and his crew, and when a Sultana has him put in a den of lions he disarms them of their ferocity. After many adventures Sammy returns to his sweetheart. Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton are the principals and do some good work. The scenes are beautifully photographed and altogether it is a very good release.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO. 3, 1915 (Selig), Jan. 11.—Mummer's parade at Philadelphia, welcoming the New Year; bomb wrecks mystic temple of Occultists at San Francisco; holding of winter pageant on mountain side, Legend of the Adirondacks; Troops sail for the east, via Panama canal, showing the U. S. transport Buford; Charles Whitman inaugurated as Governor at Albany. War scenes: Belgian troops held in Holland, building their own camp; food being prepared for captives in camp kitchen; shells from German fleet batter towns on English coast, roofs of many private buildings are damaged, Scarborough lighthouse is struck, damage to Grand Hotel, a popular summer resort, etc.

THE FATES AND FLORA FOURFLUSH (The Temple of Bhosh) (Vitagraph), Jan. 11.—Part two of the massive Ten-billion dollar Vitagraph mystery series. Produced by Wally Van, featuring Clara Kimball Young, supported by Charles Brown, L. Rogers Lytton, Temple Saxe, George Stevens and many others. The villain still pursues her—and her lover. This is one of the best parodies produced on the screen. There is a thrill every second and a laugh every thrill. This series is a great conception.

PATSY BOLIVAR SERIES NO. 3 (PATSY AT COLLEGE) (Lubin), Jan. 11.—Patsy determines to go to college, which he does, where he gets into all sorts of scrapes and receives a broken leg, in his first game of football. Finally he is fired for helping to place a cow in the president's library. Then back to the farm, where we see him ploughing in spite of his game leg. This is an excellent comedy picture, and will make good in any theater.

SWEEDIE'S SUICIDE (Essanay), Jan 11.—Sweedie is jilted by her sweetheart, captain of the police and decides to commit suicide. This is an original comedy and thoroughly enjoyable. Sweedie does not commit suicide but she thinks she does, when she wakes up she cleans out the police force and the whole town as usual. Very funny in a rough way.

A SUPERFLUOUS BABY (Edison), Jan. 11.—One of the Wood B. Wedd series, written by Mark Swan, featuring Arthur Houseman and William Wadsworth. It is a continuation of the strife between Wood B. and his partner, for the love of a girl, and shows how each takes advantage of every opportunity offered to get the best of the other. There is a baby and its irate mother mixed up in the plot, who make it pleasant for everybody. This is a very good comedy and can be recommended as a laugh getter.

THE GIRL HE BROUGHT HOME (Biograph), Jan. 11.—A dramatic picture with a clean and interesting plot, containing a pretty love story. There is considerable comedy obtaining, which gets over for hearty laughter. It is beautifully produced photographically and is finely acted by the following cast: J. McDermott, Kate Bruce, Viola Smith, J. W. Butler, Irene Howley and Irma Dawkins. It was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

Licensed Specials

MONEY (Biograph), Jan. 5.—A two-reel picture, adapted from Bulwer Lytton's play of the same name, with a plot that bristles with many complications and full of strong action, and holds the closest attention of the audience. The acting is splendidly done by the following cast: Thornton Cole, George Robinson, A. C. Marston, Vivian Prescott, Edward Cecil, Marie Newton, Alan Hale and Ivan Christy. A first-class production. This will be especially interesting to old timers.

TWO WOMEN (Vitagraph), Jan. 5.—This three-part picture was produced at the Vitagraph theater, Broadway, New York, and made quite a hit. It is a production that will grace any program. It is embellished with beautiful scenery which is extraordinarily photographed.

COMRADE KITTY (Lubin), Jan. 6.—A two-act drama. The complications are astonishing at times. It is a combination of business transactions—rival firms, reaching out after a tremendous order, mixed with a strong love element. It is a splendidly made picture and the director has manipulated the scenes with a master hand. A good handcar scene is involved and an automobile wreck. Taken all in all the picture will make good in any house.

THE SCORPION'S STING (Kalem), Jan. 6.—This two-part picture has been reviewed at length by Hanford C. Judson and can be found in The Moving Picture World, page 1845, issue of Dec. 26, 1914.

A WAR BABY (Lubin), Jan. 7.—A most superior two-part picture of the Civil War time. Its characters are made up of the Northern and Southern armies. It carries along a beautiful love story, involving complications that are thrilling in the extreme. A night battle scene pertains, which is a wonderful piece of photography. C. M. Greene, the author, has built a powerful story which is magnificently directed. The cast is made up of Lilie Leslie, Justina Huff, Clarence J. Elmer, Joseph Smiley and William Cahill, who cover themselves with glory. It is deserving of a showing in any house.

THE MAGNATE OF PARADISE (Edison), Jan. 8.—A picture drama adapted from the novel of Mary Imlay Taylor, in two parts. The theme concerns politics and it has some very strong and intense dramatic action. There is a fight and a pretentious mob scene. The acting is well done by a large cast. Its intensity and its suspense holds the attention of the audience to the strong finish, which is satisfactory. Robert Brower plays the title role and Augustus Phillips and Gertrude Vallon are the sweethearts. It is a picture that will make good anywhere.

SURGEON WARREN'S WARD (Essanay), Jan. 8.—A two-part picture drama of army life, with scenes laid in a barrack. It is filled with complications of love and intrigue, which are quite thrilling. Richard C. Travers and Ruth Stonehouse have the leading parts, assisted by a splendid cast. The characters are shifted in the last film to the Northwest, where some strong acting is accomplished. There are some beautifully photographed scenes. This will entertain those who like sensations.

A DAUGHTER OF ISRAEL (Vitagraph), Jan. 9.—This two-part drama has been reviewed at length by Mr. George Blaisdell, in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 1851, issue of Dec. 26, 1914.

THE ADVENTURE AT BRIARCLIFF (Kalem), Jan. 11.—A two-act romantic comedy picture, featuring Marguerite Courtot and Tom Moore. It is quite novel in its make-up. It is a story of a cheeky young man, who trespasses and pitches his tent on the grounds belonging to two young ladies. There is quite an amount of wholesome comedy in the plot and some beautiful scenes which are well photographed. The acting is up to the mark. The audience seemed to thoroughly enjoy it.

THE OLD CODE (Selig), Jan. 11.—A two-reel drama, written by James Oliver Curwood. There is much melodrama and sensation engrafted in this plot. The scenes are on the frontier in the forests, and the characters are typical of the location. There is a thrilling hand to hand fight for the love of a pretty girl. There are some unreasonable things involved in the plot, but as a whole it is very strong. The acting is well done and the photography excellent. It is an enticing release, and makes good.

Independent

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS No. 90, 1914 (Pathe), Dec. 30.—This number of Pathe's Daily News contains some especially interesting items. Among them are: Rich Newsboys of Detroit shout "extry" in Detroit; Panoramic view of U. S. border guarded by troops; and scenes on the battlefields of Europe.

MUTUAL WEEKLY No. 1, Jan. 7.—One of the interesting items of this issue of the Mutual Weekly is a view of the Roosevelt Dam in Arizona. The Canadian soldiers in training for the European battlefields, and the posing of Leginska, the famous pianist, for the Mutual camera are among other items of interest.

CHECK NO. 130 (Princess), Jan. 8.—A good screen story, worked out in a creditable manner. Muriel Ostriche and Boyd Marshal play the lovers. The businessman's wife sees the check for funds loaned the stenographer and becomes jealous. The development is natural and convincing and leads up to a dramatic close.

AN INSIDE TIP (Thanhouser), Jan. 10.—This story of a young reporter who wishes to expose a gang of river pirates has a rather mechanical plot. He is captured and bound by the gang, but saved through the efforts of the girl. The offering is fairly strong.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL, No. 52 (Reliance), Jan. 11.—This brings to a close effectively this series. In it Margaret reviews many of her experiences during the past year and falls in love with a new lover with whom she finds promise of future happiness. In the closing scenes she bids good-bye to the observers.

THE SPIRIT OF GIVING (Beauty), Jan. 12.—In this number Joseph Harris plays the part of a close-fisted old man who learns to be charitable after dreaming that he is dead. In spirit form he visits many poor people and awakens a changed man. The plot of this is very much like that of Dickens' Christmas Carol and is quite familiar in most of the situations.

PROBATION (Majestic), Jan. 12.—A story in which the effects of evil companionship are brought out. The bad boy grows up and commits a crime, for which he is sent to the penitentiary. He learns of a plot to escape, warns the warden to no purpose and afterward follows one of the convicts in the break for freedom. The final scenes are in his own home. The story has no particular points of merit and makes an average release.

THE BLACK GHOST BANDIT (American), Jan. 13. It cannot be said that the theme of this picture is a particularly pleasant one, although considerable pleasure can be derived from viewing the production. Nor is the moral of obtaining money dishonestly, no matter what the motive, a wise one to present on the screen. The film presents many beautiful exteriors of western type.

THE TERROR OF THE MOUNTAINS (Reliance), Jan. 13.—A Western number which gets a rather conventional start, but works up to a dramatic struggle in a cabin between the villain and the girl. The photography is good and the work of Florence Crawford and W. E. Lowry does a great deal to strengthen the ordinary quality of the plot.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 148 (Universal), Jan. 6.—Scenes from American parades, festivals and sporting events, and good views of the English coast cities raided by the Germans are shown in this number.

AN OUTLAW'S HONOR (Nestor), Jan. 16.—Grace Cunard has written a fine little comedy plot in this number. The outlaw and sheriff rescue a girl bitten by a rattlesnake. The sheriff leaves the girl with the outlaw in a freight car while he goes for a doctor. The developments are amusing and full of interest. A novel situation, well acted and generally pleasing.

ROMANCE IN BEAR CREEK (Eclair), Jan. 17.—A Western feud story. The cast includes Marie Reynolds, Lindsey J. Hall and Stanley Walpole. The hero carries the girl home after her fall and later she saves him from her father and brother. This abounds in picturesque scenes and makes a good Western number.

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS (L-KO), Jan. 17.—An eccentric number in which the undersheriff makes love to the sheriff's wife. The latter scenes, in which a bear invades a bath house and later chases the bathers up a telephone pole, are quite amusing.

ON DANGEROUS GROUND (Imp), Jan. 18.—A business story, with Wm. Garwood and Violet Mersereau in the leads. The hero believes he has killed his employer's son in a holdup, but the latter turns up unhurt. Later both hero and son are unjustly suspected of theft from the office safe, but another clerk proves guilty. The plot is fairly strong, but not in any way exceptional. Photography fair.

THE HICKTOWN RIVALS (Joker), Jan. 18.—An eccentric comedy number with a fair plot. The character makeups are good, consisting of country town folks, but the story is not as entertaining as it might have been.

THE DEAR OLD HYPOCRITE (Big U), Jan. 19.—In this number Murdock MacQuarrie appears as a wealthy uncle who pretends to be deaf and out of funds when he comes to live with his niece. The theme is a familiar one; but the photography is good and the story proves quite pleasing.

WHEN CUPID CAUGHT A THIEF (Nestor), Jan. 19.—A good comedy burlesque, with Eddie Lyons, Victoria Forde and Lee Moran in the cast. The story concerns the loss of a valuable ruby necklace at a ball. The scenes are very enjoyable and nicely photographed throughout.

EVERY INCH A HERO (L-KO), Jan. 20.—A well-photographed eccentric number, with a sort of Desperate Desmond villain. This works up quite a lot of amusement and is better than the average offering of the kind.

SIX MONTHS TO LIVE (Rex), Jan. 21.—In this Ben Wilson appears as a young millionaire who believes his health is badly affected. In the office boy's story he becomes a drug fiend. Even though intended as a joke, the action is too repellant to prove the best form of entertainment and for this reason it is not an appealing film.

WHEN THE DEACON SWORE (Nestor), Jan. 22.—Another successful comedy number by Al E. Christie. This features a barn dance and basket party. Lee Moran plays the part of a deacon who makes an unsuccessful effort to capture the belle of the village. Good photography and an entertaining yarn.

SARGENT JIM'S HORSE (Kaybee), Jan. 22.—A fine one-reel war story, with poetical subtitles, showing the love of an army mount for its young master. There is plenty of stirring action, with shells bursting and horses faling, during the battle scenes. The story reaches a close that is at the same time pleasing and pathetic.

THE MAN WHO DIED (Kaybee), Jan. 22.—A story of the Canadian Northwest, rather obvious in plot, but with a good motive behind it. The leading character is a bandit who pretends to be a minister. He continues this pretense until his soul awakens and he becomes a good man. The action and photography are good and the settings pleasing.

THE MOUNTAIN DORE, FRANCE (Eclectic-Pathe), January.—A beautiful but short subject of architectural and scenic values.

CLOSE CROPPED CLIPPINGS (Eclectic-Pathe), January.—On the same reel with "The Mountain Dore," this is a farily acceptable bit of eccentric comedy. It has at least the quality of being inoffensive, and would be considered by many audiences very amusing.

THE BOOB'S RACING CAREER (Kriterion), January.—A single-reel farce made by the Thistle studio and showing scenes from a real automobile race. The scheme, it can hardly be called a plot, for it is too slight, shows the Boob who wants to be thought a daredevil paying a driver to run his car in the great race. The girls all cheer when his car comes in first, but his joy is short lived for the real driver demands his money and lets the cat out of the bag. It is not without its amusing things, but is not a very substantial funmaker.

HIS DOLL WIFE (United-Warner-Grandin), Jan. 11.—A refined and thoroughly enjoyable picture, presenting a strain of legitimate comedy. Ethel Grandin plays the role of the Doll Wife, and plays it well.

HICKVILLE'S DIAMOND MYSTERY (United-Warner-Luna), January.—Some good farce comedy work is exhibited here. Augustus Carney is a welcome member of the cast, and is one of the disappointed ones who are taken in by the unscrupulous agent who sells a worthless diamond in pretense that it is one for which a reward has been offered to the one who returns it.

SUCH A BUSINESS (United-Warner-Luna), January.—An incident of dentistry forms the larger part of the basis of this picture. The production is somewhat unpleasant inasmuch as realistic performances of teeth pulling are not entertaining. The picture has been developed along farce comedy lines.

THE MIXUP (United-Warner-Starlight), January.—With a theme developed in farce comedy style, and featuring Dallas Welford, there will be found considerable amusement in this film. It presents a funny mixup of babies, and the only jarring note is where an automobile is seen to run into a baby carriage which has started on its way downhill alone.

LADY AUDLEY'S SECRET (United-Warner-Superba), January.—A burlesque evidently on "Lady Audrey's Secret." This picture is not especially worthy, nor does it particularly attract adverse criticism. In fact it would be acceptable to many audiences.

A NOVELTY IN SERVANTS (United-Warner-Superba), January.—On the same reel with "Haunted," this offering in farce comedy has plenty of the laugh-getting quality, and makes an acceptable latter half of a split reel.

HAUNTED (United-Warner-Superba), January.—A comedy essentially of the eccentric comedy type, and sure to please the average audience. It is a remarkable study in "nightmares."

TARGET PRACTICE (United-Warner-Superba), January.—On the same reel with "Such a Picnic," but scarcely in the same class with its companion. It is, however, a cleverly worked trick picture; but too much shooting and an incoherent plot are conducive to adverse criticism.

SUCH A PICNIC (United-Warner-Superba), January.—A fairly acceptable farce comedy on the same reel with the above, and suitable to the average audience.

BLOWN UP (Kriterion), January.—A single-reel farce made by the Punch studio. It is well acted, but the scheme is old style and not wholly fresh; yet the handling of the piece by players and director make it a fair offering of entertainment. The central idea is a liquid that if one drinks of it and blows upon another that man or woman will have to stand just as he was for an hour. A tramp is the picture's best character and, being chased from pillar to post, has his revenge when he comes upon a bottle of the liquid.

Independent Specials

THE MASTER KEY (Universal Special), Jan. 4.—Eighth episode. Kane acquaints Ruth with affairs at the mine at the beginning of this number. Wilkerson and his co-conspirators send her a forged note and induce her to go with Kane in an auto. Kane saves her from their clutches; some good work is being done by Daddy Manley in this part. Dore is released on bail, after being held for Pell's death, and there is an exciting auto chase. The missing deeds are the cause of this, having been found by an ashman in the alley. This continues the interest, but contains no scenes of exceptional moment.

A SMALL TOWN GIRL (Rex), Jan. 17.—A three-reel number, written by Beatrice Van and produced by Allan Divan. Pauline Bush is featured as a country girl lured to the city by a visiting stranger, who soon deserts her. He returns later, after the baby is born, but she spurns him and goes to her country lover. This is appealingly acted and well photographed, the chief drawback being that all of the situations are very familiar. In a production of this length there should have been more novelty. At the same time the story is connected and well developed.

FATHER'S THREE (Victor), Jan. 18.—A pretty two-reel story, based on a familiar theme. In this case three bachelors, instead of one, adopt a five-year-old girl and place her in care of their housekeeper. The scenes in the opening reel are amusing. Later in life the girl grows up and offers her hand to the one of the three who brings her the finest birthday present. One of them brings her long-lost mother. The cast is pleasing, Harry Meyers and Rosemary Theby playing the leads. This has a very pleasing tone and should have strong general appeal.

SMUGGLERS' ISLAND (Gold Seal), Jan. 19.—A two-reel story of the California coast. The hero is a young fisherman who has numerous adventures with a gang of smugglers. Francis Ford and Grace Cunard play the leads. The incidents in the yarn are full of action but rather conventional in type. The scenes on the boat were most interesting. This makes a fair offering.

THE LONE GAME (Eclair), Jan. 20.—An unusually good Western number, with a surprise feature at the close. Fred Hearne, Edna Payne and Norbert A. Myles play the leading roles. The scenes are taken in Arizona and the story is typical of that country. Detective Burton, the hero of the story, rounds up the mysterious bandit by a clever ruse; he turns out to be the father of the girl with whom he is in love. Suspicion is cleverly thrown upon the assistant sheriff. The photography is generally good.

THEIR ISLAND OF HAPPINESS (Big U), Jan. 21.—A two-reel number featuring Edna Maison and Ray Gallegher as a young married couple. He becomes attracted by a neighbor and his wife leaves him to become a nurse in a leper colony. Their meeting later is quite dramatic, the wife planning to expose him to the disease as a matter of revenge and then relenting. In the end both return to the island. This is a good example of the test that is sometimes made upon the love of man and wife; the presentation is fairly strong. Photography good.

THE HOUSE OF FEAR (Imp), Jan. 22.—A three-reel offering, written by Stuart Paton, with Hobart Henley, Frances Nelson, Howard Crampton, Alan Holubar and others in the cast. This is a fine example of a weird type of story. It begins immediately after the funeral of the girl's father. The will is read and she inherits his wealth, except that in case of her death his brother and nephew shall get it. The story concerns the efforts of this latter pair to frighten the girl to death, employing the half-crazed caretaker to do this. The latter makes a grotesque and horrible appearance and a splendid atmosphere of persecution is maintained throughout the whole production. The hero, of course, saves the girl. The photography is unusually good, likewise the general construction.

OLD PEG-LEG'S WILL (101-Bison), Jan. 23.—A two-reel number written by Grace Cunard which tells a somewhat obvious but entertaining story. The girl heroine, played by Miss Cunard, is repelled by the rough life about her at the Western hotel and runs away, after donning boy's clothes. She comes to the cabin of Old Peg-Leg, a unique character portrayed by Francis Ford. He owns a rich mining property and makes the girl his heir. There is considerable action in the last reel, all of the scenes being well-photographed.

THE STILL ON SUNSET MOUNTAIN (Domino), Jan. 21.—A well-photographed two-reel offering, telling the story of a revenue officer in the land where illicit stills are run. He makes love to the daughter of the mountaineer, ruins her and escapes. Later he is lured back to a cave where treasure is supposed to be hidden, and killed. This deals with a familiar subject for pictures, but in a strong, compelling way. The story rises to its gripping end convincingly.

A LUCKY BLOW-OUT (Broncho), Jan. 20.—A famliar type of story opening with country scenes. The daughter of the blind organist sings in the choir. Later she goes to the city and falls in with a fast young woman who tries to lure her into an evil mode of life. The girl goes on an auto trip with her friend and two young men. One of the tires blows out near a church in the country. The girl goes into the church during a meeting and realizes in time what her career is bringing her to. This is not new in subject matter, and makes only a fairly strong production.

RUNAWAY JUNE (Reliance), Jan. 13.—This first instalment of the new serial is artistically handled and promises something rather different in the way of connected screen stories. June is oversensitive on the subject of having to ask her young husband for money. This is the theme of the story, as outlined in the beginning. It will strike many observers as highly ridiculous on the part of the bride, but there is a grain of truth in this attitude. She leaves her husband on the wedding journey, falls in with Blye, the very villainous villain, and her future adventures should prove entertaining. The construction and photography are good, some novel effects being achieved.

THE LOST RECEIPT (Reliance), Jan. 9.—There is contained in this two-reel production a fine lesson on the wisdom of carefully preserving receipts for money paid out. The story of the film is interesting, and has been developed with good judgment. Considerable suspense has been worked into the production, and it is altogether an acceptable subject.

RESTITUTION (American), Jan. 11.—This is a Western subject of the ordinary type, but enjoyable withal. It has been filmed in two reels, and has been attractively staged. The photography is clear and the action smooth. The story contains considerable human interest, and the production would be acceptable on a general program.

THE SPEED KING (Thanhouser), Jan. 12.—A very pleasing two-reel story, written by Philip Lonergan, with Arthur Ashley and Muriel Ostriche in the cast. The son of the auto manufacturer is made the victim of a frame-up in a card game, accused of cheating and shut out of the best society. Only the younger sister of his sweetheart remains true to him. Later the youth wins in a spirited auto race and his name is cleared of the stigma upon it by a confession of his former valet. This is presented in a lively fashion and the scenes are well-photographed. The hero, of course, marries the younger girl.

THE NEMESIS (Eclectic-Pathe), January.—This is a two-reel production in which a convict released from prison attains an honored position. He is harrassed by a prison comrade to whom he is obliged to give money in order to prevent his divulging his identity. The picture, which is thoroughly interesting and well acted, ends with the death of the shadowing pal in an endeavor to enter his friend's compartment on a train.

THE COVETED HERITAGE (Eclectic-Pathe), January.—A three-reel production of merit made at the Balboa studios. In it an interesting story has been made the most of. Some splendid types have been introduced. The action throughout is good. It contains numerous excellent situations, and particularly praiseworthy is the photographic work, in which have been secured some fine effects.

QUEEN AND ADVENTURER (Eclectic-Pathe), January.—Founded on the story of Mary Tudor, daughter of Henry VIII. of England, who after his death succeeded him to the throne, and in the course of her reign beheaded her favorite, Fabiani. This feature of four reels is a strong tribute to the art of cinematography. It is well cast, splendid in action, costuming, setting and photography. Much could be said at length on the merits of this production.

JOE'S PARTNER, BILL (Kriterian), January.—A two-reel Navajo offering. Its story has an excellent situation and works up not a little interest and this in spite of the fact that the leading juvenile acts but poorly. There is a most spirited fisticuff fight in a barroom in which the picture's fatherly character tackles the villain. This is the real thing and will be noticed. The offering shows very fair staging and directing.

EDWARDS WOULDN'T STAY DEAD.

Now and then in the professional career of an actor-director there occurs a strange situation. He may be playing the part of a politician and while making a campaign speech must dispense instructions to the mob before him. Or it is possible that he be playing the part of a mute, during which interpretation he finds it difficult to talk to his people before the camera. Walter Edwards, the actor-director of the Ince companies, encountered just such a peculiar situation recently during the production of "The Gun-Fighter," a forthcoming release of the New York Motion Picture Corporation.

Walter Edwards Directing a Scene While "Dead."

Mr. Edwards played the title role and was "killed" in the closing scenes. He was not left to lie alone, however, for the script ordered the gang in the grocery store to be present at the obsequies. So Mr. Edwards had to direct the scene, while he lay "dead" on the floor. The accompanying picture, caught by one of the Inceville cameramen, shows the actor-director outlining the scene from his uncomfortable position.

Big Authors With Selig

Many Writers of Distinction Serve That Company—Prompt Consideration the Secret.

THAT the highest priced literary workers in the world contribute to the excellence of the Selig Polyscope Company's pictureplays, is the broad statement made by that concern. The policy of W. N. Selig is that the story is the thing; that thousands of dollars spent for elaborate settings, costumings, and acting, are virtually wasted unless the plot, in other words, the foundation of the entire structure, is strong. Acting upon this policy, the Selig Polyscope Company accepts plot material that is unusual and striking. The reputation of the author is not the prime requisite, it is the story that is essential.

Among the authors whose work has been and is being filmed by the Selig Polyscope Company are: Edwin Balmer, Amelia E. Barr, Rex Beach, Robert Ames Bennett, B. M. Bower, Cyrus Townsend Brady, Gillett Burgess, Winston Churchill, James Oliver Curwood, Leona Dalrymple, Richard Harding Davis, Anna Katherine Green, Zane Grey, O. Henry, Harrison Jewell Holt, Arthur Hornblow, Will M. Hough, Frederic S. Isham, Maibelle Heikes Justice, Alvah Milton Kerr, General Charles King, Harold MacRath, Roy L. McCardell, John A. Moroso, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Randall Parrish, Sir Gilbert Parker, Gilson Willetts, William MacLeod Raine, Opie Reade, James Whitcomb Riley, Mary Roberts Reinhart, Hallie Erminie Rives, Mollie Sewall, Bertrand W. Sinclair, Louis Tracey, Onota Watanna, Ella Wheeler Wilcox. In fact, almost every author of meritorious work seems to submit that work primarily to the Selig Polyscope Company, knowing that prompt consideration, expert judgment, and highest prices, if available, is his.

No expense or labor is spared to provide Selig producers with everything requisite to obtain the most striking and effective results in pictureplay making and the authors who all wish to see the children of their brains faithfully and carefully reproduced, appreciate Selig care and liberality in the production end.

After the books, magazine stories and scenarios submitted by authors are passed upon by the Selig Polyscope editorial department, they are personally read by W. N. Selig, who again goes over the scene plots carefully before placing them in production. He suggests freely, changes in plot or scene, and exercises an individual supervision over the entire output of the various Selig studios. Some pictures, even after having been completed, are kept on the shelves for months before he decides the opportune time to release them.

John F. Pribyl, the editor, is favorably known to all authors as a keen judge of literary merit and a man who believes in prompt acceptances or rejections. He has also been instrumental in discovering and developing new talent.

NOLAN GANE, ACTOR, DIRECTOR, AUTHOR.

Nolan Gane is the youngest director in the business. This well-known juvenile lead of the Thanhouser forces, has just finished the production of a two-reel picture to be called "The Master's Model." Miss Fan Bourke, who has gained a just popularity as a comedienne, plays a straight dramatic part, rising to the full demands of the tense situations in a remarkable manner.

Mr. Gane, besides being an actor and a director, has ability as an author, having written "A Dog's Love," featuring Helen Badgley and the famous Thanhouser collie "Shep."

BRYANT WASHBURN'S NEW YEAR RECEPTION.

Bryant Washburn, the handsome Essanay villain, was the guest of the Crescent Amusement Company at Nashville, Tenn., on New Year's Day. The company, which controls several theaters throughout the south, engaged the great Nashville Hippodrome with the expectation that there would be an immense crowd to see Mr. Washburn, who is one of the Nashville favorites. More than 5,000 persons attended. A special screen was erected to present "The Way of the Woman," in which Mr. Washburn plays the leading part, and the Essanay actor addressed the audience both in the afternoon and evening. A reception was held for him in the Hippodrome, where a vast and enthusiastic throng crowded to shake hands.

President Tony Sudukum and Manager Billy Bordieser left no stone unturned to make the visit an enjoyable one, and they certainly succeeded.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

THE first two weeks of the new year have passed with no remarkable new developments bearing upon the vital interests of the motion picture world. Previous to the close of the old year there were promises from many quarters that "We will have an eye-opener when 1915 gets here." Perhaps sufficient time has not elapsed. The most important event thus far recorded was the submission of the Ohio censorship case to the United States Supreme Court. That the matter has at last reached the place of last resort for decision is especially gratifying to the film men of New York, the home of the National Board of Censorship. Many of them not being cognizant of the amount of time that is necessarily required to get cases before the highest court in the country for argument had concluded that the test had been abandoned and that the solving of the all important constitutional question would remain unsolved. New York is unanimous in its indorsement of the system of censorship it has under the co-operation of the National Board of Censorship and the Bureau of Licenses and a litigation that keeps the life of that system in doubt naturally makes the case now under consideration one of as much import to the motion picture people of the city and state as it is to those of Ohio. Of course, owing to the great number of cases the high court always has in hand, several months may elapse before a decision will be rendered, but there is gratification in knowing that the case is now on its last lap.

* * *

Some film men were discussing the probable course of events that will follow the determination of the suit after learning that the final arguments had taken place. Opinions vary on this point. Some think that a decision adverse to the motion picture people will terminate the existence of the National Board of Censors and renew a State Board. There are others who claim the greatest interest in the matter hinges upon a decision favorable to the picture people. They hold that an adverse decision will in no way affect the New York system. It will not require the establishment of a State Board here, dealing only with the existence of the Ohio State Board. New York will have the privilege of continuing its present system, and its indorsement is so overwhelmingly strong by the motion picture interests and a majority of the public that has interested itself in the censorship question that there is but a slight chance for that privilege to be taken away by any State measure. A suggestion by some that the present system could be continued even in the event of the creation of a State Board was brushed aside as, in such an event, the National Board of Censorship would become useless and an unnecessary expense to the film producers. The suggestion was prompted by a remark of an exhibitor to the effect that we would rather have the censorship of the present board than that of a board of political creation. He thought the former is actuated by more sincere and honest motives and is less open to influence than a State body would be. "Look at the kicks being made at our Public Service Commission," he said, "and they are claimed to be men of the highest integrity."

* * *

But should the decision of the Supreme Court be that official censorship of motion pictures is unconstitutional the hope of the supporters of the National Board of Censors is that it will become national in operation as well as in name. Such a decision will wipe out official boards in all the States in which they have been created and will bar their establishment in other States that may have them in contemplation. With the political berths abolished and the opportunities for graft removed the people will then be in a receptive mood for the establishment of a system of censorship along safe and sane lines in keeping with the system that has been giving so much satisfaction to the manufacturers, exhibitors and public of New York. Should this period arrive the National Board of Censors will then be in a position to again attempt to get the real idea into the heads of some of the Ohio people who have charged that the recent attempt was only an effort of self-interest on the part of the Board augmented by a "dough bag," which they infer was made up by producers. It is difficult to believe that such charges come from exhibitors who are free to think and speak for themselves. A disinterested person is impelled to the conclusion that such attacks are inspired by those who want to hold on to their political jobs, and exhibitors who aid them are not wholly disinterested in the office holders.

* * *

A universal and constitutional system of censorship is as much desired by all who have the welfare of the motion picture industry in mind as an amalgamation of the exhibitors should be. Every legitimate manufacturer and every well-meaning exhibitor in the country is in favor of censorship. The manufacturers want it to drive out and keep out of the business the class of people who have been responsible for bringing stigma upon it. The exhibitors want it so that they may have a guarantee against offending their patrons or incur any danger of clashing with the authorities. But the same thing which has thus far prevented an amalgamation of the exhibitors of the country, and at times when such a step would have been of the greatest value to them, seems to defeat all movements towards an understanding for universal censorship on a basis of reason and justice. Self interest seems to control the situation. It at least led to a splitting of the exhibitors and the result of the Board of Censorship efforts in Ohio recently indicates that the sentiment is strong there.

* * *

A prominent New York exhibitor says: "It would be too egotistical for the New York motion picture people to claim they are mentally superior to the Ohio people, but I think the New Yorkers are justified in claiming that they are more alive to the best interests of the motion picture business than their western friends. I am sorry to say that history of the business shows that on national issues Ohio has almost invariably been the source of discontent. It seems to me that her people make a plan of action with the determination of carrying it out regardless of the opinions or considerations of others. This is the color the history of the past presents to my eye. If I am wrong, I am open to conviction. I also fear the Ohio exhibitors are inclined to be decidedly erratic at times. Recently there was an unmistakable change of front on the State Board of Censorship question, and many of those who had favored it declared themselves against it. Now, I see that some of these people have turned again and are in favor of the Board after hearing speeches of its members at a recent public meeting. I cannot see why they should have changed again. In the addresses made by the censors I see nothing to justify it. The chairman of the Board said antagonism to the body had been aroused by failure to inspect the films in time to get them through for the release dates, but now the board has things running smoothly and there is no occasion for abolishing it. This is the kind of talk upon which is based press announcements that the meeting developed a pronounced sentiment in favor of the State Board. That is all right so far as it goes. As an indorsement of the efficiency of the board the propriety of the sentiment is not questioned; but decided objection is made to any attempt to cloud the real issue. It is not a question of efficiency, but a right to existence—a constitutional right. That is the question upon which the constitutionalists of Ohio carried the case to the United States Supreme Court, and exhibitors who try to get away from that question exhibit unpardonable weakness. It is significant that the meeting and indorsement referred to took place after the exhibitors had announced their forthcoming State convention, when they are to again vote for or against censorship."

* * *

The well-known actor, Tyrone Power, in giving his impressions of the silent drama in newspaper interviews says that for a time many actors and actresses did not realize that a dramatic art would ever develop as a rival of the spoken drama. It was not that the artists were disdainful toward the motion pictures. He adds that they have seen the light and make no more attempts to belittle the artistic worth of the pictures. It may be said in behalf of the picture people that these expressions by Mr. Power are very kind. But Mr. Power evidently has not wandered along the White Way for some time. An old actor who had read one of the interviews remarked: "It is easy enough for those who are in right to talk that way. I know the time when I would knock the block off of anyone who would suggest that I become a picture actor. I hadn't nut enough on me to see what was coming. No, I have no disdain for the motion pictures. Not now. If you don't believe me, show me a job."

"The Tragedy of Bear Mountain"

Husband Wrongly Reported Dead, Wife Nearly Marries Another, in Kalem Two-Reel Melodrama of East and West.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THE interesting train of circumstances that brings back to his loving wife a man long reported dead, makes the backbone of this two-part Kalem offering. The woman was even standing up to be married to another man when the telegram from the West comes and she finds that she is not a widow. All this part of the story, well acted, human and pleasing as it is, holds strongly and is, in its melodramatic way, effective. The opening scenes that build up to the real situation are somewhat hurriedly blocked out and rough. Such scenes bear the same relationship to real drama, made with pains by author and producer, that the rough chunks of bread on a farmer's table bear to the thin delicate triangles on the tea-plates of fashion. The latter coax an appetite, while the former know durn well you're hungry and aren't afraid of the rough edges. Both, let us add, may come from the same flour barrel. This picture has a good story to tell; but its earlier scenes hurry one to it, bringing forward any character that is needed at any time, regardless of whether his being just there at that very moment is plausible or not. One would think its producer was hypnotized by the good tale coming and wanted to get at it so much that he didn't care, in his approach, if his steps, looked ten feet long. Truly, when he gets to the really interesting part he does the kind of work that gives him credit.

Scene from "A Tragedy of Bear Mountain" (Kalem).

One good point about the picture is its fine group of characters; they convince, because they are naturally and ably acted. Jane Wolfe plays a matron with the simple, natural art for which she has long been known. This is her last role, for a time at least, with the Kalem players, as she has returned to the legitimate stage. This reviewer recalls with much pleasure other roles she has played and some of which, like the flower girl of "The Flower Girl's Romance," to name only one, she has carried with marked distinction. Truly, at her best, there are few among picture players who in character work can hold a candle to her.

Marin Sais has the leading female role as the wife of the missing man, played by Paul C. Hurst, and both do very satisfactory work. Cleo Ridgeley divides honors with Miss Sais in her role of the miner's daughter whom she makes a very sweet, young miss. Douglas Gerrarde plays the missing man's brother, and is a big help to the picture. The role of the employer, a semi-villainous character, is taken by Frank Jonasson and we need not add that the story's mountaineer character is ably played, since William H. West fills it.

LUBIN AD CORRECTION.

It is requested by the Lubin Company that its advertisement on page 477 should read to the effect that "all special three-reel feature subjects will be released on the regular program of the General Film Company." This change was received too late to be made in the advertisement, and this notice is offered in lieu thereof.

Rena Rogers

MISS ROGERS, who was formerly with the Universal, has been secured by the Crown City Manufacturing Company, of Pasadena, California, to play the leading parts in their comedy company. These films will be released through the Kriterion Service under the Thistle brand.

Miss Rogers is a young woman, full of life, and cannot be contented unless she is "doing something." She is indeed beautiful and possesses a wealth of blond hair.

Rena Rogers.

An amusing incident happened in a picture just completed entitled "The Boob's Racing Career." Miss Rogers enacts the part of a servant girl and falls in love with the "Boob," who owns a racing car. She puts her arms around his neck, much to his displeasure, and he runs away and she gives chase. He was to hide behind a tree and she to creep up and grab him around the neck and kiss him. The "boob" disappeared and put some one else in his place. Every one in the company, with the exception of Miss Rogers, was wise. The full details of this episode are missing, but we have it from Miss Rogers that it was a "mean trick."

YOU CAN'T DOWN McGOWAN.

James P. McGowan, the producer of the "Hazards of Helen" series for the Kalem company and one of the company's oldest directors, lies in his bed at the Sister's Hospital, at Hollywood, California, where he is confined in a plaster cast able only to move the upper part of his body at present. During the time he has been laid up there he has converted the "Hazard" series into scenario form on a typewriter so fixed that he can work it easily. Over the top of his bed is a telephone which is in constant use, for Mr. McGowan has virtually been directing from his bedside and his company are in constant touch with him regarding situations, actions and locations. Every night his assistants call and receive their instructions for the next day and report exactly what has been done so that Mr. McGowan keeps in touch with the main office all the time.

James P. McGowan in Bed at Sister's Hospital.

Every evening Miss Helen Holmes, his leading actress, takes supper with him and is constantly at his side during the hours she is not working.

Mr. McGowan has shown remarkable pluck and, although it will be a long time before he is able to be in the field again, it is safe to say that he will be working every minute of the time and a more cheerful patient was never confined in a hospital.

"O'Garry of the Royal Mounted"

Vitagraph's Three-Part Drama Is a Good Story of Mountain and Stream.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THOSE who like pictures of the wild outdoors, of forests, of mountains, or rapid, boulder-streaked streams, will enjoy "O'Garry of the Royal Mounted," a three-part subject which the Vitagraph Company will release in the early part of February. The story was written and produced by Ned Finley, and was designed to be a sequel to "The Strength of Men," a tale of the north woods made two years ago. Mr. Finley also plays the name part. It was in the taking of this picture that he was injured in the head when his canoe overturned in the rapids. The scene is cut just as the craft settles over the boatman.

The story is a simple one of strong passions and fiercer jealousies, of freedom from police restraint, of ready resort to weapon. There is abundant atmosphere of the Northwest if entire absence of all marks of civilization can provide it. Mr. Finley has the role of a miner, a partner of Jan, jealous of the attentions paid to O'Garry by his wife. A year after O'Garry joins the Mounted he learns through police records that Jan is wanted for murder and that he had deserted a wife and two children. He goes after his former partner; several stirring things happen before Jan is killed as he is trying to destroy O'Garry.

Scene from "O'Garry of The Royal Mounted" (Vitagraph).

The picture is well acted. Edith Storey is Marie Larose, the wife of Jan, who, letting herself over a cliff by means of a rope in her effort to rescue O'Garry from drowning, is herself precipitated into the rapid stream when Jan cuts the rope. Miss Storey is one of the very few young women equally at home in society drama or in those roles requiring proficiency in horsemanship and swimming. S. Rankin Drew is strong in the role of Jan, who recognizes no law but his own will. Logan Paul is Cummings, the father of Marie, and Jack Brawn, the friendly half-witted Indian, who saves the life of O'Garry by sinking his knife in the back of Jan as he is about to slay the constable.

"O'Garry of the Royal Mounted" is a good story of outdoors. It will hold interest steadily. The writer saw the subject without sub-titles, and found but few instances where the action did not tell its own tale.

CARTER MAKES LIGHTNING CHANGE.

Louis Carter, formerly a racing chauffeur, is now a peaceable actor with the L-Ko Company. In a picture just produced by Mr. Lehrman's company Carter portrays three distinct characters and even "Pathe" himself cannot tell at this date just what three roles Carter appeared in, so effectually did the former high-speed artist disguise himself.

SCOPE OF MOVING PICTURES EVER WIDENING.

The Board of Health of New York City has installed a complete equipment consisting of Power 6A and doube dissolving stereopticon with both and accessories for use in its campaign of health education. The equipment was supplied by the Picture Theater Equipment Co. of New York, which also booked orders on the same afternoon last week for Power machines for use on one of the battleships and in a church mission in New York. It has also just completed an installation of a similar machine and necessary equipment in the Morristown, New Jersey, Y. M. C. A.

Coming Bosworth Releases

Many Interesting Productions Completed or Planned for Early Distribution on the Paramount Program.

BOSWORTH, INC., distributing through Paramount, has announced the securing of Fritzi Scheff's signature to a contract by which the temperamental actress agrees to appear in a motion picture production of her most recent success, "Pretty Mrs. Smith." With the signing of Miss Scheff, the Bosworth Company completes its arrangements for the forthcoming three months, and that its activities have been pronounced, goes without saying. Elmer Harris, author of "Pretty Mrs. Smith," is now at Los Angeles and will aid in the Bosworth production.

Fritzi Scheff.

During the forthcoming quarter, Bosworth, Inc., will release "False Colors," an original play by Lois Weber, in which Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley star. This feature having already been released, "It's No Laughing Matter," with the inimitable comedian, Maclyn Arbuckle, in the role of Hi Judd, will be the next Bosworth production sent through Paramount.

Following them comes Hobart Bosworth in "Buckshot John," a virile dramatic concoction, full of red-blooded action and thrilling climaxes, Elsie Janis in "Caprices of Kitty," written and starred in by Miss Janis, will see the light of screen day, Monday, March 8. This is the first of the Bosworth-Janis series.

Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley in "Sunshine Molly" will be sent forth, March 15. About March 27, Fritzi Scheff in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," will be the Bosworth unit on the Paramount program, with Dustin Farnum following in a huge production of "Captain Courtesy."

The first of the Bosworth-Morosco features, "Help Wanted," which played one full season on Broadway and is yet a powerful road attraction, will be seen April 10 with Lois Meredith as the original star, in the role she created.

Gordon Griffith in "Little Sunset" will be released during the beginning of the base ball season. As this is a Van Loan story and directly of interest to the base ball loving public, the release date was set back acordingly.

Elsie Janis in "Betty in Search of a Thrill" comes next, with Adele Farrington in a comedy, "This Is the Life" following, a week later.

Other great Bosworth productions are "Wild Olive" with Peggy O'Neil, "Nearly a Lady" with Elsie Janis, Myrtle Stedman, Joseph Ray and Jack Conway in Jack London's "Smoke Bellew," and Leonore Ulrich in "Society Pilot," termed a sentimental romance.

Bosworth's affiliation with Oliver Morosco gives that concern first call on all the excellent dramatic documents credited to Morosco, John Cort and their various producing allies, among which are "Peg o' My Heart," "The Ham Tree," "The Alaskan" and "The Marriage Game."

Bosworth controls the Jack London fiction and Charles Van Loan's stories now appearing at intervals in the Saturday Evening Post.

The executive heads of Bosworth, Inc., are scouring the fiction marts for adaptable subjects and those obtained, combined with the library of material on hand, give them a supply equal to the demand of the forthcoming two years.

WALTER EDWARDS IN "THE CROSS OF FIRE."

Walter Edwards is being praised for his performance of the part of the French Canadian, Dupre, in "The Cross of Fire," a Kay Bee release in the Mutual program. The story shows an atheist's conversion to faith, and Edwards is ably supported by Marvel Stafford as his little daughter, and by Fanny Midgley as his wife.

"Time Lock 776"

Regular Melodrama in Six Reels with Joe Welch in Leading Role—Not a Dry Inch in It (Photo-Drama Company).

By Hanford C. Judson.

TO THOSE who like the "real thing" in melodramas we can heartily recommend this offering, "Time Lock 776," made by the Photo-Drama Company. This reviewer enjoyed all of its six reels and didn't find a dry inch in it; but it is all melodrama. The thing he enjoyed in it is the types; they are delightful. The good, human acting furnishes many a moment, enjoyable to both mind and heart.

Hal Reid, the author of "Human Hearts," wrote and directed it. Joe Welch plays the big, human-heart character, a kindly watchmaker, most delightfully. The daughter of the watchmaker is a winsome heroine, played by Dora Dean. The hero is Edward Carewe, and he is working as clerk for a broker (David Wall), the heavy villain. Behind this broker is the scheming woman, his accomplice, played by Mae Georgina. On the other side of the story, is a band of counterfeiters with the old hag (Adella Barker), a fence; the tough (Fred McKaye), and the "chief," (Edward Sullivan), an Italian. Strung through the tale are other fine characters including one dandy tough cop (Peter Burns), an old woman starving with her two children whom the pawnbroker helps, a rich uncle of the children (Hal Reid) and secret service man (John Starkey), etc.

Scene from "Time Lock 776" (Photo Drama).

The story, making good use of all these characters, had to be fairly elaborate. It has something going all the time. Very truly that something is of the ten, twent, thirt kind; it intended it to be just that, knowing that there were many who like it now and then. It is a picture that will go best with simple audiences; but even with the critical—we believe that nearly everyone like to be uncritical at times—it ought to be acceptable. It is a picture that will amuse the tired businessman, will feed the romantic and stir the simple hearted spectator. The photography and staging are good.

LIONEL BARRYMORE WITH LIFE PHOTO.

Mr. Lionel Barrymore, who made his debut in motion pictures in the leading role of "The Seats of the Mighty," has been engaged by the Life Photo Film Corporation to appear in "A Modern Magdalen."

Mr. Barrymore is under contract with the Colonial Motion Picture Co., and it was through their courtesy that his services were loaned to the Life Photo Film Corporation.

THEODORE WHARTON IN "ELAINE."

Sparing no pains or expense to insure the artistic excellence of "The Exploits of Elaine," Pathe Freres have prevailed upon Theodore Wharton to set aside his other business interests and co-operate with his brother Leopold in the direction of the picture. Two such high-class directors from the same family on the same picture makes an unusual combination.

TO PICTURE "A MODERN MAGDALEN."

Life Photo Film Corporation has entered into a contract with C. Haddon Chambers, author of "A Modern Magdalen," for the production of that story in pictures. Miss Catharine Countiss has been engaged for the leading role of Katinka. Will S. Davis will have charge of the production.

"Through the Murk"

Two-Reel Domino of Fascinating Theme and Strong, Realistic Treatment.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Missouri Joe.....Jack Nelson
Ivy Hudson.....Elvira Weil
Mother Hudson.....Gertrude Claire
Big Anderson.....Louis Morrison

IT IS the occasional picture of undoubted merit, like "Through the Murk," that keeps the audience hoping for still greater development in this new art of ours and makes life bearable for press reviewers. We know that the art itself is not created to satisfy a passing whim, that it has infinite possibilities, but it is discouraging at times to watch releases that are mere reflections of one another, simply readjustments of a few antiquated situations. In offering "Through the Murk" to the public, its producers are using the right bait for popularity, so far as logic, reason and common human interest are concerned, and the taste of the fish to be caught is to be considered, not that of the angler.

After viewing photoplays of cut-and-dried plots, whose termination a child could foresee from the beginning, portrayed by a lot of chalk-faced, preposterous caricatures of humanity, arrayed in theatrical garb and general superficiality moving around amid the stock properties, what a relief to get a touch of realistic treatment, even if it lacks the undeniable charm of beauty. Added attraction is a theme that may be used in a thousand ways and gain attention because it is ever vital, our desperate struggle against unfavorable environment, because it is part of our daily lives.

"Through the Murk" is the story of a desperately poor young fellow of no great strength of character, beaten to the very dust, like a weaker nation by a more powerful one, and a young girl of wretched circumstances, those of abject poverty under the influence of a mother who is a disgrace to her name and sex through alcoholism. These two unhappy creatures are brought into an association through the wretchedness of their condition, he shambling with weakness from lack of food, she barefoot and uncouth, both headed straight for one form or another of demoralization. A touch of true love, and they are transformed. Both are stimulated to new effort, one encourages the other to resist the common adversity, and their pitiful struggle is really only beginning at the end of the story, but they are two "hearts courageous" on their way to self-betterment, the finest aspiration within their grasp.

There are people of super-sensibilities, who do not like to witness the upward struggle of God's own creatures, those so poor, so pure, so simple of heart that Christ would have taken them into his arms, but there are big hearts in every moving picture audience and plenty of them, so the little play will win.

The types are perfect, though Gertrude Claire as Mother Hudson goes to a Zola-like extreme of realism. Elvira Weil, as Ivy Hudson, is remarkable in her characterization, so faithful that she does not hesitate to be as ugly as she should be. She is a veritable little artiste now—later on she will insist on looking pretty and showing her teeth, the way of all screen girls. Jack Nelson as "Missouri Joe" has an extremely difficult role to fill, one not at all to the taste of "leading men," but he steers through all his difficulties with skill, offering an admirable portrayal. "Big Anderson" is well typed and as well performed by Louis Morrison. There are grim features to the story, but they are of life's true physiognomy. The logic of cause and effect, the true denotements of character and the fine handling of precedent conditions give "Through the Murk" high rank.

GERMAN EMBARGO ON HYDROCHINONE.

Information has been received that the German government has placed an embargo upon further shipments from that country of the photographic chemical known as hydrochinone. The date of that embargo is December 4, 1914.

VITAGRAPH MAKES HIT AT WEST POINT.

"A Million Bid," "Wild Beasts at Large," and "Love, Luck and Gasoline" were witnessed at West Point by seven hundred cadets and officers with their families. Among those present was Col. George W. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal. The reception accorded these pictures is sufficient evidence that the Vitagraph occupies a place in the Moving Picture World that gives it an enviable prominence.

Upon urgent request of Chas. P. Townsley, superintendent of the Academy of West Point, a second entertainment was given on Sunday evening for the benefit of the enlisted men.

"The Last Chapter"

Richard H. Davis' Story with New Ending, Done in Five Reels by Favorite Players Company with Carlyle Blackwell.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

IT SEEMS that Davis wrote a story of broken love and called it "The Unfinished Story," in which he left the last chapter to the reader's imagination. The Favorite Players, with the help of a scenario by Richard Willis, have made this story into a five-reel picture that supplies the happy ending. It was directed by William D. Taylor and features Carlyle Blackwell in the leading role, a masculine, red-blooded character, ideal lover in his combination of truth, strength and tenderness.

It is primarily a picture of adventure in Africa; but the last part which, as we have noted, was written directly for a picture, brings the center of attention to the love story where it belongs. There is little dramatic quality in the girl's experiences while the man is away on his first adventure. The early scenes, it must be confessed, use too much film in registering merely this that the man and the girl meet; that he is not a society man, but a virile doer of things, and that the girl tired of her other lovers, falls in love with him. Then he is put at the head of an expedition into Africa and the lovers sadly part. We now have some good adventure incidents in the wilds. Many of the director's scenes in this part of the story are full of merit, looked at for action or picturesque effect. There are bits here that will excite enthusiasm. It is skilfully registered that the man is reported as dead and his papers are sent to the girl. He makes his way through the jungle and reaches London. By chance the girl and he meet there; but they don't shake hands. We don't know what among many possibilities causes this. He much disappointed in her—perhaps he thought her engaged to another man—returns to Africa. She—perhaps she had thought her love for him dead—wakes up a few weeks later and follows him across the sea. From this point on to their meeting there is good suspense, in spite of a few weak points, a truly fresh and interesting action, and many good things.

Scene from "The Last Chapter" (Favorite Players).

Ruth Hartman plays the girl; John J. Sheehan, the villain, and there are plenty of excellent lesser characters, negroes, officials and the like. The photography and scene making are very good.

GROWING PLANTS.

An interesting educational film just released is "Growing Plants." While of the same order as "How Plants Live and Grow," this one has the distinct advantage of showing "the effects of light on growing plants." How the light attracts the growing plant is most distinctly seen, with the additional feature of the swaying to and fro of the plant when attracted by opposite lights. Although strictly educational it was shown in a New York theater on the every-day program, and was sufficiently well received to merit applause; evidently the time has gone when educational pictures were supposed to have a depressing effect on an audience. Today the best theaters have such subjects as these, together with topical pictures as a regular part of the daily run.

Rita Jolivet Engaged by Lasky

THE Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company has completed a contract with Miss Rita Jolivet, whereby this distinguished international star will make her first film appearance under the Lasky management in a picturization of Eleanor M. Ingram's successful novel, "The Unafraid."

Miss Jolivet will play the title part of Delight Warren, a rich New York girl, who is engaged to a Montenegran of noble birth, and who experiences, in the wild mountains of that country, many romantic adventures, culminating in a marriage not to her betrothed, but to his brother.

Rita Jolivet.

Miss Jolivet was born in Paris and has played in Paris, London and New York as well as in all the other leading French, English and American cities. Her mother was the celebrated pianist before her marriage to Miss Jolivet's father, and her sister, Mlle. Inez Jolivet, is one of the foremost women violinists of the European continent. The Jolivet family has an English home at Kew Gardens, near London. Miss Jolivet studied for the stage in London under Kate Bateman and in Paris with Mme. Thenard and Mme. Kolb of the Comedie Francaise. She made her professional debut as Beatrice in "Much Ado About Nothing" in England. Before coming to this country, she had already played at the leading London theatres in the support of such artists as Cyril Maude, Sir George Alexander and Weedon Grossmith.

She also played a notable engagement in Paris at the Theatre Michel, supporting Gallipaux. Miss Jolivet made her American debut as "Marsinah," the leading feminine character in "Kismet," when that most famous of Oriental productions was first played at the Knickerbocker Theater. She had been especially selected for the role by Harrison Grey Fiske, and fully justified his expectations.

Last year she played the leading feminine role in the very elaborate production of Percy Mackay's drama, "A Thousand Years Ago." She recently enjoyed a great personal success in "What It Means to a Woman" at the Longacre Theatre.

Miss Jolivet left for the Lasky Studio in Hollywood, California, on Friday of last week. Work on the production will begin immediately on her arrival.

TERWILLIGER TAKES LUBIN PLAYERS TO CUBA.

George W. Terwilliger, the well-known writer and director of the Lubin Company, left this week with a specially selected company of Lubin players for an extended tour through the south and Cuba. They will be gone several months. This is the second Lubin company that has left Philadelphia since the New Year to travel afar and make photoplays. A few days ago Romaine Fielding and a company of twenty-one people left on a tour that will include the western part of this country, the Hawaiian Islands and Alaska.

Mr. Terwilliger will devote his energies to the making of a number of feature productions that he wrote himself. The company will spend several weeks in St. Augustine, Fla., and will then tour the east and west coasts of Florida. Later the Lubinites will go to Cuba, where arrangements have been made to film a number of thrilling and novel photoplays.

Mr. Terwilliger's company includes Miss Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe, Kempton Greene, William Cooper, Miss Mae DeMetz, Miss Hazel Hubbard and Mrs. Frances Fortier, Herbert Fortier, Peter Volkman, Torleiv Corneliussen.

"Ridgeway of Montana"

Picturization of Wm. McLeod Raine's Big Mining Story to Be Released by Universal.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THERE is something about a mining story, something about the precarious, speculative atmosphere that clings to it, and something about the men who mingle in this double-daring life that appeals to the individual whose path is set along the ordinary humdrum lines of life; and that applies to most of us. Therefore "Ridgeway of Montana" with its men of many kinds, its moments of wintry storm and blizzard, its temptations, and its peculiar shifting of situations is more than ordinarily well adapted to the screen, from the standpoint of the audience as well as that of the exhibitor.

The opportunities afforded for fine dramatic action and intelligent direction are limitless. In this production, which will appear under the 101 Bison brand, and which has been staged by Henry McRae, special care has been taken to provide attractive exteriors; and the gathering of the storm in the mountains will no doubt be a point of considerable comment, so effective is the manner in which this has been presented. One scene with only the tops of the evergreen trees and a menacing sky of shifting clouds to be reckoned with, is a fine example of artistic photography; and a sequel to it is the gathering of the storm lower down in the valley. Later the blizzard sets in with full force, bringing with it one of the situations of the picture, where Ridgeway falls in love with the pretty wife of his enemy, unaware of her identity.

Scene from "Ridgeway of Montana" (101 Bison).

The basic point of the story is a contention between two mining factions, one of which is headed by Waring Ridgeway, and the other by Simon Harley. As a last resort, failing in the effort to buy Ridgeway over, Harley is instrumental in blowing up the mines, which incident affords a splendid opportunity for spectacular effect in the picturized version of the story.

Some excellent scenes depicting the lowering of the man-laden hoist to the various levels of the mine have been presented in the film, which has many points of interest. It is to be regretted, however, that a more concise version of the story had not been presented. One or two inconsistencies appearing in the sample print shown to the press will doubtless be erased before the picture, which is in three reels, makes its bow to the public.

HORKHEIMER BELIEVES IN STARS.

H. M. Horkheimer, president of the Balboa Company, Long Beach, California, states that he will not stop adding to the number and strength of his stars with the engagement of Henry B. Walthall and Ruth Roland. On the contrary, he will announce the engagement of a number of others just as soon as he can do so without embarrassing them in their present positions.

"Good stars who have won names for themselves in the motion picture world," declared Mr. Horkheimer, "cost my company not one cent. I secure their services free and make a profit besides. That sounds like a ridiculous statement until it is analysed, but I will illustrate what I mean by saying that with an ordinary cast, the members of which are capable, but unknown, I can secure the regular price per foot for positives. With Ruth Roland and Henry B. Walthall not only can I get from 25 to 50 per cent. more, but there will always be a ready market for me."

Wilbur Collier Hudson

WILBUR COLLIER HUDSON, who is pictured here as "Owen Garraway" in the late James A. Herne's famous play, "Hearts of Oak," has signed with the George W. Lederer Stage Filmotions as assistant director and leading character man and will be seen exclusively hereafter in the feature film productions of that company.

Mr. Hudson's work in the drama proper is too well known to need extended mention here, coming from one of the oldest representative American theatrical families, a nephew of the late James W. Collier who in his day besides being the idol of the theatergoing public was together with his partner, the late Sheridan Shook, proprietor and manager of the old Union Square Theater, and the largest producing manager of the country at that time. Lizzie Hudson Collier, one of our foremost leading women of today, is his sister. The late Edmund K. Collier, the tragedian and successor of John McCullough was his cousin and practically his tutor.

Wilbur C. Hudson, in Character.

Mr. Hudson is one of the few younger men of the stage who has received the thorough training that was exacted of the actor back in the days of stock companies such as Wallack's, Daly's, The Union Square, etc. His first experience in "picturedom," was with the Edison Company under Edwin S. Porter, now of "The Famous Players," about the same time that that excellent director, J. Searles Dawley, forsook the theater for the studio.

When Mr. Porter severed his connection with the Edison firm, Mr. Hudson returned to the stage via vaudeville, where he starred for several seasons in an original "drama-ette," "The Underworld," which by the way was the first of the plays dealing with the lives of the "neither half." Returning again to the "celluloid drama" as a member of the first Reliance Company, then controlled by Bauman & Kessel. remaining with that company through the management of J. V. Richie.

Mr. Hudson will shortly be seen to advantage in George W. Lederer's Stage Filmotions visualization of Bayard Veiller's last season's success, "The Fight."

NEW LASKY GLASS STUDIO NOW COMPLETE.

Mr. Samuel Goldfish announces the completion of the new glass studio erected by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. in Hollywood, California, which has been in the course of construction for several months. The Lasky buildings in Hollywood now occupy the space of three city blocks, and only about twenty miles away is the new Lasky ranch, with its 20,000 acres of land and its extraordinary varied scenery. The glass studio is intended primarily for the taking of interior scenes and is especally useful for elaborate lighting effects.

A REAL HEAVY IN "TIME LOCK NUMBER 776."

The first heavy in the new production of the Photo Drama Company entitled "Time Lock Number 776," featuring Joe Welch, one of the best-known comedians on the stage today, is Ed. McKay, a big powerful fellow with massive jaws, arms long enough for main masts and hands that resemble hams. He is one of the white hope professional boxers and recently fought Al Reich, Gunboat Smith and more than a score of the top notch fighters in the heavyweight division.

When he picks up the hero and carries him up or down the stairs to the counterfeiters den it is simply byplay and light exercise for this ideal heavy.

"The Dancing Girl"

Florence Reed Charms in Her Screen Debut in Famous Players Adaptation of Jones Drama.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IT IS a pretty story and a good one the Famous Players Film Company gives us in "The Dancing Girl," from the drama of Henry Arthur Jones. The production marks the screen debut of Florence Reed, who is known to theatergoers through her work in "Seven Days," "The Typhoon," and more recently in "The Yellow Ticket." Miss Reed charms by her personality and moves by her portrayal. Her role is that of a girl born and raised a Quaker on an English island, going on a visit to London as a young woman and finding there life so attractive that home and all its ties are forgotten.

The story brings out striking contrasts of the austerity of the gray-garbed islanders with the worldliness of the Londoners with whom Drusilla Ives is thrown. "The Dancing Girl" is a tale of one who aims to be "the topmost rose on the topmost bough and live in the sunshine," but who discovers that in spite of her many suitors and her gay surroundings she fails to find real happiness. In the telling of the story we feel the breezes of the ocean and hear the surf pounding on the cliffs as we also feel the atmosphere of the ballroom and the luxurious urban homes.

Scene from "The Dancing Girl" (Famous Players).

William Russell has the role of the young Quaker who loses a sweetheart when Drusilla goes to London—and later finds a wife in Faith, the sister who returned. Fuller Mellish is David, the father of Drusilla, who follows her to the city, discovers her mode of life and denounces her. Eugene Ormonde is the Duke of Guiseberry, the patron of Drusilla. As the duke refuses to make Drusilla his duchess when she implores him, so later she declines his proffer of marriage. That the two eventually decide to begin together a new life furnishes a satisfying ending of the drama.

One of the strongest scenes is the denunciation of the butterfly by the father and the subsequent fall by Drusilla down the great staircase. The staging of this particular set is one of a number worthy of praise.

CHESTER BEECROFT, GENERAL MANAGER.

Chester Beecroft, who has been doing the publicity for Centaur pictures for some time past, has been appointed general manager of the Centaur Company by David Horsley. Mr. Beecroft has been in close touch with the making of motion pictures long enough to be of valuable assistance to Mr. Horsley and his ability has been given due recognition.

A ZUDORA CATASTROPHE.

A reward of $5,000 has been offered by the Thanhouser Film Corp. for the return of an imported Persian cat used in "Zudora." The cat, with another, was recently purchased from Commodore E. C. Benedict of Greenwich. Last week all was in readiness to take a scene in the famous Grecian salon which will appear prominently from now on as the rendezvous of Mme. Du Val (Mary Elizabeth Forbes) and her conspirators.

Miss Snow, Mr. Cruze, Mr. Benham and Miss Forbes were waiting the direction of Director Howell Hansel, when the head property man reported the loss of the cat, and the search began, but to no avail. Then the reward was offered. Now everyone in New Rochelle is hunting the cat. Director Hansel fails to see anything funny about it.

Florence Crawford

PERHAPS no film favorite has made greater strides with motion picture audiences during the past year than Florence Crawford, the attractive Griffith-Mutual star. Miss Crawford is strictly an out-door girl. She is a horsewoman, a crack shot, a swimmer, a tennis player, and from Franklin, Crawford County, Pa. Her ancestors settled there more than 200 years ago, and the county took its name from her family's. She is also a descendant of a grandfather who went through the Civil War, a great grandfather who was a veteran of the Mexican war, and a great, great grandfather, who fought in the Revolution, and this may account for her fearlessness.

Florence Crawford.

Miss Crawford received her education in Pittsburg and New York. Three years ago she called on one of her girl friends at the Mutual New York studios. This visit decided her future for she received an offer that day to go into pictures and the offer she accepted. For several months she played small parts and then went to the Hollywood studios in Los Angeles. Here she played dramatic leads, appearing in "The Thief and the Book." "The Heart of a Fool," "Playmates" and other features.

When D. W. Griffith became director-in-chief for the Mutual, Miss Crawford was one of the few retained by this able director and has since appeared in "Bad Man Mason," "The Tardy Cannon," "A Lucky Disappointment" and other productions.

Owing to her athletic training and fondness for out-door life she is especially suited for strong, western dramas. Miss Crawford measures 5 feet 5 inches in height, weighs 130 pounds, possesses a perfect figure, and has large, dark, gray eyes, wavy light-brown hair and a fair complexion, and has shown to great advantage in productions made by "Sheriff" Arthur Mackley. She usually plays opposite him.

In depicting the character of a western girl, Miss Crawford probably has few peers. She has the faculty of displaying intense emotional feelings in such a natural manner that it appears to be real and not acting.

MONSTER CHRISTMAS TREE AT BURLAND THEATER IN BRONX.

Picture playhouse patrons in the Bronx (New York City) are still talking about the monster Christmas tree which was exhibited throughout the holidays at Picker & Bennett's Burland theater. The Burland is the largest theater in the Bronx playing a straight picture program and has, in addition to the theater proper, an open air auditorium capable of seating 2,500 people. It was in the middle of this open space that Messrs. Picker and Bennett reared their Christmas tree, which measured thirty-five feet in height and which was decorated with many different colored electric lights and with strings of lights reaching from the top of the tree to all corners of the enclosure.

The Christmas tree remained in full bloom throughout the holiday season, and was a great special attraction for the children of the district, who came to see it with their parents by the thousands. On January second the decorations of the tree were distributed to all the children present, but the tree still stands and is still illuminated every evening.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD JOINS FAMOUS PLAYERS FORCES AT COAST STUDIOS.

Harold Lockwood, the versatile and popular juvenile lead of the Famous Players Film Co., who appeared in support of Miss Pickford in the successes produced at the Coast last year, left last week for their Pacific Coast studios, where he will join Mary Pickford, who preceded him to the Western organization, where she will remain indefinitely.

He will support Mary Pickford in the series of subjects selected for Western production, the first of which will be the celebrated play, "Audrey," by Mary Johnston.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by the REV. W. H. JACKSON

CHILDREN LEARN WHILE BEING AMUSED.

Mrs. Katherine F. Carter, of 171 Madison avenue, New York, N. Y., who specializes in educational motion pictures, is receiving inquiries from theaters, schools, churches, mother's clubs, civic societies and educational associations from all parts of the country as to the possibility of obtaining educational subjects for their respective requirements.

Up to the present time so few schools have been provided with the equipment necessary for the use of motion pictures that Mrs. Carter is co-operating with the school boards in providing weekly and semi-weekly educational programs in the local theaters. The pictures in these programs are carefully selected and censored and have proven of estimable value to pupils of all grades.

Mrs. Carter has a library containing a very large number of carefully selected and classified educational subjects, and she has arranged regular courses in History, Geography (physical and historical) Literature, Botany, Zoology, Sociology, Natural Science, Useful Arts, Fine Arts, etc. These courses are designed to cover the general school period of forty weeks.

Programs containing pictures for an evening's entertainment suitable for any particular work will be submitted upon request.

Lectures and lecturers are also furnished.

IN THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

The war pictures have found immediate favor among clergymen. In Chicago more than one hundred ministers viewed the films, some showing section of actual fighting and other scenes of great battle centers. The exhibition of these pictures was pronounced as most helpful, and, besides conveying an intelligent understanding of the situation, shows the need and activity of the Red Cross agencies; furthermore, fifty per cent of the proceeds from these exhibitions is in many places given to the Belgian Red Cross Society. One minister in Chicago declared the heartrending scenes seemed such as to make peaceful sleep impossible because of the remembrances of pictures of mothers with babies and toddling children fleeing from their homes. Newspapers from Texas speak in great expectation of the anticipated educational effect of the pictures in that State.

* * *

In Auburn, N. Y., a clergyman is making a vigorous attack upon the billboards of the theaters, and, incidentally, through them upon the theaters and picture houses which use them. It is quite possible that there is just ground for much criticism of the outside appearance of many of that class of picture house which has not yet come within the refined and educating influence of the true use of moving pictures with appropriate advertising. The stand taken by the Moving Picture World has, no doubt, been most helpful in this direction. It should be more widely known, however, that violent criticism of the pictures themselves are now generally no longer justifiable. Five years ago there was occasion for many adverse reflections, but not to-day. We will gladly support any minister who seeks to destroy the vicious taste which causes the entrance of a picture house to cast a question upon the value of the picture within. It should be more widely known that such posters are libels, and their condemnation, even unto abolishment, will only leave the value of the picture unharmed.

* * *

A Church "White List" is being prepared in some places for the guidances of churches and schools. One of these movements is called the "Catholic Theater Movement," and is probably designed as a special guide for their own denomination; from the list already published we are bound to say they must have been chosen from a very limited supply. Large numbers of the best, most intelligent, most interesting and most educational films are not included in the published list, evidently the compilers must be ignorant of the existence of a large series of pictures far superior to those chosen. In the name of educational kinematography it should be more widely known that the field of suitable pictures is very large, much larger than seems to be supposed, if the only reports we are able to read seems to suggest. By means of this page it is desired that all users of educational pictures should know that small lists appearing in denominational magazines or local society papers are but small selections from the larger list, and, so far as we have seen, these small lists are very inferior.

SCHOOLS OF THE WESTERN STATES KEEP AHEAD.

The motion pictures have begun active work in the Denver schools. A fully equipped apparatus has been installed in the West Side High School and will be used for the teaching of science, literature, history and industrialism.

Mr. C. W. Bigelow, principal of the school, says: "High spots of history will be thrown on the screen in such a manner as to make impressions on the minds of the pupils in a way impossible by text-books." He also intends to have produced for the students, most noted English classics in drama form. Another school has been using moving pictures in a limited manner for two years, and will now enlarge the scope of its work. Other branch schools will visit the high school for special educational exhibitions. Without doubt the Denver schools are in earnest, and seem to be working along most practical lines, they are to be commended for so doing in contrast to those schools who cannot seem to acquire any initiative, but must wait until everything is cut and dried for them.

In Minneapolis the Bremer school, the largest graded school building in the city, is to have exhibitions from three to five times a week. Because of a large picture loving public who must needs go some distance to see good pictures, the school principal, Wm. O. H. Miller, plans to hold exhibitions of such a nature as shall secure universal patronage; for this purpose he will not confine himself to educationals, although pictures of a "good type" will be insisted upon.

The Tuttle school, in the same city, is now also equipped for picture exhibitions, making it appear that school auditoriums are the coming centers for high-class exhibitions. Reports from California repeat the steady growth of picture work in the more than 150 schools now using them, together with a still brighter outlook.

TOPICALS.

The topical pictures are growing more interesting and popular, if that is possible. Of course the war is responsible for this increased power they show over the public mind. A noticeable feature is the greater promptitude which is now being observed. The topicals were always interesting as recording past events, but as descriptive of current events, and picturing incidents in actual happening is a great advance.

As a proof of this may be mentioned that where only after effects of the war were shown, now positive incidents with the flash and smoke of canons firing are actually reproduced.

Whenever a disastrous fire occurred the picture showed only the after effects. A film was shown recently of a great lumber fire when burning most fiercely; the blaze, steam and smoke making one of the most gorgeous and thrilling pictures imaginable, considerably increasing the effects of the picture by its reality.

Happenings of all kinds and full of importance are now illustrated parallel with the newspaper accounts, while the interest is keen, and not as formerly, when they had become almost ancient history. This progress and up-to-dateness has not only increased the popular demand and acceptability of the world-wide topical films, but it has considerably enhanced their educational value; they should be seen by the young people everywhere.

"The Price Made the Game."

Business Depends Upon Shorter Features, with Better Stories and a Ten-cent Admission.

By A. W. Ballenger, York, Neb.

MUCH time and space is being expended right now on arguments concerning the raising of admission prices. To date almost exclusively the arguments have been in favor of increased admissions. If, by the "increase," they mean from five cents to a ten-cent basis—it is well. If they mean a greater increase—it is well to hesitate, to deliberate, to think long on how it will affect the business as a whole.

There are many phases to the question. The most important of these I would mention here, "What does the public think of it?"

Will they stand for the raise? Will they continue to patronize? Another question, "Has not the picture business been made possible by keeping the admission price at ten cents?"

No matter what arguments have been advanced, or will be advanced, the fact remains, unquestionable, that the price has made the game. The "legitimate" owes its decline largely to increased prices. It drove the people away. Naturally they turned to the first low-priced entertainment which presented itself.

Now, will "increased prices" drive them away from the moving pictures? There can be but one answer: "Yes."

It is hard for some to admit, but it is and will be the case.

In order to keep from forcing the exhibitor to raise his prices, the producer must develop a little "team-work" with the exhibitor.

Here is the stand taken by nine-tenths of the exhibitors the writer has talked with: Features not over four reels in length. Many of them only three reels. That may seem like a big slump to many producers, but if they put in a little more quality, less padding, more closely connected stories, it would not be a step backward, but a JUMP ahead, miles ahead of most features now on the market. There are a few of really good ones in these longer lengths, more that are good in the shorter lengths. And, those "longer ones" would be much better in the shorter lengths.

One company is now producing their three-part pictures, ones that have made good on Broadway, and releasing them in regular service at no increase in price. Since they can do that, others can shorten up, rent cheaper, still make a good profit, keep their film employed more of the time, and reap a greater income.

The supply end must dwindle. It is overstocked now. There are too many companies trying to make "features." They are features in name only.

The ones who first grasp this idea of shorter features, rented to be shown for a dime, will be the ultimate producers. As soon as that starts, numerous "to let" signs will begin to show up on studios of companies who have been trying to make a few "big features."

The really ideal photoplay is one of three-reel lengths. In that much film a story can be very complete. There will be more life, more vim, more pull and grip to it.

Then, let me suggest, for the house which is using a program of four reels, that the manufacturer make a one-reel comedy to be rented with the three-reel feature. That will give a good "fill-in" to make a program of regular length, and diversify it. By all means do not extend the feature over more than four reels.

Many, yes, most people, tire of a program over four reels in length. It tires the optic nerves. You may wonder how then they could watch a legitimate show of two or three hours. Here is the difference, "The ear plays its part as well as the eye in attending a legitimate production. There is a diversion for each of the separate nerves." This cannot be in photoplays. The audience must center their attention, through their eyes, on the screen. The eye must remain there. If it doesn't, the play will lose its meaning to them. No matter how good the projection, longer than an hour is torture to the average optic nerve.

But, coming back to the "Higher Price."

The picture game received its welcome from the masses, and without the masses, where would ninety-nine out of a hundred houses be today? The average man can afford to go two, three or four times a week and take his family. If the price were higher, he would not go more than once a week, if that often. Not because he does not want to go, but because he could not afford to go.

It likens itself to the rich men of the world trying to live without the farmer to produce the grains upon which they live. The masses are predominant—will ever be predominant. They must be catered to by any institution which depends upon large attendance for its support, and, which wishes to retain its universal grip upon any line of endeavor or business.

How long has the few of the "classes" attended shows made up of photoplays? Isn't it a fact that they have looked down upon them?

It has been the hardest fight the exhibitor has had, the fight he has made in educating the "classes" to enjoy photoplays. Now that he has done it, he is mighty proud of their patronage. Still, how long could the exhibitor exist with their patronage alone?

This is my word to producers, "Give us shorter features, with better connected stories, paying attention to settings and photography, and rent them to us so that we can run them for 10 cents." Then, if they are the thing for the business, they will attract larger audiences, we will make more money so that we can pay more money for them. Exhibitors do not hesitate to spend money where it will make money, but they cannot spend their money for something which does not reap its own profit.

Price Raising in New England.

By Earle B. Tinker.

THE article by Robert Grau in a recent issue of the "World" gives a very thorough and comprehensive view of the great question before the exhibitors today. Is it not true that many of the men now advocating higher admission prices are men whose entire experience has been gained in the rental or producing ends of the business? And being such, are they competent to say just what an exhibitor should do?

As an exhibitor, the writer presented what at the time were the best productions available. Most all at an admission of twenty-five cents. In this one instance, the venture was profitable, where, in a much larger town, less than twelve miles distant, the public refused to pay over ten cents.

The answer is simple. I concentrated all my efforts in advertising a certain big attraction one night each week, and always the same night each week. That the same night every week was when we raised our prices was made just as prominent in our advertising as was the name of the attraction. In few words, it was continuity of advertising that caused the public to part with the extra fifteen cents. At first people kicked. Some stayed away altogether, and some prophesied that I would be ridden out of town on a rail. Yet, inside of a month, these same people were crowding round the ticket office anxious to part with their quarter. It hardly seems consistent that people in a back-woods town would clamor for admission to "Homer's Odyssey," does it? Yet such was the case. The town in question had always been looked upon as "being different from other towns, and new ideas wouldn't work there," as indeed, many exhibitors claim of their own towns.

For some time past the writer has been traveling representative for different distributing companies, and now with one of the largest feature producers and distributors, think that I can give an impartial view of present conditions.

The theaters are all complaining of poor business. Yet how many theaters conduct an advertising campaign worthy of the name? Many pay a sufficient amount, but does it get them anything? They claim not. My contention is that for worthy subjects prices can be raised. Possibly at a loss for a time, but eventually at greater profit, and systematic, continuous advertising will do it. That is the root of it all.

Another big set-back is timidity on the part of the ex-exhibitors. They have never tried to raise their prices and don't dare to. There is one notable exception. In one of our prominent eastern cities where five-cent admissions were the rule, one exhibitor contracted for an exclusive program of good attractions and put his price up to ten cents. Such advertising as he did was continuous and very good. He used the daily papers freely and had a reporter write up each subject. He neither asked nor received the co-operation of his brother exhibitors. For a time this exhibitor smilingly lost money, for "why should we pay ten cents when we can see as many reels elsewhere for five cents?" But in a short time the tide turned. The people began to realize that there was a difference in the quality of the reels even if there were no more. Also, one of the five-cent houses closed up about the time the tide turned. This house, the five-cent one, has been renovated and is now being run on a ten-cent basis, presenting some of the best attractions procurable.

It is, indeed, regrettable that more influential exhibitors will not endeavor to charge more for really meritorious subjects. There is no more logic in running a twenty-five cent production for ten cents than there is to insist on a two dollar dinner at a five-cent lunch counter, but such steps must be made very gradually. Let us all talk, eat and sleep, "increased prices for worthy attractions." But first of all, why not do all the advertising, of a permanent value, that we can.

British Notes.

UNOSTENTATIOUSLY and deprived of its usual atmosphere of gaiety and rejoicing the year 1915 has ushered its presence over the British Isles. The gloomy cloud, already five months old, overhanging the whole of Europe shows no sign of immediate dissolution, and at a time when sentiments of peace and goodwill are supposed to predominate in the minds of men a consciousness of its existence, with ever present thoughts of friends or relatives in peril on land or sea has evaporated into a thin shadow of its former self the festive spirit of the English Yuletide. A considerable amount of the time and money ordinarily spent by the general public at this time of the year on amusements has been directed into other channels. A universal desire to send presents to soldier friends at the front has doubtlessly utilized much of "John Bull's" Christmas pocket money, and as a consequence elaborate theatrical productions are the exception in England rather than the rule. I mention this just by way of explanation for the phenomenal success of the filmic pantomime this season. The consummate skill in producing and the truly magnificent stage settings noticeable, for instance, in the Famous Players' "Cinderella," are regarded as very close competitors by the theatrical profession to the legitimate "panto." Certainly, taken upon any grounds, economical or comparative, no one can blame the public for seeing a good film pantomime for half the price charged to see a poor stage production.

* * *

While on the subject of a Famous Players production it would not be fair to leave unnoticed the cordial reception given to "The Sign of the Cross," released this week. Both the acting and the scenery leave little room for improvement, except perhaps in this small particular. It is better in productions where the players are garbed in white to tint or tone down scenes depicting a great concourse of people. When the Cines Co. produced nearly the same story under the title of "Quo Vadis," they took this precaution and obviated what otherwise would have been strong halation. The reception of "The Sign of the Cross" goes, however, to prove that success depends not so much upon the strength of the story as upon skill and thoroughness in production, for since the release of "Quo Vadis" there have been at least half a dozen cheap imitations of the legend of Nero, but not one was booked to a quarter of the extent of the two mentioned.

* * *

Apropos the duplication of historical or classical productions. There is abundant material left for adaptation to the silent stage if scenario writers and editors will only take the trouble to read them up. Has no American producer ever heard of the legend of Jason in his search for the Golden Fleece, of Perseus the Gorgon Slayer, and other equally suitable fancies of ancient mythology? I give the tip for what it is worth, but a film manufacturer with a really clever producer could make his mark with either of the above and without a great outlay. Macauley's version in "Lays of Ancient Rome" is about the most suitable.

* * *

The Australian Government has revised its duty upon imported moving-picture films from 5 to 10 per cent. For all imported foreign film to Australia the tax will now be twopence (four cents) per foot. British films will be charged three half-pence (three cents) per foot.

* * *

In a few recent importations, in two cases feature films of note, the words "Passed by the National Board of Censorship" have appeared on the tail piece of the subject. Taken literally this is apt to cause misapprehension. If the Board of Censorship referred to is an American organization it would be well to state the fact. So far this country is concerned there is no National Board of Censorship. We have the British Board of Film Censors, but even that is not an officially recognized institution.

* * *

Blackpool, the Coney Island of Great Britain, has hit upon an attractive idea for utilizing the moving-picture for advertising purposes. At the principal amusement hall in the town, the Tower, there are two clowns who have performed daily in the circus since the place was discovered. The two personailities are almost an institution, so familiar are they to the millions of trippers who have visited Blackpool. A comic film showing their adventures on the different attractions, their escapades on water-chutes, flying-machines, scenic railways, toboggans, etc., has been made by the local advertising authorities and the film is being loaned free to exhibitors. There is no advertising matter whatsoever embodied in the production and hundreds of applications for its use have been received. It is a precedent that will be followed by other English resorts.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

VITAGRAPH THEATER CHANGES PROGRAM.

The Broadway Star Feature at the Vitagraph Theater for the week beginning January 17 will be "Hearts and the Highway," a historical drama in five parts, picturized by Colonel Casper Ewing Brady from the book of the same name by the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady. It is directed by Wilfred North. Darwin Karr will be seen as Sir Harry Richmond and Miss Lillian Walker as Lady Kate. Other players in the cast will be Donald Hall, L. Rogers Lytton, Charles Kent, Harry Northrup, Anders Randolph, Ned Finley, Charles Eldridge, Charles Wellesley and Rose Tapley.

Four shorter pictures selected from the week's most notable releases will precede the feature and will include, "Wanted, a Nurse, a Sidney Drew comedy; "The Right Girl," featuring Anita Stewart and Earle Williams, and "The Navajo Ring," a Western drama, all single part subjects, besides a two-part feature comedy, "War," in which Jay Dwiggins, Flora Finch, Hughie Mack and Kate Price will play the principal comedy parts.

The program at the Vitagraph Theater for this week will be confined to pictures.

WILLIE HOPPE IN MUTUAL MOBS.

They have been making use of Willie Hoppe, the billiard player, in mob scenes taken at the Griffith-Mutual studios. Hoppe has been in Los Angeles visiting his brother-in-law, R. A. Walsh, and Director Jack O'Brien has caught him "loafin' around," so to speak, and put him to work. O'Brien also gave a dinner party for the noted billiardist the other night, and among the guests were Elmer Clifton, R. A. Walsh, Robert Harron, George Benoit and Eddie Dillon.

"THE STILL ON SUNSET MOUNTAIN" PRODUCES GINGER ALE.

Thomas H. Ince at last sanctioned "faking" in a motion picture play when he consented to the use of ginger ale instead of whiskey in the production of "The Still on Sunset Mountain," a Kay Bee release in the Mutual program. It is a mountaineer story, and the mountaineers in the picture swig whiskey as if it were water. "Don't take a chance on stopping the production while the actors recover," Ince told Director Charles Swickard. "Make it ginger ale."

REALISTIC PRISON SCENES IN "THE AWAITED HOUR."

Views of a real state's prison with actor convicts roaming among the factories and the great quadrangle and with the armed guards walking the parapets in the distance, are shown in "The Awaited Hour," a two-reel Imp drama to be released on February 5. A sensational jump from the prison wall into the river flowing beneath it is a most realistic feature of the melodrama.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Announcement is made to the trade that the film organization known as the McEnnery Syndicate, the New York branch of which was located in the Candler Building, has vacated those offices and is now occupying a suite with the Alco Film Corporation. Arthur Levey, formerly manager, will take over all the business, with full control, and also attend to the exploitation of foreign features, having secured the agency for a number of prominent producers in London.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-MARY PICKFORD COMPANY.

Papers have been filed in Albany for the incorporation of the Famous Players-Mary Pickford Company. The incorporators are Ralph Kohn, Adolph Zukor and Edwin S. Porter. It is rumored that the significance of this action is the distribution of Mary Pickford subjects as a distinct series of releases.

Among the Picture Theaters

MECCA THEATER, DAYTON, OHIO.

Embodies All Modern Conveniences—Accommodates 500—Music Rendered by Seeburg Photoplayer.

ONE of the prettiest and best conducted exclusive moving picture theaters in Dayton, Ohio, is the Mecca, which is situated at Third street and Broadway. It was opened in October, 1914, and has been doing a good business since that time. It is owned by Julius Leopold, a well-known business man of Dayton, and is under the management of R. C. Krapf.

This handsome picture house, and it may well be put in that class judging by the accompanying view of the exterior, has a seating capacity of 500. It is attractively and comfortably furnished, and contains all up-to-date conveniences. That the structure is built as near fireproof as it is possible to erect one is attested by the fact that it meets all the requirements of the Ohio State Building Code. Cement, brick and steel were the materials used mostly in its erection. The flooring of the lobby is of tile so arranged as to form a pretty design with the name "Mecca" carefully worked into it. The front of the Mecca has a conservative and inviting appearance, and the artistically arranged electric lights when burning after dusk add to its attractiveness. The name of the house is displayed on big electric signs running down the front of the big towers at both ends of the entrance to the building. There are eight large exit doors leading to the street and a number of others open upon the rear court. The exits on Third street have vestibules built on to them.

Mecca Theater, Dayton, Ohio.

The interior is decorated in white and green with tan-colored walls and spanish leather wainscoting, all colors blending nicely into one another. The lighting of the auditorium has been satisfactorily accomplished by large artistic indirect lighting fixtures and shaded wall brackets. The building is heated and ventilated by a Sturtevant blower system which insures fresh air at all times.

In order that the lights in the theater which are kept burning during the projection of a picture will not affect it, the screen has been set back on the stage nine feet and is surrounded with a black velvet shadow box the depth of which is the same as the distance at which the screen has been placed. The projection surface is a Gold Fibre screen and it is twenty-three feet from the front row of seats, making that row as desirable as any other. A couple of the latest motor-driven Simplex machines are used. The operating room is big and well ventilated. Music is furnished by a Seeburg Photoplayer which is greatly appreciated by the patrons of the Mecca.

Mr. Krapf has his program in the shape of a private mailing card which, when unfolded and laid out flat, measures 11 inches long and 8½ inches high. It is folded twice the long way, so that it is just a little bit higher than Uncle Sam's post card. On it is a picture of the front view of the Mecca, the week's program and admission prices for each matinee and evening show and the advertisements of local merchants. The management requests the patrons to save the programs, as five of them entitle one to see a five-cent show.

The admission prices are five and ten cents, the rates being governed by the kind of show.

BIOGRAPH THEATER, CHICAGO, ILL.

The Windy City Gets Another Splendid Picture House. Has 1,000 Seats—Managed by Martin Sachs.

THE development of theater construction for the presentation of moving pictures is rapidly superseding all other amusement theaters. This is due to the increased patronage by reason of the wonderful advances that have been made in the pictures themselves. From the cheap sensational the progression has been to the historical and educational, thus making larger and better theaters financially successful; hence the employment of some of our best architects in the study and designing of them.

The "Biograph," recently completed, at 2433-43 Lincoln avenue, Chicago, Ill., designed by Samuel N. Crowen, architect, has a capacity of 1,000 seats on the ground floor graded to the proper contour, so as to make perfect sight lines, and is surrounded with open courts giving more than the requisite number of fire exits prescribed by the city ordinances. Martin Sachs is the manager of this beautiful picture house.

Biograph Theater, Chicago, Ill.

The space usually allotted for each seat has been increased so as to make it possible for the constant changing crowds not to disturb the people remaining in their seats. The structure was but four months in building and is practically fireproof. It covers a ground area of 125x120 feet, permitting stores, offices and a lodge hall to be built on the street front distinct from the theater, and separated therefrom by a court and firewalls.

The decorative treatment of the interior is very simple, but in good taste: soft French gray tones for the paneled ceiling and beams relieved with ivory and gold and plaster ornamentation, while the side walls are treated in warm flesh tints relieved with ivory and gold, and all the panels in the wall pilasters have a slight tinge of mulberry.

The system of lighting is carried out with good results. The method employed is semi-indirect. Large bowls are hung on chains from the ceiling panels and are so controlled that effects from late sunlight to dawn can easily be produced, while the side wall brackets with shaded lights are so arranged as to guide patrons to their seats. The heating and ventilation systems are by means of fans in the basement blowing fresh air through tempered coils filtering through ducts below the floor, the air escaping through mushroom heads under the seats. The air is then exhausted by means of ceiling ventilators of more than sufficient capacity.

The lobby and vestibule are treated in a very simple but effective manner, having the sidewalls finished in "Caen" stone resting on Alps Green marble bases. The lobby is also provided with the usual check room, ticket office and necessary toilet rooms and is wider than the ordinance requires in order to accommodate large crowds with ease.

The exterior is designed in "Italian Rennaisance" of a soft red brick treated with satin finish ivory enamel terra cotta. The illumination of the exterior and canopy over the lobby is direct lighting in horizontal rows, over the sill courses as well as the cornice, presenting a brilliancy for several hundred feet distant. The operating room is large and well ventilated. There are also within easy access of the operators a large rest room and room with toilet facilities, as well as a big rewind and mechanics' room. The port holes and doors are automatically controlled.

Interior View of Biograph Theater, Chicago, Ill.

LYRIC THEATER IN NEW HANDS.

The Lyric Theater, a moving picture house situated in Michigan City, Ind., has been sold by Messrs. Ledbetter and Ganschow to I. A. Battenburg and L. J. Barham. Both Mr. Battenburg and Mr. Barham are experienced business men, and they intend to give the public of Michigan City a program that will compare favorably with the shows given in picture houses of the big cities. Although the Lyric was put in first-class condition by the former owners a short time before they sold the place, the new owners are making several changes, among which is a new ventilation system.

LEASE OF STAR THEATER SOLD.

Ed. J. Butler, of Ishpeming, Mich., manager of the Ishpeming and Menominee theaters, that city, who has been manager of the Star in Negaunee, Mich., for the past nine months, closed a deal by which Rytkanen and Allen, who conducted the house prior to the time that Mr. Butler took it, came into possession of the property again January 1. Mr. Allen acts as the manager and Mr. Rytkanen, who owns the block in which the Star is located, has charge of the operating booth.

Messrs. Rytkanen and Allen discontinued the vaudeville which Mr. Butler had been offering.

A COTERIE OF THEATRE MANAGERS.

An Intelligent and Experienced Picture Man Directs Management of Each of the Kunsky, Inc., Houses.

THE accompanying photograph represents the various house managers of the chain of theaters operated in Detroit by John H. Kunsky, Inc. The photograph was posed exclusively for the Moving Picture World at the request of our Detroit correspondent.

Mr. Kaliska is manager of the Royal theater, having recently come from Buffalo, where he was, for a year, manager of the Allendale theater. The royal was one of the first picture houses in Detroit. Mr. Woods is the second oldest manager in point of service now associated with John H. Kunsky. At one time he was house fireman at the Royal; this was when the house was first opened. He was then advanced to other positions and shortly after the Empress was opened, he was placed in charge. He has been manager there ever since. A. C. Hoganson is manager of the Garden and has been since the house opened nearly two years ago. Mr. Starr is manager of the Liberty, previous to which time he was manager of the Empire. Mr. Moule has charge of the new Alhambra. He came with the company in February, 1914; he formerly had been with the Kinemacolor Company. For the first six weeks he acted as a personal scout for Mr. Kunsky, and has at various times served in a managerial capacity at the Liberty, Columbia and Garden. Mr. Irons came with Mr. Kunsky in October, 1913, having formerly been in the theatrical busines in Muskegon.

Mr. Kunsky has every reason to feel proud of his men. They are all experienced, faithful and diligent workers, ever alert to enhance their knowledge of the motion picture industry. The managers co-operate with one another and the "Managers' Room" in the Kunsky suite of offices in the Dime Bank building, Detroit, compares favorably with the comfy parlor of a happy home. We regret that we cannot herewith show Mr. Kunsky's photograph. He recently posed for the Moving Picture World, and his happy countenance will shortly appear in our columns.

Managers of the Kunsky, Inc., Circuit of Picture Houses.

Top Row: W. G. Kaliska, J. M. Wood, A. C. Hoganson and M. Harlann Star. Bottom Row: T. D. Moule, M. W. Schoenherr and H. W. Irons.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"BLACK AND WHITE" (MinA).

This one-reel MinA comedy is of especial interest because it is the first of the series in which Harry La Pearl, the famous circus clown, appears.

"Black and White is a happy blending of the slapstick and high-class pantomime. The makers of MinA Films pride themselves on photography and this picture is said to disclose the cameraman at his best.

Scene from "Black and White" (Mina).

La Pearl's work shows the ease and deliberate skill of the well-trained pantomimist, and is very amusing. The story is told in a series of humorous episodes and is easily followed.

Taken all in all, "Black and White" should prove one of the most popular of the distinctly classy MinA Films so far released.

"THE MEASURE OF A MAN" (Rex).

"The Measure of a Man," a two-reel Canadian Northwest Mounted Police drama featuring Pauline Bush and William Dowlin will be released under the Rex brand on Thursday, January 28. The scenario of this photodrama of life across the border was written by Thomas Forman and produced by Joseph De Grasse. William Dowlin, Joseph De Grasse, Pauline Bush and Lon Chaney enact the leading roles.

Scene from "The Measure of a Man" (Rex).

In addition to its faithful reproduction of life in the factor trading posts of the far north the film is built upon a foundation of primal strength. Primitive passions have their fullest play. The dramatic denouement attains its greatest interest following a totally unexpected climax which leaves one silent in admiration of the author's mastery of his theme.

Pauline Bush, as the wife of a lovable gambler type, displays her artistry in the skillful handling of a difficult role. As a western type Pauline Bush makes an ideal figure. Her characterization of Helen MacDermott in "The Measure of a Man" is but another instance of her exceptional powers of characterization.

William Dowlan is cast as the gambler-husband. In his delineation of the role he gives the spectator an insight into the ways of marked-card gamblers and a "close-up" reveals how the identifying marks upon the backs of the deck are interlined with the skill of a bank-note engraver. Picturesque Indians are introduced into the background of the picture with great effectiveness and one of their number later figures in an attempt upon the life of the gambler. The Rex company is to be congratulated upon the degree of histrionic skill attained by these swarthy-skinned aborigines, many of whom have never seen the interior of Carlisle nor the Haskell Indian school from which so many Indian photoplayers are reputed to have been graduated.

"The Measure of a Man" tells the story of a gambler who is run out of camp with his wife by the Vigilante Committee after members of the committee have caught him using marked cards in a friendly game. Outcasts from civilization, the gambler and his wife meet a young officer of the Canadian mounted police. Sick at heart, the young wife accepts the attentions of the officer. A tragedy between the husband and the officer is narrowly averted. Later, when the husband learns that his wife loves the officer, he determines to let her make her choice between them. He leaves her with the officer, but the latter, realizing the sacrifice the gambler has made, induces him to return, and the wife, her admiration kindled for the manly bearing of her husband, clings close to him as the final scene dissolves.

"COLLEGE DAYS" (Kay-Bee).

Another red-blooded story of life on the campus, in which the great American game of football holds the center of interest, soon will be released by the Kay-Bee Co. Feb. 5 under the title of "College Days." It is a two-part feature that bids fair even to eclipse the remarkable success of "The Scrub," a recent Ince release which scored such a tremendous hit.

"College Days" relates the story of a ne'er-do-well youth who betrays his mother college. For drinking too heavily he is dismissed from the football team by the coach. Immediately he enters a rival institution—an Indian school—and reveals the signals and plays he has learned. While his identity is still unknown, his team is winning against his former teammates when he is suddenly injured. The Redskins are beaten and the unfaithful youth's plan is unearthed. The professor's pretty daughter, who has renounced the reprobate because of his habits, then accepts the proposal of another youth who had resented the disloyal one's bullied tactics toward a student.

George Fisher, the rapidly rising young leading man, is seen as the defiant collegian and his interpretation of the part is declared to be a splendid piece of work. Louise Glaum makes a winsome fair-co-ed, while Gilbert Pratt takes good care of the part of the lad who wins the girl, and Joseph Dowling does justice to the character of the father. Scott Sidney directed the production.

WORLD FILM TO DO "TRILBY."

About twenty years ago "Trilby" was almost a fad in America. George DuMaurier wrote the book, which was one of the world's best sellers. It was afterward done into a play and held the boards for a long time, immortalizing the character of Svengali, who is still the model for the hypnotizing stage villain. Now William A. Brady, who has the dramatic rights for the play, proposes to put it in pictures. It will appear in five reels, and be distributed by the World Film Corporation.

EXPENSIVE GOWNS IN KLEINE'S "DU BARRY."

Some idea of the elaborate magnificence of George Kleine's "Du Barry," featuring Mrs. Leslie Carter, may be obtained from the above cut, which shows Mrs. Carter in one of the thrilling scenes of the drama, gowned in a Parisian creation which cost $1,500 in American money. This is one of three exceptionally beautiful dresses whose total value is roughly $2,200. The gown worn by Mrs. Carter in the court scene is a jewel-brocaded affair, trimmed with fourteen ornaments and designed for her by a fashionable establishment in Paris. It is by far the most elaborate costume ever seen in a motion picture, yet to masculine eyes its intrinsic value remains a shrouded, impenetrable mystery.

Scene from "Du Barry" (Kleine).

The entire production is characterized by a lavish expenditure of money and a close attention to detail which makes "Du Barry" a splendid example of the modern tendency toward the beautiful and representative in pictures.

"YOUNG ROMANCE" (Lasky).

The Jesse L. Lacky Feature Play release of Edith Taliaferro in "Young Romance," which is dated for January 21, is an invasion of a dramatic field in which photoplays have up to the present been few and far between. "Young Romance," which tells the story of the adventures of two clerks—a girl and a boy—in a metropolitan department store is comedy, but not the comedy of the farcical, knock-about variety usual to the screen. It is genuine comedy of types and "manners," as the dramatic critics would classify it, with a good love story and with thrilling elements of adventure. It is an instance where the director and the actors and the scenario experts have worked the production for the screen of Wm. C. De Mille's play to such good effect that one does not laugh at the characters on the curtain but with them.

Scene from "Young Romance" (Lasky).

Nellie Nolan, of the notion counter, has always wanted to be a lady and she determines to gratify this ambition for one week, that of her yearly vacation, at a fashionable Maine seaside resort. Tom Clancy has also longed to taste the sweets of society and riches. They have never met. But at the "swell hotel" they come to know each other—but each imagines the other to be truly rich and truly of the social "elite." Tom saves Nellie from the schemes of an evil fake count, who is hunting for the fortune she is supposed to possess, and they fall in love. After this one glorious week, they both return to work in the same store, recognize each other, and are perfectly satisfied to be just what they are so long as it is possible for them to have each other.

It is interesting to note that, in addition to "Young Romance," the Lasky company will release a second comedy this month—Edward Abeles in "After Five," founded on the play of the same name by Wm. C. and Cecil B. De Mille. This is a piece more dependent on farcical situation, but nevertheless filled with humor. It tells the story of a young man who, believing that he has lost in speculation the fortune of the woman he loves, seeks to reimburse her by taking out a life insurance policy and encompassing his own death. Of course the policy has the customary suicide clause, and, to evade this, he contracts with a blackmail society to put him out of his misery. When it develops that the fortune has not been lost but doubled, this unfortunate young man has all kinds of trouble trying to escape from his own plans of death and disaster, for oaths have been taken and payments made which cannot well be cancelled.

The ridiculous possibilities of this plot are apparent at a glance. Exhibitors may find an indication in the fact that out of three releases by the Lasky Play Co. this month two are comedies. The third was the Lasky-Belasco production of "The Girl of the Golden West."

"LOVE'S CROSSROADS" (Liberty).

"Love's Crossroads," a three-reel society drama, will be the first release of the Liberty Motion Picture Co. of San Mateo, Cal., who are under contract to market exclusively through the Sawyer Film Corporation. The picture is made notable by a brilliant and dramatic love story—one of the clean, wholesome variety which is so much in demand with the public. Excellent photography, and an excellent company of players, contribute to the success of this feature.

Scene from "Love's Crossroads" (Sawyer).

"SOPHIE'S HOMECOMING" IS UP TO SNUFF.

Margaret Joslin has been sneezing steadily for a week. In the Essanay comedy, "Sophie's Homecoming," Slippery Slim, to get even with Mustang Pete, puts snuff on his handkerchief. When Mustang goes to visit Sophie he pulls out the handkerchief and both are convulsed with their sneezing. Slim did a good job of it and used real snuff. Mustang got over the smart of the snuff, but Sophie was entirely unaccustomed to tobacco, and her nose refuses to quit its tickling.

The Famous Stars Film Alliance, with an office in Cleveland, are arranging to open offices in Cincinnati and Detroit, as well, for the handling of their line of feature films. Phillip Adler is president, and Herman J. Garfield, general manager.

"PATSY'S VACATION" (Lubin).

All of Patsy's earnestness and good effort fail to protect him from the wicked Sykesy, who, at the time of the final examination, plays a shameful trick. Patsy is well prepared, but Sykesy, through his attention to games, stands no chance of passing. Ever resourceful, however, he steals a sheet of copy from the desk of the boy next to him, but one of the teachers unexpectedly appears, and Sykesy places the stolen sheet in Patsy's desk. The paper is found, and Patsy, not being able to explain, is expelled from the college for all time. This affair coupled with the auto theft reflects badly on Patsy's character and his irate father believes there is no hope for his unfortunate boy and puts him to the hardest work on the farm. Sykesy, through his crookedness, passes with honors, and, when the boys return, a picnic is arranged, at which Patsy is not permitted to participate. Things have gone so bad that Patsy's father proposes to give him a severe thrashing, but the boy refuses to submit and runs away from home. He boards a train for anywhere, but the only bill he has is a bad one, and he is put off the train at the first station, and spends the night on a bench in the depot. This picture is pitifully funny, and so far is probably the biggest scream of the series.

Scene from "Patsy's Vacation" (Lubin).

NEW MUTUAL EXCHANGE AT ALBANY, N. Y.

Interest in and the demand for the Mutual program has increased all over New York State to such an extent that the Mutual Film Corporation, to deal adequately with the stress of new business, has opened a new branch office at Albany. The Mutual has put in charge of this exchange as manager Mr. J. M. Mullen, who has been identified with the film business in that territory for many years. The new exchange occupies the fine building at 733 Broadway, Albany, and beginning with the New Year all exhibitors interested in the Mutual program who make the State capital their headquarters will find a welcome at that address.

The Albany office will buy the entire output of the Mutual program, and in order to take care of the additional business new film for a considerable period back was purchased complete so that the new exchange was immediately in a position to supply demands for past releases now famous in the screen world.

In opening this new office the Mutual Film Corporation completes a chain of five branch exchanges in the State of New York alone. These exchanges reach from Buffalo to New York City. Two of them are located in New York City, and the other three in Buffalo, Syracuse and Albany.

ALLIANCE PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN BEGINS.

With the departure of Frank Frane last Saturday for an extended tour of New York State the country-wide publicity crusade of the Alliance program began.

General Manager Cobe has been busy for some weeks past, working out the details of this project and this week will see three more representatives carrying the Alliance banner leave New York for the south and west.

Ben Abrams, who just returned from the preliminary operations in New England, will cover Pennsylvania first, and then work his way southward. Arthur Rosenbach is slated to represent the Alliance in the middle west, and Leonard Geisenberg, who just made a flying trip to New York last week from the western and coast States, will return to that territory and resume his end of the campaign.

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLERS AT AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

One of the best attended expositions at the Grand Central Palace, New York, was the recent Automobile Show, held during the week of January 4. Two automatic ticket selling devices made by the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company were bought to take care of the rush, and did their work to perfection, handling the big crowds without interruption. The officers of this company say that they have booked many orders and that the factory is running overtime.

ITALA MOVES TO LARGER QUARTERS.

Plans for extending operations of the Itala Film Co. of America, of which Harry R. Raver is the active head, necessitated larger and more desirable executive quarters. These were secured in the World's Tower Building at 110 West 40th street and a large force of carpenters, painters and electricians have just completed the installation of the various departments necessary for the work of Mr. Raver's staff.

The new offices embrace the most of the twenty-fourth floor of the building. Here the exploitation of "Cabiria" and other excellent Itala productions goes on without interruption. New subjects are arriving from the Torino studio and will soon be circulated in America.

TRANSPORTABLE LIGHTS.

One of the really interesting developments in transportable illumination for motion picture use is the new Allison & Hadaway Twin Arc lamp recently installed in leading Eastern studios. The features of the lamp combine high efficiency with compactness and portability. The lamp weighs 19 pounds, and is transported in a light case. Each unit furnishes 8,000 c.p. of white actinic light.

Out-door scenes at night, the subway, store interiors, automobile races at night, industrial scenes of many descriptions —all have been successfully made with the lamps. "In fact," said J. W. Allison, "the uses to which this new illuminant may be put open up 25 per cent. additional range to the director looking for new and novel effects." Demonstrations may be had at the offices of the company, 235 Fifth avenue, New York.

"THE THIEF AND THE CHIEF" (Eclair).

A rollicking, frolicing photoplay comedy of laughs, thrills and absurdly funny situations is "The Thief and the Chief," to be released by Eclair on Sunday, January 31st. The young and handsome son of a Chief of Police in a big city turns burglar for a joke, is shielded by a pretty girl who thinks he is what he pretends to be while her father mistakes him for a college professor, and to cap the climax, the young fellow's own father is about to place the bracelets on his wrists when explanations follow mutual recognition and the tale of a little club bet which had such large consequences is told. The story jumps from one light comedy situation to another with lightning-like rapidity, and interspersed with thrills as it is makes most diverting entertainment. In the role of the "gentleman burglar" Stanley Walpole gives a finished portrayal and, as the girl who shields him, Edna Payne plays most delightfully, her charming personality and dainty manners fitting the part exactly.

Scene from "The Thief and the Chief" (Eclair).

THE SPIRIT OF THE VIOLIN (Selig).

"The Spirit of the Violin," a story of John Graham's vindication, has been termed one of those unusual stories which are released so frequently by the Selig Polyscope Company. It is an appealing and virile tale, in two reels, written by James Oliver Curwood. Edward J. LeSaint directed this entertaining pictureplay. How the spirit of the violin came to Mary, just as she was about to marry an adventurer, is graphically shown. As the shades of night were falling Scene from "The Spirit of the Violin" (Selig).

Mary, who through the spirit of the violin, escapes the toils of the plotter, hears again the plaintive strains coming from the cherished instrument. She believes the spirit of John, her long-lost husband, has returned to play for her. With her baby she staggers back to the little cabin. There she meets John, her beloved, in the flesh, and their reunion is intensely dramatic. "The Spirit of the Violin," released Monday, January 25, is a graphic portrayal of life among the lowly. Beautiful photography and scenery, convincing acting by an all-star cast, and a plot that grips the heart-strings, makes this feature release one that will be anticipated with pleasure by the pictureplay public. The story in brief is that John and Mary and baby Lillian live in poverty but happiness. John is unjustly convicted of a crime and imprisoned. He leaves the cherished violin in the cabin. Mary struggles along alone. The adventurer comes. He makes it appear that John is dead. Before a mock marriage is consummated the old violin falls to the cabin floor. It awakens Mary to her hidden danger. John is found to be innocent, comes home, and with his violin brings Mary and Baby Lillian back into sunshine and love.

LUBIN PROGRAM ANNOUNCEMENT.

Beginning January 21st the Lubin Manufacturing Company will release each week on its regular program a three reel photoplay—the same type and quality of picture that has heretofore been sent out as a special feature. This interesting announcement was made this week by Ira M. Lowry, general manager of the Lubin Company.

Another interesting announcement by Mr. Lowry is that beginning the first of February the company will release each Tuesday and Saturday on the regular program a high-class, one-reel comedy. On one of these days Arthur Johnson and Lottie Briscoe will be featured in one of these comedies and on the other Joseph Kaufman and Ethel Clayton will be starred in one of these laughable plays.

The popularity of the three reelers has been so great that Mr. Lowry determined to release one each week on the regular program. These pictures will be of the same high quality as the special releases and will be shown each week on alternate Wednesdays and Thursdays. A number of these three-reelers, written by well-known writers and enacted by specially selected companies of Lubin players, have been completed and others are being made.

The new comedies will undoubtedly attract wide attention and interest. Arthur Johnson and Lottie Brisco have already completed a number of screamingly funny one-reelers and the two Lubin stars have demonstrated that they are just as clever along comedy lines as in more serious parts. Joseph Kaufman, who is also to be featured in a comedy each week, has already achieved a wide reputation as a light comedian, and Miss Ethel Clayton, one of the best known of the Lubin stars, has done some of the best work of her career in the comedies with him.

"THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER" IN PICTURES.

That the F. C. Whitney film production of the "Chocolate Soldier" will be handled by the Alliance Films Corporation is the latest report in film circles. The screen version of the photoplay is taken from the libretto of the light opera of the same name, which in turn was adapted from the famous drama, "Arms and the Man," by G. Bernard Shaw.

All of the principals of the opera were engaged for the picture and appear in the parts they created before the footlights. Among them such names appear as Tom Richards, Alice Yorke, George Tallman, Francis J. Boyle and several others who have large followings among music lovers. The production was staged under the direction of Stanislaus Stange, the original producer who left nothing undone that would add to its attractiveness and merit.

MARY PICKFORD AS "MISTRESS NELL."

For the first time since her connection with the Famous Players Film Co., which dates back to more than two years ago, Mary Pickford is seen in the costume of the romantic period of English history, in a five-part film adaptation of the celebrated historic drama, "Mistress Nell," the former starring vehicle of Henrietta Crosman, by George C. Hazelton, Jr., released on the Paramount Program February 1.

"Little Mary" invests the role with a dynamic force and a tender charm unequalled in any previous stage portrayals of the piquant and daring "Nell," of whom it has been said, "England would not be as great without her."

In this noted drama of the days of gay King Charles II, dominated by the heroism and gallantry that marked that brilliant period, Mary Pickford plays the role of pretty Nell Gwyn, the favorite of the public and the monarch of England, whose bravery and wit save her royal lover from treachery at home and abroad, and frees him at the same time from the toils of a designing woman, who tries to steal his heart from Nell, as well as to wrest his kingdom from him, to give to France. It is Louise, Duchess of Portsmouth, who undertakes this double plot, but little Nell cleverly detects her treacherous plans. After angering and baffling Louise in a score of counter-plots, Mistress Nell, from a hiding place, sees the signing of certain papers which are to place England in the hands of France if they reach their destination. This, Nell determines, shall never be, and in the guise of a young blade of fashion she wins the confidence of Louise, and is herself given the important documents to deliver. Needless to say, the papers are never delivered, except to the King of England, together with a missive from Louise, which, intended for France's monarch, plainly reveals her duplicity. How Nell further outwits the vengeful woman and wins back her royal lover's heart is dramatically developed in this dashing romance of the gallant days when hearts were won with the sword.

Scene from "Mistress Nell" (Famous Players).

Throughout the story, Miss Pickford wears several changes of costume, first as the actress, Nell Gwyn, then as Mistress Nell, the sweetheart of the king, and finally as the cavalier, in which disguise she circumvents the plots of the king's enemies, and which provides the first opportunity in many years for Miss Pickford to appear on the screen as a boy, and the creation is as artistic as it is novel.

The settings are elaborately commensurate with the requirements of the subject.

"THE SHANGHAIED BABY" (Lubin).

This is a wonderful romantic story, telling of an abduction of a little boy who passes through a series of experiences and journeys to foreign lands. He eventually, while still a boy, falls into the hands of a kindly disposed sea-captain where, in the tropics, he grows to sturdy manhood. The good captain eventually dies, and gives him a ring which finally restores him to his family. The boy joins the U. S. Navy and reaches home, where he hears his mother sing an old song, "The Slumber Boat," which revives memories of his childhood. A beautiful love match ends one of the most interesting series of adventures ever placed upon the screen. The cast is unusually strong, including: Ormi Hawley, Louise Huff, Edgar Jones, Earl Metcalfe, Kempton Greene, little Jack McCloskey (the star kiddie of the Lubin studio) and many others.

Scene from "The Shanghaied Baby" (Lubin).

"RESTITUTION," STRONG AMERICAN DRAMA.

"Restitution," the two-reel American-Mutual feature just released in the Mutual program, is unquestionably a melodrama, but Director Henry Otto with his usual skill has succeeded very largely in disguising the fact. Charlotte Burton plays with singular emotional force the part of Elsa, the woman who at first is a prominent actress, but gradually sinks until she becomes a frequenter of low saloons. The shooting scene in which she kills in defense of her honor and the trial scene in which she accuses the innocent man both thrill the watching audience.

Winifred Greenwood's characterization of Helen, the heroine, is excellent, and Edward Coxen in the part of the wrongfully accused Lester rises to the full height of the remarkably dramatic role. As the false friend and clever schemer, George Fields renews his reputation for making a first-class villain. The scenes in which he foists the responsibility for the crime he has committed on his rival, and those later ones in which he listens with sardonic satisfaction to the other's conviction, are equally compelling.

The part of this other man, who, at the hand of Elsa, pays the price for yielding to ignoble desire, is adequately assumed by King Clark, and John Steppling is cast for a scene in which he has a realistic, life-and-death struggle with a burglar, played by William Bertran, while Edith Borella appears as an adventuress.

PERCY HELTON IN "THE FAIRY AND THE WAIF."

Percy Helton, who plays Foxy, the Waif, in the big feature photoplay, "The Fairy and the Waif," which the Frohman Amusement Corporation is now producing, is freshest in the minds of the theater-going public by reason of his work as Eddie Holmes in "The Miracle Man," George M. Cohan's big 1914 success. He was the original "Buster Brown" at 12, and had acted before that with Louis Mann and Clara Lippman. His most notable part previous to his work with "The Fairy and the Waif" was as the boy with David Warfield in "The Return of Peter Grimm."

PATHE EXCHANGE IN MONTREAL.

All Pathe films, with the exception of "The Exploits of Elaine," may now be obtained in Canada through the Pathe Famous Feature Film Syndicate of Quebec, with offices at 313 Bleury street, Montreal, P. Q. This branch covers the territory of Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, and is under the management of Leon E. Ouimet. Other Canadian branches are contemplated within the near future.

KLEINE OPTICAL COMPANY SELLS MANY MACHINES TO CHURCHES.

Since the first of the year the Kleine Optical Company has been fairly inundated with orders from churches and educational institutions for projecting machines, indicating that January 1st was the time selected by many churches to seriously consider the possibilities of educational film. It is noteworthy that requests for information of machines are almost invariably confined to the standard well-known makes, as a number of churches found great difficulty the past year with second-hand, antiquated projection apparatus.

COLORED PICTURES BY UNIVERSAL'S NEW PROCESS.

William Foster, superintendent of the Universal West Coast laboratories, announces that his process of colored photography, upon which he has been working for the past nine months, is now perfected and that a single reel subject will shortly be produced in which his invention will be given its first demonstration.

The coloring of the picture will take place in the negative and will be printed on the positive just as the regular black and whites are printed. The Universal contemplates releasing the first of the new colored dramas in March.

NAVY INCREASING USE OF MOVING PICTURES.

In addition to the machine and equipment installed on the Battleship Connecticut, mentioned before, Mr. Lewis M. Swaab, of Philadelphia, advises that he has also just furnished a Power 6A with accessories to the battleship Kansas. With the report of another picture machine sold to a U. S. battleship by one of the New York dealers, mentioned elsewhere in this issue, it seems evident that the navy officials appreciate the possibilities of the pictures in furnishing recreation to our boys in blue.

Notes of the Trade

WILLIAM CLIFFORD, that versatile Bison actor, plays an extraordinary part in "The Crime of Thought," an interesting drama, in which his role of a half-crazed man calls for a bit of character playing which few actors in the films today could achieve so well as he.

* * *

Louise Glaum is known at Inceville as "the girl with a thousand gowns." Since joining the companies whose productions are shown in the Mutual program she has caused enthusiasm by the variety of her wardrobe. Her sister, a fashionable modiste, helps her to get "the very latest tho very first."

* * *

Just how Francis Ford escaped having his bomb-proof skull cracked open by the fusillade of stone which descends about him as he swims away from the set of royal rowdies in "The Madcap Queen of Gredshoffen," remains a mystery even to those who threw the stones. Ford told them to fire away with the brickbats and even the women of the company, including Grace Cunard (in costume royal), followed his bidding and splashed the water all about the Gold Seal director.

* * *

When Walter Edwards went into the San Bernardino Mountains recently to play the lead in "The Cross of Fire," a Kay Bee release in the Mutual program, he wore a costume given him by his guide on a hunting trip through the Canadian woods two years ago, whom Edwards had rescued from drowning.

* * *

Gertrude Claire has quite outdone her best previous effort in her portrayal of Old Mother Hudson, a drunken, illiterate woman who sells her daughter to a saloon keeper for a keg of whiskey. This character is shown in "Through the Murk," a Domino release in the Mutual program.

* * *

J. Barney Sherry, the veteran character actor of the Broncho company, soon will be seen again in one of his favorite roles, that of a seedy farmer, in "A Lucky Blowout," a strong drama to be released by the New York Motion Picture Corporation.

* * *

Thomas Ricketts has succeeded to a remarkable degree in establishing atmosphere in "The Law of the Wild," an American release in the Mutual program. The backwoods store with its display of general merchandise, traps and pelts, its shrewd store keeper, loungers and cowboys playing cards on a barrel, is realistic to the last detail.

* * *

In "The Spirit of Giving," a Beauty release in the Mutual program, Joseph Harris, as Stone, the middle-aged business man, has found a new vehicle for his versatile ability. "Stone," who by accident discovers the true spirit of giving, affords Harris the chance to contrast subsequent humility and gentleness with the character's former arrogance and heartlessness.

* * *

Irene Tams, who is being featured in the Regent Films, released through the United Program, is now working on a two-reel feature, called "Irene's Brave Fight."

It is a society drama and gives Miss Tams the opportunity of using many exclusive gowns. The scenario was written to suit Miss Tams' style, brings out many fine points and allows her to make the most of good character work.

Director-Actor-Author Sidney Bracy of the Thanhouser forces is putting on a two-reel picture called "The Abbeys," with Miss Minnie Berlin, Frank Farrinkton and himself in the leading roles. Mr. Bracy portrayed the famous "Jones, the butler," in "The Million Dollar Mystery," Thanhouser's great serial. Mr. Bracy plays an important part in Thanhouser's new serial, "Zudora."

* * *

Wallace Beery, the creator of the "Sweedie" character, appears to be getting funnier every day, according to the testimony of exhibitors, who have written to Essanay telling of the big laughs it brings every time one of the pictures is screened.

"I never fail to have big crowds when a "Sweedie" picture is announced," writes one theater manager, "and the crowd is never disappointed. These comedies convulse all with laughter and send everyone home in a good humor."

* * *

"Permit me to express the thanks of the prisoners for your kindness in making it possible for them to see that wonderful production, 'The Last Days of Pompeii,' on Christmas Day. This is probably the only chance very many of these men will ever have to see this wonderful production, and I know they fully appreciate your kindness in furnishing them that chance," writes William A. Moyer, Warden of the United States Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., to George Kleine.

The feature of the Christmas Day program was the big picture which, by the way, has entertained the prisoners of nearly every state penitentiary in the Union since its release more than a year ago.

* * *

Riley Chamberlin, the well-known comedian at the Thanhouser forces in New Rochelle, has just finished another "Conductor 786" picture, a Riley Chamberlin series, in which he displays his best talent and mirth-provoking characteristics. In this picture Riley is the good, kind-hearted old conductor, who does many little kindnesses which win for him admirers by the score day by day.

* * *

Victor Potel accomplishes the miraculous in the Essanay Snakeville comedy, "When Slippery Slim Bought the Cheese." Slim is inordinately fond of strong limburger cheese. One day when he indulges his fancy he buys a cheese so strong that when he attempts to eat it, the cheese walks across the table, down the table leg, crawls up the wall, out of the window, across the yard and disappears in a rat hole. It is a screamingly funny comedy from beginning to end.

* * *

E. H. Hulsey, who manages the big Queen theater, Dallas, Texas, played Kleine's "Officer 666" to something over a thousand dollars on the day, Friday, January 1, commencing the new year by breaking his house record. Admission was ten and twenty cents. The Queen seats 776 people, which makes the record all the more remarkable. The tremendous crowd compelled Hulsey to stop selling tickets at 9 o'clock in the evening and he estimates that he lost $200 by so doing.

* * *

In "The Story the Silk Hats Told," a one-reel Imp drama, King Baggot plays six different roles, namely—a politician, lover, doctor, business man, German burlesque comedian and bank clerk. The scenario of the novel drama was written by Curtis Benton and produced by George A. Lessey.

Picture Theaters Projected

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Mayor Howell has sent an urgent request to Building Inspector Anderson asking for a report on the conditions of the various moving picture theaters in the city. Mayor Howell in his letter makes it plain that under the existing laws of Delaware, he cannot grant licenses to the owners of theaters until he has received a report detailing the condition of the structures from the building inspector. He also states that all such theaters must comply with the city ordinances as to exits, fire escapes, etc. Reports have already been requested concerning the condition of the Lyric, Bijou, Pickwick, Hopkins and the Opera House which is now being operated for the exhibit of moving pictures.

PORTLAND, ME.—James W. Greeley of the Greeley Amusement Company recently visited Berlin, N. H., where he acquired control of the Princess theater, considered one of the prettiest houses in the state of New Hampshire. It is located in Berlin's business section and is practically a new structure. The building is constructed entirely of buff brick with elaborate terra cotta trimmings. The interior is finished in mahogany. The house is commodious, having both floor, balcony and four large boxes. Its stage is sufficiently large to accommodate the largest productions. Mr. Greeley intends to operate the Princess after the same system which has made his theater here so much of a success; vaudeville, musical comedy and moving pictures being featured. Mr. Greeley will divide his time between his theater here and the one at Berlin.

NO. ADAMS, MASS.—Capitalists of this city are interested in a project to erect a $60,000 moving picture theater. Plans are being prepared. The new structure will be fireproof and as modern as money can make it.

DETROIT, MICH.—John H. Kunsky, who controls the Garden, Columbia, Liberty, Casino, Royal, Empress and Washington theaters, has added another to his string of successes. The new house has been named the Alhambra, has seating capacity for 1,500 persons and cost approximately $100,000.

CANTON, O.—E. G. Backins and C. H. Frailey have opened their new theater, the Valentine. It has seating capacity for about 800 persons. The house is devoted to the exhibit of moving pictures, but so constructed as to be easily converted into a vaudeville or stock house.

E. LIVERPOOL, O.—The McKinley theater has been opened here and proved a big success. The house is devoted to the exhibit of high-grade moving pictures.

GLENSIDE, PA.—W. L. Raiser is having plans prepared for a three-story moving picture theater and lodge building, 32 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

HARRISBURG, PA.—Work on the new moving picture theater, the Regent, at 410 Market street, is being rushed as rapidly as the weather will permit. The new house is owned by Peter Magaro, who has had considerable experience as a moving picture exhibitor in this and other cities. The Regent is located in the heart of the business and shopping district, and will be one of the largest moving picture theaters in the city. It will have seating capacity for 1,000 persons. The building is being constructed in strict conformity with the new regulations of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, and this insures the greatest amount of protection from fire and first-class sanitary conditions in every particular. Modern methods of ventilation are being introduced and an ample number of emergency exits constructed. The aisles are wide and the spacing of the seats sufficiently large to prevent any discomfort or overcrowding. Oil paintings by renowned artists will form a conspicuous feature of the mural decorations. An elaborate illuminated electric sign, thirty-two feet high, will be placed on the roof of the theater. The Regent will be devoted to exhibit of the best productions of first class photoplays.

OXFORD, PA.—Roscoe C. Tindall, Equitable building, Wilmington, Del., is preparing plans for a two-story moving picture theater, 40 by 125 feet, to cost $20,000.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Nicola Land Co., Farmers' Bank building, are planning to erect a $100,000 moving picture theater.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Hoffman & Co., Globe theater building, are preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 45 by 106 feet, to cost $25,000.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—C. P. Berger is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 130 by 147 feet, to be erected at the northeast corner of Germantown avenue and Venango street, for J. Effinger.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Plaza theater, located at 2419-37 South Broad street, and the Century theater, at the northeast corner of Erie avenue and Marshall street, has been conveyed by the Active Real Estate Company to Edmund J. Bamberger, acting, it was reported, for Morris Spiers, president of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania. The Plaza was sold for a nominal consideration, subject to a mortgage of $17,000, and the Century for a like amount, subject to a mortgage of $41,500. The former is assessed at $51,700 and the latter at $36,100.

EUROPEAN WAR
5 REELS
Portraying actual scenes during Land and Naval engagements. State Rights now selling. Look for Next Week's Announcement.
THE PRIVATE FEATURE COMPANY
CLEVELAND, OHIO

JET BLACK FILM LEADER
ONE CENT PER FOOT
PERFECT PERFORATIONS. NEVER BEEN RUN.
Industrial Moving Picture Company
223-233 West Erie Street - - - - CHICAGO

FREE?
No—but the best prices for slides on the face of the earth.
Sample 15c.
Niagara Slide Co., Lockport, N. Y.

You Watch
THE POSTERS MADE BY
Goes
CHICAGO
QUALITY AND SERVICE

NEWS LETTER FROM OHIO.

By J. D. Raridan, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

REAL estate men of Ohio, or elsewhere, have come to recognize the motion picture industry for its widespread value to a city. They have found that five years of the drama in films has given a most impressive example of the valuable support their development has brought to real estate.

Figures on the industry were presented to the Cleveland Real Estate Board recently to the effect that approximately 100,000,000 feet of films were unreeled for the entertainment of many millions of people daily in more than 25,000 theatres in the United States. In all probability the capital invested is close upon $500,000,000. In every hamlet, town and city the construction of theatres has brought added value to the property itself and to the neighborhood in most cases. The exchanges occupy a great deal of the office space in many buildings and thus contribute their share to realty prosperity. Cleveland has fared well from both branches of the picture industry—the theatre and the exchange. There are approximately 200 theatres operating in the city and several dozen exchanges.

The Film Men's Credit Association has just been organized in Cleveland and comprises most of the active exchanges. The directors are C. G. Thompson, Z. M. Harris and E. G. Christensen. Walter Williams is chairman. The association was formed for the mutual benefit of the exhibitors and the exchange man and to promote better co-operation.

Arthur C. Desormeaux, who for some months has handled the Thanhouser exchange, has established himself in offices at 516 Columbia Building. State rights for "Beating Back" has been awarded him.

O. E. Jarret, Balch street, Akron, has plans for a two story brick picture theatre to be built at a cost of $10,000.

Josiah Slimm, 44 years of age, one of the owners of the Marquis theatre, Cleveland, died recently. Mr. Slimm was one of the best known picture exhibitors in this section of the state, a member of Local No. —, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and active in league matters. His brother will continue to conduct the Marquis.

H. C. Owens, architect, Xenia, O., has plans for an addition to the theatre of Cliff Sutton, but construction will not start until spring.

Offices of the Theatre Supply Company at Akron were damaged by fire in the Walsh block recently.

The Tipp Building & Manufacturing Company, Tippecanoe City, O., was the low bidder for a one-story brick theatre building for T. C. Shilling, to be built at Main and Franklin streets, Troy.

George W. Johnson, Dayton, proposes to build a theatre in the near future. He has an architect working on plans for the building.

G. V. Hotestine will enter the moving picture field at DeGraff, O. Plans are under preparation for a building which will be constructed in the spring.

IN MONTREAL.

Recent visitors to the city were Messrs. A. N. Busch and L. J. Bamberger, in the interests of the World Film Corporation. The writer had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Bamberger and asked his opinion on the present state of trade. He found business good locally, but, of course, not up to the usual mark on account of the war. He was of the opinion, though, that business would pick up materially during the next few months.

Brisk business is being done around the Famous Players office these days. Manager Kauffman is head over heels in work and was never more pleased in his life. "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" is already in large demand.

Montreal to Change Tax

City Council's Committee Acting in Report of Superintendent of Licenses Bienvenue, Recommends Change in System of Theater Taxes.—Present Plan Levies $500 on Any Theater, Big or Little.—May Put Tax of Eighty-five Cents on Each Seat.

By Gerald Gallagher, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE legislation committee of the City Council has recommended a change in the system of taxing picture houses for municipal purposes. The moving picture theaters are now taxed $500 per annum each, irrespective of size. The smaller houses complained against this last summer, and the legislation committee decided some time before Christmas to report in favor of levying a tax of eighty-five cents per seat. The theaters would then be taxed according to their capacity. A report was submitted to the committee by A. Bienvenu, superintendent of licenses, in which it was shown there were fifty-eight moving picture houses in Montreal having a capacity of from 200 to 1,150 seats. Under the proposed new system therefore, the tax of a house of two hundred seats would be $170 instead of $500; on a house of eleven hundred and fifty seats, it would be $977, instead of $500.

WOMAN MANAGES EXCHANGE.

Montreal is probably the only city on the American continent that has a woman film exchange manager. She is Mrs. B. C. Paxton and manages the local office of the Picture Playhouse Film Co., Inc. She is now offering to local exhibitors two features which are said to possess merit, "For King and Country," and "The Last Dance."

NEW THEATER OPENS.

The Park theater, Verdun, opened its doors to the public of that wide-awake suburb, on January 4. Mr. S. J. Dunning, its manager, told us that the opening night witnessed a packed house. It is one of the largest houses in town, and, for its size, has no equal in this city, inasmuch as it is handsome, roomy, and modern in all respects. Three changes are made a week, and prices in the evenings are twenty and ten cents. The opening day's feature was a two-reel Keystone, which provoked genuine laughter from the large audiences. Mr. Dunning is to be complimented on the fine house he has, and still more, on his good and healthy-toned programs. The building cost $75,000, and not $50,000 as was wrongly stated in a previous issue.

OTHER MONTREAL NOTES.

Business in Montreal houses on New Year's Day was roaring, and has been so ever since. The general opinion around town is that from now on there will be little to complain of, though the added expenditure, incident to the season, must have reduced many family coffers. Here's wishing everybody luck, anyway.

Large and handsome quarters have been fitted out at 313 Bleury street, Montreal, by Pathe's Famous Feature Film Syndicate of Quebec. The new organization is headed by L. E. Ouimet. This gentleman is considered the pioneer of moving pictures in Montreal. "The Perils of Pauline," which is said to have run with great success in the States, has already been released. The New Grand, King Edward, Family, Ouimetoscope, Rex, and many other theaters have booked it. Mr. Ouimet is assisted by C. Lalumiere, formerly connected with the European Import Feature Co., Warner's Features, and the Picture Playhouse people. A branch office has been opened in St. John, N. B., and has been put under the care of A. P. Keegan, formerly with the General Film Co.

Montreal has at last a Kleine office. The quarters are temporarily located in the Casino Theater building. The office is in charge of Ed. English, formerly manager of the Tivoli theater. Mr. English has had varied experience in the film game.

The Tribune War pictures were shown at the Princess theater, the local Shuberts' house, during eight days, commencing Dec. 27th. Business was very good.

The Victoria theater, managed by M. Kashin, certainly exhaled the Christmas spirit during the festive season. Special Christmas features were the rule, and Mr. Kashin made his house very popular amongst the kiddies of the district by having a large Christmas tree, supervised by a Santa Claus, who was certainly not stingy with his gifts. The Victoria is doing very good business under its new management.

Another exhibitor to play Santa Claus was J. O. Hooley, of the Francais. A seventeen-foot tree was set up on the stage. Mr. Hooley saw to it that it was well loaded with good things, and the children were given a fine time. Mr. Hooley is making a feature of topical war pictures, the Strand War Series and the Pathe Weeklies being booked for his house.

The New Grand has contracted with the Famous Players Film Service to show the releases of the Paramount program ten days before any other local house. The rates are considered to be the highest ever paid in Canada. So far some fine productions have been screened: "False Colours," a Famous Players offering; "Cinderella," the Bostworth; "An Odyssey of the North," "The Sea Wolf," and "The Country Mouse." The management is conducting probably the largest advertising campaign yet essayed by a local theater. We wish them the success they deserve.

Mr. H. W. Harwell, formerly of Toronto, and for some time assistant manager of the Montreal Universal, is now managing that office. He has the reputation of being a hustler and one not slow to make friends. He has our best wishes.

The employees of the Francais on New Year's Day expressed their feeling toward the manager of the house, J. O. Hooley, when they presented him with a gold watch. Mr. Hooley replied suitably, thanking the boys for their faithful service and wishing them the season's compliments.

Manny Feldstein, general manager for Canada of Warner's Features, is at the present writing out on the road visiting the other branches in Canada. Mr. Fischer, local manager, claims that business is good. The firm's mascot has been rechristened. The little bull pup's new name is "Feature."

An interesting topical is being handled by the Consolidated Film Company, of which Tom Cross is manager. The film tells a complete story of the First Contingent's trip across the Atlantic. It had first run at the Colonial.

J. C. Grahame, general manager of the Universal of New York; George A. McGee, special representative, and Clair Hague, general manager of the Canadian Universal in Eastern Canada, were in this city at Christmas in the interests of their principals.

Mr. Malone, the gentleman in charge of the local Allfeatures office, is certainly pleased with business, and good reason he has for being so jubilant. There is great demand for his features and his clientele is rapidly enlarging.

Michigan Fire Inspection

Fire Marshal Winship to Begin Semi-Annual Inspection of Theaters February First—Will Start Off in Detroit—Inspection Fee Burdensome—Value of Present Building Laws Proved by Last Year's Experience as Shown in Fire Marshal's Annual Report to Governor.

By Jacob Smith, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE semi-annual inspection of moving picture theaters in Michigan begins Feb. 1, and the fire marshal, Hon. John T. Winship, has ordered that the start be made at Detroit. Under the state law, owners of such houses will have to pay for the inspection, which is $10. A deputy told a representative of the Moving Picture World that he did not anticipate there would be the least trouble. "Owing to our previous inspections, all of the older houses have been changed to comply with the law, while the new theaters, as a rule, carry all the necessary fire specifications, both in accordance with the city ordinance and the state law," he said. At the present session of the legislature, the Michigan League of Motion Picture Exhibitors will make an effort to at least have this semi-annual inspection fee reduced, say to one-half. In the opinion of President Peter Jeup, one inspection yearly is sufficient on the part of the state department, but to have two inspections in a year, making the total charge $20, is entirely unnecessary.

In his fourth annual report filed by the fire marshal of Michigan, he notes that losses from fire in 1914 were $2,000,000 less than in 1913, the total for 1914 being approximately $5,000,000. That the moving picture law is absolutely just what the legislature intended it should be, is very clearly demonstrated by several fires in these theaters the last year, says Mr. Winship in this report. The records show that a number of such fires occurring in the booth constructed in accordance with the law have caused no panics, and but very little property damage, while two very costly and disastrous fires occurred in the theaters operating in violation of the law and without the knowledge of the bureau of inspectors. There are 545 licensed moving picture theaters in Michigan, an increase of 106 over 1913. During the year 75 theaters were ordered to discontinue the use of pictures, and many were permanently closed because of failure to comply with the law. Six complaints were made during the year for violations of the law, and with but one exception respondents have pleaded guilty and paid fines.

PETER JEUP RESIGNS PRESIDENCY OF LEAGUE

Gives Up His Office in Michigan State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League—H. F. Touser to Succeed Him.

Peter Jeup has resigned as president of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and has been succeeded by H. F. Fowser, manager of the Luna theatre. Mr. Fowser has been very active in the Detroit and Michigan associations and is well qualified to carry on the good work started by his predecessor, Peter Jeup.

On January 1st Mr. Jeup took a position in the office of the city assessor which keeps him busy most every afternoon, thus making it impossible for him to be at the weekly sessions. He still retains his membership in the association and will represent Detroit in the national body as he has in the past.

WATCHING FOR NEW LAWS

"What is your association going to do about state censorship?" the writer asked of President Jeup.

"We can't do anything until the bill comes up," he replied. "It will be time then to oppose it. No doubt our legislative committee will have its hands full watching proposed laws at the legislature which in any way effect the motion picture industry. Our organization is constantly increasing in membership, and what we have to say now will carry a great deal more weight than it would have a year ago, when we only had a handful of members."

LESTER POTTER FAVORS CHURCH FILM SHOWS

Special Police Officer Potter Believes Churches and Schools Should Be Permitted to Use Pictures.

Special Police Officer Lester Potter, who formerly was the official censor of motion pictures in Detroit, takes exception to the action of the Michigan Exhibitors' League in trying to have churches and schools prohibited from showing pictures. "In the first place, the class of pictures shown by these institutions is entirely different from those at the regular theaters, and hence are not in competition. In the second place, motion pictures are becoming too important a factor in an educational way, to restrict their use in the schools. And even the churches will some day be using them regularly on Sundays, and you will find preachers showing them to illustrate their lectures. If the churches and schools have their booths fireproof they should not be stopped from using pictures."

Officer Potter still handles all complaints that come up pertaining to theaters of any kind. Only recently he was called to investigate a condition on the east side, where a moving picture theater was changing to cheap burlesque. The entertainment was so vile that the house was closed until such time as the management was ready to put on cleaner performances. During Mr. Potter's regime as official censor, he did a great deal to elevate the moving picture industry, being at all times broad-minded in his views and seldom criticizing a picture unless it was for the good of the community. He told a representative of the World that he believed the time was not far off when hotels throughout the country would have small auditoriums, with fireproof booths, for showing pictures as entertainment for their guests in the evenings. Mr. Potter said he had already heard of a number of cases where such plans were in progress.

WHERE SERIALS GO WELL

At a recent meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League there was considerable discussion on the future of the serial photo-plays. At that time it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that serials were gradually dying out, that the public were tired of them, and that in many instances, the producers were to blame in having many chapters that were lacking in interest. A few days later the writer interviewed a representative of a local film exchange who is traveling constantly in all parts of the state, asking his opinion in the matter. "Well, my experience shows that in the small towns, and even with the neighborhood houses in the big cities, serials are very well thought of, and in fact, are in demand. But serials are not good for downtown houses where the trade is more or less transient, and the reason is easily explained. One chapter of a serial means nothing to the person who has not been following it up, but in the small cities and neighborhood houses the trade is steady and the same crowd is able to come on the same night every week. In the downtown houses trade is more or less uncertain; they come when they can and you cannot rely on them for any certain night."

BOOKING INDEPENDENTLY

In the past thirty days, it is surprising the number of theaters that have changed their booking arrangements, and instead of placing all their business with one exchange, are now booking more or less independently; in other words, they will book three nights with one exchange, two nights features and the other two nights will book whatever they want. This new plan seems to be working out more satisfactorily. Of course it is more expensive, but seems to bring increased business. Another thing, it makes the attractions for the week more diversified, and apparently "diversity" is what the public demands. They do not want all big features, nor all comedies, neither do they want all dramas and short reels.

CAN CONTINUE SCHOOL

Upon further investigation into the methods of N. D. Josephi, who conducted a school of photoplay acting at 214 Woodward avenue, Detroit, the police department have given Mr. Josephi full permission to continue with his school should he care to do so. They found that the complaints made were "frame-ups" and that Mr. Josephi was conducted his institution along legitimate lines. Mr. Josephi has been allied with the moving picture industry for the past 18 years, and is thoroughly experienced in all branches of the business.

FINE NEW THEATER ON DETROIT'S LIST

Yon-Do-Ti-Ga Theater Being Built on Monroe Avenue—Will Seat 1,200 Persons—Prosperity in Detroit.

Detroit is to have another big vaudeville and photoplay theater on Monroe avenue, where already are located about a dozen theaters of this type in three short blocks. The new enterprise is being promoted by the Yon-Do-Ti-Ga Moving Picture Theater Company, and the theater will be located at 51-53-55 Monroe avenue. It is to be remodelled from the present three-story building, which is brick and steel, and will seat 1,200 persons. The company is incorporated for $125,000. There are 12,500 shares, par value $10 each. The men behind the project are Charles Smith, J. W. Thomas, J. T. Cowan, A. L. Clotfelter and W. J. Hornibook.

The prospectus, which has just been issued gives some idea of their plans: "The very fact that the National, Family, Royal, Liberty and Columbia theaters have paid all the way from ten to one hundred and forty-four per cent, is sufficient evidence of the soundness of an investment in a new, up-to-date picture theater on Monroe avenue. We have the best location in Detroit and we proposed to erect an absolutely fireproof structure, without exception the safest, best ventilated, best lighted, most up-to-the-minute house of its kind in the city.

The decorations for the front are all special design, modeled from life. All above the glass line will be finished in five coats of white enamel—lobby finished in marble and plate glass mirrors. On the front proper there will be one thousand lights of various sizes, together with the large electrical sign of the moveable variety with an additional thousand lights, making by far the most imposing appearance of anything on this busy street.

The interior finish will be immaculate in white and gold, interspersed with dainty floral decorations of ferns and ivy. The house will be ready to open by April 1st. The company has taken a twenty-five-year lease with fixed rates of rental as follows: first five years, $25,000 per annum; next ten years, $30,000 per annum, and next ten years, $32,500 per annum. The building is to be absolutely fireproof and thoroughly ventilated. The ventilation system will change the air every six minutes. The prices of admission will be ten cents, to all parts of the state and performances will be continuous from ten in the morning until eleven at night. Pictures will be the feature attraction, with a few vaudeville acts. The theater will be equipped with a Hoch-Jones pipe organ, costing $20,000, which will play 52 different musical instruments. The company has headquarters at 512 Scherer building. The architect is Charles Smith.

OTHER DETROIT NOTES.

Fred R. Rumler, proprietor of the Warren theater, at Warren and McKinley avenues, Detroit, is planning on an addition 20 by 40 feet. The seating capacity will remain the same, 400. A new ventilating system will be installed and the interior will be completely overhauled and redecorated.

John R. Lakin, known to the profession as Jack Remington, and now in charge of publicity for the Detroit Universal Film Company, has been lecturing at a number of theaters in the past two weeks, explaining how photoplays are made, and relating some of the thrilling experience of performers. He uses a regular picture camera to illustrate his remarks. On January 11, when he was scheduled to appear at the Kercheval theater, the house was packed to overflowing; in fact, wherever he has given this talk, he has met with a most cordial reception. It has proven an excellent drawing card, and those who desire to have him appear at their theater may address him at the Detroit Universal Film Co. He contemplates returning to the screen in the spring.

Edward C. Murphy, manager of the William Penn theater, at 1830 Woodward avenue, Detroit, is very much gratified over having secured the services of Miss Alice Bergeron, an expert pianist, who comes from the west. According to Mr. Murphy, she plays as many as 100 bits of music during the showing of one reel. He also says that "She adds to the picture, inasmuch as every bit of action on the screen is emphasized by her work on the piano." The William Penn is one of the newest of Detroit's picture houses.

The National theater has added a new ladies' retiring room on the mezzanine lobby.

On January 7, Alvan D. Hersch, proprietor of the Arbor theater, gave a special noon show for one hour to test out whether there was any possibility of doing business during the noon hour when the Cadillac Motor and other large factories in that neighborhood released its working staff. The showing the first day was excellent, and Mr. Hersch upon a further trial, may decide to continue the noon shows definitely.

Arrangements have been completed for the erection of a theater to cost $125,000 at Grand River avenue and Fourteenth street, Detroit, for John H. Kunsky, at present operating the Liberty, Garden, Washington, Alhambra, Columbia, and others.

The theater, another unit in the chain of handsome playhouses being established in Detroit by Mr. Kunsky (the aggregate investment in which, when completed, will total in the neighborhood of $1,000,000) will be used for the exploitation of high-class motion pictures.

The building is to occupy a site of 120 by 150 feet and is to follow the style so successfully carried out in modern theater construction, with a row of stores in front and offices above. The interior will be modeled to a great extent after that of the beautiful Alhambra theater, Mr. Kunsky's latest venture. The auditorium will seat 1,700 and a feature will be a mezzanine balcony containing boxes. As is customary with all theaters operated by Mr. Kunsky, the musical features will not be of the least consideration, a great pipe organ and complete orchestra being employed.

Other sites submitted are now under consideration by Mr. Kunsky for the erection of other residential theaters, as are also the plans for the early construction of a large downtown house seating 2,000 and costing $250,000. C. Howard Crane, who has designed the other Kunsky theaters, is now at work upon said plans.

League Holds Meeting

Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Meets in Gordon's Theater, Boston—Election of Officers to Be Held February 9 and Nominating Committee Appointed—Discontent Expressed With New Exhibitors' Society Outside of League—Men Who Attended Meeting.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

ABOUT thirty members of the Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League attended a meeting which was held in a private office of Gordon's Olympia theatre on Washington street, Boston, on Wednesday afternoon, January 6. The meeting was called by President Ernest H. Horstmann for the purpose of making preparations for the annual election of officers, which will be held on Tuesday, February 9. Considerable discussion was had over the action of the exhibitors of a certain city in the state who have refused to join the league or contribute to its support, although they admit that they have benefited by the work of the association.

A nominating committee was appointed. It comprises Harry F. Campbell, New England manager of the Box Office Attraction Company; Frank J. Howard of the Scollay Square Olympia, Boston; Herman Sivivolos of the Dreamland Theatre, Boston; Jacob Lourie of the Beacon and Modern Theatres, Boston, and Fred B. Murphy, proprietor of the New England office of the United Film Service. This committee will have several meetings before the league's next meeting on February 9. They will nominate the officers who will be voted upon at the meeting.

Among those who attended were President Ernest T. Horstmann; John F. Patten of Bates Opera House, Attleboro; M. J. Lydon of Congress Hall, South Boston; M. Friedman of Revere; Fred B. Murphy of the United Film Service; Harry F. Campbell of the Box Office Attraction Company; Frank J. Howard of the Scollay Square Olympia, Boston; Samuel Grant of the Eastern Theatres Company; G. M. Clark of the Huntington Avenue theatre, Boston; Colonel Kincaid of Quincy; R. W. Drown; Joseph Di Pesa, publicity director of Tremont Temple and the Modern theatre, Boston; Jacob Lourie of the Beacon and Modern theatres; Herman Sivovolos of the Dreamland Theatre; A. E. Lord and A. H. Maley of the Scollay Square Olympia.

NO MORE PERMITS FOR PICTURES IN BOSTON

Rigid Theater Law Operative in Hub—Interesting State of Affairs Brought About—Exhibitors Will Appeal.

According to License Clerk John Casey of Boston there is not a single public or private hall, school, hotel, clubroom, church or assemblage place of any type not in use at the present time as a moving picture theatre which can be used hereafter for any form of moving picture exhibitions, even of the educational type of film. This information was divulged by Mr. Casey in Mayor Curley's office when he refused to grant a permit for the exhibition of films used by the United States Government as part of its educational campaign. It had been planned to make these films a feature of the Poultry Show, which is to be held in Mechanics Building on Huntington avenue.

It is feared that several halls and theatres which are now within the law as moving picture houses will be compelled to discontinue their exhibitions after August 1. A fine point of law has been raised regarding that law which specifies that all theatres shall be of first class construction. It is probable that the Supreme Court will be obliged to give a final ruling on the question, unless the exhibitors procure a change in the laws now in force.

Building Commissioner O'Hearn has admitted that no building in the city of Boston, which is not now used for moving picture entertainments, will be allowed to display silent dramas even for a special entertainment for a single evening. This bars the use of hotel banquet rooms, school halls, where educational reels are displayed, churches, which display educational and religious pictures on Sunday evenings, and all public halls which have not a permanently located and approved fire-proof booth.

Since the appointment of Mr. O'Hearn as Building Commissioner last spring he has been weeding out halls where moving pictures were being displayed in buildings which he deems improperly equipped with fire escapes and other means of exit in cases of emergency. He expected to meet with considerable opposition in this campaign and it amazed him when the property owners signed agreements with him.

Examination of the past law has revealed that up to 1907 there had been no rigid theatre and entertainment hall laws of any description, but in 1907 a theatre law was passed demanding first class construction and other strict specifications. The moving picture houses were not specified as theatres and the city officials granted them licenses as "assemblage halls."

Further investigation showed that there was going into effect on October 7, 1914, a law which Commissioner O'Hearn thought was ironclad, and which demanded that all buildings, altered or converted to use as moving picture houses would have to be of first class construction.

Before this law went into effect there was no law which would prevent a building which was not of first class construction from being used for moving pictures. These halls which complied with the demands of Commissioner O'Hearn for fire escapes were successful in securing moving picture licenses before the law went into effect on October 7.

OPERATORS UNION ELECTS

Members to Hold Ball in February at Convention Hall—Many Prominent People Invited.

The results of the election of business agent for the Moving Picture Operators' Union have caused no small amount of surprise. William Francke, who has held the office for some time, was defeated by John B. Williams of the Franklin Park theatre. Other officers elected were president, James F. Burke of Gordon's theatre, Chelsea; vice president, R. S. Johnson of the Boston theatre; recording secretary, Morris Rothenberg of the Crescent Gardens theatre, Revere; financial secretary; P. J. Young of the New Allston theatre; treasurer, Axel Burkholm, chief operator of the Shawmut, Beacon and Modern theatres; executive officers, J. J. Sweetman of the Modern theatre, and Harry Holbrook of Pierson's theatre, Somerville. Mat Max of the Globe theatre was chosen as the delegate to the Central Labor Union.

The members of the union are making active preparations for their annual ball, which will be held in Convention Hall, corner of St. Botolph and Garrison streets, Boston, on the night of February 5. Invitations have been extended to many state and city officials as well as to the officers of the Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. The introduction of several new dancing features is planned.

The ball committee comprises the following members: W. H. Benoit, Congress Hall, South Boston, chairman; Joseph Cifre of Gordon's Olympia, Boston; Bernard McGaffigan of Winthrop Hall; J. Fullick of Keith's Bijou Dream; John Spence of the Scenic Temple, Cambridge; Morris Adelson of Tremont Temple; Morris Rothenberg of the Crescent Gardens theatre, Revere; John B. Williams, business agent; J. Burke and Ed Hoyt of the National theatre. The reception committee will be composed of all the officers and the entertainment committee is made up of Messrs. Burkeholm, Dooling, McGaffigan and Burke.

CAMERA MEN DUCKED

J. C. Hutchinson and J. Edward Coolidge, New England camera men for the Pathe and Mutual Weeklies, respectively, narrowly escaped serious injury last Sunday while making pictures of the ice boat races, which were held under the auspices of the Medford Boat Club on the upper Mystic Lake, Medford, Mass. One of the racers, the Pretzel, sailed by Frank Gerlack, overturned during the race and skidded into the camera men, throwing both on thin ice and causing them to fall into the water. Both men could have escaped the ducking if it had not been their loyal desire to secure pictures of the skidding boat. After they were pulled from the water both were satisfied that they had secured an unusual photo.

OTHER NEW ENGLAND ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Dutton announce the birth of a girl, Shirley Sunderland, who arrived January 4th, 1915. Mother and child are reported in the best of health. Mr. Dutton is manager and proprietor of the Waterbury Opera House.

George Appleby of the Empire theatre, Portland, Maine, has taken charge of a theatre in Biddleford, Maine.

A $12,000 pipe organ is to be installed in the Big Nickel theatre, Portland, Maine, and the house will be known as the Strand in the near future.

H. Hirsch and Walter Nelson, representatives of the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation, were visitors at their Portland office during the week. They were entertained by George Appleby of the Empire theatre at a dinner.

The "famous" William Greene, the well known Mutual road man, is now in charge of the company's office at Portland, Maine. He succeeds Norman D. Merrill, who recently resigned to accept an offer from Harry F. Campbell, New England manager of the Box Office Attraction Company.

Hathaway's theatre at Brockton, Mass., which has been exhibiting moving pictures for some time, is now a stock house. The Park theatre at Taunton, Mass., which has been used for stock, has been converted to the silent drama.

Harry F. Campbell of the Box Office Attraction Company has been receiving many telephone calls for bookings on the Fox production, "Gertie," which finished the last week of a two weeks' run at Keith's Bijou Dream, Boston.

John Henry Goldfrap, publicity director of the William Fox enterprises, was a visitor to Boston during the past week, promoting the publicity of the Betty Nansen pictures. Accompanied by Joseph Di Pesa, New England publicity man for the Box Office Attraction Company, Mr. Goldfrap visited all the newspaper offices in the city. He was the guest of W. A. Grozier, general manager of the Boston Post, at a dinner at the Boston City Club.

George A. Hickey, who has been the Maine representative of the United Film Service (Warner Features, Inc.) since last June, has returned to Boston as assistant to Fred B. Murphy who recently purchased the company's New England franchise. On account of several changes in the train schedules of the Boston and Maine Railroad, Mr. Murphy deemed it advisable to give up the office in Maine.

A valuable road man has been added to the New England office of the General Film Company in the person of James W. Farrell, a well known Boston advertising man. Mr. Farrell bears the reputation of being a salesman of no mean ability. For the past few years he has been connected with the advertising departments of some of the largest newspapers in New England.

New England exhibitors are anxiously awaiting the Essanay's first release of a Charles Chaplin feature comedy. At the runoffs each Tuesday Manager Ed Farrell of the General Film Company is answering questions of every description regarding these releases, which are expected not later than February 1.

A new moving picture playhouse is under construction at New Bedford, Mass. It is being erected between the Casino and Comique theatres in that city. The new company is headed by Harry Joseph, who visited Manager Edward Farrell of the General Film Company last week and purchased two Powers machines.

The Lubin production, "The Threads of Destiny," featuring Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and her son, Russell, played to capacity at the Park Theatre, Spencer, last week. There is a great demand in the New England territory for bookings of this feature on account of the presence of Harry Thaw at Manchester, N. H.

Fred B. Murphy who recently purchased the New England rights to all photoplays released by the United Film Service, is elated over the outlook of his career as an independent. Over a score of exhibitors were present at his first regular weekly runoff last week, which was held at the South End theatre, Boston, while alterations are being made at the Boston headquarters. All present expressed themselves as being well pleased with the releases. Mr. Murphy plans to hold these runoffs every Wednesday. New vaults and an exhibition room are being made at his office.

Arthur A. Allen of the Star and Palace theatres, Bangor, Maine, spent considerable time in Boston during the past week, booking features. Mr. Allen was showered with congratulations of his friends in the Hub, as this is the first time they have seen him since his wife gave birth to a nine-pound baby boy a month ago. The baby, by the way, has been named Arthur Jr., and his dad says that he will become a moving picture magnate when he grows up.

Al Couture of the Crown theatre, Manchester, N. H., entertained one of his brothers from Colorado during the week.

The Goldstein Brothers of Springfield have purchased the property of the Westfield Opera House. An architect has been engaged to design a modern playhouse and business block which will be erected on the site as soon as the old building is razed.

Ed Knight of the Bijou theatre, Springfield, has assumed the management of the Globe theatre in that city and will continue to run it in connection with his own house.

Grafton Corbett, road man for the General Film Company is now making a trip through Vermont and New Hampshire. Frank Rouse of the same office is in the Western part of Massachusetts. Both report that a business boom is under way as a result of many factories, which have been running short time, operating at full blast.

Oz Tessier is again in charge of the Royal theatre, New Bedford, Mass. Some time ago Mr. Tessier gave up the house to the Royal Amusement Company.

L. S. Levine of the Box Office Attraction Company is very optimistic after a business trip through Connecticut. He announces that the following houses will use Fox features in the future: Somerville theatre, Somerville, Mass.; Lyceum, Mystic, Conn.; Colonial, Norwich, Conn.; and the Gem, Willmantic, Conn.

The Exhibitors' Bulletin, the house organ of the William Fox studios, is attracting much attention among the New England Exhibitors.

Naomi C. Noland, the protege and niece of Robert H. Ingersoll, who eloped a short time ago with Arthur H. Liberty, a chauffeur, will open the National theatre at Manchester, N. H. The house has a seating capacity of 300. Mr. Liberty will manage the house and his wife will act as the ticket seller.

Frank Prior, who recently resigned as manager of the Shawmut theatre, Roxbury, has taken charge of a big moving picture house now under construction at Dorchester.

Miss Mary G. Hurley of Lexington, Mass., has become the bride of Charles A. Dooley, manager of the Lynn theatre. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George A. Costello of St. Bridget's Church, Lexington. Friends of the couple attended a dinner at the home of the bride after the ceremony. Mrs. John E. Hannon, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Frank Dooly, a brother of the groom, was the best man. The bride, who is a musician, was presented with an electric runabout by her husband. She is a graduate of Bay View College, Providence, R. I. Mr. Dooley is a graduate of the Lynn English High School with the class of 1908.

The new policy of a continuous performance from 1 to 5.30 P. M., and from 7 to 10.30 P. M., has proven a winner at the National theatre, corner of Tremont and Berkley streets, Boston. The programe is changed twice a week and large audiences are to be found in the house most of the time.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union, Knights of Labor, Assembly 3030, have elected Harry Martin, grand master; P. A. Stubbs, financial secretary; A. B. Stevens, recording secretary, and A. P. Peters, treasurer.

GENE GAUNTIER LEAVES KANSAS CITY

Popular Actress and Her Husband, Jack Clark, Made Stir in Wide-Awake Missouri City.

By Kansas City Special Moving Picture World News Service.

GENE GAUNTIER has left Kansas City. With her have gone the bright hopes of many an embryo scenario writer. While she was in Kansas City the papers had stories of her in nearly every issue. One paper devoted several columns to the manner in which her pictures were produced. Another paper published a complete scenario written by her. For several days she was besieged by people wishing to have plays gone over, others wanted her to buy theirs and some wanted to act for her.

She appeared for a week solid at the Willis Wood theatre. After the three reel feature, "Back to Old Erin," in which she and her husband, Jack Clark, carry the leads, was shown, she would make her appearance on the stage greeted by a hearty round of applause. Many of the audience were personally acquainted with her as she calls Kansas City her home, and her parents still live here. During her stay here she gave a box party to the Dillenbeck School of Expression where she received her first instruction in dramatic art.

Miss Gauntier, however, was not the only one to enjoy popularity. Her husband, Jack Clark, came in for his share as well. As a matter of fact Mr. Clark made a very decided hit with the people of Kansas City and they wouldn't mind it a bit if he would put Kansas City after his name hereafter. The light talk and banter that went between Joseph Gilday, manager of the house, and himself, was exceedingly humerous to the audience. Mr. Clark told some very interesting incidents that occur in the production of a film, and let the public in on some secrets of the business.

NEWS LETTER FROM ST. LOUIS.

By A. H. Giebler, Special Correspondent

THE Theater Managers and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis, an organization designed to protect and further the interests of the amusement business in general, has been organized, with John H. Gentner, proprietor of the Retina theater, at 20th and Market streets, as president. The association has opened an office in room 312, Benoist Building, and meetings are held twice a week, on Mondays and Fridays, at 10 a. m.

Wagner Brothers, who have managed the large canvas topped theater on Easton avenue, under the title of the Alps Amusement Company, for a number of years, have moved to the theater at 4066 Easton avenue. The Alps theater is a handsome and well appointed house seating 400 patrons. The admission at the new house is ten cents, and a big bill, including features, is shown at every performance.

Manager Stivison, of the Grand Central theater, 6th and Market streets, one of the largest all-picture houses downtown, has arranged to install the Renfax Singing Pictures to take the place of the singing act that has been a regular part of the program. The Grand Central has exclusive rights to the feature for the downtown district.

E. N. Wolf, formerly with Warner's Features offices in Kansas City, has been appointed assistant to August Frobel, manager of the St. Louis branch of the company.

The Gem theater, at 6th and Walnut streets, is closed temporarily. The Gem was the first moving picture theater in St. Louis to show Independent films.

J. L. Sweeney has resumed the management of the Novelty theater at Grand and Easton avenues, after an absence of three months. The theater is now being overhauled and redecorated. Mr. Sweeney says he will retain all the old employes of the theater, and arrangements have been made for the engagement of Miss Lucille Reichmann and her popular "Novelty" orchestra. The program, under the new management, will be moving pictures and vaudeville.

L. V. Stephens, manager of the Juniata theater, at Grand avenue and Juniata street, advertises his feature program for an entire month in advance. A large framed announcement gives the names and dates booked for the program of the Juniata from Jan. 1 to the 31st. This will be displayed until the 15th of January, when the announcement for the February program will supersede it.

F. D. Abernathy, head of the Abernathy Construction Company, has entered the local amusement field as manager of the Uno theater, at 1707 Cass avenue. Mr. Abernathy says a handsome new theater building will be erected in the spring on the ground now occupied by the Uno.

Wm. Sievers, manager of the New Grand Central theater, at Grand and Lucas avenues, advertised the engagement of "Julius Caesar" by mailing announcement cards inscribed in old English text to members of literary clubs in the city. Five hundred school teachers and others engaged in educational work received special invitations with free tickets enclosed.

Harry Earl, the new manager of the Hippodrome, gave free admission to a hundred and fifty children from the Masonic Orphans' Home on the afternoon of Dec. 30. Mr. Earl says the policy of the Hippodrome will be changed to admit of more and better feature films to the program.

The Sun theater, managed by George Angelich, at 13 North Broadway, has been closed. The Rainbow theater, under the same management, and just one block north of the Sun, will continue to run, and take care of the patrons of both houses.

JACKSONVILLE THEATERS

What Different Houses in Southern City Are Doing—Some Interesting Personalities.

By Leon Louiso, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

With the arrival of the swelling influx of tourists and home-seekers Jacksonville is being taxed to capacity in accommodating the newly-arriving visitors and in entertaining them. It has been predicted that this will be the biggest season for tourists in the history of Jacksonville, and from the crowded trainloads that are pouring into the Union depot and on the passenger steamers it can easily be seen that the fulfillment of the prophecy is beginning to be realized.

At the Duval theater there is a stock company and the Orpheum is showing vaudeville. The Orpheum is using Universal pictures on their program.

The tourists have little to entertain them except the foregoing amusements and the motion picture theaters. The Grand (F. T. Montgomery, manager), the pioneer quality picture house of the city, runs a bill of high-class licensed releases. The theater has a large clientele, being the first theater in the down-town district giving high-grade shows. The music is furnished by a six-piece orchestra, and is alternated by selections on the pipe organ.

The Prince, under the same management, uses Paramount service and General Film Features. The location is excellent. A six-piece orchestra furnishes the music.

The work on the new Arcade theater, under construction by the Southern Investment and Amusement Co., is coming along satisfactorily and it is expected that the house will be opened on or about March 1. The new theater will be the largest in the city devoted entirely to pictures, and has a seating capacity of about 1,200. A large pipe organ will be installed.

The Imperial (N. W. Ramond, manager) uses licensed pictures. The theater has been doing good business. A six-piece orchestra furnishes the concerts and music for the theater. "Tillie's Punctured Romance" is booked for an early date, also Ethel Barrymore in "The Nightingale." A large-sized picture of Alice Joyce, who is at the local Kalem Studio, wearing a million dollars' worth of gems and a three-thousand-dollar "Lucille" gown, in the lobby of the theater attracts attention and admiration from the theatergoers.

The Republic (C. Carl Smith, manager), operated by the Republic Theater Co., Inc., uses a six-day Universal service and one day assorted features. "The Spoilers," the Selig special, which ran in Chicago at the Studebaker for eight weeks this summer, is booked as one of the early feature attractions, also Leslie Carter in the Kleine offering, "Du Barry." A newly installed $7,200 pipe organ was just added to the equipment and the orchestra, under the directorship of A. B. Wilson, furnished excellent programs and concerts. Mr. Wilson has one of the largest libraries of classic, semi-classic, etc., music in the South. He has not yet failed to play at short notice any piece requested by patrons. One of the policies of the house is the entertainment of theater parties. As many as thirty have been accommodated at parties and it is a pleasure for the management to accommodate the parties. At a recent prenuptial theater party at the theater the musical director was requested to arrange appropriate music for the party. Some of the pieces he used were "Malinda's Wedding Day," etc.

Every Thursday orphan asylums of the city are invited guests of the theater. On New Year's eve inmates of the St. Mary's Orphanage, Daniel Memorial and Children's Home Society of Florida were the guests of the house. Each one of the youngsters were presented with a New Year's card and a bag of candy. They were conveyed to and from the theater in automobiles.

Savoy (W. L. Whitehead, manager) is using Mutual pictures. The theater is in the heart of the downtown district, but the price remains five cents. The manager reports the best business in four years, since the establishment of the house. "Zudora," "Mutual Girl," "Million Dollar Mystery" pictures are run here. The Keystone pictures, including extra service two-reelers, draw big crowds. A four-piece orchestra furnishes the music. "Runaway June" is booked.

Pastime (Geo. K. Watt, manager) has been giving a program of pictures and girls' tabloid, and business is good. Mr. Watt is endeavoring to give a good family theater bill that will please the ladies and gentlemen. About a half hour to three quarters of an hour entertainment in tabloid is presented. Count Teddy, one of the smallest entertainers in the world, is working at this theater. He will later go to San Francisco.

Phoenix (M. H. Bidez, manager) uses Universal service. The five cent admission is charged at this theater. Among the serials running are the "Master Key" and "The Perils of Pauline."

NEW THEATRICAL CLUB

Arthur D. Hotaling Organizes Social Club for Theatrical Folk and People Connected With the Profession.

The correspondent dropped into the office of the Lubin Southern Studio and immediately was informed that he was welcomed to join a proposed Theatrical Club, which is being organized in Jacksonville. Arthur D. Hotaling, who has charge of the work at the studio, has inaugurated a campaign to form a club, the membership of which will include all persons who are directly members of the theatrical profession, managers of the theaters and attaches of the theaters, and employees of the various branches of theaterdom. This would include several hundred persons in and about Jacksonville and the proposed club, it seems, will take well with the persons who will soon be interested and asked to join.

The purpose of the club is mostly to foster a closer relationship between the many persons in the various branches of the theater and allied industries and to present certain social advantages which will be fostered and developed by membership in the organization.

Mr. Hotaling is now starting on the production of refined one-reel comedies, with the policy of excellence only to be considered. No more slap-stick comedies will be produced at the southern studio. The studio is finely equipped, being arranged for the taking of both interior and exterior scenes. Mr. Hotaling will be able to show his best work in the new style of pictures which he will begin to make.

"Jolly" Mae Hotely, the international comedienne, has purchased a new wardrobe, and she will be seen at her best in the new one-reel comedies.

OTHER JACKSONVILLE NOTES.

The Peerless Pictures Producing Co. has a company of sixteen and an equipment crew working on some feature pictures at St. Augustine. The production of the pictures is being done under the supervision of O. A. C. Lund. Howard Esterbrook and Barbara Tenant are featured in the production of the two pictures which are being taken. One of them, a five-reel subject, "The Butterfly," is an oriental picture, and many of the scenes are taken in and near the semi-tropical St. Augustine. The Alcazar or Ponce de Leon hotels will be used for some of the scenes.

The company will finish at St. Augustine about Jan. 15 and will then go to Mayport, Fla., near Jacksonville, where some big scenes will be taken. Mayport is at the mouth of the St. John's river, where it empties into the Atlantic.

The Consolidated Film & Supply Co. offices are located in a well furnished and up-to-date office at 330 West Forsyth street. John R. Barton is the manager.

Debate on Censorship

Interesting Arguments Brought Up by Mutual Film Corporation's Suit Before Supreme Court to Have Ohio Censorship Law Declared Invalid—Pictures on Same Basis as Press—Obstacles to Any Just and Acceptable Censoring.

By Clarence L. Linz, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

That motion pictures should be considered in the same light as newspapers or illustrated periodicals and, as such, not subject to censorship until after publication, was the contention of William B. Sanders in the case brought by the Mutual Film Corporation in the Supreme Court, wherein it sought to test the validity of the censorship law of the State of Ohio.

The validity of the Ohio law is questioned on the ground that it violates the Federal Consitution in placing an unlawful burden upon interstate commerce; that it violates a provision of the Constitution of the State of Ohio under which is guaranteed freedom of speech and freedom of the press, and that it violates another provision of that Consitution in delegating legislative powers to this board of censorship.

The Mutual Film Corporation, stated Mr. Sanders, is engaged in the manufacture and acquirement from others of moving picture films which it transmits to Ohio and elsewhere. In Ohio, the films are purchased by the Mutual Film Company, a concern organized under the laws of that State, for distribution. The Mutual Film Corporation, however, was organized under the laws of the State of Virginia, and the contracts between it and the Ohio concern are made outside of the latter State.

The Ohio censorship law works a hardship upon the Mutual Film Company because the statute requires that all films must be censored before they can be sold to exhibitors or others. In the lower court the validity of the law was upheld on the ground that it contemplated a proper exercise of legislative power, as the regulation of theatrical performances, which power on the part of the legislature is denied by the complainants. The assumption that the exhibition of moving pictures was confined to so-called moving picture theaters was declared erroneous, it being set forth that, while it may be true that a larger number of films produced are so exhibited, there is a growing tendency to use films for other purposes, as a means of advancing political and educational movements, etc., so that their value and use is widespread, so that the business of the complainants can not be said to be that of merely furnishing films for theatrical purposes.

Mr. Sanders declared that the complainants were not contending that it was not within the power of the legislature of Ohio to provide against the evils that might arise from the improper use of moving pictures, there being a statute which makes it a criminal offense to deal in or exhibit pictures of a nature which might tend to corrupt the morals of the people, but that moving picture films should be classed with other publications, such as newspapers and magazines, which are subject to such a statute, contending that the right to publish cannot be abused until after publications is exercised and no responsibility can attach, admitting that a State had the power to shield the morals of its citizens, but denying that it may subject a publication to previous restraint. The use of the moving picture films, he said, is in the nature of publication in the same sense in which it is applied to such periodicals as Harper's Weekly or the Illustrated London News, neither of which could be censored by the Board as they are subject to a release date and are distributed in all places throughout the territory at the same time.

Moving pictures were classed by Mr. Sanders in the same category as current publications, stating that current events were handled freely and that all fields of endeavor in which the public is interested are covered, and that it could not be pretended that censorship should be exercised, say, over current printed publications treating the same subjects, leading to the statement that moving pictures are really but an improved method of bringing before the public the information contained in the printed publications.

Mr. Sanders averred that the purposes of the moving pictures were identical to those of the press, it merely being a new method of disseminating news and information, and that, if the one was censored before publication it was not equitable that the other should be punished only after publication.

Robert M. Morgan appeared before the Court to uphold the validity of the law and the right of the State to exercise a censorship over moving picture films. He declared that the moving picture can not be classed as a publication, stating that it is not the film alone that must be considered, but, also, the projecting machine, the screen, the place of exhibition, etc., and that, therefore, a moving picture is nothing but a picture that moves on a screen.

Mr. Morgan referred to the fact that several States have already passed censorship laws and that other States will pass such legislation in the near future, while there are now pending in Congress three bills providing for the establishment of a national censorship, stating that there is a great preponderance of opinion in favor of such supervision of motion pictures.

Mr. Morgan attempted to show how widely divergent were the aims and purposes of moving pictures and the press, declaring that a moving picture exhibition contains nothing in the way of news, but that the main idea is that of conducting a theatrical performance rather than the dissemination of news. He compared a libel as committed by a moving picture with one committed by a newspaper, stating that in the former the offense was much greater because of the greater number of people brought into actual contract with the libellous matter. Because of its much more limited distribution, asserted he, any objectionable matter printed in a newspaper would necessarily be disseminated less widely than would similar matter portrayed in moving pictures, with consequently less harmful effects.

The right to license or prohibit the exhibition of all kinds of shows, which had been questioned by Mr. Sanders, was upheld by Mr. Morgan, who stated that, in a number of cases, the right to license such exhibitions had been exercised even to the prohibition of performances, but that the right had been recognized in every instance.

Mr. Morgan was followed by W. N. Seligsburg, who appeared for the purpose of protesting against the censorship laws of both Ohio and Kansas. Mr. Seligsburg upheld Mr. Sanders' contention that moving pictures were not confined to theaters, but were being used in rapidly increasing numbers by various organizations and societies, quoting from lists published in the house organs distributed by the various moving picture concerns to show that, in the amount and variety of news disseminated, the moving picture very nearly equals a newspaper or other illustrated periodical.

Mr. Seligsburg stated that the biggest obstacle to the production of moving picture films is the great cost, and that profit can only be obtained by showing such films to the greatest possible number of people, which, he said, would obviate any danger of showing improper films for, while it is much cheaper to print indecent matter in book form, dealers in such books have shown few signs of prosperity resulting from that business, which would be taken by moving picture manufacturers as an example of what would be most likely to constitute popular and, therefore, profitable films.

In response to a suggestion of Chief Justice White that, if there was no prohibition upon moving picture films at all, there would be no saying what might be shown, Mr. Seligsburg said that the things claimed to require regulation did not exist and that, although the defendants had been asked to produce them, they had failed to do so.

The greatest obstacle to fair and successful censorship, said he, was that such censorship was generally in the hands of a very few men whose tastes in such matters might be directly opposite to those of the majority of moving picture theater patrons. As many pictures are taken in California or other distant parts of the country and the negatives sent to New York to be developed, at great expense, the fact that there is no way of foretelling in what light the censor may view the finished film is a detriment to the production of more ambitious feature films.

Mr. Seligsburg explained the difference between censorship and inspection, which, he stated, should apply to films. In the event that there was shown anything objectionable, said he, action should be taken as in the case of an improper picture for which the statutes provide punishment.

He challenged both the States of Ohio and of Kansas to produce any film that had gone into those States that should have been excluded. Vaudeville, said he, had once been looked upon with prejudice and as something improper, but the people had realized that such performances were not as improper as they had been depicted and that vaudeville formed an amusement that contained something to appeal to everybody. So it is, he thought, with moving pictures, that, instead of being detrimental to the morals of observers, they would be found to exert a powerful influence for educational and interesting amusement.

He further referred to the fact that the press as well as the moving picture can be abused ,and that it might perhaps be well if children did not see newspapers. He stated, however, that that was no reason for submitting either to a censorship. As to regulation of theatres, such control was conceded to be valid only with respect to the regulation of physical requirements. A theater, said he, can be subjected to regulations providing for fireproof construction, or that there shall be a certain space between seats or a certain number of exits properly designated, but it cannot be said that all tickets must be sold at the same price or that tickets must be sold to speculators. Theaters, declared Mr. Seligsburg, are not public service corporations nor are they to be considered as a nuisance.

As Mr. Seligsburg's time expired at this point, he was unable to complete his testimony. Both sides will be given opportunity to file briefs, of which they will take advantage. Harold T. Clark, who is connected with the Mutual Film Corporation, and Jacob Schlechter, attorney for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, were also present in the Court.

BUSINESS PICKING UP.

Business seems to be picking up nicely in the National Capital, according to all reports, and this change in conditions is being welcomed by all, perhaps more especially by the correspondent of The Moving Picture World, who has, on many occasions, been forced to sympathize with his many friends among the exhibitors on the smallness of the box office receipts. Several of the houses who have heretofore confined themselves to nickel shows during the week are trying out the ten-cent proposition and it would seem as though they were meeting with no little success. From all appearances, within a short time Washington will have the ten-cent minimum running universally. And it cannot be seen why they should not. A downtown exhibitor aptly summed up the situation the other day when he invited a comparison of admission charges of the movie theaters and those of the legitimate houses. A motion picture exhibition, properly operated, will last from an hour to an hour and a quarter, while a drama will run twice that long, or possibly a little more. An exhibitor turns white and feels sick at heart at what might be termed misapplied duplicity when he dares to ask the public for a ten cent piece in exchange for one admission, but the theatre manager kicks like the deuce because he cannot get more than $2 for the best seats—to him worth far more no matter how poor a show may be. Take the minimum of 50 cents on the floor. The matter of the difference in expense between a motion picture exhibition and a theatrical production counts for nothing for the simple reason that it is the quality and quantity of the amusement in which the public is most interested. If it has to pay a minimum of 50 cents for the one why not 10 cents for the other.

CUT THROAT COMPETITION.

A handbill read thus: "Special matinee from 3 to 6 o'clock—Johnnie Reh will give Five Big Vaudeville Acts, consisting of Royal Marionettes in their own little theater. Punch and Judy, Little Fluffy, smallest trained dog in the world, Magic Juggling, and the regular program of six splendid reels of pictures. All for five cents. Grand for the children and fine for adults. Come and bring the children. Vaudeville at four and six o'clock." It is issued by the Florida theatre, Fifteenth and H streets, Northeast, operating the "Longest and best show northeast," and the competing exhibitors ask one another how in thunder can anyone do business in face of such a proposition. The handbill further announces that the Sunday afternoon show will consist of eight reels and the evening show of five or more, and at five cents all the time. Capping the climax it is stated that a free concert will be given on Sunday afternoon from 2 to 2.45 p. m. This is the extreme of anything that has so far come to light in this funny business city. The question is, does such an affair constitute a business proposition, or is it conducted in an effort to close out others of the neighborhood houses. There is no gainsaying the fact that a man has the right to do as he may see fit with his own business, but it is a sorry state of affairs when other houses face a necessity of meeting such competition.

OTHER WASHINGTON ITEMS.

Renfax Musical Movies are being used to good advantage at the Empire theater on H street, near Ninth street, Northeast, and Manager Samuel Greenberg reports greatly increased box office receipts since adding this feature. They have proven a decided novelty in the residential section in which this house is located.

Washington exhibitors will no doubt be pleased to learn that H. F. Lavelle, formerly manager of the Washington Film Exchange, handling the Universal product, has returned to the city and is now traveling through Maryland and Virginia as a representative of Warner's Features, Inc. After severing his connection with his former employers, Mr. Lavelle went to his home in Atlantic City for a much-needed rest, but is back on the job again.

Another veteran returning to the city after a short absence is our old friend Dresner, who preceded Mr. Lavelle as manager of the Washington Film Exchange, but who has lately been in charge of the Pittsburgh branch for Warner's Features, Inc. With his return to Washington comes the announcement of the formation by him of what is to be known as the Exhibitors' Co-Operative Booking Agency, with offices in the Bank of Commerce and Savings Building, at Seventh and E streets, Northwest. The object of this concern is to secure State rights for big features and to conduct such other business as comes within the activities of a feature film exchange.

Major Alfred A. Pruden, U. S. A., chaplain at Fort Monroe, Va., was a visitor here last week. Major Pruden booked a number of features to augment the regular service of the exhibition which is conducted under his supervision at Fort Monroe, which is one of the largest posts on the Atlantic coast and has a complement of some two thousand officers and men. Needless to say the movies are forming the most welcome form of amusement at the post.

Leo Garner, booker at the local branch of Warner's Features, Inc., gave an exhibition of his prowess as an amateur singer and impersonator before more than a hundred members and guests of the Florists' Club of Washington, of which the World correspondent happens to be the secretary. His efforts were well received, as were those of Sidney B. Lust, manager of the exchange, who entertained with a motion picture exhibition, using an Animatograph to very good advantage. The little projecting machine worked fine at a distance of fifty feet from a ten by twelve screen.

Herbert F. Osborne received a vote of thanks from more than three hundred members of Washington-Centennial Lodge No. 14, F. A. A. M., for whose benefit he exhibited a series of war pictures. Mr. Osborne was recently elected to the office of junior steward of the lodge.

The serial story covering the adventures of Elaine is to be run in the Baltimore American.

The name of the Electic Feature Film Exchange has been changed to the Pathe Exchange, Inc. Aside from this everything is running smooth in that office despite the fact that our friend Osborne has gone to New York to attend a meeting of the exchange managers of that organization. While absent Sam Flax will hold down the big swivel chair in the front office.

Washington exhibitors will no doubt be pleased to learn that Daniel M. O'Brien, formerly of this city, who has been confined to a hospital in Charlestown, W. Va., where he is manager of a branch of the Buckeye Film Exchange, is again able to attend to the duties of his office.

Jack Levy, manager of the Philadelphia branch, paid a visit to the local office of the Greater New York Film Rental Company last week.

Dallas Ball has opened a motion picture show in the town hall at Clarendone, Va.

F. C. Wright, operating the Colonial theater at Hagerstown, Md., and C. M. Casey, who has the Belvidere, at Lynchburg, Va., were seen in town during the week.

The Cosmos theater is this week celebrating its fifth anniversary with an extensive vaudeville and motion picture show.

Robert H. Campbell, vice president of the Columbia Amusement Company, and manager of the Olympic theater on U street, Northwest, is temporarily in Richmond, Va., where he is acting as manager of the Strand theater.

George Crouch, who has been in the employ of Harry Crandall for the past five years, has succeeded to the position at Crandall's theater formerly occupied by Guy Barrett.

Louis W. Atkinson, an officer of the American Theater Company, states that the suits brought against that company by the Casino and the Strand Theater companies have been withdrawn by mutual consent.

Great interest is being manifested in the motion picture production "Uncle Sam at Work," staged under the direction of Henry W. Savage, from the book, "The American Government," by Frederick J. Haskin. The film in itself is a history in civil government. It is based on the visit of a party of tourists who came to Washington to see just how the great affairs of the government are conducted. The party visits the White House, where the Cabinet is seen in session, and a glimpse is obtained of the historic rooms of the President's mansion and of the surrounding grounds. The various departmental and the Capitol buildings are visited.

MOTION PICTURES AND UNIVERSITY COURSE

Visual Instruction Bureau of University of Wisconsin Has Inaugurated Its Fourth Circuit of Pictures.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE visual instruction bureau of the University of Wisconsin at Madison inaugurated its fourth circuit for moving pictures and slides on Jan. 4. Between thirty-five and forty communities will now see educational films and slides regularly. There are about 160 communities in the first three circuits.

Next year the circuits will be so booked that each community may keep each set of films and slides a week before sending them on to the next town. This is due to a demand from some of the larger schools that they be allowed opportunities for sending some of their pupils on a tour of the surrounding rural schools, from which the pupils for the larger school are recruited.

OTHER NOTES FOR WISCONSIN.

The Chilton City band gave a concert at the opening of William Merz's new picture house in Chilton. The house will be operated with a picture policy four nights a week—Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sundays—with a Sunday matinee. Verne Hall will be in charge of the projection, Miss Vera Boockmeier will take care of the musical part of the program and Miss Verna Kroll will be cashier. The house seats 236 in addition to boxes for 14 and is thoroughly modern.

It isn't often that you find an exhibitor advertising a rival attraction, but a recent announcement of the Monroe theater at Monroe started this way, "Either before or after seeing the Famous Weigle war pictures at Turner opera house tonight, come over to our house and see."

J. Schiffman has purchased the Park theater at Waukesha.

NOTES OF INTEREST IN SOUTH.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE social and educational departments of the Y. M. C. A. at Birmingham, Ala., are using moving pictures in connection with their work.

"Moving Pictures Made Her Seasick," is the catchline used in advertisements run generally in southern papers by the makers of a cure-all. It runs with a regular news heading, although it is plastered "advertisement" to comply with the postal laws. "Motion same as shipboard," says the sub-heading, but by reading down into the ad one finds that the mythical woman has witnessed pictures of an ocean scene and that not all pictures are nauseating as the heading would lead the casual reader to believe.

The Grand theater at LaGrange, Cal., is now operating every day. This house has just installed a new orchestrion.

New Orleans led the south in the standardizing of prices for feature film attractions according to film exchange men quoted in the annual industrial resume in a local paper.

Phillip Foto has been making plans for the erection of a moving picture theater to cost about $10,000 in Algiers, a suburb of New Orleans.

The Majestic theater at Birmingham, Ala., has been reopened as a picture house with "Cabiria" as the feature attraction. A small fire was suffered in the operating room Dec. 28, but aside from the destruction of three feet of film no damage was done.

The Magnolia Film Company of Augusta, Ga., which has just accepted its charter from the secretary of state, has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, A. P. Padgett; vice-president, Arthur Jones; and secretary-treasurer, B. H. Goodwin. W. K. Young will be director of production.

Theaters Await Throngs

Promise of Big Crowds to Panama-Pacific Exposition Gives Hopes to California Exhibitors—Many New Theaters Ready for Throngs—Old Houses Also Waiting to Cater to Picture Fans—Everything Furbished Up and Shining.

By T. A. Church, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

CALIFORNIA exhibitors anticipate that the year 1915 will prove to be by far the most prosperous of any since the beginning of the motion picture industry. For more than three years this State has been making preparations for entertaining the world in 1915, and with the opening of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco now so near at hand all is in readiness for the reception of visitors. The past year has witnessed the erection of many large moving picture theaters throughout the State, a number of which would not have been built at this time, except for the prospects of a heavy volume of business, as a result of the Exposition. Owners of small houses have clung to their places of business through the quiet times, in many cases at a loss, in order to reap a harvest during 1915, and the new year has opened with much promise for them. The Panama-Pacific International Exposition, the magnet that is expected to draw such enormous crowds to San Francisco this year, will be opened on Feb. 20 and will close Dec. 4. The Exposition will be in a completed form on the opening date and in the points of location, beauty of architecture, cost and participation will be the greatest event of its kind ever held.

LEAGUE WATCHING STATE LEGISLATORS

Law Makers Now in Session in Sacramento—League Watching for New Ordinances That Will Affect Theaters.

The California State Legislature is now in session at Sacramento and the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of California is keeping a close watch on all proposed legislation affecting the motion picture industry. Friends in the Legislature are prepared to send word to the San Francisco headquarters of any such measures, and the members of the League at Sacramento are also keeping a diligent watch. It is known that several bills have been prepared and will be introduced, including measures providing for State censorship and an age limit for children who may attend theaters unaccompanied by parents or guardians.

IGOROTTES GATHER WHEN FILMS ARE SHOWN

A Picture Machine in Philippine Wilds Attracts Savage Folk—Watch Bare Screen With Endless Patience.

Clement W. Lyons, acting lieutenant in the United States Army, was here recently with some interesting stories of showing moving pictures to the natives in the Philippines. While connected with the Igorotte scouts Mr. Lyons and his fellow-officers purchased a Simplex machine and took it into the wilds of Bagio, procuring service from the Universal Company at Manila. The pictures created such an interest that savages came for hundreds of miles to view them. The theater consisted of an open space among the palms, the seats the bare ground and the walls a cordon of armed native scouts. At the end of the performance it was necessary to remove the machine as the natives would sit for hours watching the screen. Light for the pictures was generated through a small dynamo operated by water power.

MORE SAN FRANCISCO NOTES

The San Francisco office of George Kleine Attractions has been moved to the Fourth street side of the Pacific Building, where very handsome quarters have been fitted up under the direction of Manager Tom North. More than double the former floor space is now being occupied, three large rooms being given over to private offices, the bookkeeping department and inspection and shipping room. New furnishings have been installed, making the offices among the most attractive to be found here and thoroughly in keeping with the high-grade business that is done.

The Portola theater has just concluded a highly satisfactory week's run on "The Thief" and Manager Eugene Roth has contracted with William Citron of the San Francisco branch of the Box Office Attraction Company for six of its early releases, "Samson" to be the first of these to be presented. The last week of the old year was rounded out at this house with a presentation of "Officer 666," and so insistent were the demands for admission that it was necessary on occasions to run an extra show in the evening.

Harry Drum, who has charge of the Western branches of the World Film Corporation, returned recently from a trip to Los Angeles, where the firm has been fitting up additional space. At San Francisco the floor space has been doubled by taking over an adjoining store and the work of remodeling this has just been completed. The new offices are finished in very handsome style and are made particularly pleasing by an array of handsome pictures. Mr. Drum plans to leave shortly for Salt Lake City, where the branch maintained there is to be enlarged.

Sol L. Lesser has purchased the California, Nevada and Arizona rights to the Salisbury Game Pictures, recently shown with such success at the Tivoli theater, and will continue to exhibit these with a lecturer in charge.

The Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., has purchased the Pacific Coast rights to "War of Wars," and is now busy booking advance engagements.

Commencing with the first week of the new year the Tivoli theater placed into effect a new and slightly higher schedule of prices for performances on Sundays and holidays, these ranging from 15 to 40 cents, the latter being for lodges.

The Silver Palace theater on Market street, near Third, which has been under the direct management of Charles Stillwell for some time, is now being managed by N. K. Herzog, who also has charge of the Pastime theater.

Architect August Headman, New Call Building, is preparing plans for a new moving picture house to cost $10,000 and to have a seating capacity of about 800. It is announced that this will be erected in the North Beach district, which has just been joined to the downtown section of the city by a tunnel.

Davis Bros., 158 Eddy street, are now booking the "Kid" Canfield feature, "Exposing the Gamblers."

A ball is to be tendered on the evening of Jan. 8 at the St. Francis Hotel to Herbert Payne, president of the California Motion Picture Corporation, and his wife, who was Miss Vera de Sabla, by Mrs. Theodore Payne, of Menlo. Some novel motion pictures have been prepared for presentation during the evening.

Frank Edoff has opened a new moving picture house at Berkeley, Cal., making the third new theater opened in that city within the past two months. This new picture house is located on Durrant avenue, near Telegraph, and is known as the Majestic. It is of fireproof construction throughout and was constructed especially for moving pictures. Feature photoplays are shown at 5 and 10 cents.

Two new Powers No. 6A Cameragraphs have been installed in Turner & Dahnken's Oakland Photoplay theater, Oakland, Cal.

R. G. Miller of Los Angeles, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco and while here contracted for the future releases of the Box Office Attraction Company to be shown at Miller's theater.

L. Zutermeister of Los Angeles, Cal., has purchased the Grand theater at Riverside, Cal.

M. M. Hearn, who recently disposed of his interests in the Kenwood theater at Riverside, is to open a house at Corona, Cal., as soon as the necessary remodeling work can be completed.

The Novelty theater at Napa, Cal., has been purchased by M. F. Lowery, who conducts the Unique, and has been closed.

J. F. Adams of Santa Ana, Cal., has purchased the interest of S. A. Marsden in the Electric theater at Orange, Cal., and will remodel the house at once.

W. J. A. Smith, proprietor of the Casa theater, Auburn, Cal., is moving the house to the rear of the lot and is to build a permanent theater.

The Star theater, San Rafael, Cal., has been purchased by W. A. Romans from W. R. Webb. The new owners will install a heating system, a new orchestrion and make other improvements.

Collins & Mohr have arranged to give moving picture shows at El Verano Villa, Sonoma, Cal.

Harry Hunsting has retired from the moving picture field at Gridley, Cal., and will probably enter other lines.

The Peninsula Investment Company, headed by Carl Schilling, has been formed to take over the lease on a theater being erected at Burlingame, Cal., by the Knights of Columbus and will engage in the amusement business as soon as the house is completed. The theater will be known as the Regent and will be devoted to moving pictures.

W. B. Stewart and Benjamin Freeman have taken over a theater on Main street, near Stanislaus, Stockton, Cal., and have reopened it as the Panama theater, following extensive changes. A new Simplex machine has been installed and the place renovated throughout. Four reels of pictures constitute a show, the admission price being 5 cents.

A fire occurred recently at the Macdonough theater, Oakland, Cal., just after the close of the performance, but the damage was very slight and there was no excitement on the part of the audience.

The Theater Fresno, Fresno, Cal., has been dark for some time and L. L. Cory, the owner, is negotiating with several amusement men to take charge of the house. The theater has been in charge of Fred W. Voigt since November, 1913. It is rumored that the theater may be devoted exclusively to moving pictures in the future.

C. M. Bowen, P. W. Hull and C. O. Freming, of the Consolidated Amusement Company, have taken a lease on the Ely theater, Ely, Nev.

The new Novelty theater at Martinez, Cal., will be opened about the middle of January under the management of Joseph Kelly.

Clune's Isis theater opened at San Diego, Cal., during Christmas week, the opening attraction being "Seats of the Mighty." Songs by Miss Norine O'Neall were features of the opening night.

The Gaiety theater, recently opened at Portersville, Cal., by A. H. Moore to replace the opera house destroyed by fire last spring, has arranged for the Alco service in that city.

The Elite theater, on Sattuck avenue, North Berkeley, Cal., is now being conducted by Bishop & Son and features are being shown exclusively.

A. Y. Tyndall of Klamath Falls, Ore., and H. Lasher, of the Orpheum theater, Susanville, Cal., were recent visitors in San Francisco.

E. M. Asher has returned to San Francisco from an extensive trip through the San Joaquin Valley in the interests of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc. Business conditions in the citrus belt are reported to be improving rapidly.

"The Tigress," featuring Olga Petrova, was reviewed in the exhibition room of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., by the trade on Friday last.

INDIANA NEWS LETTER

By Indiana Special Moving Picture World Trade News Service.

THE free matinee given for Indianapolis children to see the Haskin-Savage film, "Uncle Sam at Work," at English's Opera House in Indianapolis, drew such a crowd of youngsters that the doors had to be closed and many were disappointed.

Frank Holland, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Terre Haute, celebrated the eleventh anniversary of the Iroquois theatre fire at Chicago with his mother, Mrs. Ida Holland of Brazil. Mr. Holland was a singer in the "Bluebeard" company and was singing on the stage when the fire broke through the floor on the stage near his feet. He was the first to notice the fire. Hoping to keep the audience calm he kept singing until it was nearly too late for him to escape. He has a book of clippings from Chicago newspapers in which he received credit for being a hero.

Mrs. Holland was shopping in the vicinity, and when the news of the disaster reached her she rushed to the scene, knowing her son was in the theatre. Caught by the crowd she was forced back more than a block, where, by chance, her son who was dressed in his stage costume, found her. Mrs. Holland had collapsed and was taken into a drug store.

Charles Lyons, clothing merchant, Kokomo, Ind., has bought the Lyric theatre of Frank Gilbert. For the present Mr. Gilbert will continue to manage the place for the new proprietor. Later the house will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Whitley of Dayton, Ohio. The Whitleys are well and favorably known in Kokomo, having sung at one of the local picture shows for more than a year. They are about as popular singers as have ever been there, and Mr. Lyons was fortunate in securing them. The new owner intends making several improvements within the near future. Mr. Gilbert purchased the theatre several months ago from Mrs. Fleet Ager, who was operating it in connection with the Ideal which she still owns. Mrs. Ager bought the Lyric from Will Tarkington.

The Lyric moving picture house in the Ledbetter building, Michigan City, Ind., changed hands, being sold by Dr. Ledbetter and Louis Ganzschow to Messrs. L. J. Barnham and I. A. Battenberg, who have taken possession. Mr. Barnum will be active manager, and as he has had considerable experience in the show line at South Bend, the interests of the house will be well cared for. It is the intention of the new owners to make a number of improvements upon the place and the house will be dark a couple of days to permit the first changes to be made. Announcement will be given when the house is temporarily closed, but the new owners say that it will open again with the matinee performance on the following Saturday evening. The house will be kept open for a time before the improvements are started.

The Habit Theatre, Tipton, Ind., lost two days on account of the breakdown of the picture machine.

With the opening of the Jefferson House early in the season, Evansville added her twenty-third motion picture house, all of which have been opened or relocated in the last five years. The capacity of the twenty-three is sufficient to seat the entire population at every performance. The investment is estimated at $175,000. Two of the twenty-three houses are for colored people.

The Massachusetts Realty Company has asked that a receiver be named for the Iroquois Amusement Company, Indianapolis, running the Iroquois theatre. The complaint alleges the breaking of a contract and declares the company in danger of insolvency. Date for a hearing has not been set, and the company maintains the suit is spiteful and the company is in no danger of insolvency.

New Theater Opened

West Philadelphia Has Fine New House in Cross Keys, Formally Opened on December 28—Is Beautifully Appointed; Seats 2,200 Persons, and Has Biggest Lobby in the City—President of the Company John J. McGuirk Holds Reception After First Performance.

By Philadelphia Special Moving Picture World News Service.

AS a Christmas present to that section of West Philadelphia which centers about Sixtieth and Market streets, the new Cross Keys theatre was formally opened on the evening of December 28, accompanied by ceremonies fitting the occasion. New photo-plays are to play a most important part in the curriculum of the new theatre, which is of the popular priced type of vaudeville houses. The Calehuff Supply Company has installed two No. 6 A machines with all the accompanying essentials.

John J. McGuirk who is president of the company which is backing the new enterprise, after presenting the theatre to the public, held an informal reception in the lobby. Edwin Kelley, an attorney, responded to the presentation on the behalf of the South Sixtieth Street Business Men's Association, and dwelt upon the beautiful and modern properties of the building.

The new theatre has a seating capacity of 2,200. The lobby extends from Market street to the auditorium and is one of the largest in Philadelphia, and, in perfect harmony with the auditorium, is decorated in purple and gold. The one balcony seats 1,000 people and offers no obstructions in the way of posts to those seated below. The furnishings, which are both rich and elaborate, have been installed by the Lit Bros. department store of Philadelphia. There was much curiosity shown upon opening night by the audience in the new surroundings and many exclamations of praise were to be heard circulating about the theatre.

REPORT OF CENSORS.

The Pennsylvania State Board of Censors has approved 6,116,000 feet or about 116 miles of moving picture film during the period between June 1 and November 30, according to a report made to the Governor by Louis Breitinger, chief censor. In that time there were 6,116 reels, each containing a thousand feet of film submitted for state examination. On December 1 it became obligatory for all films in use to bear the State censor's mark, which consists of a wreath topped by the State seal, showing a Keystone and bearing the approval statement.

NEW PATENT BILL

General Interest Taken in New Bill Providing for Filing of Patent Applications.

Considerable opposition is springing up in well informed patent circles against a bill drawn up for presentation to Congress by the American Patent Law Association providing for the temporary extension of the time of filing applications for letters patent and registration in the Patent Office and fees therefor. The bill is broadly drawn in order to cover all possible contingencies growing out of the war, and purports to follow closely a law passed in Germany since the outbreak of histilities for approximately the same purpose.

The present wording of the bill, however, affords to the Germans, as well as other foreigners, more definite advantages than are given to the American inventors, or other persons interested by the German act. In addition to this, the wording of the bill is said to discriminate in favor of foreigners in that it offers them the chance of pleading that owing to their financial condition on account of the war they were unable to file their applications in good time, whereas citizens of this country, who are also adversely affected in a financial way by the war, are not granted similar privileges.

The bill specifically provides that "whenever an applicant for letters patent or registration of a trade mark or label is unable on account of the existing state of war to file an application or pay any official fee within the period now limited by law, then the Commissioner of Patents will upon petition accept such application or fee within an additional period of nine months." It also says that the act shall be deemed effective from August 1.

The German law in question, while it makes specific mention of an extension not exceeding nine months in which an overdue annual patent tax may be paid without the penalty of an additional fee, does not provide for the acceptance of delayed applications for patents during that period.

WORTHY PATHE PLAYERS.

The French Pathe actors and employees are acquitting themselves with credit in the titanic struggle which is convulsing Europe. So far the honor list is as follows: Rene Alexandre, killed; Max Linder, wounded, and M. Escoffier, decorated. In addition to these men two employees of the Jersey City studio who went back to fight have written to friends in this country that they are wounded—Rene Monaca and M. Tricot.

OTHER PHILADELPHIA ITEMS.

Plans are in progress for a new moving picture house to be erected in Wilmington, Delaware, for Mrs. Lulu Baldt of Philadelphia. The building is to be one story, brick and concrete. Wallace E. Hance of No. 204 West 24th street, Wilmington, is the architect.

The moving picture theatre at the northeast corner of 6th and Pike streets, known as the Pike, occupying a lot 75 feet by 103 feet 4 inches, has been sold by Lambert Alpigini to Margery A. Redmond, wife of Daniel Redmond, subject to Mortgages of $25,700. The price paid for the theatre which has a seating capacity of 800, was $32,000. In the transaction Vincent O'Farrell represented the purchaser and Theodore E. Nickles the seller.

Under the penalty of being closed all theatres and moving picture houses in Hoboken, N. J., must be thoroughly scoured and fumigated to help prevent the further spread of diptheria, now epidemic in that town, nearly 150 cases having been reported to the Board of Health.

Plans are in progress for the building of a new moving picture theatre at West Chester, Pa., at a cost of $25,000, and will be two stories in height. Roscoe C. Tindall, with offices in the Equitable Building at Wilmington, Delaware, is the architect.

Beginning New Year's Day, Guy Roof, manager of the Plaza theatre, of East Stroudburg, will run nothing but feature films of moving pictures. Mr. Roof stated that during the past month he has come to the conclusion that the people of Stroudburg want high class productions of moving pictures. He has made an arrangement with the Famous Players Film Company, the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Company and the Bosworth Company, to procure all Paramount pictures. Owing to the cost of presenting these films and because he has to advance a large sum to procure them, Mr. Roof will charge the admission price of ten cents. with the exception of children.

Pittsburgers Invited

Screen Club Members of Smoky City Receive Cordial Invitation to Convention of Exhibitors' Association—Dates Changed Since First Call—Will Be Held at Harrisburg, January 26, 27 and 28—Censorship, Building Code, Poster Restrictions and Taxation Among Vital Issues.

By Pittsburg Special Motion Picture World News Service.

William Mayer, secretary of the Pittsburg Screen Club, recently received the following letter from James Delves, secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania:

My Dear Sir—It is with great pleasure that on behalf of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania, I extend a hearty invitation to yourself and every member of the Pittsburg Screen Club, to concert with us and the Independent Exhibitors of the State in convention at Harrisburg, Pa., January 26, 27 and 28, 1915.

You will note that the dates are changed since our first call for this convention, the object of this to enable the legislative bodies to get properly organized, committees formed, and in a position to give us more attention and better results, from our efforts, and by advice by our friends at the front, the powers that be.

It is not our intention to ask your organization for financial assistance, as we have up to the present received from some of the parties interested in the film business very liberal donations to the cause. But we do hope that all of the members of the Screen Club connected with the industry, either as exhibitors or otherwise, will give a liberal response to our invitation to Harrisburg, Pa., on the dates mentioned above.

Everything possible is being done by us with the assistance of the exhibitors of the central and eastern parts of the state, not only to make this a successful convention on the most vital points at issue, namely the abolition of the censor law, building code, poster restrictions, city and borough taxation, etc., but to make this a social, entertaining and enjoyable gathering, while at the same time arranging for the amalgamation of forces for a strong organization throughout the State and Union.

Exhibitors have the power and it is up to them to get together and devise means by which that power can be used to the best advantage.

Now is the time for us to do something and the place is Harrisburg, Pa.

Yours truly,

Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania, James Delves, Secretary and Treasurer.

EXPRESS COMPANIES AND FILM DELIVERIES

During Holiday Rush Express Companies Let Film Men Suffer—Need of Some Special Arrangement.

ON account of alleged carelessness on the part of express companies in handling films during the holiday rush season various film exchange men of Pittsburg are registering complaints against the companies. They contend that they do business with the express companies 365 days in the year and that therefore they are entitled to more consideration than those who ship packages once a year. Preference should be given to films, the exchange men argue, and justly so, as they represent merchandise which is perishable in a certain sense, and in most cases is of no value if it is delayed in shipment.

The Anchor theatre at 408 Diamond street is the newest downtown theatre, having just recently opened its doors to the amusement public. Both exterior and interior arrangements are attractive, being bright and engaging and without the element of gaudiness. The governing object of the proprietor, Prof. Leo Gerechter, was to have the architects construct a theatre that would impress the patrons by its coziness, and results show that they have not disappointed him. Prof. Gerechter is well known as a manager of moving picture houses, having been identified with the amusement practically since it got a foodhold in Pittsburg. He also has considerable fame as a musician, and visitors to the Anchor are treated to fine execution in pianoforte.

LANDE TAKES EXCHANGE

Former Pittsburger Takes Over Branch Office of United Film Service—Will Manage Exchange.

An important change took place in the Pittsburg office of the United Film Service (Warner's Features) last week, Harry A. Lande having taken over the branch and assumed the management of the exchange. Mr. Lande is an old Pittsburger, having been one of the pioneer film men and exhibitors of this section in the early days of the business. Three years ago he went to New York and engaged in the importing and manufacturing branch of the industry, in which he had his share of success. After looking into the new program of the United Film Service he was convinced of its quality and determined to again enter the ranks of the exchangemen, casting his lot among those of his "home town."

OTHER PITTSBURG NOTES.

Sydney E. Abel, manager of Continental Feature Film Company, Pittsburg, Pa., said there is no abatement in the demand for the Thanhouser serial "Zudora." "Runaway June," the Reliance serial, is another production that Mr. Abel likes to talk about.

Walter Levenson, manager of the Renfax Film Company's Pittsburg branch, reports that there is a continued interest being taken in his musical motion pictures and is signing up contracts every day. He also has received many inquiries from Ohio and West Virginia.

Messrs. Miller & Murray recently purchased the Winner theatre in East Ohio street, Northside, Pittsburg, Pa.

C. E. Wormer and F. C. Kirkpatrick of Titusville, Pa., recently purchased the Brown, Dion and Thorpe interests in the Orpheum theatre and the Opera House in that town. They have closed a contract for Paramount pictures, to be shown in the Orpheum.

The Variety theatre, one of the two Windle houses in Beaver avenue, Northside, Pittsburg, Pa., has been purchased by James E. Mooney. This house was recently purchased by Mr. Freeman.

The new Garden theatre in Main street and Park place, Johnstown, Pa., opened recently. There was a large crowd present to see the initial performance, and general satisfaction was expressed with the theatre and with the quality of the pictures shown. There was a six-piece orchestra from New York City to furnish the music, and the soloist was Charles Fulton of the Strand theatre, New York, one of the most famous moving picture houses in America.

The Lyric theatre, Winber, Pa., is being remodeled and enlarged. H. M. Habeeb, owner and B. F. Miller, manager, were in Pittsburg recently looking for equipment. The seating capacity will be increased from 250 to 300 and an entirely new equipment will be installed. Mr. Miller is well-known in Pittsburg, being formerly connected with the Keno Film Company and lately was road man for the Urban Feature Film Company of Johnstown, Pa.

Peter Antonoplos, proprietor of the Olympic theatre, Fifth avenue, Pittsburg, Pa., has purchased the territorial rights for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia of the great Ramo picture, "The War of Wars." The picture is not a war drama, but contains the weaving of a very interesting love story.

Matthew Teplitz, formerly manager of the Elmore theatre in Center avenue, Pittsburg, Pa., has leased from A. H. Berg of McKeesport the Merryland theatre at Duquesne, Pa. This house has a seating capacity of 500, is centrally located and should do a good business.

The Pastime theatre, Market street, Pittsburg, Pa., recently changed hands, the new owners, Shimp & Tucker, both Pittsburg business men, having taken charge of the place on Christmas Day. The former owners, the Pierce Amusement Company of New Orleans, La., have had the house for three years and for the past year Mr. Troxell has been manager. The latter left for the South last week.

J. R. Bryce, owner of the Lyric theatre at Homestead, near Pittsburg, Pa., is said to have been sold at sheriff's sale recently, William Edwards having bought the property. The latter is a musician, with offices in Pittsburg.

MICHIGAN NOTES OF INTEREST.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

COLD weather and consequent delays to trains has brought the perennial problem of non-arrival of films to northern Michigan managers. These are busy days for the emergency reels.

The Lyric theater at Ludington gave two free matinees the Sunday after Christmas for children under fourteen years of age.

Amsden's Third Regiment Band played selection back of the curtain during the production of "The Lights o' London" at the Auditorium in Saginaw.

Ben Noonan, manager of the Orpheum theater at Hancock, has gone west because of the poor health of Mrs. Noonan. Norman Gillespie, a newspaper man, has been made manager of the Hancock picture and vaudeville house.

Custer Waltz has sold a half interest in the Pastime theater at Ovid to his son, Leon Waltz, who with Loren May will have the management of the house.

Frank J. O'Donnell has resigned his position as manager of the Columbia theater at Grand Rapids, Mich., owned by Gillingham & Smith, to become manager of the Family theater in Detroit for J. P. Harris of Pittsburgh.

Rev. E. J. Cross, pastor of the First Baptist church at Corruna, who has installed a moving picture machine, announces that it will be used each Sunday night in connection with his sermons. The machine was initiated at the annual Christmas festivities.

Manager Whitehead of the Bijou theater at Albion has been allowed to reopen his house, having made a number of changes suggested by fire prevention officials.

A new moving picture show has been opened at Plymouth.

The Theatorium at Lansing, which ran the Griffith feature, "Judith of Bethulia," for three days of the holiday week deemed it sufficient of an attraction to dispense with the customary vaudeville program.

Rytkanen & Allen are again operating the Star theater in Nagaunee.

The employes of the Box Office Attraction Company, Pittsburg, Pa., made up a purse with which they purchased a beautiful gold watch for the manager, Harvey B. Day, as a Christmas present.

IOWA STATE FILM.

Films of Iowa Ready—Exhibitors May Be Asked to Bid for District Rights —Associations to Co-operate.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

IOWA exhibitors may be asked to bid for the privileges of showing the films of the Hawkeye state attractions which will be made for the San Francisco fair. This is one of many angles to a project for putting Iowa on film in a comprehensive manner. The Iowa commission wants as many industries, railroads and municipalities as possible to donate their pictures. The legislature will be asked to appropriate $2,000 for filming things that have no local sponsor. Copies of the films will be made. The different theaters in a town will be asked to bid for the local rights. The state commission will co-operate with the local commercial association or some women's organization to see that the photoplay house is patronized by representative crowds. It also is planned to get pictures of the various societies on the Pacific coast which are made up of former residents of Iowa.

OTHER IOWA ITEMS.

A $100,000 company is reported to be the aim of the backers of Arthur L. Runyan's ideas for an advertising moving-picture concern. A meeting was held recently at Waterloo, where it was decided to form the Arthur L. Runyan Company with Runyan as president; C. G. Holden as vice-president, H. E. Kiester as secretary and treasurer, and Dr. E. T. Alford and H. B. Plumb as directors.

Hill Williams, 17 years old, a student at Morningside college, and operator of a moving picture machine at the Park palace theater in Morningside, a suburb of Sioux City, died as a result of a fire in the operating room. Smoke and fumes from a burning film are believed to be the cause of his death, although he was badly burned in trying to put out the blaze. About 200 persons were in the house at the time and it is reported several were slightly injured.

After a short time as manager of the Iris theater at Hamburg, N. Y., J. K. Fisher of Carroll purchased the house from L. H. Carder.

An incendiary fire at the Empress theater at Storm Lake was discovered soon enough to prevent any serious damage. Kerosene-soaked rags were found at the steps leading from the auditorium to the pit under the stage and the fire was started almost directly under the electric piano. A few matches and a lead pencil were found. No motive is ascribed, as neither the owner of the building nor Manager Morland have any known enemies.

C. F. Hulbert, manager of the Mystic theater in Madrid, has leased the Palace theater from Johnson & Swanson, closed up the Mystic and hereafter will operate his show in the Palace building, using the name of the New Mystic. This leaves Madrid with a single photoplay house. "Jack" Scott, who had a temporary lease on the Palace, probably will engage in the picture business in some other town.

A. S. McCurdy of Dickens has purchased a moving picture show at Canton, S. D.

Harry Eash, who recently purchased a moving picture show at Griswold, and Miss Myrtle Deloy Disbrow have just announced their marriage on Dec. 2.

Frank Beach and Rose Russell had charge of the Star theater at Mt. Vernon during the holidays while the Hodgsons enjoyed a vacation.

Raleigh Fry and Alta Nolta have rented the H. L. Lee building at State Center and will operate a moving picture show therein.

Charles H. Schreckengost, who purchased the moving picture show at Keosaqua from Will Martin, announced that the building would be remodeled and enlarged and a new heating system installed.

Coming State Convention

President Neff, Veteran Leader of the League Will Not Be Candidate for Chief Office This Year—Business Out of State Leads to This Decision—Legislative Questions That Will Be Prominent in Discussions When Deligates Meet.

By Kenneth C. Crain, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

PRESIDENT M. A. NEFF of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Ohio, has, as noted in another department of the Moving Picture World last week, issued his formal call for the state convention to be held in Columbus on February 9 and 10, following the usual authorization for the convention by the State Executive Committee. As the Ohio legislature will doubtless be in session at that time, having convened a few days ago, the exhibitors will almost certainly be called upon to express themselves upon the question of censorship, upon which the new legislation is anticipated. Other important subjects which are expected to come up include that of a State tax on exhibitors, Sunday closing, attendance of school children on Saturday, the use of motor-driven apparatus and so forth. In issuing the call President Neff takes occasion to state that he will not again be a candidate for that office, pointing out that he has now served five years, and saying that while he has received nothing for his services in money he feels more than repaid by the loyal support which the members have accorded him. Mr. Neff's new business interests in New York, where he is now located, would also interfere to some extent with his connection with the Ohio league, and it is therefore probable that the veteran executive, who has been prominent in national and State organizations for years, will conclude his service in that capacity with the Ohio meeting in February.

COURT ACQUITS EXHIBITOR.

Proprietor of Theater in Cincinnati Acquitted by Juvenile Court of "Country Store Night" Charge.

The Cincinnati exhibitor, proprietor of the Main theatre, on Main street, who was recently brought before the juvenile court on the charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency by operating a "country store" in connection with his theatre, was acquitted by the court on the ground that the operation of the plan could not be held to be necessarily conducive to juvenile delinquency.

UNITED FILM RENTING COMPANY INCORPORATED.

Cincinnati Business Men Foresee That New Company Will Play Important Part in Film Exchange Field.

The incorporation recently of a concern to be known as the United Film Renting Company, with a capitalization of $180,000, marks the organization and entry into the film-exchange field in Cincinnati of what promises to be one of the leading factors in the business in this vicinity. Those connected with the new company refuse to give out details concerning its plans, but developments which have already taken place, and information available from other sources, show at least that it affects the Cleveland and Cincinnati offices of Warner's Feature Film Company, which, it is understood, will be taken over by it, while it is also understood that it will take over the Cleveland and Indianapolis offices of the Universal.

OTHER CINCINNATI ITEMS.

A. M. Muller, the popular Cincinnati manager for Warner's, left for New York last week to locate there permanently, the Cincinnati office being temporarily in charge of H. G. Heis, who is putting in a new accounting system on behalf of W. J. Eckhart, Inc., of Buffalo. The exact nature of the rearrangement of service, territory, and so forth, which will follow the organization of the new company and the new control of the offices mentioned will doubtless become known later. It is understood, however, that no change will be made in the present method of releasing the Universal program, as the company will have its own offices and will release a separate program.

The motion picture theatre on Rockdale avenue, near Reading Road, in Avondale, which has been vacant for several months, has been leased to a firm which will re-open it shortly. The house is owned by H. B. Asmann, a grocer, and the rental is said to be in the neighborhood of $75 a month. The place is well located, in an excellent residence district, and there seems to be no reason why it should not be a success in good hands and with vigorous handling.

Some of the best attractions of the season were seen in Cincinnati's leading houses last week, starting 1915 off in excellent fashion. At the Strand, which is now the home of Paramount pictures in the downstown district, the Lasky-Belasco production of "The Girl of the Golden West" held forth during the first half of the week, drawing good crowds, as the recollection of the play when it was on the speaking stage remains with many theatre-goers. George Beban in "The Italian," another Paramount release, was at the Strand the latter half of the week. At the Lubin the second week of "Tillie's Punctured Romance," the multi-reel Keystone comedy featuring Marie Dressler, Charles Chaplin and Mabel Normand, entered its second week making a rather unusual record in that respect, while the Alhambra and the Orpheum both have unusually good programs, among the most conspicuous productions shown perhaps, being "The Pit," the Shubert and Brady attraction in which Wilton Lackaye repeated his success on the stage. This was shown at the Alhambra on Sunday and at the Orpheum on Thursday. Business at most of the better houses was good, in spite of cold weather and continued talk of hard times, indicating the truth of the axiom that there is no such thing as bad weather or hard times for a really good show.

The motion picture "travelog," which has largely succeeded the old-fashioned variety illustrated by means of ordinary photographs, has been especially popular since the European war broke out, on account of the additional interest given to scenes in the countries affected, and the Dayton News, of Dayton, O., made a considerable success of the week's engagement there of Frank R. Roberson, well known as a lecturer on travels, who presented several reels under the title, "The Nations at War." The paper published a coupon which, with ten cents, was good for admission to the moving picture lectures.

It is reported at Dayton that probabilities favor the construction in that city during the year of a magnificent new photoplay house by Young & Young, a firm of lawyers who are interested in moving pictures. The project just now is understood to be contingent upon the outcome of a deal which is under way for the purchase of property adjoining a tract with a fifty-front which is owned by the firm on Third street. The plans discussed contemplate the construction of a twelve-story office building, to contain a handsome new theatre of the most modern type.

Valentine Rayburg and Ellis J. Finke, joint owners of the Lyceum theatre, one of Dayton's moving picture houses, have answered the suit of the Mutual Film Company recently filed against them by a cross-petition asking for damages of $5,000, for the alleged failure of the Mutual to furnish service contracted for. The litigation has grown out of the arrangement between the company and the theatre for service.

The Movie Stamp Company, recently incorporated at Dayton with a capital stock of $5,000, intends, as its name indicates, to operate a plan designed to assist moving-picture exhibitors to secure additional business, and, incidentally, to help other merchants in the same way. The idea is the issue of trading-stamps by merchants in all lines which will be good for tickets to motion-picture theatres. Variations of this plan, operated for a short period in other cities, have proved fairly successful, and the company intends to see whether it cannot be used systematically for the benefit both of exhibitors and merchants. S. H. and J. Thal, A. W. Schulman and others, are interested in the project.

The Chicago Tribune war pictures met with a large reception last week at the Alhambra in Canton, due in part to spectacular advertising, and largely, of course, to the public attention which the pictures have attracted by reason of press comments on their authenticity and interesting nature. An admission of 25 cents was charged, as has been the case in most cities where the pictures have been shown. A coupon printed in the full-page advertisements used, however, was good for admission for school children, with 15 cents, and many of the youngsters helped to swell the attendance at the Alhambra during the running of the pictures.

John Heike of Smithville, O., a small town near Massillon, recently celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary by attending his first moving picture show. He came into Massillon to do some shopping and embraced the opportunity to see what a picture show looked like, overcoming an aversion of long standing to that form of entertainment. He liked it so well that he remained in the theatre for the entire evening, seeing the same pictures three times, and announced that he intended thereafter to see pictures every time he got the chance.

More than 1,800 newsboys of the city were the guests of Max Stern, owner, and J. H. Maddox, Manager of the Majestic Theatre here on January 10. They had been invited to witness the premiere of Mary Pickford's "Cinderella," which was put on specially for their benefit. If this great actress has ever had a more critical audience or one more appreciative is to be doubted. The boys sat through the play spellbound. They applauded liberally and at the right moments.

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN SOUTHWEST.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE Martin theater at Miami, Ariz., has been secured by Manager Alden of the Elks theater, who will operate the Martin in conjunction with the Elks. Alden also is secretary of the Globe Amusement Company.

Frank Barr, manager of the Lyric theater at Fayetteville, Ark., has been making plans to install an electric light plant at Huntsville, and also will open a moving picture theater at that place.

A Keystone comedy every day is now the policy of the Yale theater at Bartlesville, Okla.

Manager D. A. White has been making plans to remove the Cozy theater at Hobart, Okla., to the building on Fourth street occupied by the Monogram and has been purchasing new equipment for the new location.

A gift night, when presents aggregating $50 in value were distributed, was a recent stunt at the Columbia theater in Douglas, Ariz. Another recent feature was a concert by the Ninth Cavalry band in connection with the regular picture program.

Plans for the erection of a new theater in Drumright, Okla., have been announced by H. A. Morgan, who formerly was one of the proprietors of the Grand theater in that city. The new house will seat about 600 persons.

H. E. McGucken, an Industrial Worker of the World organizer, who with Boris Thomassen was accused of setting fire to the Nevada theater Oct. 29 at Reno, Nev., has been released from custody upon the recommendation of the grand jury.

A Yuma Day was held at the Yuma theater in Yuma, Ariz., when the films of the Fourth of July celebration in that city were shown under the ausipices of the local Commercial Club. The proceeds will be used for new leaders on the films, which will be distributed at the San Francisco fair.

The Eagle Film Company has been incorporated at Oklahoma City, Okla., with capital stock of $12,000. The incorporators are E. D. Nix of St. Louis, William Tighlman of Oklahoma City and Chris Madsen of Guthrie, Okla.

Foster McSwain, the new proprietor of the Orpheum theater at Enid, Okla., announces that the house will be remodeled and renewed throughout immediately.

Vaudeville has not been profitable at the Broadway theater in Muskogee, Okla., and the house has gone back to pictures.

The Gaiety theater on Court street in Muskogee, Okla., has been taken over by J. D. Goodwin of Tulsa, Okla., and D. C. Kennedy of Okmulgee, Okla.

The Sebastian theater at Fort Smith, Ark., is now under the management of H. Clay Brown and C. L. Pyle.

The vaudeville policy of the Orpheum theater at Tulsa, Okla., has been revised downward and it is now playing feature pictures and two acts of vaudeville. Formerly it was five acts of vaudeville and later seven and eight.

H. C. Norfleet, who until recently was assistant manager of the Isis theater in Houston, Tex., will be the manager of the Crystal theater, which has been purchased by A. E. Kiesling, a druggist of that city. The remodeling plans of the new owner are extensive, calling for new heating and ventilation, altered front, new lobby, redecorated interior and a new marquee. The name is to be changed.

The Giersdorf Band Concert Company of ten was a recent attraction at the Odeon theater in Bartlesville, Okla. Pictures were used in connection with the feature, but the prices ran 25 cents to $1.00.

A half-page in two colors was used in a local paper when the Empire theater at San Antonio, Tex., advertised the six-reel Keystone feature, "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

Louis W. Elliott, deputy United States Revenue Collector, of Houston, Tex., expects to issue 20,000 moving picture theater licenses in Texas.

Coming attractions at photo-play houses in Houston, Tex., are listed briefly by the Post of that city, under the weather forecast and the summary of the day's news.

The Star Theater, at Nowata, Okla., under the management of Rowe & Shilkett for two months, is now controlled by Brunk, Axley & Walker.

The Majestic Theatre, at Ardmore, Okla., and a number of business houses of that city are conducting a contest with a trip to the San Francisco fair as a prize. The advantage to the theater lies in promoting attendance through the sale of coupon books. With these books votes are given at three times the regular ratio, and having them around the house the friends of the contestants will use them up. Votes are also given with the regular admission tickets.

TANGLE STRAIGHTENED.

Trouble Between Two Louisville, Ky., Theaters Over Bookings of Brady Offering, "The Pit," Has Been Amicably Settled.

By G. D. Crain, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE tangle between the Mary Anderson theatre and the Alamo theatre over conflicting bookings on "The Pit," which was booked through the New York office to one theater and the Indianapolis office of the World Feature Film Corporation to the other theatre, was peacefully straightened out. Both theatres had advertised the production for the same date. However, the Mary Anderson ran the pictures and "Lola," in which Clara Kimball Young takes the leading part, was shown at the Alamo.

OTHER LOUISVILLE ITEMS.

J. Johnson Mussellman, manager of the Parkland Theatre, has demonstrated what good pictures and proper management will do for a suburban theatre which has failed to get a good start. The Parkland started operations in the summer but was unsuccessful from the start and was generally conceded to be a forlorn hope. In three weeks time Mr. Mussellman has placed the house on a dividend paying basis. Uncle Tom's Cabin was shown on New Year's night to a crowd of over 1,000 persons. General and Paramount features are being shown at the theatre and the program is somewhat similar to that shown at the Majestic theatre, which is controlled by the same interests.

Long credits for film service or supplies don't go with several of the Louisville film exchanges. A good deal of this business is handled on the cash basis and most of the local business is payable weekly. One film exchange recently hung a sign which reads:: "All City Bills Payable on Monday."

The motion picture house of J. G. Byerly at Vanceburg, Ky., was recently destroyed by fire which consumed about a quarter of a block of the business section of the town. The Ruggles Opera House building and the Masonic Hall were also destroyed. The total damage was estimated at $25,000.

Rowland Clark, manager of the Arista theatre of Lebanon, Ky., is operating his motion picture show at the Opera House while the theatre is undergoing repairs occasioned by a recent fire which did considerable damage to the playhouse.

Chick York, manager of the New Justice theatre of Ashland, Ky., recently employed a unique means to draw business. A fifty-dollar prize children's automobile was offered to the person holding a ticket, the number of which would be declared at an unknown date. The person owning the ticket had to be present at the performance at which the number was declared or another number would be drawn. It was announced on Friday that the drawing would take place on the following Saturday afternoon and the house was packed for the occasion. At the end of the show tickets taken during the contest were scattered over the stage and the four-year-old daughter of Manager York was blindfolded and told to draw a number. Three numbers were drawn before the winner stepped forward for the prize.

Vic Bloomfield of Winchester, Ky., has taken a seventeen-year lease on the building now occupied by the Pastime theatre. The present seating capacity of 300 will be increased to 500. The rear of the building will be torn out and a large stage erected which will be used for vaudeville in conjunction with pictures. The front of the building will also be remodeled.

The Dixie theatre of Mayfield, Ky., sprayed the house three times a day with a disinfectant during a recent diptheria scare which for a while threatened to scare the public away from the theatre. Ventilation was carefully watched and no children under fifteen years of age were admitted.

A special doll-giving event was the added attraction for Christmas at the Pastime theatre of Maysville, Ky. At the Gem theatre a real live Santa Claus distributed packages of candy to the juvenile patrons, and souvenir pictures of Mary Pickford to the ladies.

Manager Jaines of the Opera House at Irvine, Ky., has remodeled the stage at the theatre and now has things in good shape. Motion pictures are shown whenever legitimate bookings are lacking. The Mutual Girl is shown every Tuesday night.

Announcement has been made that the Colonial Amusement Company of Lexington, Ky., will withdraw from Richmond, Ky., and that the Alhambra theatre will be sold. S. B. Sparks who has been in charge of the house, will return to Lexington. The company has decided to give up several of its country houses and confine its efforts more closely to Lexington.

E. C. Conners, of the Mutual Film Corporation's Indianapolis office, was recently in Louisville in the interests of the big serial "Zudora," which is being shown at several local houses.

Harry Hadfield, of the Griffin Feature Film Company, of New York, was recently in the city.

The Universal production of "Damon & Pythias" has been booked through the Central Film Company, at the Masonic theater. The picture will be shown for two weeks, dating from Dec. 28.

Frank Miller, of the Reliance Motion Picture Company, of New York, was recently in Louisville arranging bookings for the serial "Runaway June."

The S. & P. Film & Supply Company recently signed a contract with a Cincinnati branch of the big motion picture exchanges to supply commercial service through the Cincinnati office for about thirty-five small picture houses through the West Virginia district. The deal was a good one for both parties according to Fred Sheldon, manager of the local company.

Mrs. F. C. Agers, of Kokomo, Ind., who operates three motion picture houses in the Hoosier town, has been in Louisville, looking up new service arrangements.

The Princess theater, of Henderson, Ky., which is under the control of Judge Allen Kinney, of the Princess Amusement Company, of Louisville, has entered into a unique advertising scheme similar to one which Judge Kinney used in Louisville in conection with the "Master Key." In Louisville a prize was offered to any one who could find a master key which would fit an old sea chest which was placed in front of the theater. At Henderson several hundred keys were thrown around the streets and department stores. A tag was attached to each key stating that if it were presented on the date attached each key was good for admission. One key was a master key and would unlock the box. The person who placed the right key in the lock found an order for $1 upon opening the lid.

The Broadway Amusement Company has installed Mutual service in the West Broadway, Crown and Baxter theatres. The first pictures were shown during the second week in January.

Fred J. Dolle of the Broadway Amusement Company has succeeded M. Switow as manager of the Alamo theatre, of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company. Mr. Switow continues as president of the company, but was so busied with other interests that he was unable to afford the necessary time required for actual management of the house. The Broadway Amusement Company is practically in charge of the house which is largely controlled by the same interests, and Mr. Dolle is actively engaged in handling bookings for all the houses.

The Columbia theatre of Louisville, which was sold by the Princess Amusement Company some months ago to W. B. Wheeler, has again changed hands and is now owned and operated by the S. & P. Film & Supply Company. This theatre was one of the first moving picture houses in the city and at one time did the business of the city. However, the theatre district has moved further out Fourth avenue and the theatre has not been a big money maker during the past two or three seasons. W. B. Wheeler has gone to Indianapolis, where he expects to re-enter moving picture field.

Formation of the United Theatres Company of Louisville, which was reported some weeks ago to be in process of organization for the purpose of controlling a number of theatres in the three Falls Cities, is still hanging fire and no further developments may be made for some time to come. Judge Kinney and L. J. Dittmar were behind the movement.

SUNDAY SHOW QUESTION IN WESTERN NEW YORK.

Binghamton Considering New Ordinance —Schenectady Puts Conditions on Sabbath Shows—Effect of Pictures.

By Billy Bison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World, 23 Victoria Ave., Buffalo.

IN Binghamton, N. Y., recently, Alderman Charles H. Bone introduced an ordinance forbidding the issuing of licenses for moving picture theatres for more than six days of the week. Several managers therefore hastened to take out yearly licenses at that time, hoping to have one year's immunity from the ordinance.

Moving picture theaters may be opened in Schenectady on Sundays on condition that part of the proceeds be turned over to the city for charitable purposes. Under this plan the sum of $4,200 has just been divided among Mercy and Ellis hospitals, the Children's Home, the Day Nursery, the Old Ladies' Home and the Salvation Army of that city.

The Buffalo Commercial recently printed a story that many saloons in New York State have had to close because, instead of patronizing these places, the people prefer to attend moving picture shows. The newspaper points out that therefore the moving picture exerts a strong moral influence.

OTHER NEW YORK STATE ITEMS.

Henry R. Jacobs, a well known theatrical man, is dead in Albany, N. Y. Several years ago he managed the Court Street theater, Buffalo, where Shea's theater now stands.

Film men of Syracuse recently held an informal luncheon. They also discussed a plan for securing a location for their new headquarters.

In Binghamton, N. Y., the records for the past year show that two theaters, the Sympaony and the People's, were opened there and the Star remodeled.

Lee C. Lansing, of Albany, has bought the Irving moving picture theater at Catskill, N. Y.

Fire recently damaged the Empire theater at Cohoes, N. Y. Ives & Walker are the managers.

The Salamanca (N. Y.) Press recently printed a complete story on the extensive work of the National Board of Censorship.

A. R. Sherry has become manager of the Family theater, Buffalo, which reopened with capacity business, Monday, January 11th, as a vaudeville and moving picture house. Four years ago he successfully opened and managed the Family. He later managed the Lyric and Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo. He has had charge of various houses for the Mark-Brock Theatrical Enterprises in the United States and Canada.

The Garden theater, Buffalo, which has been used for burlesque, vaudeville and moving picture purposes, has been closed permanently. A street railway terminal will be built on the site. Michael Shea, famous in vaudeville, made the Garden one of the leading vaudeville theaters in the country. He always had moving pictures as an added attraction. He later built a handsome theater on Court street, after which the Garden has seen various changes.

Manager Cornell of the Star theater, Buffalo, which plays high-class theatrical attractions, recently showed at his house moving picture of the European war. The show was given wide publicity and proved a good drawing card.

Tony Lally and George Pignatello will build a $15,000 moving picture theater at Chenango and Munsell streets, Binghamton. The structure is to be of concrete, tile and brick and will have a seating capacity of 850. A stage for vaudeville will be erected.

Norman E. Mack, proprietor of the Buffalo Evening Times, is a member of a committee interested in a plan to use moving pictures for educational purposes. The idea is being fostered by the National Educational Motion Picture Association.

The new Rex moving picture theater has been opened in Genesee, N. Y., by G. A. Halstead, of Syracuse. The house is costly, fireproof, well ventilated and has a large electric sign at the entrance. The price of admission is ten cents in the evening and five cents in the afternoon.

Members of the Mothers' Club of School 33, Rochester, N. Y., have organized a committee of mothers and teachers. The members will act as censors on moving pictures offered for Rochester children. Films will be shown to the committee on Saturday morning and those that are passed by the committee will be displayed to the children in the afternoon, Saturday being reserved as "Children's Day." Only pictures of educational value and good comedies will be shown.

Several foreign patrons of Panzarella Bros.' moving picture theater, Rochester, strongly objected because the managers decided to advance their evening prices from five to ten cents during a special show. Police protection was called and through an interpreter the foreigners were told that the management was acting within the law in advancing the admission fee.

Mimkin & Loomis are the new proprietors of the Globe moving picture theater, Buffalo.

The New Palace moving picture theater in Main street, near South Division, Buffalo, will open about February 15th. Harold Edel, general manager of the Strand theater, will also manage the Palace. The Strand is being redecorated, the interior in old rose and the lobby in Tiffany color. "The Tigress" was a recent feature at that house. The new Victoria theater, Buffalo, will open about February 15th, with Mrs. Lillian Hastings as manager. These are all Mark-Brock houses.

The Regent theater, Syracuse, recently did capacity business with "Officer 666," a Kleine feature.

G. W. Erdmann, manager of the Elmwood moving picture theater, Buffalo, is already preparing for special interior and stage decorations for Easter. Details will be given later. Elaborate winter scenery on the Elmwood stage was recently prepared and appreciated by his patrons. A wood scene, with a snow storm, real trees, leaves and garlands, was represented. Appropriate lighting effects were used.

Louis Isenberg, former manager of the Edisonia moving picture theater, Buffalo, has succeeded J. J. Kelly as manager of the Allendale theater, that city. Mr. Kelly has been transferred to Mr. Isenberg's former position at the Edisonia. The new organ at the Allendale will soon be completed. The United Theatrical Enterprises, located at 405 Iroquois Building, Buffalo, own the Elmwood, Allendale; Keith's Columbia, Colonial and a new theater being built at Genesee and Mortimer street, that city.

CONNESS-TILL COMPANY HARSHLY CRITICISED

Candian Weekly Scornfully Describes Alleged Methods of Picture Makers —Good Likeness of Well-Known Kind of Producer.

By Frank D. Genest, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

A CANADIAN weekly, "Jack Canuck," is responsible for the following: "Among the 'made in Canada' patriots who appeal to the public is the Conness-Till Motion Picture Company, which loudly proclaims itself a Canadian company, formed to furnish the Canadian public with Canadian-made pictures. When their prospectus was issued, the bait of large profits was held out to the investing public, and if the story as told by a number of their disgruntled actors is anywhere near the truth, we can well understand how big profits are made in the motion picture business. This concern operates a studio in the neighborhood of the Humber. A number of experienced men and women were engaged to pose for the pictures. The leading woman was obliged to work in a low-cut dress in weather almost down to the zero mark, and worked under the impression that at least she and the male actors would receive the wage paid by all other concerns with which they had worked. When pay day came, however, all were paid off with the niggardly sum of $13.50 for 17 days' work, and work undertaken under the most unfavorable conditions, lacking the ordinary accommodations which decency demands where men and women are constantly changing their costumes. But for a peremptory demand for their money they might, according to their story, have fared still worse. Two applications made at weekly intervals had brought them the information that they 'would be paid next week.' This bears all the earmarks of one of those cases, which, if aired in court, would give some interesting sidelights on motion picture methods."

PUTS ADS ON WALL

The Empire theater on Bank street certainly believes in adding to its income in every possible manner. A large part of the side walls of the house are occupied by advertisements of different business concerns in the city. These signs are electrically illuminated and are arranged more or less like the advertisements in a street car. While we do not doubt that this idea is a paying proposition, it cannot be said that it harmonizes with the decorations of the theater.

OTHER NOTES FOR OTTAWA.

Actual war scenes parallel to any shown in Canada since the outbreak of the present European conflict were featured at the Flower theater here recently in a two-part production: "For the Empire." We are given to understand that the special photographer of the London Film Company of London, Eng., took the pictures on the firing line on the Belgian frontier.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Carling, owner of the Flower theater, fifty admission tickets were sent to the militia department to be distributed among the Royal Engineers, now encamped at Lansdowne Park.

Visitors in town this week included H. W. Harwell of the Universal office, Montreal, and H. Samson of the Picture Playhouse, with headquarters in the same city.

The Cinema theater in Hintonburg is still doing business notwithstanding the fact that its competitor, the Strand, has been obliged to close up.

Another theater that has gone under for the time being is the Orpheum, situated on the corner of Somerset and Preston streets. This house closed last week, but Mr. T. Henderson, the manager, stated that he was in hopes of opening up again early in March.

ROCKY FORD WOMEN WANT FILM CENSORSHIP

Women of Colorado City Think Morals of Young People Deteriorating— Lay It to Vaudeville and Films.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

THE movement to establish a censorship in Rocky Ford, Col., is due largely to the women, an early survey of a petition revealing the names of 170 women and two men. The plea reads as follows: "Realizing that the ideals and morals of the young people of the city of Rocky Ford are being lowered and believing that the vaudeville and moving pictures are in a degree responsible for the condition, we, the undersigned, do hereby petition the council to appoint a board to regulate or abolish the vaudeville and censor the moving pictures." A request is made that the curfew law be enforced. The Grand, one of the houses affected under the vaudeville clause, has interviewed some of the signers and found that they signed because others did.

OTHER NORTHWESTERN NOTES.

Is skating more popular than moving pictures in the northwest? At Ogden, Utah, the Alhambra Theatrical Company has announced that the Globe theater has given up pictures and the house is being remodeled for use as a rink. The popularity of the municipal skating rink at Dillon, Mont., has made such inroads upon the business of the Pastime the only photoplay house there, that its film programs have been limited to Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, at least temporarily.

Persons planning the erection of moving picture theaters in South Dakota are being urged to write the state food commissioner at Vermilion to find out the building laws along that line. The state food and drug department seems a strange one to consult on such subjects, but in 1913 the state legislature consolidated a number of departments with this one and one of its duties is the inspection of buildings used for public entertainments. A great many changes have been ordered in the last year in order to make amusement houses safe, but the department wishes to prevent owners of new houses from making mistakes.

A Victor, Col., exhibitor has been confronted with a problem which has given his house regrettable publicity. A "Jack the Clipper" selected the theater for the scene of his operations and dexterously removed some of the finest tresses from the heads of young girls as they were watching the show.

The erection of a new building to be used as a moving picture theater is projected by S. P. Mace of Park Rapids, Minn. Construction is planned for next spring.

Ben Proffitt, one of the partners in the Bell theater at Chehalis, Wash., was slugged and robbed of $25 about midnight recently. He lay unconscious on the walk for several hours before he was found.

Rev. G. L. Morrill, of Minneapolis, Minn., already well known because of his use of moving pictures in religious work, is giving a series of war lectures at the Pence Auditorium in that city Sunday evenings. These are virtually travelogs of the warring countries, the screen phases being illustrated with films and slides.

The Empress, at Missoula, Mont., used Thomas Ince's "The Bargain," a Paramount offering, as its Christmas feature because William S. Hart was a protege of the late Daniel E. Bandman of that city.

The new Princess theater, seating 600, has been opened at Douglas, Wyo., with George Kropp of Casper as manager. Theatrical attractions will be among the offerings.

V. E. Smith has been making arrangements to open a moving picture show at Twin Valley, Minn.

An ambition for a theater large enough to handle both vaudeville and pictures is about to be realized by C. S. Crews at Walla Walla, Wash. A site at Third and Ader Istreets, owned by W. P. Hooper, who is interested with Crews in the Dime and Arcade theaters, will be utilized and Architect Purvis of Seattle, Wash., has been commissioned to draw plans. A nursery, men's smoking room, ladies' rest room, electric heaters are among the innovations planned. The house will have sixty-foot frontage and with balcony and loges will seat 1,368. A big stage will be installed with a view to handling "anything from pictures to grand opera."

John Masgai has sold the Lyric theater at Worthington, Minn., to W. E. and E. W. Smith of Fulda.

The Empire theater at Anaconda, Mont., issued a statement of its attitude on the union labor question: "This theater is fair to organized labor and always has been. The musicians' union demand that the management shall hire as many musicians as they say. The principle of liberty and justice will not permit us to comply with such a tyrannical demand. Come and see the man carrying the banner of persecution."

Plans for showing moving pictures of Tacoma, Wash., at the San Francisco fair were discussed at a recent meeting of the Commercial Club of that city.

Convicts from the Colorado state penitentiary who have been working on the roads near Boulder were given a Christmas party at a moving picture house in Denver. Permission for this unusual privilege was given by Warden Tynan.

The Paintrock opera house at Hyattville, Wyo., has been purchased by A. J. Church of Basin.

Jack Shearer has been making arrangements to remodel his building at Park Rapids, Minn., into a picture theater.

Brooks & Jackson, proprietors of the Star theater at Hailey, Ida., have installed a Victrola, which will be used in connection with the picture show, taking the place of the piano drum and traps.

Frank Coffitt and Carl Reusse of Fulda are now managers of the Majestic theater at Belle Plaine, Minn.

Members of the Pike's Peak Film Company had a Christmas celebration at the ballroom of the Plaza hotel in Pueblo, Col., Manager Otis B. Thayer staging the affair. A program of literary and musical numbers and dancing was given.

W. L. Casey of Hillyard, Wash., has opened the opera house at Colville, Wash. The initial show was a big picture program and a benefit for the local band.

Conley & Thompson, after a short term as managers of the Pastime theatre at Mankato, Minn., have given up the house and the lease reverted to Don Daigneau.

A. Heinecke in planning for the opening of his new Judith theater at Lewiston, Mont., had planned an address by Manager Phillip Levy of the Ansonia Amusement Company, who is president of the Montana State Exhibitors' League, but was unable to secure the Butte man. Manager Heinecke is vice-president of the state organization.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad's passenger department is preparing an illustrated lecture on "the Inland Empire," to be given through the east and middlewest. Each commercial club in the scenic northwest sends about fifteen slides to be used in depicting local attractions.

H. S. Clemmer, manager of the Casino and Clem theaters at Spokane, Wash., was elected second vice-president of the Washington State Theater Managers' Association, which was formed recently at Seattle. C. S. Jenson of Seattle is president, J. E. Ferguson of Wenatchee, first vice-president, and James Q. Clemmer, of Seattle, secretary and treasurer.

NEWS LETTER FROM ILLINOIS

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

A SERIES of "good-will theater parties" has been announced by the Apollo theater at Princeton, the Bureau County Republican and a number of business houses in Princeton. In order to attract groups of rural school teachers and pupils from the surrounding country and smaller towns ten special Saturday matinees have been started. At these matinees "The Master Key," the Universal serial, will be featured, but the program will include other numbers. Tickets are given by each of the business houses interested, with every twenty-five cent purchase. Certain evenings each week will be set aside when these tickets will be honored and the party idea encouraged. Liberal advertising space is being used and the educational value of moving pictures is attracting much attention.

Six theaters in Aurora gave one cent from each ticket sold on a certain day to the fund of the Aurora Juvenile Protective Association. The houses aiding in this work were the Aurora, Fox, Orpheum, Star, "B" and Grand. The Grand could not adopt the plan the same day as the other houses and generously shared its New Year's Day proceeds.

Holiday week in Illinois picture houses showed more of the Christmas spirit prevailing among the managers and the free shows and stunts continued up until the New Year. The Star at Lincoln set aside four afternoons when the program were free to children. The "B" at Aurora had a belated Santa Claus at a local benefit matinee. Photoplays were furnished the poor children of Waukegan at a matinee at the Elite, Dec. 28, while the Humane Society gave each of the youngsters a present from a tree. Manager Wilson of the Orpheum at Cuba gave a free matinee for first to sixth grade pupils and their teachers. The Lyric at Winchester had an ante-Christmas treat in the shape of a free matinee for all under 15 years of age.

The Metropole young ladies' orchestra was a feature of the holiday opening of the New Majestic theater at East Moline. This house has a rest room for women, which is open in the daytime as well as during performances. Although the house seats 800 persons, the nearest seat is 22 feet from the screen. A brown color scheme, with eight panels showing landscapes, the whole being harmonized by an artistic lighting scheme, makes the interior very satisfying to the eye.

The Optigraph Company of Chicago has been granted a charter by the secretary of state at Springfield with capital stock of $5,000 to deal in moving picture machines, stereopticons and photographic apparatus. The incorporators are James A. and Rossiter L. White and Payton J. Tuohy.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Benald gave the residents of the town a real Christmas treat. It rented two local moving picture houses and invited the whole town to free shows in the afternoon.

Horton & Maynes, proprietors of the Majestic theater at Albion, put into effect the first of the year a new price policy. The admission was advanced to five and ten cents every night, but the program has been increased from two to three reels. The war tax is given as one of the reasons for the increase.

The Foto Pla theater has been opened at Anchor.

Mrs. Julia Vickers is now manager of the Washington theater at Madison. Mrs. Vickers has been cashier at this house for some time.

The Majestic theater at Rock Island has been making an experiment—a "Mary Pickford Week"—in order to see if the city would support a ten cent feature house. The program was not confined strictly to Pickford subjects, but any of the offerings was worth a dime and Little Mary features predominated.

The Treble Clef Musical Movies Company of Chicago has been granted a charter by the secretary of state at Springfield with capital stock of $2,500 to manufacture and deal in moving picture films, slides, etc. The incorporators are G. D. Rose, R. C. Honeck and G. D. Rose.

The Murphy opera house at Mt. Sterling hunted up its local films of the Soup Day celebration and ran them on Christmas Day so that the holiday homecomers could see how the town looked in gala attire.

"Diamond's Castle" was the name the judges selected in a contest for the new picture house opened at Havana by Dick Diamond and John F. Deckard. However, this name may be changed and a shorter one, more advantageous for an electric sign, substituted. The paid admissions for three shows the opening night were just six short of three times the capacity.

Moving picture houses in Rockford are contributing $800 a year toward the war revenues.

J. L. McKennan has sold an interest in the moving picture show at Kenney to C. N. Davidson.

The new Hoyburn theater in Evanston is installing a pipe organ.

The Star theater at St. David has cut out shows five days a week and is open only on Saturday and Sunday nights.

A patron of the Colonial theater at Galesburg found that he was the only person in the house at 11.30 p. m. was so pleased with Manager Schroeder's idea of finishing the show for him that he had to tell it to the newspapers.

The Star theater at South Wilmington gave away a set of silverware.

Free carnations were given at both afternoon and evening shows at the Princess theater in Rochelle when the first episode of "Zudora" was shown.

A baby show contest was conducted by the Olympia theater at Arcola in connection with its stunt of exhibiting slides made from snapshots of local residents taken on the streets.

The Illinois Theater Supply Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500 to manufacture and deal in supplies and accessories. The incorporators are Joseph Boosel, Edwin L. Waugh and Frances M. Burn.

The Vitagraph theater at White Hall will run feature films twice a month. This house recently ran the pictures made at the famous Gregory Percheron farm near White Hall.

The logotype which Manager R. C. Schroeder has purchased for use in advertising the new Colonial theater at Galesburg contains the slogan, "Safest Theater in America."

SHAKE-UP AMONG CANADIAN EXCHANGES

World Film Corporation Will Once More Distribute Its Own Pictures—Changes Among Exchange Managers.

By David K. Billings, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THERE has been another shake up among two of the leading Canadian exchanges with the result that the World Film Corporation which a few months ago was taken over in Canada by the Famous Players Film Service goes back to the old regime and the World Film releases will now be handled by the World Film Corporation itself. Harry Price, who was managing the World Film office in Toronto while it was part of the Famous Players organization, has been appointed special travelling representative of the Paramount service in Canada and left this week for a trip through the eastern provinces. He will stay a few days in Montreal on his way to St. John, N. B.

Ed. Shelden has been placed in charge of the Toronto office, which is the headquarters for Canada, by the World Film Corporation and is now running in opposition to the Famous Players. J. J. Allen, who acted as general manager for the World Film will remain with the concern. This break promises to be the beginning of a battle royal between the two biggest feature film companies doing business in Canada, for the cream of the trade and Phil Kauffman, general manager of the Famous Players Film Service, left last Thursday for an extended trip through Western Ontario to brush up his connections and to get in line with several new prospects. It is said that the bookings of World Film features and Famous Players features collided so that it was not practicable to handle the two together and get satisfactory results for both producers with the result it was decided to sever the unsatisfactory business connection.

OTHER TORONTO NOTES.

Frivolity broke out among Toronto's film exchange men on New Year's night when a few of the "gang" forgot their business rivalry and joined together to have a high old time. The affair was entirely private in its nature but it leaked out that Maurice "Mutt" Kauffman, manager All Features Limited, made a capital toastmaster, while the rest of the cast was well up to standard. Leon Schlesinger as "the Movie King" made the hit of the evening as he usually does, while Barney Allen, of the World Film, as "Silence" lived up to his title. Phil "Paritz" Kauffman, Harry "Tombstone" Price, and Sid "Aeroplane" Taube, all of the Famous Players, got together and made a hit with the song, "Mary Pickford," and it was suggested they take a trip on the road as an extra feature. The suggestion was "canned."

Leon J. Bamberger, who is assistant director of sales of the World Film Corporation of New York City, and personal representative of Lewis J. Selznick, vice president and general manager of that company, spent the past week in Montreal looking over the local film situation and conferring with R. S. Bell, local manager for the corporation. Mr. Bamberger states that although he could not say that he was thoroughly pleased with motion picture conditions in Canada at the present time, still, things were not nearly so bad as they were reported to be in the States. "The best thing I've seen here? Well, I would say that little fellow, Willie Eckstein, at the Strand. I would like to take Eckstein on a tour of every picture theatre in North America to show how pictures should be played."

The taking over of the United Film Service by the old Warner's Feature service must have been a very profitable transaction judging from the expensive new velour hat that Manager Fischer treated himself to for the New Year. The new service is now running smoothly and is well liked. The new Photodrome opposite the City Hall on Queen street has decided to take first run of the United Film releases in Toronto.

Douglas Cooper, who was wrongly mentioned in this column last week as George H., visited Montreal last week in the interests of the Kleine features and reports that the Montreal office is doing a remarkably good business.

William Reed of the Famous Players Film Service was so tickled by the brisk business that followed Christmas week that he disappeared from the office on New Years Day and was not heard from until Manager Kauffman got word from Buffalo that he was on his honeymoon. Congratulations, William.

Less Kauffman, general manager of the Allfeature Limited, returned from the West this week where he has spent several weeks establishing a Winnipeg branch of the concern, which he has left in charge of Louis B. Hecht.

The opening of two new theatres, the Mary Pickford and the Photodrome, took place last week. Both are small houses, but are in good downtown localities and should do a big business. The Mary Pickford has booked World Film releases and Mutual films. Manager Jennings is conducting a ball room over the theatre, following the custom of many American managers.

The Madison theatre was closed for the first half of last week owing to the bursting of a steam pipe, which happily did very little damage.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

KALEM.

THE TRAGEDY OF BEAR MOUNTAIN (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 25).—In love with Edith, the wife of Charlie Barry, one of his employees, Benton annoys her with his attentions. Charlie learns of this and knocks the man down. It results in the discharge of both Charlie and his brother Steve.

Unable to secure other employment, Charlie goes West where he makes a big strike on Bear Mountain. On his way back to camp, the young man falls off a cliff. When found by Wayne, an old prospector, his injuries have caused Charlie to lose all recollection of the past.

A thief who has stolen Charlie's wallet, is killed by miners. Papers contained in the wallet lead the men to believe their victim Charlie. They wire word of his death to Edith. Benton, in the meantime, has ingratiated himself into the favor of Edith and Steve, by pretending remorse for his conduct.

The man urges Edith to marry him. Unable to resist his pleas, and believing Charlie dead, Edith finally consents. A month before the wedding, Steve goes west to seek his fortune. Fate leads him to rescue Della, Wayne's daughter, when the girl is threatened with death in a forest fire. Steve accompanies Della to her father's cabin where he is astounded to find his brother.

Sight of Steve causes Charlie to recall the past. He learns of Edith's approaching marriage. With the ceremony but twenty-four hours away, the brothers make a wild dash over the hills, arriving at a telegraph office three hours before the wedding is to take place.

The minister is uttering the words of the ceremony in the Barry home when a messenger enters. The telegram informs Benton that all his plotting has gone for naught.

A MODEL WIFE (Jan. 26).—Having lost her allowance at bridge, Mrs. Morton, fearing to ask her husband for more, secures a position as an artist's model. It happens that Starr, for whom she poses, shares a studio with Lockwood, a sculptor, who has just sold a statue to Mr. Morton.

Starr is at work on a painting when his country sweetheart and her father, a minister, are announced. In terror, he induces his model to hide in the case in which Lockwood intends to ship Morton's statue. While Starr is greeting his sweetheart and her father, expressmen take the case and deliver it to Morton.

The contents of the box astound the husband. Filled with rage, the man rushes to the studio. Seeing him coming, Starr and his sweetheart hide. Mistaking the minister for the artist, Morton engages him in a rough-and-tumble battle, while Mrs. Morton vainly endeavors to explain the mixup.

FATTY'S ECHO (Jan. 26—On the same reel as foregoing).—Fatty and Hungry Ike, hungry and stranded in the Alps, notice the delight which some tourists take in listening to echoes. After "planting" Hungry Ike nearby, Fatty informs the tourists that he knows a place where the most wonderful echoes in the world can be found. They follow him. One of the tourists shouts. Ike, playing the echo, answers.

Fromage de Brie, a guide, becomes suspicious. At his suggestion the tourists shout together. Angered, Hungry Ike shouts back, demanding to know whether they think him a crowd. The resultant exposure causes Fatty and Ike to touch only the high spots in fleeing from Switzerland.

THE AFFAIR OF THE DESERTED HOUSE (The First Episode of The Girl Detective Series—Jan. 27).—It is Ruth's contention that no one need lead a humdrum existence—that adventures a'plenty can be found by those who seek them. Stung by the good-natured skepticism of her friends, Ruth determines to show them their error.

Rumson, a counterfeiter, is seriously wounded while escaping from the police. The man manages to reach the house in which he and his daughter Kate, reside. With the exception of his lieutenant, Blair, none of Rumson's band has ever seen Kate.

Expecting a raid on their den, the counterfeiters plan to hide their plates in Rumson's house. Fearing to carry the plates themselves, the men decide to have their chief's daughter come for them. Kate is requested to meet one of the counterfeiters who will know her by the manner in which she is dressed.

It so happens that Ruth is clad exactly the same as Kate. Mistaking her for the latter, the messenger accosts Ruth, ordering the girl to follow him. Scenting adventure, she obeys. Ruth is conducted to a deserted house. The girl receives the dies. Cleverly ascertaining Rumson's address, Ruth sets out for that place. Before entering the building, the brave girl dispatches a note to the police.

Blair, returning from out of town, enters his chief's home in time to see Ruth confronting Rumson and Kate. The man is about to overpower Ruth, but she is saved by the timely arrival of the police. Blair makes his escape.

Rushing to the deserted house, the counterfeiter warns the gang. The police break into the den, however, and capture the band. Chief of Police Carton learns of Ruth's work. He offers her a position as Special Investigator. Unable to resist the opportunity which this offers for further adventures, the girl accepts.

THE CAUSE OF IT ALL (Jan. 29).—Dr. Spencer's wife becomes intensely jealous when she finds, in her husband's coat, a note signed "Mary," which asks him to visit the writer at the Hotel Mum. The woman carries her tale of woe to Attorney Thomas, a family friend.

In his effort to make light of the matter, Thomas soothingly places his arm about Mrs. Spencer's shoulder. Dr. Spencer's office is directly across the court. Glancing out of the window, the doctor sees his wife apparently being embraced by Thomas.

The attorney consents to accompany Mrs. Spencer to the Mum and meet "Mary." The doctor trails the two. As luck would have it, Mrs. Thomas passes the Mum just as her husband and Mrs. Spencer enter. The doctor and Mrs. Thomas meet and make their way after their other halves, on vengeance bent.

A stiff punch in the eye informs Thomas that Dr. Spencer feels peeved. At the same time, the two wives engage in a hair-pulling match. The noise of the free-for-all brings Jinny, the Spencer's colored cook, and her friend, the hotel cook, to the scene.

The combatants are separated. Jinny, catching sight of the note that had caused the trouble, declares it to be her property. She had received it while mending the doctor's coat. The sudden entrance of her mistress caused the cook to hide it in one of the pockets of the garment. The "Mary" signed at the bottom of the missive is none other than the hotel cook, who had invited Jinny to visit her.

Satisfied to call their fight a draw, the husbands shake hands. While her husband destroys the note that was the cause of it all, Mrs. Spencer tearfully vows to curb her jealousy in the future.

THE FAST MAIL'S DANGER (Eleventh of the "Hazards of Helen Railroad" Series—Special—Two parts—Jan. 23).—Down and out, Bob, an engineer, drifts into town. His condition excites Helen's sympathy. Using her influence, the girl secures him a position with the railroad.

Rankin, Dalmore and Dougherty escape from prison. The men attempt to enter the Hobart Tower, but Helen, seizing a revolver, baffles them. Rankin, climbing up a telegraph pole near by, daringly swings hand-over-hand along the wires until directly opposite the window of the tower. Catapulting himself forward, the man crashes through the window and lands in the room.

Helen is captured. The approach of Helen's relief causes the convicts to hide themselves in a closet. They cover the girl with their revolvers, threatening her with death if she betrays their presence. Helen, however, notifies her relief of what has happened by tapping the message on the table with her finger.

The man departs to give the alarm. The convicts emerge and prepare to hold up the Fast Mail. Leaving Dougherty to guard Helen, Rankin and Dalmore leave the tower. The train is approaching when the telegrapher succeeds in her daring ruse to capture her guard. How she frustrates the convicts and brings about their capture is stirringly shown in the climax of this episode.

THE LITTLE ENGINEER (Twelfth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Special—Two parts—Jan. 30).—While Hastings, the engineer of Freight No. 3205 is at lunch in the Lone Point station, Bobby Heywood, the son of an engineer, climbs into the cab of the engine. Having frequently observed his father start his locomotive, Bobby jerks the throttle open.

Helen sees the freight speeding down the track. Remembering that Bobby has been playing about the station, the girl surmises what has occurred. Getting aboard a gasoline velocipede standing nearby, Helen dashes in pursuit of the train.

The girl realizes that unless the runaway can be overhauled before it reaches the Hobart sidetrack, the freight will crash into the Edmont Local, traveling toward the former on the same track. Bobby's father is the engineer of the local.

Helen overtakes the runaway. She leaps aboard the caboose from the velocipede and, climbing to the roof of the car, makes her way forward to the engine, where little Bobby sits terror-stricken. The brave girl averts a frightful wreck in the nick of time.

VITAGRAPH.

"THE SLIGHTLY WORN GOWN" (Jan. 25).—Mr. Clark is a gay old boy and very attentive to Isobel, an actress. Mrs. Clark, his devoted wifey, is not aware of this state of affairs, until, by mistake, a gown which Isobel had purchased at Clark's expense is delivered at his house, and the bill with it. Mrs. Clark then becomes angry and suspicious. He contends it is all a mistake and takes the gown to Isobel, telling her she must dispose of it as his wife would recognize it anywhere. She promises to do so and inserts an ad in the paper to the effect that she has a slightly worn gown for sale. About this time, the Clarks give a dinner party to which their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Dodge, are invited. Happening to have no gown for the occasion, Dodge calls his wife's attention to the ad and they purchase the gown from Isobel. On the night of the dinner party, Mrs. Dodge arrives dressed in the stunning creation, which Mrs. Clark at once recognizes. She denounces Clark and accuses Mrs. Dodge of being "the other woman." Clark and Dodge are both dumbfounded. The former of course cannot explain and the latter has no desire to tell that the dress was purchased second-handed. Mrs. Clark angrily orders Mrs. Dodge from the house and this breaks up the affair. Both families later decide to demand an explanation from Isobel. The Dodges reach her first and are told the true story of the gown and Clark's flirtation. All laugh and when he arrives, the Dodges agree to help him out of his predicament. For a consideration, the modiste visits Mrs. Clark and offers her apologies for having sent a gown and bill to Mrs. Clark which was intended for Mrs. Dodge. This clears up the atmosphere at once and the two women kiss and make up. When Clark arrives home that evening in fear and trembling, he finds an excellent dinner awaiting him while his wife greets him with open arms and a welcome smile.

THE GAME OF LIFE (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 26).—A prominent politician's only son, Larry Stanford, becomes acquainted with Pug Wilson, a gambler, and his sister, Madge, with whom Larry falls in love. He gives her a locket which she hangs about her neck, and this is later taken from her by Crowley, another admirer. Larry sees the locket is gone from her neck and learns his rival's name. He rushes out and Madge, realizing from the man's actions that he is looking for trouble, anxiously follows him. Crowley, in the interim, enters into a card game with Pug, and losing heavily, puts up the locket as his only remaining valuable. He loses that also, they quarrel, and in the struggle, Pug strikes Crowley with a bottle, killing him. Larry enters the cafe room, finds Crowley dead, and picks up the locket from the floor where Crowley had dropped it. Madge meets him as he hurries away. Without a word, Larry gives her back the locket. She returns to her room and there, Pug, pursued by the police, is discovered and arrested. Pug, convicted of manslaughter, becomes ill and is taken to the prison hospital, where Madge visits him and his protestations lead her to believe him innocent. Mr. Stanwood, Larry's father, who is running for Governor, has an unscrupulous opponent in Williams. Beldon, one of Williams' lieutenants, learns of the suspicious circumstances surrounding Larry from Madge, who now suspects the young man. Pug gets worse and knowing he is dying, he sends for Madge and signs his confession of Crowley's murder. Beldon and Williams call on Stanwood and attempt to force him to withraw from the election by threats of spreading the news that Larry Stanwood is a criminal. This is foiled by the timely arrival of Madge and Larry. She shows them Pug's signed confession. The two conniving politicians depart, leaving Stanwood victorious and Madge and Larry to their reunited love.

THE HOMECOMING OF HENRY (Jan. 27).—On the third day of their vacation in their country bungalow, the Hannibals are rudely interrupted by a telegram to Henry, calling him back to the office to attend to an important contract. Finding that he will have to go West to see a man personally about the matter, he writes his wife he may be gone some time. She rents the bungalow to four young ladies, then goes to her mother's. She neglects to inform Henry of what she has done and when he succeeds in closing his business transactions much sooner than he expected, he is already on the way home. He arrives at the bungalow in the evening, and the girls, hearing a man on the porch outside, prepare for war. When Henry, thinking to surprise his wife, steals softly in, he is beaten and locked up in the pantry. After an awful fifteen minutes, he succeeds in making the girls realize their mistake and he is released. Wishing to make up for their ill-treatment of him, he is made guest of honor at a little party. Henry is soon enjoying himself immensely. Meanwhile, his wife, learning her telegram has not been delivered, surmises her husband has rturned to the bungalow earlier than expected, and hurries there. She finds Henry as much at ease as though he had known the girls all his life. With a wild cry of rage she rushes upon them. The girls beat a hasty retreat and she turns on Henry, but he seizes her arms and forces her to listen to his explanations. He presents proof of the genuineness of his business trip, explains the mistake the girls made and Mrs. Hannibal finally has to laugh over the whole affair. The girls reenter the room and the dinner is resumed, this time with Mrs. Hannibal and her husband side by side celebrating his "homecoming."

THE BARRIER OF FAITH (Jan. 28).—Grounded in orthodox Judaism, Jacob Aarons, learning that his daughter, Rose, has secretly fallen in love with and married, Harold Weston, a Christian, curses and disowns her. With the idea of effecting a reconciliation, Rose and her husband call on Aarons one night. Before knocking on the door, Rose looks through the window, and turning sadly away, tells Harold it is useless and too late, for her parents, Aaron and Leah, are in mourning for Rose for one week (the regular Jewish custom of mourning for the dead). Months later, Rose has paid the price of breaking down the iron bars of convention and the barriers of Faith. They are poor and her husband ill-tempered and neglectful. In a barroom brawl, her husband is killed and the young wife is left alone. Half-crazed by all she has gone through, Rose starts for her parents' home on the Feast of the Passover. Leah has become ill from longing for her child, and although she tries to keep it from Aaron, is slowly sinking from a broken heart. She is seated beside her husband with a few friends while he performs the customary rites for the Feast of the Passover. In accordance with the ceremony, one of the party opens the hall door for those that are in need of food and drink, and there, standing in the light, is Rose with her arms outstretched to her mother. As she slowly enters the room, the others sit perfectly still for a moment, then Aaron, realizing it is Rose returned, draws back from her in anger and peremptorily orders her out of the house, but Leah will not let her go and takes the girl in her arms. Rose sobs out her story, and Leah's pleading gradually softens Aaron's heart, so that he goes to her and laying his hand on her head, pronounces his forgiveness. Then the Feast proceeds. Leah, seated at his left and his daughter Rose on his right, all are reunited into a happy family, the barriers of Faith removed.

THE CHIEF'S GOAT (Jan. 29).—On the Speedway just outside the little town of Bricktown, a gray roadster, drawn by a fast bay horse and containing Deacon Jameson and his bosom friend, Tom Boles, is racing neck and neck with a stranger in a red runabout. After an exciting sprint, the gray roadster wins the impromptu race. Gus Wheelock, Chief of Police of Bricktown, who is driving the red runabout, is such a hard loser, he telephones ahead and orders the arrest of the gray roadster party. The Deacon and Tom, although going at a moderate rate of speed, are arrested, and—despite their protestations—taken to the police court. Wheelock arrives a few minutes later and fines them 100 dollars. Boiling with rage, the Deacon and Tom pay the fine, after calling Wheelock, "A squash, a loafer and a welcher," and warning the Chief that they are "going to make it their business to find out where he keeps his goat!" The two men first borrow the famous trotter, "White Star," then sally forth to find the Chief. On the speedway, they invite him to a race for a $100 wager. It is a faked-up affair and the two men let the Chief win. He is tickled to death and with a sneer of triumph, waves Boles and the Deacon a scornful goodbye. The following Saturday, the big event of the County Fair is the trotting races. Chief Wheelock has backed his mare "Molly" (in reality 'Belle Claire,' the fastest trotter in the county) to the limit. By means of a substantial check to the hostler, Boles and the Deacon succeed in "fixing the race." They bet heavily on their entry, in addition to making a side bet of $1,000 with Wheelock. After an exciting race, Tom's horse gradually draws away from the Chief's entry and wins the race. When it is all over, Tom and the Deacon, grinning from ear to ear, meet the almost paralyzed Chief, and certainly get the Chief's goat by remarking with a touch of triumph, "We beat you five to two!"

UNDERNEATH THE PAINT (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Two Parts—Jan. 30). -Walking through the Ghetto, Arthur Kellogg rescues Tryphena Winters, an actress, and her little sister, Salome, from starvation. He falls in love with, and proposes marriage to Tryphena, but she tells him she must first make her success on the stage. Kellogg, Senior, a theatrical backer and financier, learns of his son's love affair, and asks Tryphena to give up Arthur. She refuses, and finding his son equally obstinate, Kellogg angrily disowns him. The financier learns of Tryphena's burning ambition to become a star, and cunningly appeals to this one weak spot in her opposition. He demands she renounce Arthur in his (Kellogg's) presence, promising to fulfill her ambitions should she carry out his plans. She agrees, but secretly sends a note to Arthur beforehand, begging him not to believe anything she may say or do at the meeting. Unfortunately, the note miscarries. Arthur meets her and not understanding her dissimulated renunciation of him, bitterly says farewell and plunges into a life of gayety. Later, conscience-stricken at the wrecking of his son's life, Kellogg destroys himself. Arthur visits the theater to see Tryphena, now a prominent star, and there is handed the long-lost note. He interrupts the performance to ask Tryphena if she sent it. The curtain is rung down and Arthur tells her he never received the note until this moment. She now understands it all, and after a joyful reunion with her lover, steps out upon the stage again and the play goes on.

EDISON.

JOEY AND HIS TROMBONE (Jan. 25).—Joey playing on his trombone drove all Ezra Perkin's customers away, and although Ezra was his prospective father-in-law and employer, he couldn't stand for that, so he gave Joey the grand bounce. Joey went to the city, got a job with a German band, and Tillie Perkins, his sweetheart, joined him there. Then the trouble began, somebody insulted Joey's musical dignity, and he lost his job.

While wandering around the city, Joey and Tillie came upon a moving picture studio, and applied for work. The director, realizing the opportunity for comedy presented by Joey and his trombone, not to mention the fearful Tillie, took them in his cast.

Everything went well until they made a bullfighter out of Joey and Carmen out of Tillie. Then Joey, feeling that his trombone not having a leading part was an insult to him, began to spoil for a fight. The cup boiled over when the heavy made stage-love to Tillie, and the Mexican War began. Things flew thick and fast, and it wound up by Joey and Tillie and his faithful trombone taking up their belongings and walking back to the old town.

OLIVE IN THE MADHOUSE (Tenth of the "Olive Opportunities" Series—Jan. 20).—Olive is back home again, under Madame Forresti's so-

WAKE UP!
Prosperity Is Here

Get ready early to avoid the rush.

Get that new Machine, Screen and Hallberg Electric Economizer you must have to compete with other up-to-date exhibitors.

GET MY PRICES TODAY!!!

HALLBERG
A. C. to D. C.
Economizer

The results on your screen will amaze you, please your audience and put your competitors In The Shade.

Let me post you on the latest. Write today. RESULTS COUNT—NOT LOW PRICES.

Send $2.50 for new book
MOTION PICTURE ELECTRICITY
Every Operator Needs One

SIMPLEX

Distributor "BAIRD" and Motiograph M. P. Machines

BAIRD

Distributor Power's 6-A and Simplex M. P. Machines

POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for BAIRD, POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 160 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

cial wing. Everything seems bright and prospects of her pending marriage to Vance Coleman loom up brilliantly. However, Drew Martin, their mutual enemy, thirsting for satisfaction, decides to abduct Olive.

By a telephone ruse, she is decoyed from her apartment to the street where Drew and a tool of his throw her into a taxi and tell an inquiring policeman that she is mad and that they are taking her to a sanitarium. This excuse they use throughout their trip, and Olive, despite her entreaties, finally finds herself in a madhouse. A Mr. Caleb Strong, who, like her, had been placed there to put him out of the way, consoles her.

Drew Martin, learning that Vance has traced Olive, and discovered his treachery, hits on another plan to get her out of the way. The plan works well, but through a fortunate explosion which occurs and blows a hole in the wall, Olive and Mr. Strong escape and are found by Vance, who arrives after a breakneck ride, just in time. Mr. Caleb's wrongs are righted and Olive is herself once more, after her terrible ordeal in the madhouse.

LODGINGS FOR TWO (Jan. 7).—Rayden, a drummer, after selling a bill of goods to a furniture store owner, decided to look for a place to spend the night. Much to his dismay, he found that it was Fair Week, and that the town was filled up. Remembering the nice new bed in the window of the store he had been in, he returned and bribed the watchman to let him in. Once in, he started to retire, with the idea of arising early.

Phelps, another drummer, who happened to be passing the store at the time, got the same idea. Meeting the self-same watchman, he, likewise, bribed him and entered, the watchman leaving for parts unknown, a silver palace with swinging doors.

The trouble soon started, for each thought the other a burglar. They ducked in and out, pummelled each other and finally fell asleep, to be wakened in the morn, not by the crowing of the rooster, but by an enormous crowd, which had gathered to see this free side-show on their way to the fair.

THE TERRIBLE TRUNK (Jan. 27).—The Widow Smith had two lovers, Reuben, a country simpleton, and Luke, the town sport. The Widow liked Reuben and despised Luke. Reuben and the Widow become engaged, much to Luke's sorrow. Whereupon, Luke vows revenge.

One day, the Widow and Luke decide to buy a trunk. While Reuben is examining it, his old enemy, Luke, enters the scene. Unknown to anyone, he shoves Reuben into it, and locks it before the Widow turns from her gossiping with the clerk. The Widow misses Reuben, and Luke makes things worse by telling her that Reuben just passed him on the street, and had some classy lady friend with him.

The Widow goes home with Luke, and discovers the plot when the trunk arrives. Then she and Reuben, by a trick, reverse the tables on Luke, and lock him in the trunk. The trunk then gets a rough deal, so does Luke, but finally, after having been juggled about by the gentlest of women, and after being fished out of a river, where the trunk took a submarine dive, the imprisoned Luke escapes from his misery by almost having his head cut off, and everything ends well.

AN INVITATION AND AN ATTACK (An Adaptation of the Famous "Young Lord Stranleigh" Stories by Robert Barr—Special—Two Parts—Jan. 29).—Young Lord Stranleigh is on his yacht trying to get to a mine that he had purchased in South Africa, ahead of a ship that had been sent there by thieving directors of the company who had the intention of robbing Stranleigh of a cargo of ore.

Stranleigh's yacht, being of great speed, rapidly overhauled and passes the Rajah, the steamer in question. Arriving at the mouth of a river, he sailed up stream above where the mine was located, unbeknown to those aboard the Rajah, which arrived later, and anchored at the mine landing, where they had prepared to take the stolen cargo aboard. Meanwhile, Jolson, the agent of the purloining directors, ordered mines to be laid at the mouth of the river to prevent pursuit and destroy any vessel which might attempt to enter the stream.

Stranleigh, learning of this, made up his mind to escape from the trap in which he was, and lie in wait for the vessel outside when it came out with the stolen ore. To accomplish this, he had a large quantity of logs float down the stream and these exploded the mines. After this, his yacht slipped out quietly and lie in wait to intercept the Rajah on its return journey.

IN HIS FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS (Demonstrating the Danger of Insanitary Farm Conditions—Produced Under the Auspices of the New York State Department of Health—Jan. 30).—The dangers that confronted him on every hand, owing to the insanitary condition of his farm never occurred to Griggs, and even after he had been warned of his danger by the Health Inspector, he refused to do anything, saying that his dad and his grand-dad managed to make out pretty well and that he would be able to get along just as well. Sally, however, was greatly interested in the literature issued by the State Department of Health and tried her best to get her father to read it, but failed. In due time, Sally was taken ill, and Dr. Parker declared her malady to be typhoid fever. This somewhat startled Griggs but even then he refused to see that he was responsible although she had contracted the fever by drinking the water from the old well which was so placed that it received the drainage from the entire barn-yard.

It was not until a neighbor, who was acting as nurse, rushed into the kitchen when Griggs and the two boys were eating and announced that Sally was much worse, that the farmer realized her real danger. Fred sprang to his feet, saying that he would ride for the doctor and Griggs urged him on. On arriving at the doctor's house, Fred quickly delivered his message and then rushed off to harness the doctor's horse. Together, they raced back over the lonely roads, arriving at the farm house, where the doctor took charge of his patient, and after a night of suspense was able to announce that she was out of danger. Griggs decided to clean up his farm and profit by the examples shown him by the State Farm Inspector.

THE SPOILERS

Selig's 8 reel MASTERPIECE

By

REX BEACH

is a

RECORD-BREAKING MONEY-GETTER

That's what everybody says that has played it, and we have got the records on the shows to prove it.

NOW LISTEN:

"THE SPOILERS"

has played in more towns, more theatres and to more money in the short time of its release than any other production ever shown.

IT IS A SHOW

for any house, any neighborhood and gets the money.

HAVE YOU HAD YOURS?

If not, now is your chance.

START THE NEW YEAR RIGHT

Write, wire or phone for bookings in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois (except Cook County).

F. O. NIELSEN

720 Schiller Bldg.

CHICAGO, ILL.

ESSANAY.

TWO HEARTS THAT BEAT AS TEN (Jan. 25).—Mildred refuses Archie's proposal of marriage. Shortly after Fred arrives and she accepts him as her future husband. As he is leaving the house, his attention is attracted by a young lady who has a cinder in her eye. He stops to give her his assistance. Mildred, who happens to be watching from an upstairs window, thinks he is kissing the young lady, his head being behind her large hat, giving that appearance. She becomes angry, and after mailing his ring to him calls up Archie and says she will marry him immediately. After marriage, Mildred discovers her husband is father of four children. Soon after Fred marries a nurse only to find she is also a mother of four children. Several months later, Mildred is a widow and Fred a widower. They meet each other and hence two hearts that beat as ten.

AT THE END OF A PERFECT DAY (Jan. 26).—The story opens with an old couple in the evening of life, sitting by the fireside reminiscing the happenings of their younger days. How the young man had left his country home to seek work in the great city, and after many days of wandering had found employment as an office boy in the same office with the young lady. How she had taken an interest in him and before many days had become more than friends. Then came the climax which caused them to realize their true love for each other. The employer tried to force his attentions upon the young lady, and the office boy, hearing her cries of distress, had rushed into the private office and rescued her from the brute. Shortly after they were married, and now are at the end of a perfect day, sitting quietly at the fireside.

THE FABLE OF THE SYNDICATE LOVER (Jan. 27).—Kate had a very devoted beau known as George. George loved the girl so hard that he loved all her relatives. He thought it his duty to give three hearty cheers for Father and Mother, and likewise he worked for a stand-in with Tom, her husky brother. His gushing affections for Kate slopped over on Sister Lil, and this caused Kate to sit up and take notice. He went shopping with mother and carried everything she purchased. She was peeved but George thought he was making a great hit. Next day he tried to cultivate the big athletic brother, but found his Waterloo. Finally Kate issued an ultimatum. She told George if he wanted her—he would have to stop courting the rest of the family, so George stole away the precious jewel and didn't say a word to the family.

WHEN SLIPPERY SLIM BOUGHT THE CHEESE (Jan. 28).—Slippery Slim purchases a large piece of limburger cheese. On the way home he stops to chat with Sophie, but Hiram, her father, chases him off the premises. Before going Sophie manages to write a note on his cuff telling him to call that evening after her father has retired. Upon arriving home, Mustang discovers the note. That night Slim steals to Sophie's home and is having the time of his life when Mustang slips a piece of the cheese in his pocket, by reaching through a window. Sophie immediately begins to sniff, and Mustang's laughter awakens Hiram who rushes down stairs with an ax and chases Slim and Mustang until they take refuge up a telegraph pole. He starts to chop down the pole, and their fate seems certain until Mustang remembers the cheese in Slim's pocket. He lowers it tied to a string and Hiram is forced to give up.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE FALSE NOTE (Jan. 30).—While on the round-up, Broncho's rival one night steals his sweetheart's picture from his watch. He then returns to the girl with a note saying that Broncho has fallen in love with another girl and is returning her photograph. He signs Broncho's name. Believing Broncho's love dead, she marries the forger some time later. As the years go by he becomes more cruel, and finally she breaks down from abuse and hunger. One day while in the act of whipping her, some cowboys happen along, and when they go to the rescue, he flees to the nearest town, giving himself up to the sheriff, who happens to be Broncho. Broncho recognizes him, but protects him from a horrible death at the hands of the angry cowboys.

THE AMBITION OF THE BARON (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 29).—Baron von Tollen, a master hand at politics and intrigue, wishes to control Leutala, a small continental country. He picks the Count Jean de Lugnan as the man he wishes to make the king. In order to get him interested, the Baron has his beautiful daughter, Annetta, flee past the Count one night in a cab. She looks out of the window and drops a note reading "Follow me and save me." The Count is ever ready to risk his life to rescue beauty in distress, so follows in another cab to a country estate just outside of London. He scales the wall and finds the girl, climbs back over the wall and takes her to her home.

The Baron pretends to be overjoyed at her return and invites the Count to dinner. The Count falls in love with the daughter and finally asks for her hand. The Baron consents on condition that the Count enter his plot to start a revolution in Leutala and to become king when the country is captured. The Count is willing. They all go to the country, where Captain Tanner, a former military man, has preceded them, to stir up the revolution. Captain Tanner also is in love with Annetta and asks the Baron for her hand. The Baron is enraged and says she is promised to the Count. Tanner then goes to the Count and threatens to expose the plot unless the Count gives up Annetta. The Count draws and they fight a fierce battle in a darkened room. Tanner is worsted and escapes.

The Captain rushes to inform the authorities, but is arrested. He is executed as a revolutionist and the plot is exposed. The Baron's party flee to his private yacht and escape. Annetta confesses her part in the plot to the Count, but tells him that she really has fallen in love with him. He readily forgives her. While the Baron's ambition is blasted, he is reconciled by the fact that the Count and his daughter are really in love.

SELIG.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 2 (Jan. 7).—First heavy snow of season draws great crowd to Boston park where they glide down the great toboggan slide with the speed of express trains.

Harry K. Thaw, just ordered back to Matteawan by the Supreme Court of the United States, poses for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial on the steps of the New Hampshire home he has occupied since his sensational escape from the New York asylum.

Great shipments of cotton are stowed aboard vessels in New York Harbor for shipment to Germany.

Gen. Scott, chief of staff of the U. S. Army, with Gen. Bliss, commander along the Mexican border, confer with Gen. Hill and other representatives of the warring Mexicans whose shells have killed and wounded Americans at Naco, Ariz. The arrival of the generals of U. S. Infantry to reinforce the border patrol, and of Gen. Hill are shown.

Blind girls at Perkins Institute, Watertown, Mass., knit sweaters, mittens and mufflers for soldiers in the snowy trenches in Belgium.

A wonderful war section. German prisoners are led through the streets of London under armed guard and are put aboard a prison ship anchored in the Thames to wait the end of the war. More of A. E. Wallace's pictures from interior Germany, show the arrival of Christmas gifts for the German soldiers. German soldiers are seen loading captured Belgian cannon on cars to be shipped to Berlin. Kaiser Wilhelm himself visits the Belgian front and poses for the Hearst-Selig cameraman as he reviews the crack Prussian troops and just as he enters his automobile to be whirled away by his military chauffeur. With him are seen the officers of the famous German general staff.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL NO 3 (Jan. 11).—Philadelphia greets New Year officially with Mummers parade.

First Hindu temple erected in Western Hemisphere is wrecked by bomb which kills one and injures many in San Francisco.

Legend of the Adirondacks is told in pageant held on snow covered mountain side at Lake Placid, New York.

Great fire sweeps terminal and ferry building at Camden, N. J., entailing loss of $300,000 and causing serious tie-up in railroad traffic.

Transport Buford with Thirtieth Infantry sails from San Francisco. It is to make its way east through the Panama Canal, the troops going to permanent quarters at Plattsburg, N. Y. This is the first time troops have transferred through the canal.

Belgian troops who fled across the border into Holland are set at work building their own camp where they will be held pending the end of the war under Holland guards. Interesting pictures from A. E. Wallace, staff photographer of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial in the war zone.

For the first time in more than a century hostile troops have struck a blow against England on English soil. Remarkable motion pictures show the damage that was inflicted when the German fleet steaming out of the fog along the English coast sent its shells screaming into Scarborough. Many views show the damage sustained, and depict the precautions taken by the English government to protect the towns against further attack.

THE SPIRIT OF THE VIOLIN (Special—Two Parts—Jan. 25).—John Graham and his wife, Mary, are working to carve out a home in the western wilds. Their modest home is brightened by the presence of their little baby girl. In the evenings John entertains Mary and the baby by playing on his violin. This is his one indulgence and Mary knows every tune that John can play.

One day while John is on his way through the forest, he discovers a man wounded to the death, lying on the bank of a creek which runs through his homestead. John tries to bring him back to life, bathes his head with water from the running stream, but finds his efforts useless. The man is dead. A great gash on top of the head, evidently made by the bloody club lying by the body, caused the death. While John is examining the club, he is apprehended by a man named Rourke and some cowboys. Rourke declares that he has seen John strike the man dead with the club which they find in his hands. John is amazed and horrified at the accusation. John is tried and convicted for murder on the evidence of Rourke, and is sentenced to spend the balance of his life in the state penitentiary. Mary promises to remain faithful to him.

Two years pass by. Mary struggles with the work on the homestead, and manages to eke out a precarious existence.

John is industrious and the prison authorities find it difficult to believe that a man of his character should have been a murderer. They furnish him with opportunities for employment, so that he is enabled to earn considerable money which he sends home regularly to Mary.

A gambler named Rann passes through the country and alights at the Graham cabin for a drink of water. He is smitten by the beauty of Mary and questions her as to why she lives alone in this place. The rascal pretends to be sympathetic and Mary tells him something of their misfortunes. He poses as a friend, obtains Mary's confidence and drives away with a dishonorable scheme fostered in his heart.

Day after day the gambler returns and seeks to exert an influence over Mary. He learns that she receives letters regularly from her imprisoned husband, and one day an accident supplies the opportunity for a furtherance of his vile plans.

He is accustomed to bring Mary her letters from the settlement as a matter of convenience, and one day a letter arrives, containing in addition, a blank sheet of paper upon which is printed the heading of the state's prison. Rann secures the blank sheet of paper, and proceeds to write a fraudulent letter, announcing the death of John Graham. Mary is wild with grief.

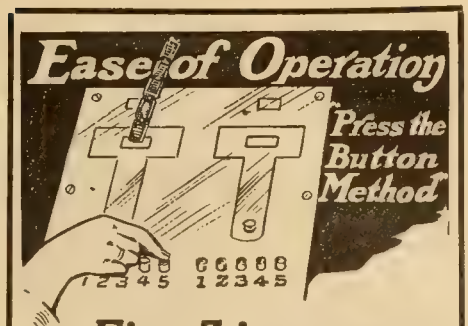
Rann takes the letters which come from John, but instead of delivering them to Mary, destroys them. She has no reason to think that her husband still lives. Rann poses as her true friend. He tells her that he loves her and endeavors to win her affections, but the heart of Mary remains loyal to her husband.

While in prison John becomes disconsolate because he does not receive answers to the letters which he sends regularly to Mary. He cannot think that she has forgotten him, and can only believe her to be sick and helpless or dead.

Mary is oppressed by a greater loneliness than ever, while she can see her little daughter growing more emaciated every day because of the lack of sufficient nourishing food which she had heretofore been enabled to purchase with the money sent by John from the penitentiary. Rann persists in his wooing of the unwilling Mary. Finally conditions force her to an acceptance of his attentions, and one day she promises that she will become his wife. Rann determines to cheat Mary with a counterfeit wedding. He enlists the services of another rascal, who promises to perform the ceremony, while a woman confederate promises to do her part.

The prison officials receive notice that a man who has just died in another prison has confessed that he was guilty of the murder of the man for whose death John Graham had been sentenced to prison. The confession has been made in proper form, duly witnessed and sworn to authentically. John Graham is set free, and starts home at once filled with doubts and anxiety.

In the modest cabin where Mary has spent so many anxious months, the arrangement for the



Five Times as Rapid as Selling by Hand—

That's the AUTOMATIC way—It prevents the resale of tickets—Drops the tickets right into your patron's hand, quickly and gracefully, besides giving you a complete record of each day's sale.

No live, progressive Theater should be without the

AUTOMATIC

If you want to be considered up-to-date and have the very newest method for selling tickets and recording Box Office receipts, you need the last word in ticket selling machines.

Those who have used other machines have, after unsatisfactory experience, adopted the Automatic as the standard.

Our booklet, "Selling Tickets by Electricity," will clear up any points you are interested to know. You should have a copy so as to know all about the advantages of the and if you are not ready to purchase now you will know the facts for comparison with other machines. A postal will bring you one by return mail.

Automatic Way

Do not let 1915 advance far without the Automatic being part of your equipment.

The Automatic Ticket Selling & Cash Register Co.
1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY.

wedding has been completed. The counterfeit minister and the other accomplices of the rascally Rann are there. The pseudo clergyman begins to read in sanctimonious tones the words of the marriage ceremony. Just then John's treasured violin which has been suspended from a hook on the wall, falls clattering to the floor, while its strings give forth a harmonious chord, which sweeps through the room like a challenging voice. Mary, while not ordinarily superstitious, is startled and thrilled.

Mary refuses to marry Rann and runs from the cabin with her baby. Rann follows and tries to argue with her, but Mary sends him away and declares that she will never marry him.

John arrives at the cabin door just after the incident of the falling violin. He picks up the violin tenderly, runs his fingers over the strings and begins to play. Down by the creek where Mary sits hugging the baby, the sweet sounds fall upon her ear. She believes that John's spirit has returned to play for her and she staggers back to the cabin. Their re-union is a dramatic one. John searches for Rann, but the rascal has fled the country.

THE GRIZZLY GULCH CHARIOT RACE (Jan. 26).—Pettie Lamm, a buxom maid of generous proportions and of uncertain age, is the belle of a western town where cowboys congregate. Tad and Joe are rivals for her hand, and their chances seem to be about equal, while Shrimp, another cowboy, is also a faithful suitor.

However, because of Shrimp's lack of physical prowess, Tad and Joe inflict all sorts of ignominy upon Shrimp whenever they catch him in the vicinity of the fair Miss Lamm's domicile.

She finally tells Tad and Joe that the one who shall win a chariot race may have her hand in marriage. With ingenuity, but without much skill, they construct two rather grotesque chariots with which to contest for her hand. The day for the race is set.

The wily Shrimp inveigles the fair Pettie to the office of the Justice of the Peace, where they are quietly married. The chariot race ends in a smash for all concerned. Shrimp wins the bride.

HEART'S DESIRE (Jan. 27).—Ann Merrick, a beautiful girl, who earns her own living, is engaged by Mrs. Knox, a wealthy society leader to act as her secretary. She is left at work cataloguing Mrs. Knox's library when her employer goes on a visit. Guy Knox returns home unexpectedly from abroad and is astonished and secretly delighted to find the pretty secretary installed in the house. He falls in love with her and his affection is reciprocated.

Ann goes to the city and secures a position as social secretary for a charitable organization. They send up a host of tiny toy balloons, to each one of which is attached a prize card. To one balloon has been attached a card calling for "The Heart's Desire." Guy finds this baloon and recognizes the handwriting of Ann. He brings a crippled child and demands that the organization place her in charge of a skilled surgeon who can cure her. That is her heart's desire. This being accomplished, he and Ann marry.

SHE WANTED TO BE A WIDOW (Jan. 29).—Prettly Gladys gets a letter signed by her Uncle Pete, stating that if she will marry her cousin Hiram at once he will settle his fortune upon them.

Hiram is a grotesque country lout with features fashioned like an amiable gargoyle and with a smile that frightens horses. When he comes into the parlor to meet Gladys, his fiancee, the maid bursts into hilarious spasms. Gladys gets a peek at him and sends the maid to say that she would not marry such a face for double the money.

But Hiram is good natured and wants to marry. He sends Gladys a letter stating that if she will give him $500.00 in cash and will marry him that he will make her a widow within a month. This will enable her to get the money. Gladys considers the matter and agrees. They are married. Gladys hires an undertaker, whose pursuit of Hiram and the resulting ludicrous situations create one of the most absurd and laughable pictures ever exhibited.

Gladys learns to love her husband who wins a lot of money and they live happily ever afterwards.

THE HUT ON SYCAMORE GAP (Jan. 30).—Banker Wilson and his beautiful daughter, Helen, visit a secluded spot in Sycamore Gap where they occupy an isolated hut. Wilson has been under suspicion by secret service operatives as being identified with the distribution of counterfeit money through his bank. Helen is introduced to Diamond, the counterfeiter, who is in league with Wilson. He falls in love with her and demands her hand in marriage.

Helen learns the truth through an accident. Frank Castle, a private detective, and Phil Corridon, a secret service operative, are fast friends and both stumble upon trails leading to clews in connection with the counterfeiters. Frank falls in love with Mary, sister of Diamond, while Phil succumbs to the charms of Helen. Banker Wilson settles his own troubles with a revolver bullet, and Diamond is taken to jail. The counterfeiting plot having been foiled, the path of the young lovers runs smoothly.

Assisted by

GAIL KANE

Phenomenal Pianist-Organist

directing correct scene interpolation, arranging, etc.

Mueller

INSTRUMENTALIST

Carrying a magnificent collection of Saxephones, Chimes, Unaphone, Solette, Xylophone, Ringels, Marimba, Bells, Drums, etc.; also Extensive Patent Electrical Equipment. Working doubly or with orchestra.

Originator and Producer of Elaborate Musical Novelties and Features. Expert Experience in the Highest Class Theatres and Organizations. Open to Class A Houses; to those desiring the essence of refinement and originality in Musical Entertaining, capable of pleasing the most exclusive or widely varied audiences.

Engagement open Jan. 10th. Address

LOUIS MUELLER

558 Fletcher Ave. Indianapolis, Ind.

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new

SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER

Manufactured by

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.

Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

TYPE W FLAME ARC

Powerful LAMPS Economical

For brilliantly illuminating the outside of your theatre

General Electric Company

4987 General Office, Schenectady, N. Y.

FOR SALE

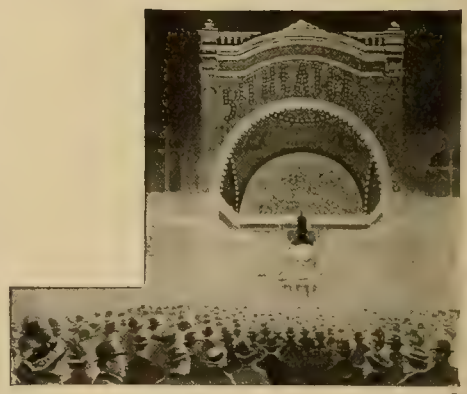
1 Reel—"Owanee's Great Love," hand painted Western banner and one sheets $20
2 Reels—"Harlequin's Love Story," hand painted banner 30
2 Reels—"Gambling Fever," hand painted banner and 1 sheets 40
1 Reel—"Redskin's Secret," Western, hand painted banner 30
3 Reels—"Saved from the Sea" (Convict)..... 75
1 Reel—"Test of a Man" (Convict drama), hand painted banner 20
1 Reel—"Dude Cowboy," Western, hand painted banner 20
1 Reel—"Convict's Last Chance," hand painted banner 20
1 Reel—"Not Guilty" (Convict drama), hand painted banner 20
3 Reels—"Dead Man's Child" (Detective), hand painted banner 70
3 Reels—"Serpentine Dancer," hand painted banner and 1 and 3 sheets 100

ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

MINA.

BLACK AND WHITE Jan. 28).—Harry LaPearl made up as a negro answers an advertisement for a servant to a Newlywed family and is engaged. While the family and several guests are dining he gets into many comic mix-ups. Mr. Newlywed decides to go to a cabaret with his guests, and leaves his wife at home. From a black mark left on the tablecloth by the makeup on Mr. LaPearl's hands, Mrs. Newlywed discovers that her new servant is whote, and decides to have him escort her to the same cabaret that her husband is attending.

Clad in the husband's dress clothes LaPearl goes with her to the restaurant, where many screamingly funny situations are created. His absurd antics finally start a riot among the guests and Mrs. Newlywed faints. LaPearl is thrown out of the restaurant and Mr. Newlywed discovers that the lady in the case is his wife. He takes her home, but LaPearl has beaten him out, and, with his black makeup restored, is busy making bread when the Newlyweds arrive. A row ensues and LaPearl is discharged and forcibly ejected from the front door, not, however, before he has squashed a pan of bread dough on his irate master's head. The comedy ends in the happy reconciliation of the Newlyweds and the humorous retreat of the pseudo negro servant.



Drawing the Crowd

Experience has shown that nothing fills a house so continuously as a well illuminated entrance. There is no more efficient way of obtaining this than

Westinghouse Long-Burning Flame-Carbon Arc Lamps

These lamps give the intense illumination of the flaming arc with a high efficiency and a burning life of over 100 hours per trim. Giving the same brilliancy, they cost less to operate and less for trimming. Either white or yellow light. Made for alternating current and for direct current.

Send for Folder 4258

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.

Dept. QR East Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

T.S. M. QUALITY

Brass Lobby Display Frames

EXPENSIVE? NO, INDEED!

You would be surprised at the really high grade goods and original designs that we produce at moderate prices. A well dressed lobby will get the best possible returns for any money that you spend on your theatre. May we suggest to you the best styles that can be made to fit your house?

QUALITY is our motto.

A postai card from you will bring our quotation, for the new or remodeled house.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.

318 LONG AVENUE, CLEVELAND, OHIO

LUBIN.

PATSY BOLIVAR (Series No. 5—"Patsy in Business"—Jan. 25).—Number 4 of the series left Patsy a runaway from home, and asleep in the waiting room of some village unknown to him. It was less than fifteen miles from his home town, but he had never been there. Awakening from his disturbed and cheerless sleep, he arose and sallied forth. Witnessing Storekeeper Grace, uncle of his ideal Tilly, discharging an idle clerk, he applies for the position and secures it. But his bad luck has followed him here, for in taking down the window shutters he smashes a pane in the store door and is "docked" $2.

On the forenoon train, Jack, Mary, Tilly, Jane and his evil genius, Sykesy, come to Fairfield to attend a church bazaar to be given that night, all of them unconscious of Patsy's presence in the village. Tilly goes with Jane to visit her uncle, is delighted at finding Patsy, but promises not to reveal his whereabouts, both girls agree to permit him to shift for himself in his own way. Shortly after their departure a customer enters the store for a dose of bicarbonate of soda. Patsy furnishes caustic soda instead, nearly kills the man, and loses his first position in his first hour. The Breach between Sykesy and Tilly brought on by the escaped cows incident broadens when she sees Patsy hard at work, and her coldness further increases his thirst for revenge. Jack, who has two or three times found his jealousy stirred by Mary's evident fondness for Patsy, allows it to be fed by Sykesy's stories, and when he goes out for a walk from the hotel, Mary sees Patsy, grieving over his discharge and asks him to her room, where he tells her his hard luck story, ending by weeping on her shoulder.

Jack goes to the room, finds Patsy and his wife in this compromising position and throws him down stairs and out of the hotel. Not knowing what to do next, Patsy secures a position in a barber shop and his first customer is Sykesy. After cutting him two or three times, Sykesy makes a vicious rush at him. The barber returns and discharges him. Meanwhile, Patsy's parents have discovered his whereabouts and after following him in the different places where he has been, find him at the bazaar, where he has been taken by the faithful Jane. While he is having a good time at the bazaar Sykesy tells the minister that he is a bad character, having been in jail and also expelled from college. Leaving the hall with his parents he goes to the store for his suit case, touches off the burglar alarm, is pursued by the constable and hurries out of town on the trucks of a freight car.

GREEN BACKS AND RED SKINS (Jan. 26).—Wilhelm Holehogg, Comancheville's biggest man, meets with terrible defeat, viz.: the loss of one of his full cans. Frenchy, his comrade, finds a fortune, in a dime, and hastens to acquaint Wilhelm of his good fortune. The great one receives a communication informing him that he has inherited $1,000,000. Wilhelm and Frenchy rush madly to collect. They do so and give away thousands.

Now Lord Cashin was a mighty hunter upon the field of battle—that is to hear him in the hotel tattle. Wilhelm and Frenchy listen to his methods of choking the rhinoceros. Their blood is fired and they hie themselves, hence into the dark forests where Chief Battleax becomes much peeved and orders them to be shot as spies, but Princess Right Wing envelopes their left wing and saves them and they marry into the tribe. Later Wilhelm and Frenchy imbibe deep and long—then the great one jumps to the center of the arena and challenges the whole tribe to deadly fisticuffs. After the battle they sink down upon the bank of doom, and dream what might have been.

THE ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENSE (Three Parts—Jan. 27).—Frederic Stratton, a young lawyer, accepts the case of one Basset, charged with the murder of his employer, Mrs. Hamlin. Stratton knows that strong evidence points to Basset's guilt, but thinks that a victory in this case will greatly increase his reputation. Ruth Wingate, his fiancee, is a girl of high moral principles, who is horrified when she learns that Stratton has taken the case of the notorious murderer. Stratton leads her to believe that he knows the man to be innocent, and Ruth praises him for championing the cause of one unjustly accused. Stratton succeeds in winning Basset's acquittal on a technicality, and as a result is called to another city to assist in a similar case. His reputation is assured.

Joe White, Ruth's chauffeur, meets with an accident, and Basset applies for the position. In pity and believing Stratton's statement that he was innocent, Ruth engages him. When Stratton learns in a letter that Ruth has employed the murderer, he is filled with apprehension. Almost distracted, he starts for home. Basset has failed to divide the spoils of his crime with his two pals, and they plan to be revenged. While he is driving Ruth on a lonely road, the two crooks waylay him. Basset is shot and the uncontrolled car dashes over the edge of a bridge. Ruth and Basset, both badly injured, are found by the occupants of another car. Ruth is taken home, and Basset is conveyed to a hospital. When Stratton arrives in the city he finds Ruth at the point of death. He realizes that this is his punishment. It brings the truth home to him. He writes the attorneys whom he was to assist that he is through with the defense of murderers and withdraws from the case. Basset dies, confessing his part of the crime. Ruth, slowly recovering, learns of the confession and realizes the truth—that Stratton knew of the murderer's guilt. She sends for Stratton. He sees that she knows, and though hopeless of her forgiveness, tells her of his decision—that he is through with the defense of murderers. As he turns to go, Ruth holds out her hands to him. She realizes that he has seen the right—that Justice must come before ambition. Gladly Stratton turns back to her, happy in their love and mutual understanding.

IN HER MOTHER'S FOOTSTEPS (Two Parts—Jan. 28).—Raymond Longstreth, a successful artist, has painted a Madonna, using his wife, Helen, as a subject. Raymond is jealous of Harold Winters, an art dealer, the former rival for Helen's hand. When an accident brings Helen and Harold together, and Raymond discovers them, he bursts forth in a tirade against his wife. His jealousy is further aroused when, after the exhibition of the finished picture, it is sold by the art gallery to Harold. Harold, however, has only bought the picture as an agent for Clayton Burroughs, a wealthy collector. Even the birth of a baby does not lessen the husband's jealousy, and when, soon after he finds Helen and Harold together, under absolutely innocent circumstances, he drives his wife from him. Then Raymond, tormented by doubts, resorts to drink.

Years afterward, Helen, under the name of "Mrs. Raymond," is a housekeeper to Dr. Marriott, and her daughter, Naomi, is like a daughter to the doctor. Raymond has given up his art, and is a mere wanderer. Sterling Burroughs, the son of the art collector, is the cause of an automobile accident in which Naomi is injured. In his solicitude for her welfare after the accident, he soon finds himself in love with her, and she returns his affection. In the girl the elder Burroughs recognizes the face of his treasured picture, the Madonna. When fire destroys the picture; he has search instituted for the missing artist, hoping to have him paint a duplicate. Harold succeeds in finding Raymond, but the latter says that it would be impossible to paint another Madonna, since the original model was his lost wife. Burroughs promises to obtain a model, thinking of his son's fiancee. When Sterling Burroughs asks Naomi to sit for a painting by the artist, Raymond Longstreth, she is overcome by emotion, and discloses to him that she is really Naomi Longstreth, the artist's daughter. At first she refuses to pose, but then, struck by a sudden hope, she consents. At the sitting Raymond is dazed by the resemblance of the girl to his wife, but does not guess that she is his daughter. While he is deep in reverie, Naomi steals from the studio, and Helen, the wife, takes her place. When Raymond turns once more to his subject he is met by the forgiving Helen. Life begins anew for them and in the happiness of Naomi and Sterling.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE DUMB (Jan. 29).—Bob Owen, superintendent of a bread plant, is in love with Helen Page, an heiress, who returns his passion. Helen's favorite philanthropy is a school for deaf and dumb children, and in the course of her active work at the school she becomes proficient in lip-reading. Holt, a rascal, but maintaining a good social position, and who is on friendly terms with Helen, finding himself on the verge of ruin, determines to win the heiress. Upon finding Bob in his path, he determines to remove him, and plots with one of Bob's men to fix on Bob a crime which will send him to the penitentiary utterly disgraced. It happens that a motion picture is being made of the bread industry and Breen, Holt's tool, chances to stand in the foreground of a scene being taken when he confides to a needed confederate Holt's plot. The scheme decided upon works to perfection, and Bob is brought to trial on a charge of attempted murder and robbery, with evidence of guilt—though false—apparently conclusive.

Heartbroken, Helen seeks diversion by activity at the school, where she has arranged for the showing of motion pictures to the children. When the bread industry picture is shown, Helen reads the words formed by Breen's lips on the screen, and hastily communicates with Bob's attorney. The trial is just about concluded, and Bob's conviction is sure, when the attorney asks to be allowed to introduce a motion picture in evidence. The consequential portion of the industrial picture is shown in the courtroom, one of the mute children from the school writing upon a blackboard the words formed by Breen's lips. Bob is promptly acquitted, and Holt and his tools taken into custody.

ANOTHER SHADE OF GREEN (Jan. 30).—Peter Green is henpecked, but for all that he is jealous of his wife, Samantha. She gets a chance to take a boarder and does so. Peter proceeds to get jealous and thinks that if she loves the other man, he will kill himself to let her have him; but on second thoughts he decides to play a trick by leaving a note saying that he has jumped into the well.

In the meantime Samantha has found out that Briggs, the new boarder, is wanted by the police and that a reward is offered. She decides to get it. Peter in a ghost makeup proceeds to frighten them and Samantha makes love to Briggs, the boarder. Samantha accidentally finds out that Peter is not dead and his being alive helps her in her scheme. She gets Briggs to go with her to the constable and there she tells the officer that Briggs is wanted in Chicago for wife desertion. Samantha gets the money. Just at this time Peter, having followed them and thinking that they are going to get married, bursts in upon them and finds out that his wife still loves him as she hands the money over to him.

RELEASED JANUARY 11th BOOK FROM YOUR EXCHANGE
BEULAH POYNTER In Her Greatest Success
"THE LITTLE GIRL THAT HE FORGOT" A Five-Part Drama of intense heart interest and human appeal
Cosmos Feature Film Corporation 126 W. 46th Street, New York City

OHIO, IND., KY. APEX FEATURE SERVICE
Booking Apex, De Luxe, and Strand—The Popular Features. 416 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio. 224 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

STERLING.

TREASURE SEEKERS (Jan. 28).—Heinze and Meyer are neighbors, a delicatessen owner and a grocer, respectively, and one day Meyer visits Heinze's grocery store where the old cronies sit and drink hard cider, while they discuss the probabilities of a treasure chart, one of them has accidentally discovered.

As they sit sipping the cider they fall asleep and dream. They find themselves on board of a ship bound for the cannibal islands to hunt for the treasure. After a series of mishaps they land upon the island and are captured by the cannibals. Meyer is at once selected to fill the cannibal menu, and is immediately made ready for the feast. The cannibal queen falls in love with him, however, and saves him for the time being. The cannibals thereupon grab Heinze and place him in the pot. Meyer cannot desert his old friend, however, and prevails upon the queen to help him rescue his friend. One of the cannibals seeking driftwood for the fire, unconsciously picks up some dynamite that has drifted ashore and dried on the beach and when it is placed under the pot an explosion occurs which shatters Meyer's contemplated rescue and hurls the two adventurers from the land of dreams to the floor of the grocery store where a fire started from Heinze's cigar and which adds heated realism to their sudden awakening and causes them both to forswear hard cider in the future.

JOKER.

THE MAGIC MIRROR (Jan. 25).—Ernie and his wife have a quarrel, the result of which is that Ernie leaves and proceeds to take in a quantity of liquor. On his way home in an intoxicated condition, he meets a girl and after a short conversation with her, promises to see her later.

Returning home his wife greets him angrily and another quarrel follows. Hubby goes out. Wifey is suspicious and follows Ernie to the park, where he keeps the date with the other woman. She then returns home without interfering and cries herself to sleep. Satan appears to her through a large mirror at her bed side and informs her of all the terrible things her husband is doing.

Meanwhile, it turns out that the married woman with whom Ernie is disporting himself, has a husband, who appears and proceeds to create a disturbance. Sore of head and limbs, Ernie returns home and finds his wife asleep on the sofa. Waking her he tells his troubles and vows never again to distress his little wifey. Wifey herself is repentant and a reconciliation follows.

HE FELL IN LOVE WITH HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW (Jan. 30).—How dreadfully our sentiments change after the honeymoon! But Jack remained consistent. It was Jill who changed. And what a change! While she eased herself on cushions of luxury, poor Jack tackled the kitchen and wash tub. And did Jill appreciate this?

Jack's final rebellion only proved to Jill that she was the abused one. So she sends for mamma to come and straighten out the household. Mamma comes. She is of a terrifying size. Jack is flabbergasted at sight of her. But her subsequent actions amuse him more. He then indeed falls in love with his mother-in-law. For she has a keen eye as well as strength. Jill learns in a startling, straight-forward, manner wherein her faults lie. It sinks in deep. And with this realization she gladly promises to be good. When mamma returns home she leaves the broken ends of Jack and Jill's honeymoon securely knitted together.

POWERS.

THE CRIME OF THOUGHT (Jan. 30).—John Winton, extremely jealous, is engaged to Paula Nolan. Frank Nolan, Paula's brother, returns home after a lengthy absence and is seen by Winton embracing Paula. Paula teases Winton about Frank, concealing the latter's identity. Winton leaves the house. He reads a newspaper account of a recent hanging and dozing off to sleep, he, in a realistic dream, passes through a series of thrilling adventures, among which is the murder of his sweetheart by him, his arrest, and condemnation to death. He mounts the scaffold and is about to be executed when word is received that the hanging law of the state has been abolished.

He bids farewell to his old mother and is led away to what is apparently a life sentence. He sits on the stone bench in his cell, the warden enters and roughly shakes him by the arm. He wakes to find his mother bending over him. The effect of the dream is still on him when Paula and her brother arrive. Paula explains her relationship with Frank. Winton takes her in his arms and declares he is now cured of his jealousy.

REX.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN (Two Parts—Jan. 28).—Helen Mac Dermott, daughter of the Factor at Bear Lake, has been carefully and religiously brought up by her widowed father. Bob Brandt, a dashing young gambler and adventurer, stops at Bear Lake in his wanderings, and having occasion to visit the post to buy supplies, he becomes acquainted with Helen. She quickly surrenders to his charms and he, taking advantage of her innocence, persuades her to elope with him in the face of her father's opposition.

Six months later, happily married to her, (as she thinks) good and honest young husband, Helen is rudely awakened by a delegation of the Vigilant Committee, who roughly give her husband orders to move his operations to some other locality. Helen then learns that her hero is nothing more nor less than a gambler and swindler. Having a deep loathing for divorce, and too proud to return to her father, Helen continues as Bob's wife. A month later after the Vigilante episode, while wandering about the country, Bob accidentally shoots himself in the shoulder. Jim Stuart, a lieutenant in the Northwest Mounted Police, finds Bob and Helen and takes them to his quarters, where he cares for the injured man until he is well again.

A warm friendship develops among the three and Jim secures a place on the force for Bob. Soon Jim discovers he is slowly falling in love with his friend's wife, and, try as he will, he cannot still the cravings of his heart. Seeing the disgrace he is sure to bring upon himself by some day losing his self-control and declaring his love, he resigns from the service and goes away without saying good-bye to Helen.

A few days later, Helen who has been keeping a diary which Bob has never seen, is suddenly called from the house, and leaves the diary lying open on the table. Entering a few minutes later, Bob sees the diary and reads in it a confession of Helen's love for Jim. Bob realizes that his wife's love is lost to him, and he determines to bring Jim back so that she may gather a few scattered fragments of happiness.

Acting upon his resolution, Bob tracks Jim down and forces him to return to the post with him. There he explains the situation and wishing them all happiness, rushes down to the river. Brought face to face with the cold proposition and realizing the great sacrifice Bob has made for her, Helen is swept from her feet by the return of her old love, and the decision that he is after all, the better man. She rushes from the house, just in time to save Bob's life from a would-be Indian murderer and throwing herself into his arms, asks and receives forgiveness.

A SMALL TOWN GIRL (Three Reels—Jan. 17).—Pauline's uncle is the proprietor of the only hotel Maplehurst boasts of. The girl is an orphan and has been adopted by her relative Dick, the young hotel clerk, is one of those "best hearted fellows in the world." His only fault, in the girl's eyes, is his rusticity. He is a country boy. Pauline is a country girl, but with a love of romance and pleasure implanted deep in her impressionable nature.

A stylish young snob from the East arrives at Maplehurst. Pauline sets her cap for him, and it is one of the greatest moments of her life when she strolls down the village street with the dandy. The little hotel clerk is hurt to the quick when Pauline disregards his homely love.

Woman-like, Pauline makes the most of the Snob's visit to the village. At the little town's social gatherings she appears in a beautiful pink gown, while The Snob scorns the village beaux when they show up at the country dance hall in their "store clothes."

The Snob wears evening clothes, and while the girls of the village are impressed by his appearance in contrast with their brothers and sweethearts, the boys themselves despise him for his attempt to lord it over them.

The Snob cares little for local opinion, however, nor makes any attempt to accommodate himself to village customs. The town boys are able only to hire a "rig" on Sundays to take their "girls" out for a ride in the country. The Snob, however, once he has won the heart of the prettiest girl in town, orders his high horsepower racing car and takes Pauline out for perilous drives for long distances.

On one of these long tours The Snob, with cruel cunning, takes Pauline to a wayside inn. Outside the inn is a terraced garden with grape arbors hiding the diners from the view of passersby. Suspecting nothing, Pauline is induced to partake of a heavy dinner, and then, when The Snob sneers at her "countrified temperance," she sips slowly at a stinging drink he orders. Pauline takes the drink merely to please her companion and little suspects the sinister ulterior purpose he has in view. One drink follows another, and soon Pauline has passed beyond the point where good judgment rules her actions. Late that night they return to Pauline's home town. The chill air brushes away the fumes of the liquor from Pauline's brain and the deceived girl weeps bitterly in a rear seat of the big racing car. The Snob, at the steering wheel ahead, sneers to himself as he helps her alight at her humble home.

The inevitable happens. The Snob goes East, leaving an invitation for Pauline to visit him at his home. The moth flies into the flame. She runs away from home.

A year afterward Pauline is cast aside by The Snob. In a big city boarding house, where the good, the bad and the indifferent live, she gives birth to a child. She is penniless, and The Snob's people will not recognize her. The Snob himself is sent away West. Here he begins life anew.

Pauline's predicament is seemingly hopeless. A procurer of women who lives in the house, is touched, and he advises her to make a living on the street. Another neighbor calls and advises her to commit suicide. Either of these things might have happened had not an elderly childless couple taken an interest in the case. They told her it was the greatest thing in the world to be a mother. Pauline writes her uncle for help. Dick, the hotel clerk, reads the letter and sends her money. About this time the uncle dies. When Dick becomes the proprietor of the hotel his first act is to go after Pauline. In the meantime life in the West has made a man of The Snob. He returns East to Pauline, but she scorns him and refuses to let him see his child This time the man "paid."

ECLAIR.

CANCELED (Two Parts—Jan. 27).—In a little Eastern village, Clayton Emrick is the butt of his boy companions and is looked upon as a puny weakling. He is saved from a severe beating one day by the interference of Ed Dunlap, the bully of the town. A strong friendship springs up between the two which is broken by their removal to different towns. Years later, Emrick now a successful lawyer decides to take an automobile tour with his family through the West in order to recuperate.

A well known desperado, with his headquarters in a small western camp, receives word that a rich New York lawyer with his family will leave by a little used trail that night. Coincident with this the sheriff of the county receives word that the depredations of the outlaw band which is terrorizing the country must cease at once. The leader of the outlaw band sends one of his men to intercept the automobile party and direct them to what they believe to be a road house. The ruse works and Emrick with his family find themselves trapped in "The Devil's Hole." Emrick is forced to draw an order on his banker for $50,000 with instructions that it be delivered to Jim Garcia.

The letter is sent and the inquisitive postmistress at Redwood, finding it unsealed opens it and reads the message intended for the New York banker. Scenting something wrong, she decides to hold the letter for investigation and directs her assistant to have Jim Garcia followed when he calls for the money. Meanwhile, the Governor, incensed at the delay in rounding up of the outlaws, sends a detachment of cavalry to the scene. The desperadoes wound one of the sheriff's deputies but he escapes. Hearing of this, the leader resolves to get the money and to leave at once.

The wounded deputy meets the detachment of soldiers and directs them to the Devil's Hole. Meanwhile Emrick and his family succeed in making a dash for liberty in their automobile pursued by the chief outlaw. They elude him. The outlaw arrives at the postoffice and upon asking for mail is caught by the sheriff and brought face to face with Emrick who recognizes his boyhood protector. After a touching scene, Dunlap is taken to jail while Emrick promises to see that the outlaw's family back East shall never want.

THE THIEF AND THE CHIEF (Jan 31).—A thief has been alarming the residents by burglarizing houses in broad daylight. The boys at the club cannot understand how this thief manages to escape detection, but Jimmie Weston, son of the Chief of Police, declares that it is the easiest thing in the world.

The boys dare him to try it. He leaves the boys to select a house and they immediately set out in search of one. The house the boys choose is not far from the home of Mr. Henderson and his daughter, Clara. On this day Mr. Henderson goes down to the station to meet Professor Blinkhorn. Mr. Henderson has never met the professor. He waits at the station; the professor does not come.

When Jimmie enters the house the boys have chosen for him the master of the house seizes a gun and shouts for the police. Jimmie beats a hasty retreat. Jimmie stands in fear of the police even though his father is chief, and seeks refuge in the Henderson house. Clara has been reading of the mysterious burglar in the papers and when Jimmie enters the house and begs her to protect him from the officer, Clara takes him for the thief, and her heart goes out to this wayward youth. The officer enters in search of the burglar, but when he intrudes upon a pretty girl and a handsome young man at dinner he apologizes and departs. Mr. Henderson returns from the station and takes Jimmie for Professor Blinkhorn. Clara tells Jimmie he must keep up the deception.

The next day Mr. Henderson invites the Chief of Police to dinner. Clara warns Jimmie that the chief is going to dine with them. Jimmie decides to keep up the joke and does not tell Clara that the Chief is his father. He promises to remain in his room and Clara tells her father the professor is not well. A letter is handed to Mr. Henderson. It is from the professor who regrets he is unable to visit Henderson. The latter immediately grows suspicious and when Clara refuses to tell who Jimmie is, Henderson orders Jimmie to come down. The Chief is amazed to find that he is his son. Explanations follow and all end nicely.

BIG U.

ALIAS MR. SMITH (Jan. 26).—Frank Wilson, alias Mr. Smith, arrives in a small western town. John Andrews invites "Mr. Smith" to stop with him at his home. Andrew's daughter, Alice, is engaged to Fred Newton.

The day following "Mr. Smith's" arrival he meets Clara, Fred Newton's sister, and a riding party is arranged for the next day. On the ride home Alice and "Mr. Smith" carry on a mild flirtation, which gains the resentment of Clara. The next day "Mr. Smith" and Alice go horseback riding. On the road they pass a man who signals "Mr. Smith."

"Mr. Smith" fakes a fall from his horse. Alice returns home for help. As soon as she is out of sight, "Mr. Smith" meets the man who had signaled him.

Newton on arriving at Alice's home, learns she has gone riding with "Mr. Smith" and pursuing them he comes upon "Mr. Smith" and his friend and overhears them plotting to divide some plunder. They agree to meet that night. Newton rides to the sheriff's office.

In the interim, however, Alice and her father convey "Smith" home. At nine o'clock he escapes from the house, whereupon Andrews and his hired man give chase. The story ends with a reconciliation between Alice and Fred.

THE UNMASKING (Jan. 28).—In Sorrento, Italy, Lorenzo, a young Italian potter, lives with his wife and baby boy. Ambitious to seek new fields, Lorenzo informs his wife and parents of his intentions to go to America.

At Ellis Island, in New York, Lorenzo finds a fellow countryman to guide him in the new land. Strong friendship develops between the two men though the younger, Pedro, is a debonair Americanized Italian, and after many days of coaxing, induces the new arrival, Lorenzo, to cut his beard and dress in modern clothes.

Alone in Italy, Marie and her little son struggle against starvation. In America, Lorenzo's intentions are good. He accumulates money for his family in Italy; then comes an American girl. Impressed by the personality of Lorenzo, she induces her father to take him into the firm. Lorenzo neglects his faithful wife and boy.

Lorenzo's wife and baby come to America to seek him. Lorenzo finds them employed in the factory of which he is the head and they become reconciled.

BISON.

OLD PEG LEG'S WILL (Two Parts—Jan. 23).—Grace, a rosy-cheeked western girl, has been sent east to school. While she lived with her father in a far-western mining town the old man lived peaceably but soon after her departure he recommenced his old life and became involved in several saloon brawls. Just before his daughter is due to return from the east the old man engages in a free-for-all gun fight and kills a man. Realizing he will be strung up by the vigilance committee the old man shoots himself rather than subject his daughter to the shame of his public execution.

Grace returns and is heartbroken over her father's death. Her sweetheart offers her some consolation but is too busily engaged in "sparking" with the other town girls to linger long with the young woman who has given him so much.

About this time Old Peg Leg, a recluse prospector who lives in the hills about the mining camp, comes into town with some gold nuggets as large as eggs. The news quickly spreads that Peg Leg has "struck it rich." All the miners and young men in the town attempt to follow Peg Leg to his mine but the old prospector is too wise for them and disappears in the gathering darkness.

Meanwhile Grace, heartbroken at her father's death and her former sweetheart's desertion, determines to leave the town and to make a start elsewhere. She is several miles from town along the wagon trail leading to the railroad when a heavy storm comes up. A lightning flash reveals a shanty not far up in the hills and Grace makes for this place of refuge. Although she does not know it, Grace has stumbled into Peg Leg's shanty. His mine is not far away. Old Peg Leg, when he has assured himself that Grace is not trying to find out the location of his mine, welcomes her heartily and stumps about the cabin on his good and bad legs getting her something to eat.

Grace thanks the old recluse for his hospitality and when a lull comes in the storm leaves his shanty and starts out again on the trail. Hardly has she gotten out of sight of the cabin when the storm bursts again in renewed fury. Grace hastens back to the cabin and finds the roof of Peg Leg's shelter smashed in by a piece of ledge rock which overhung the cabin.

Grace finds old Peg Leg mortally injured by the fall of rock. After trying to revive him she starts to town for a doctor. Everyone in the town is gold mad and Grace, unable to find a doctor, gets some remedies at the local drug store and returns to Peg Leg. She finds him dying fast.

The old man realizing his end is near draws up a will in which he leaves his possessions to Grace in return for her kindnesses. When he is about to describe in the will the location of the mine his strength fails and soon after he dies. Grace takes charge of Peg Leg's affairs and tries to find the mine but is unsuccessful.

Believing the burro will lead her to the mine if left to his own devices Grace attempts to mount him. The burro objects and Grace is finally compelled to disguise herself as Peg Leg, even to his stumpy leg, before the burro will help her out. This time the burro lets her mount and sets out without bidding for the top of the cliff. Arriving at the top of the hill he stops. Grace dismounts and finds a faint trail marked by the tracks of the peg leg. Finally she stumbles over the entrance to the boarded up mine.

THE MYSTERY WOMAN (Two Parts—Jan. 30).—Berta, "the crazy girl," as they term her, lives in the haunted house, a quarter of a mile from the town. She had come to the town two years before, but none knew from whence. She goes to the gambling hall, a usual custom, and is successful at the gaming table. She throws the money away to children in the street. A stranger, named Boyd, arrives in the stage coach and sees the girl as she passes. He recognizes her and follows her. She does not remember him and repulses him. He returns to the notary and bribes him into performing a marriage between himself and Berta that night. When it is dark he goes to the haunted house and asks the girl to walk with him. She agrees and he takes her to the notary's house and there the marriage is performed. The girl does not realize what she is doing.

Meanwhile, another stranger, Macklin, arrives in town, and the landlord, coming to his room, sees a picture of a young girl on his dresser and recognizes it as Berta, the crazy girl. He tells Macklin who, crazed with excitement, rushes out. Boyd and Berta return to the house, and as they start to enter, the girl pulls away, and holds the door. They have a struggle and the girl succeeds in escaping out the window as the man breaks in the door. Berta takes her horse and rides away at break-neck speed.

Boyd does not attempt to follow, but goes back to the house and starts searching for some papers which he finds under a loose board. As he finds them, Macklin arrives in search of Berta. The two men confront each other and a terrible fight ensues. Meanwhile, Berta is thrown from her horse on her head, and when she regains consciousness, sanity and memory return to her. Slowly everything is revealed to her. On the eve of her marriage to Macklin, Boyd stands by, jealously watching all. Later, in her husband's gambling hall, Macklin gives her the deeds to the Eldorado Mine, making her the richest woman in the country.

That night, after closing time, as she waits alone in the gambling hall, Macklin having gone to the corral for the horses, Boyd returns. He rushes for the girl, grabs the deeds which she has in her hands, and indicates he will have both. Macklin returns at that moment. Boyd fires, and shoots Macklin. Both he and Berta think he is dead. Boyd escapes; Berta, thinking her husband is dead, raises the gun to her head and fires. The bullet grazes her temple and she starts up smiling insanely and rushes forth into the night.

The girl on the ground remembers all, her marriage to Boyd, and with but one idea, resolves to return and avenge Macklin's death. She catches the horse and rides back, returning to the house, to find her husband dying. As she stands there, Boyd secures the gun and is about to fire at Macklin when Berta rushes at him and deflects his gun's aim, the bullet entering his own body. Macklin sees Berta for the first time, and takes her in his arms.

NESTOR.

WHEN EDDIE TOOK A BATH (Jan. 26).—Lee and Bess have not been married very long. Lee invites his friend, Eddie, to visit them. Before Eddie's arrival Lee and Bess have a quarrel over a cracker bowl which is broken. Eddie goes out to purchase a new one, and Bess also goes out to buy a peace offering. ,

During their absence Eddie arrives at the house and finding the door open and no one at home proceeds to make himself at home. He is in the act of taking a bath when Bess returns. Eddie has bought a necklace for his hostess and leaves it on her dresser, but when Bess finds it she thinks that Lee has bought it for some other woman.

Eddie returns with the new cracker bowl and Bess also brings one home. Complications and misunderstandings follow in rapid succession, but all is cleared up and Lee and Bess are happy once more.

JED'S LITTLE ELOPEMENT (Jan 29).—Jed has the only automobile in the town and while it is not a 1915 model it is just as good as one to his sweetheart. But when the city drummer comes along in his high-power racer, the troubles of Jed begin.

The girl's father is impressed with the drummer and urges her to take him as her suitor, but she proves faithful to Jed, and they plan a little elopement. But Jed places the ladder against the grocer's window instead of that of his daughter and trouble results.

It's a mad chase to a minister's in which the fleeing couple win out.

L-KO.

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS (Jan. 17).—The under sheriff admires the sheriff's wife, who, flattered by his attentions, encourages him and starts gossips' tongues wagging. The sheriff, a man of fiery temper, finding the pair together, threatens to kill the under sheriff. Caught again, the under sheriff escapes and hides in a bath house in an effort to escape the sheriff's wrath.

Procuring a bathing suit, he goes in bathing to while away the time, but a bear escaping from a neighboring menagerie, finds the bath house a convenient hiding place and joins the bathers.

In company with the other bathers, the under sheriff is forced to take to the street clad only in his bathing suit, pursued by the bear. Thoroughly frightened, the under sheriff seeks protection in the sheriff's house. Climbing in through a window, he finds himself in the sheriff's wife's bedroom where he proceeds to hide.

Discovering his presence, the sheriff's wife resents it with her fists, much to the delight of the sheriff, who finally decides to forgive his assistant.

MERRY MARY'S MARRIAGE (Jan. 27).—Merry Mary has a couple of lovers, the sheriff and the Rube, but Rube is a drinker, and the sheriff makes sure that Mary knows it; and so Mary's affections waver. Then somehow a

Watch This Space Every Week

We have to Offer:

Two new Simplex Machines, slightly shopworn, NEVER USED, at .....$215.00 each
One No. 6A, New, Shopworn $178.00
One No. 6A, with 220-V. alternating motor drive and loop setter, slightly shopworn..$237.00

3—220-V. Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, good as new .....$40.00 each
One No. 6 machine, perfect running order.. $170.00
One No. 5, new, shopworn $115.00
One used No. 5 machine, good condition.. $75.00

These are samples on our floor, guaranteed New:

We have a large stock of Bio and Electra Carbons on hand, reasonable. You never regret dealing with us.

STERN MFG. COMPANY, 109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

bottle is found on the sheriff and then Mary wavers no longer—she marries Rube. The wedding over, the pair settle into their little love nest, Mary only interested in making her Rube his favorite dish, pie, but alas, Rube meets a bottle.

It is hard enough to know the sheriff's accusations were true, but in the midst of her discovery come the village bridal serenaders. Dreading their comments, Mary decides to hide the drunken Rube, and dumps him into an empty barrel. The neighbors see Mary and the limp form and send forth an alarm that the bride has killed her groom.

Mary is hauled before the town justice, and upon her denying the crime is given a third degree that would make a cast-iron post confess murder. Rube comes out of his stupor and crawls forth from the barrel in time to save his Mary. Confronting the would-be prosecutors the tables are turned, the scene that follows giving the community sufficient excitement to form the basis of corner gossip for years.

AFTER HER MILLIONS (Three Parts—Jan. 31).—Gertrude Selby, as the little millionairess, rolls into the picture in her big automobile with her arms full of roses. Henry "Pathe" Lehrman and Billie Ritchie both seek the acquaintance of the little millionairess. Henry fails to meet with her approval, but Billie responds to an alluring beckoning from the big automobile. Henry consoles himself with a beautiful pictured lady until the little millionairess again turns up in his neighborhood, whereupon he makes another effort to gain the lady's favor. Mischievous Gertrude ducks the persistent Henry with a hose. His screams bring papa to the rescue and she is hurried off to the hotel.

Billie, looking in vain for the lady of the alluring smile, finds Henry's picture and takes possession. Henry claims his own, however, but finally Billy persuades him to sell it and he departs to quench his growing thirst. Henry, with money in his pocket, but with wet clothes, decides he had better be on his way. Luck favors him. He finds Billie in a state that brings forth no protest when he takes back his pictured lady. Billie makes the hotel and starts things going at a pace hard to beat—until Henry arrives. Quiet finally settles over the hotel with Billie in his room with his bottle; Gertrude in her room with her book, and Henry in his room with his pictured lady. The wind plays Henry a low trick when it blows his pictured lady away. He follows out the window, down the fire escape, in a window and discovers himself in the room of the millionairess.

With Henry in pursuit she runs to her father, but finds herself in Billie's room. He is asleep and she has time to crawl under the bed before Henry arrives. Finding Billie asleep and no signs of the girl, Henry continues his hunt. All might have been well if a mouse hadn't driven the millionairess from under the bed, whereupon Billie promptly declares his love and joins in the chase. Driven into the hall the lady starts a riot from one end of the hotel to the other that leaves grave doubts as to whether there is anything left of the clerk, father and guests. Driven to desperation, a harassed guest lays Henry and Billie out with a well aimed blow for each of them.

THOU SHALT NOT FLIRT (Jan. 13).—Catching him in the act of flirting with the housemaid, the wife starts her husband off to the office after exacting a promise that he will call her on the telephone every five minutes.

The flirt arranges to have his assistant turn in the five-minute calls to his wife, and starts out for a day of it. He proceeds to make himself agreeable to a pretty lady, but he reckons without her jealous husband, who gives the old flirt the chase of his life, and finally catching him, metes out deserved punishment.

Returning home in the midst of one of his substitute's telephone calls, he is compelled to account for both his presence and the condition of his clothes. He tells a hair-raising tale of rescuing a child just as it is to be run over by a trolley car.

Out for a walk later, the wife insists upon going to the moving picture theater. The jealous husband, also out for a walk with his wife, also decides to take in the show. Henry, waiting at the theater entrance in an endeavor to secure a companion for the show, tries his wiles, but is not successful. Billie arriving with his sweetheart, proposes taking in the show. Henry manages to shut Billie in a convenient doorway, and takes possession of the lady. Escaping, Billie throws Henry out.

Recognizing himself, and fearing his wife's anger on discovering his deception, the flirt endeavors to keep her attention on himself. Not successful in this, he tries to make his escape, but finds himself face to face with the jealous husband, who has likewise recognized the figures on the screen. A general row follows in which the flirt is given the pummeling of his life.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

It is impossible to gain the confidence of a wide-awake exhibitor, unless you absolutely give him the proper kind of merchandise and prompt shipments. THAT IS THE REASON of our continuously receiving re-orders and letters, from all over the United States, Canada and foreign countries, thanking us for our usual prompt attention and high-grade merchandise that we manufacture.
Insist on the name "NEWMAN" on all frames. The Guarantee of Satisfaction.

Write for New 1915 Catalog.

The Newman Mfg. Co.
CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.
Established since 1862.

Printing and Developing
Metol-Hydroquinone Formula
Lowest Prices Prompt Service
Quality Guaranteed

Studio for Rent. Low Rates
Expert Cameramen Furnished
3 minutes from 42nd and Broadway
Studios & Laboratories: 316 E. 48th St.
Executive Offices: 1019—20 Longacre Bldg., B'way and 42nd St.
Telephones—Offices: 2583 Bryant
Studios: 6973 Murray Hill

Imperial M. P. Co. of New York, Inc.

$3
BUT ONLY ONE
THEATRE

in any one city (must be 15,000 population or greater) can obtain my $5 FRONTLITES at this Special Introductory Price of $3 each,—with weatherproof hanger, $3.25 each. I want ONE Theatre in EVERY city in the United States to use my Frontlites. Then others will want some, and will pay the regular price. Frontlites have 12-inch Dresden Glass Spheres which look like bulbs of beautiful bright light. Hood of SOLID brass, polished and lacquered. Use with NITROGEN LAMP, any size or voltage. Lamp not included at above prices. Frontlites are great for lobby display and poster lighting. Frontlites draw the crowds and put your competitor in the shade.

LUDWIG HOMMEL & CO.
Complete Theatre Equipments
422 First Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

GOLD SEAL

THE MADCAP QUEEN OF GREDSHOFFEN (Two Parts—Jan. 26).—The story is laid in an imaginary principality, where, on the death of the king, the throne goes to the Madcap Queen, who has a jealous rival in the person of Prince Hendrick. The American tourist meets with an accident and is rescued by the Queen's men. For a lark the Queen poses as one of her maids, and it is a case of love at first sight between herself and the American tourist.

In a tavern the tourist overhears a plot of Prince Hendrick to overthrow the Queen, and he, thereupon, goes to warn her of the danger. The Prince attacks the palace but the Queen and her followers escape through a secret passage and arrive safely at her hunting-lodge. The American tourist secures reinforcements and in a thrilling fight restores the Queen to her throne. Prince Hendrick is killed. Realizing the impossibility of a love match between them, the American leaves the Queen forever.

VICTOR.

HIS GUARDIAN ANGEL (Two Parts—Jan. 25).—Marie Mathews and her friend, Jeanette, are entertaining Tom and Jack Moore. In a game of tennis, Marie turns her ankle. Tom assists Marie, much to the annoyance of Jeanette, who loves Tom.

Tom is much worried concerning Marie's ankle, until Jeanette shows anger at Tom's attention to Marie. As Jack and Jeanette leave the room Tom tries to propose to Marie, but his courage fails him as they are interrupted by the entrance of Jeanette and Jack. Jeanette relieves the situation by playing Tom's favorite selection on the piano. Jack realizing the feelings of Marie, takes her from the scene to a balcony where they enjoy the moonlight. After an argument concerning Jeanette, Marie returns to the drawing room.

As Jeanette hears Marie returning she pretends to have something in her eye. Tom endeavors to help Jeanette. As Marie enters the room she sees Tom on his knees. Thinking Tom loves Jeanette, Maries goes to her room.

Next morning, at breakfast, Marie is still kind to Jeanette, who shows her dislike for Marie. Jeanette leaves on a shopping trip and meets a messenger who is bringing some flowers to Marie with a note from Tom, in which he tells her he loves her but has not the courage to tell her so in person and begs her to wear one of his flowers that night. Jeanette returns to her room and reads the note which Tom has written. Jeanette sees a chance to turn Marie against Tom and takes the note with the flowers to Marie, who, when she reads, offers congratulations to Jeanette.

Next morning early Marie packs her bags and sends for her housekeeper. She gives a check to both the housekeeper and butler and tells them to inform Jeanette in the morning that the house is to be closed. She leaves for her lodge in the hills prepared to live the life of a hermit.

When Tom calls to get his answer, Jeanette tells him Marie is unable to see him. Tom leaves dejected. After Marie leaves the city, Jeanette entertains Tom, and in an impulsive moment Tom proposes to Jeanette and is readily accepted. As Tom proposes a vision of Marie comes to him telling him to beware of Jeanette.

Five years elapse. Jeanette is driving Tom to the walls with her extravagance. Jack refuses to lend him any more. The bright spot in Tom's life is his little girl, whom he worships.

Tom warns Jeanette to be less extravagant, but she still continues to entertain. A vision of Marie comes to Tom when he is about to draw up a brief for an important case in a way that would make him a laughing stock. Marie shows him the right way to draw up the document. From this midnight work Tom goes home to find his wife entertaining a large crowd at supper. He declines their invitation and goes to his little girl's room, where he finds the child unattended.

Brought at last to realize his position by the serving of papers on him for a sheriffs sale of all his goods he attempts to end it all, but is stopped again by a vision of Marie, who tells him of his duty. At last Tom's troubles are brought to a close by an accident which kills Jeanette. Subsequently Tom wins an important case which nets him a large sum of money. He turns the office over to Jack and, with his child, leaves for the woods.

While tramping along one day through the woods the child begs her daddy to go with her. They take a cross path which leads them to Marie's lodge, where the old sweethearts are reunited once more.

HOW SHE FOOLED AUNTY (Jan. 29).—Irene's aunt, with whom she has made her home since the death of her parents, is severe with her, allowing her little pleasure and no associations with boys. Aunty finally allows her to have a party of girls to tea and while aunty is occupied with her beau, the girls see a crowd of the boys passing and greet them. Aunty discovers them and is harsh with Irene, dismissing the party and teling Irene she must stay in for the rest of the day while she goes to the beach with her admirer.

Irene dresses in boy's clothes and joins the boys after being introduced by her chum as Mr. Brown. All goes well until they propose going swimming, when to save herself she tells her sweetheart she is Irene. He tells the boys. They secure suits and go bathing.

Meanwhile Aunty is worried at Irene's absence. Irene and her friends send Aunty a message that she has joined the gypsies and may never return. After the message has had full effect Irene and the boys, to carry out their plans, find a costume shop and all dressed as gypsies burst in on Aunty and tell her that if she will be more lenient with Irene she will be returned to her. Aunty and Irene and the boys throw off their disguises. Aunty, of course, keeps her word.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 149 (Jan. 13).—Awaiting the Call. Canadian troops hard at work preparing for call to fight at the front—Toronto, Canada. Sub-title. Sabre practice.

Kaiser's Guards in Captivity. Hundreds of the German Emperor's crack regiment captured in battle, being taken to detention camp—England.

War's Ravages. Priest of Tirlemont Cathedral returns from seven weeks' captivity by the Germans to find his church in ruins—Belgium.

Vera Cruz Heroes Honored. Secretary Daniels presents medals to sailors of battleship "Florida" at Brooklyn Navy Yard for exceptional heroism during the seizure of Vera Cruz.

Deluge Floods City. Eight-day rain turns dried river beds to rushing torrents which sweep and damage the city of Tucson, Ariz.

Mile-a-Minute on the Ice. Express train speed made by ice yachts in the king of winter sports on the Shrewsbury River, Red Bank, N. J. Subtitles—Keeping Up With the Joneses. The Camera Takes a Ride.

Racing Revived. After years of banishment racing is resumed at the formerly famous resort—New Orleans, La.

Worst Subway Disaster. Hundreds unconscious from smoke in fatal fire which imprisoned thousands of passengers in trains during rush hour—New York City. Subtitles: 1—Gratings torn up to reach victims; 2—Broadway turned into an open air hospital; 3—Passing autos rush victims to hospitals; 4—Every ambulance in city answers call; 5—Pulmotors save hundreds from death; 6—From left to right: Fire Commissioner Adamson; Police Commissioner Woods.

Cartoons by the World Famous Caricaturist, Hy. Mayer, of Puck.

IMP.

THE MILLIONAIRE ENGINEER (Two Parts—Jan. 29).—Daniel Spencer, a self-made man, has acquired a great fortune and is the president of a railroad. He has risen from the ranks and has in turn been fireman and engineer. He gives a reception to his wealthy neighbors in honor of his engagement to Maude Allyne, the daughter of a wealthy manufacturer. She is a fitting mate for Spencer. The gossips wonder how such dominating natures can mate, and predict that the wedding bells will never ring.

For the night in question the discontented railroad employees hold a torch light mass meeting in the village square. The festivities in the great mansion are interrupted by the wild cries. An orator points to the brilliantly lighted great house on the hill and denounces the greed of the president who feasts amid splendor while his employees starve in squalor. The railroad employees appoint a committee to lay their grievances before the president. A few apprehensive women follow the men and try to talk them out of the plan to strike if their demands are not acceded to.

The dignified flunky is told by his master to admit the strikers. Their bullying manner arouses his ire, however, and Spencer refuses to treat with them. He defies them to strike. His sweetheart pleads for the men, but he tells her she does not understand business. She gives him back his ring and leaves him. Time passes and the strike is waged with bitterness on both sides. The fiancee acts as a Lady Bountiful to the starving strikers' families and refuses to speak to Spencer, until he ends the strike.

One day while Spencer is visiting the yard, news comes that a forest fire is in progress and unless help is brought to a far off orphan asylum they will be burned by the encircling fire. All refuse to run the engine through the flaming forest. The president volunteers. He brings the train safely through the fire and saves the children and other people. Spencer becomes reconciled with his fiancee and gives in to the strikers.

A GENTLEMAN OF ART (Two Reels—Jan. 15).—The chief of the government detective service receives a letter which reads: "Despite your vigilance, diamonds of considerable value are still being smuggled into the country. Put your best man on the job and get results at once."

As the chief finishes the letter, Phil Fenno, a young member of the detective force, enters. The chief hands him the letter. Fenno reads it and tells the chief that he will do his best on the case.

As Fenno looks off through the offices he sees his sweetheart, Rose, in the next room, where she is employed as a telegrapher, receiving and sending out messages to incoming and outgoing vessels. Rose is preparing herself for a position in the government detective service and has made a careful study of codes and how to translate them. Her cleverness in this respect, combined with her womanly intuition, has made her valuable to government officials. She is soon given an opportunity to demonstrate her skill again.

Young Hough, on board a ship coming into New York, poses as an artist and carries with him a case of artist's colors. Hough sends his father a wireless message, which passes through Rose's hands. She reads it aloud to Phil: "Arrive tomorrow. Got some wonderful new tones from Europe. Meet me with car."

Phil thinks nothing of the wording of the telegram and leaves. Rose, however, is struck with the idea that there is more in the message than appears on the surface and, with a woman's curiosity, gets out her book of secret codes and puzzles over the letter combinations. In twenty minutes she has translated the message. Its contents are of such a suspicious nature that Phil determines to consult with the chief.

He looks up Hough's address, and Rose, upon Hough's arrival, scrapes acquaintance with him and, to test his ability as an artist, agrees to pay him well for a picture, to be called "Sweet Innocence." Hough is much impressed by Rose's wonderful gown and diamonds and, thinking he can relieve her of the gems at some future time, encourages her to believe that he will paint her picture in his New York studios.

Hough is arrested on suspicion, but when searched at headquarters the detectives find nothing on him. Rose, while Hough is detained, makes a careful search of his quarters, but finds nothing incriminating. That night, in his father's home, Hough takes out the tubes of oilpaints which he has brought from Europe, cuts the ends off, and from each takes a quantity of diamonds.

The following day Rose goes for a sitting. While she is in Hough's studio a laborer drives up with a crate containing eggs. Two men are watching him on the sidewalk. The laborer walks forward and deliberately bumps into them. They ask him to apologize and he refuses. While they fight Hough and his son run out and remove the crate of eggs to Hough's rooms.

Rose watches the fight and before Hough's return hides herself in one of the rooms. Hough and his son believe she has gone and proceed to open the eggs, from each one of which they take diamonds. Rose, watching through a transom, slips from her chair and falls heavily.

The Houghs make her prisoner. While they are binding and gagging her the chief of detectives, Fenno and his men arrive. The room is plunged into darkness and the smugglers escape. A spirited pursuit follows, and Rose employs a unique method of capturing them. Later Fenno and Rose are married. As a wedding present the chief sends them an egg with a diamond in it.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

PRINCESS.

uncle threatens to cut off his allowance unless he marries and settles down. Jack writes Uncle John telling him that as he feared his marriage would not please him he had been keeping it a secret, but that now he is only too happy to be able to say that he has the dearest little wife in the world. Uncle telegrahs back that he is coming on immediately to make the young pair a visit. In his extremity, Jack prevails upon George, his best friend, to let him pass off Muriel, George's wife, as Mrs. Jack. Uncle is delighted with Muriel, and Jack is perfectly content—until his rich relative remarks that if only his nephew had a son and heir he would give him $50,000. The nephew manages to get the butler busy, and he goes out and borrows a baby. George, meanwhile, who has been palmed off as a boarder, is getting restless. It is something of a strain to have to see one's own wife willingily masquerading as the wife of one's best friend. So he contrives to put up a joke on Jack and Muriel. When Uncle is conducted to the supposed nursery to see the one precious infant, he is dumbfounded to find a roomful of babies. Then he begins to scent the joke, and the entire deception is unravelled .

MAJESTIC.

THE THREE BROTHERS (Two Reels—Jan. 10).—Three brothers, Bob, Will and Charlie, all are in love with Mae. Bob, the eldest, is sullen and revengeful, and Mae is afraid of him. Will, the middle brother, is a happy-go-lucky boy with whom she falls in love, and Charlie, the youngest, sacrifices his own feelings for Will, who loves Charlie devotedly. Will and Mae are engaged. During his absence in the city, where he is trying to get a hold in business, so that he and Mae can marry, Bob makes violent love to his brother's fiancee. Charlie comes to her rescue. Learning of the episode, Will later has word sent home that he is dead—and Mae marries Charlie. Some time after this, Will cannot resist coming home to see his mother and Charlie—though he intends that Mae shall not know of his return. Before he can slip away, however, an incident occurs in which he is called upon to save Charlie's life. His presence and his heroism become known to Mae. The inference is that she had a good deal of a struggle to overcome vain regrets.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN (Two Reels—Jan. 17).—Charlie Jackson, on the death of his parents, is sent to live with his Aunt Sarah, a dope fiend and crook. She works upon the child's sympathies, until she has induced him to commit a robbery in her lodging house. Ten years later finds him her accomplice in all sorts of

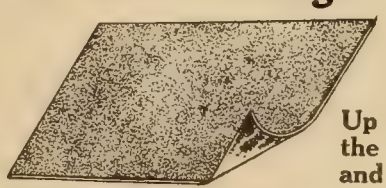
LEWIS M. SWAAB
PIONEER SUPPLY HOUSE IN PHILADELPHIA

Principal Jobber in Power's, Simplex and Baird Machines

Mirror Screens, Motor Generator Sets, Mercury Arc Rectifiers, the Daylight Screen, Fire Extinguishers, Radium Gold Fibre Screens, Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, Power's Inductors, Ticket Choppers, Brass and Wood Poster Frames, Film Shipping Buckets, Carrying Cases, Asbestos Booths, Announcement Slides, Carbons, Oil and Cement, Exit Signs, Tickets, Pianos and Columbia Phonographs and SCREENCOAT, $3.00 per gallon will make an old screen new. And the Mortimer Film Cleaner.

THE HOUSE WHOSE GUARANTEE IS WORTH 100%
1327 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Gold King Fiber Screen



SPOW! BANG! VIM!

Up goes the price of the GOLD KING on and after March 1st, 1915, to 50c per square foot.

Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. 30c. per square foot until March 1st. We will give you a ten days' free trial.

The Gold King Screen Company
Box 294, Altus, Okla.

outrages. Charlie meets a young woman, Constance Grey, who is a teacher in a mission in the neighborhood He protects her from a pair of roughs and wins her friendship. She gives him books and encourages him to study for a career. At length love develops between them. Constance's rich uncle discovers the attachment, and determined to knew just what sort of a boy Charlie is, he takes a room at Aunt Sara's boarding-house. She sees him counting his money and prevails upon her nephew to help her rob him. They enter the room and are about to get the money, when the old man wakes. A struggle ensues in which the aunt kills her lodger. But Charlie, who has not seen the blow, believes he is guilty. On the discovery of the crime, the young man is condemned to death and his aunt to life imprisonment. On the eve of Charlie's execution, Aunt Sarah is visited by mental pictures of "what might have been." She sees how, for the boy's sake, she might have become a good woman; how his instincts for decency might have been developed; sees him making a career for himself and marrying Constance. At that moment Charlie and his guards come by the cell on the way to the gallows. She screams out her confession—that it was she who killed the man, that Charlie is innocent.

KOMIC.

A FLYER IN SPRING WATER (Chapter 15 of the "Bill" Series by Paul West—Jan. 17).—Ethel's sweetheart makes her a present of a large bottle of perfume. Bill and Izzy hit upon the brilliant scheme of filling empty bottles and selling them for spring water. But when they turn the faucet they discover that the odor is not precisely what might be expected from nature's crystal wells, so they steal Ethel's perfume and doctor their bum goods. It chances that another office holder, who has bought water from Bill and Izzy spills some on his coat. His wife notices the odor, and becoming suspicious, she traces it to Ethel. Ethel does a little detective work, and the two office boys are caught in the act. But his latest venture costs Bill his job.

ROYAL.

THE UNWILLING BRIDE (A Financial Farce—Jan. 16).—A broker in desperate financial straits determines to marry his son, Bob, to a wealthy young woman. To this end, he wires him to come home from college at once. But Bob is betrothed to the daughter of a banker. So he persuades his roommate to dress up like a girl and telegraphs his father that he already is married and about to pass his honeymoon at Lakewood. Bob and his roommate, the broker, the banker and his daughter all meet at the famous winter resort. Much consternation is caused by the roommate being taken for a bearded lady. But in the end Bob marries the banker's daughter and everybody's troubles dissolve into joys.

THANHOUSER.

A YELLOWSTONE HONEYMOON (Jan. 17).—Jack and May were always great lovers of the out-of-doors—as well as of one another; so they decided to spend their honeymoon in the most wonderful place in North America, Yellowstone Park. They had a perfectly blissful time of it until they went out to see the bears. May was frightened nearly to death, and while Jack amused himself with feeding one of the cubs, she took to flight. She ran until she was exhausted. Then, sitting down on the edge of a canyon, she fell asleep in a cozy nook between two boulders, where her frantic husband passed her right by. When she woke she made inquiries of a stolid guide who had seen nothing of the one she sought. But a little further along the guide met Jack and told him of the little woman who was weeping at the top of the upper falls. He tore back—discovered his lost bride—and mutual vows were exchanged that never again should they be separated.

RELIANCE.

ONE FLIGHT UP (Two Reels—Jan. 16).—Alice Reed, reporter on The Herald, hurts her finger in her typewriter, and goes to Dr. Trine's office. She is the unseen witness of the abduction of the doctor, blindfolded, by a suspicious looking character. Following in a taxi, she shadows them to a nearby tenement house and into a miserable room where lies a wounded man. She then is discovered by the crooks and made a prisoner. The wounded man is able to hold a gun and he agrees to keep her safely covered while his pal goes with the doctor's prescription to the drug store. Under cover Alice is commanded to do something for the helpless crook. She contrives to get her hands on the prescription and scrawls on the back an appeal for help. She also changes the formula so that the victim shall be drugged into insensibility. The clerk in the pharmacy rushes help to Alice. The crooks are captured. And the girl lands a big story for her paper.

ON THE TABLE TOP (Jan. 19).—Jane Delafield, daughter of a second-hand furniture dealer, is loved by Jack Dean, a newspaper reporter. Jane works as stenographer for Jason and Hicks, a pair of get-rick-quick swindlers, suspected by the police. Dean has been trying for a long time to get something on them, but without success. Jane discovers their crookedness and that they are about to get away with it. However, they find out that she knows, and make her a prisoner in the room where Jason has hidden his cash. The partners sell their furniture to the nearest second-hand dealer who happens to be Jane's father; and Jason sends Hicks for their railway tickets, saying that he will meet him with the money. The furniture dealer's men failing to arrive, Jason scribbles them a note on a piece of loose paper lying on the bare table. He does not notice that under it is a sheet of carbon. Hicks goes to the depot, and the furniture is taken away. Jack Dean, in passing the store, stops to inquire for his sweetheart. He sees on the table the carbon impression of the note warning the men not to let the girl out of the inner room, and recognizes the signature of Jane's employer. Jane is rescued, the crooks captured, and Dean gets a clean beat for his paper.

MUTUAL MONOGRAPH No 1.—"WITH JULIAN STREET AND WALLACE MORGAN" (Jan. 18).—When Julian Street and Wallace Morgan made their now celebrated trip across the country to write up the various cities and big towns, they had experiences without number not included in their book, "Abroad at Home." At a reception recently they were presented to Our Mutual Girl, who, as is her custom with the famous folk she meets, begged them for a tale not in print. The incident they related had to do with a town which they chose to call Squeedville. The experiences are true enough, only the real name of the city being concealed. The telephone operator of the leading hotel in the town was beloved of the hotel reporter on the biggest daily in the place, and also by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. When Street and Morgan stopped at this hotel, it made it nice for the hotel reporter, and also gave an equally good reason why the secretary should linger in the lobby. There was much rivalry between the two, both in love and in the matter of monopolizing the distinguished visitors. The reporter lost out, however, on his interview, as Street and Morgan accepted an invitation of the Chamber of Commerce to dinner that evening. The next morning there was a mix-up about the hour when Morgan was to be called. He had left explicit instructions with the phone girl to make it ten o'clock and he had roused him at six. He learned too late that it was Street who had countermanded his order after he had had the girl fired. The hotel manager extended the joke on Street, who sympathized with the girl, by telling him how needy she was; and Street started for the address given him by the manager, in quest of the mistreated damsel. The reporter and the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce were tipped off also that if they went to the same number they would be able to buttenhole the two celebrities, so the hotel was pretty well deserted. When they all returned a little later, disappointed in their search for the girl, they found that she had married the hotel manager.

Kindly Mention
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.
When Writing to Advertisers

BEAUTY.

THE SPIRIT OF GIVING (Jan. 12).—Peter Stearns, a prosperous business man, is perfectly willing to squander his wealth upon his wife and daughter, Annie, but he cannot understand the true spirit of giving. His clerks are raising a purse for Jones, one of the office force, who recently has been presented with a son and heir. Stearns refuses to subscribe, and later he discharges Jones for being late. The agent for the Belgian Relief Fund also meets with a frigid reception. Peter takes a dose of medicine and falls asleep. He dreams that he is refused admittance to Heaven until he shall have done some charitable deed. He wander over the earth, hopelessly seeking his opportunity. When at last he wakes from the effects of the narcotic which the druggist has sent him by mistake, he is a changed being. His conversion is like that of Scrooge—and he hastens with his wife to adopt a family of little Belgian refugees.

A GIRL AND TWO BOYS (Jan. 19).—Billy and Jim are old friends, and rivals in love. Billy takes Marion Carroll to the theater and to supper afterwards. She orders and orders and keeps on ordering, until Billy finds that he hasn't enough money to foot the bill. Hearing his friend Jim's voice in the adjoining booth (which, however, Marion cannot hear from her side of the table), he excuses himself for a moment and goes to ask his rival for a loan. Jim is determined to drive a bargain instead. He says he'll pay for the supper if Billy will let him eat it and take Marion home. Reluctantly Billy consents. He fakes a phone call and hurries away. Jim takes Marion home in a taxi, and then is driven to his apartments. There he discovers that he cannot pay the driver. He is arrested and borne off to police headquarters, whence he phones Billy to come around and pay his fine. But Billy is sore. Instead, he calls up Marion and gives her the message. But little does he know the girl. She turns up at the station house just before him; drags poor dumbfounded Jim out before his eyes, bundles him into the taxi and whisks him off. Back in his rooms, Billy has a phone call, and Marion, in sweetest tones, announces, "So good of you to let me know. I got him—and we're engaged."

AMERICAN.

RESTITUTION (Two Reels—Jan. 11).—Lester Harrison and Earl Rand take supper after the theater at a popular restaurant where they meet Elsa Detrow, the star whom they have both intensely admired that evening behind the footlights. Helen Ward, also a member of the theater party, misunderstands her fiance's frank enthusiasm for Elsa's talent and breaks her engagement to Harrison. After that he visits the actress frequently, and at length becomes involved in the murder of Carlton Fox, who has been Elsa's constant attendant. At the trial she testifies against Harrison; and Earl Rand, who is in love with Helen Ward, permits his former friend to be convicted, although he, himself, knows all the details of his innocence. Harrison escapes from prison and finds work on a western ranch where, eventually, he meets Helen and Rand. The latter is on the point of exposing him to the sheriff when Elsa Detrow, now queered in the theatrical profession, who is working as housekeeper at a hotel near by, comes forward and confesses the truth.

THE BLACK GHOST BANDIT (Jan. 13).—Nell Brand lives with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer. For some mysterious reason she never is allowed to visit her father, who lives in a distant village, though occasionally he comes to see her. At last Nell runs away by stage coach to her father's town. En route the coach is held up by the Black Ghost Bandit, and thus Nell meets young Sheriff Jordan, who takes her to her father's cottage. Nell lives happily with her father, except that she cannot overcome his prejudice against Jordan, whom he never will see. One day during Brand's absence she meets with an accident on horseback while riding alone. She is thrown and hurt. When she comes to herself she starts to walk to the village. She comes upon the Black Ghost Bandit, shadows him to his cave, and then hurries on to inform the sheriff. They return together to make him captive only to discover that the bandit and Nell's father are the same.

REBUILT MACHINES

We have on hand at all times a number of REBUILT MACHINES All in First-Class Order

Power's No. 5 Complete, with Fire Shutter	$75.00
Edison Exhibition, one pin movement	65.00
1911 Motiograph Complete	110.00
1912 Motiograph Complete	125.00
Power's No. 6, Complete	125.00
Power's No. 6, with 1912 Motiograph Lamp House	135.00

A-1 Condition Guaranteed
Will sell for CASH or on EASY PAYMENTS
Write for new catalog just off the press.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160 North Fifth Avenue Chicago, Illinois

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists for Sale
20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

1025 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$4.00
109 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
210 Moving Picture Machine and Supply Dealers stating line of goods handled	1.50
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

Ask us for full particulars.
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams St., Chicago. Established 1880.

THE CLUBMAN'S WAGER (Jan. 15).—Four clubmen importune a tramp to change $1,000 bill to settle a wager. The experiences of the tramp in his efforts to get change makes a series of highly comic situations.

PRODUCING A NATION'S PRIDE (Jan. 15) (On same reel as foregoing).—This is particularly timely as it shows in detail that branch of the steel industry which manufactures armor plate and cannon. The process is depicted from the handling of the ore to the finished product, and a vivid demonstration is given of how these monster machines of war are used.

REFINING FIRES (Two Reels—Jan. 18).—John, a poor young man with prospects, falls in love with Mary who is penniless and socially beneath him. He dares not marry her for fear of losing his fortune. However, he persuades her to live with him, telling her that when his rich uncle dies they will marry. Mary has occasion to believe that John is tired of her, and leaves him. Weary and ill, she finds in Nina Alstrom, Judge Alstrom's daughter, a friend who takes her into her own home and gradually restores her to health and spirits. John's uncle dies and he comes into the money. As it happens, the young millionaire meets and loves Nina Alstrom, who loves him in return, But John, though he long since has ceased to care for Mary, is haunted by his past. He confesses to Nina that he is not worthy of her love, but that he has determined to lead a clean life in the future. Mary overhears. Leaving a note for Nina, she goes to a convent where she takes the veil.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF AL BRADY (Jan. 20).—Mr. Lee, a farmer, quarrels with a neighbor, Sam Jones, and finding Al Brady, a good but rather good-for-nothing fellow, talking with his daughter Stella, orders him away. Al, still smarting under the lash of Lee's words, takes his gun and goes into the woods. In running to pick up some game he finds Lee lying on the ground in the spot where his prey should have been. Believing that he has killed him, he rushes away in great anguish of mind—and so does not see Sam Jones step out of the bushes, a smoking revolver in his hands. Al confides his suffering to Stella and confesses that he has shot her father by accident. Sam Jones, meanwhile, is arrested by the sheriff, who has found Lee's body. Al supposes that Jones is innocent and paying the penalty for his crime. He goes to the sheriff to give himself up. The officer, however, tells him that the wound could not possibly have been made by his gun, and besides, Jones has confessed. Sobered by the experience, Al determining to make something of himself in the world.

MUTUAL.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 1 (Jan. 7).—European War Illustrated.

Latest Pictures From the Seat or War—French Boys Train for Service in the Ranks. Bread Baking at the Front. Kilters Leave for the Front. Tearing Away the Records of War. Training Raw Recruits. English Tommies Play Football in France Before Leaving for the Trenches. The French Army Buys American Horses.

Captain Sweeney of the Metropolitan Police Instructs the East Side Juvenile Force.

The Largest Dam in the World.

Colorado's Governor Confers with President Wilson.

Leginska, Famous Pianist, Poses Specially for the Mutual Weekly.

19th Battalion Leaves Toronto, Canada, for the Front.

Winter Sports at Fashionable Country Clubs.

Big Lumber Fire at Boston, Mass.

U. S. Troops Quell Mexican Disturbance at Naco, Ariz.

Largest Locomotive in the World Arrives at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

United Fruit Steamer "Limone" and the Six-mast Schooner "Dorothy Palmer" Are in Collision off Boston Lights.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 2 (Jan. 14).—European War Illustrated. Latest War Pictures. British Wounded in Hospital at Versailles. Royal Sussex Regiment. Canal Barges Are Used as Temporary Hospitals. Collecting Clothing and Making Cigarettes for Soldiers.

TODAY
COMING
TOMORROW
MONDAY
TUESDAY
WEDNESDAY
THURSDAY
FRIDAY
SATURDAY
SUNDAY

If you are still using the paper announcement signs instead of "Schiller's Metal Signs," your lobby is not complete and up to date. Make it so by ordering a set at once.

Made of enameled metal with a bright red background, white embossed letters and eye-holes in the corners. Measures 28 inches long by 4½ inches high.

$1.50 Per Set

These signs can be secured from General Film Company's Branches
Geo. Breck Co., 70 Turk St.
San Francisco, Calif.

Notice—These signs are copyrighted; all infringers will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Schiller Film Company
SCHILLER BUILDING, CHICAGO

OPTIC PROJECTION
S. H. Gage, B. S. and H. P. Gage, Ph. D.
Postpaid $3.00
A comprehensive book of 700 pages, with over 400 illustrations on all forms of projection apparatus. Write for circular giving table of contents, sample pages and illustrations.
THE COMSTOCK PUBLISHING COMPANY,
Roberts Place, Ithaca, New York

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Hans Helle, German sympathizer, manufactures bomb to destroy French ships. Plot is discovered in time to save the "Chicago."

Transport "Buford" sails from San Francisco with 30th Infantry aboard bound for New York via Panama Canal.

New York's tallest building is aglow with 12,000,000 candle power lights. The Woolworth tower at night.

Hindu occultist slays self with bomb, wrecking sanctuary at San Francisco, Cal.

Much military pomp and splendor is displayed at inauguration of Governor Whitman at Albany, N. Y.

Paul Althouse, famous tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, poses for the Mutual Weekly.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and Miss Anne Morgan preside at opening of New York's newest dancery atop the Strand.

Ice-Yachting on the Shrewsbury River, near Red Bank, N. J. Sub-title, Bostonians enjoy Snow-Racing and Ice-Boating.

I. W. W. agitators hold unemployed demonstration in Union Square, New York.

Fun and frolic vie with beauty and splendor in Philadelphia's famous mummers' parade.

Men who did gallant duty at Vera Cruz are decorated with medals of honor by Secretary Daniels at Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Barney Oldfield and Bob Burman, speed kings, smash racing records.

DOMINO.

THE STILL ON SUNSET MOUNTAIN (Two Reels—Jan. 21).—Old man Jason Harper runs an illicit still on Sunset Mountain He has a grown son, Bill, and a daughter, Rachel. Jack Baker, a revenue officer, posing as a moonshiner, has won the love of Rachel from her former lover, Dave Moore. Dave suspects Baker of being a revenue officer but can find no proofs. Baker wrongs Rachel and refuses to marry her.

Having secured the necessary evidence, Baker sends information to the other revenue officers by means of a carrier pigeon. They bring a posse into the mountains and destroy the still. During the raid Bill Harper is wounded and taken prisoner. Three years later Bill is in a dying condition in prison.

Thirsting for revenge, Jason, Harper and Dave conspire to lure Baker into the mountains. Rachel is sent to the prison to see her brother Bill and manages to smuggle a map to him with the details of the plan that is to lure Baker into the mountains. Bill sends for Baker to come to the prison to see him; that he has a dying confession to make. Baker calls upon Bill who tells him that he is the only surviving member of a famous gang of neighborhood bandits that have terrorized the countryside several years previous and that he has $2,500 buried in a cave on Sunset Mountain. He gives Baker the map with instructions where to find the buried loot.

Baker, his cupidity aroused, visits the mountains, disguised as a mountain evangelist. He is captured and exposed by Harper and Dave and dragged to the Harper cabin. Baker manages to communicate with Rachel, who still loves him, and promises to marry her if she will help him to escape. That night they hurry down the mountain trail, unaware that they are pursued by Dave. Baker, reaching a point where he believes himself safe from pursuit, brutally repudiates his promise to Rachel and makes his way toward the village alone, leaving her heartbroken with her child. Dave kills him, unknown to Rachel. Dawn finds Dave and Old Man Harper standing by a newly made grave, Harper telling Dave, "Help me to keep the secret from her, and never let her know."

KAY BEE.

THE CROSS OF FIRE (Two Parts—Jan. 15).—Dupre, a French Canadian of about thirty-five, with a childlike faith in the efficacy of prayer, prays fervently to God to spare his wife to him. His wife, however, dies, and Dupre renounces his God and becomes a blasphemer. Some time later, the good Father Ladelle, on his way to the village, loses his way in the storm and seeks shelter with Dupre. This is denied him.

(Continued on page 568.)

LOOK! READ! THINK!

GOLDREYER AMUSEMENT CO., INC.
220 West 42nd St., New York
Jan. 4, 1915.

Mr. P. J. Murphy, Mirroroide Screen Co.
Sir—I have installed your screen in all my theatres throughout Greater New York, and found them to be the best of all. Can not recommend them highly enough. With best wishes for a prosperous new year. (Signed) CHARLES A. GOLDREYER, Pres. (Rae Amusement Corp.)

The above testimonial is not from an unknown, in an out-of-the-way place, but from the president of a large business corporation, located in a city where competition is keen, and to be successful the exhibitor must take advantage of every opportunity. MIRROROIDE is the opportunity. Prove it by sending for large free samples.

THE J. H. GENTER COMPANY, INC., Newburgh, N. Y.

NOTICE!—All infringers will be prosecuted.

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending January 23 and 30

Current Releases

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Undying Fire (Drama).
EDISON—To Make the Nation Prosper (Drama).
ESSANAY—Sweedie and Her Dog (Comedy).
KALEM—The Leech (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Patsy Bolivar Series, No. 4, "Patsy's Vacation" (Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 5, 1915 (News).
SELIG—His Fighting Blood (Special—Two parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 5, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Fates and Flora Fourflush, "A Race for Life," Part Three of the "Ten Billion Dollar Vitagraph Mystery" Serial (Comedy).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Lady of Dreams (Special—Two parts—Drama).
EDISON—Olive's Manufactured Mother (Ninth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series (Drama).
ESSANAY—The Misjudged Mr. Hartley (Comedy—Drama).
KALEM—Cornelius and the Wild Man (Comedy).
—A Night in New Jersey (Cartoon—Comedy).
LUBIN—Gus and the Anarchists (Comedy).
—Cupid's Target (Comedy).
SELIG—Cactus Jim's Shop Girl (Western—Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Evil Men Do (Broadway Star Feature—Three parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1915.

EDISON—The Wonders of Magnetism (Educational).
—A Weighty Matter for a Detective (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "Hifaluting Tillie and Her Plain Parents" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Cabaret Singer (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Her Weakling Brothers (Special—Two parts—Dr.).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 6, 1915 (News).
SELIG—Between Matinee and Night (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Right Girl (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Gang's New Member (Drama).
ESSANAY—Sentimental Sophie (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—The Shanghaied Baby (Special—Three parts—Dr.).
MINA—Dare-Devil Harry (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 6, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Navajo Ring (Drama).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Heart's Hunger (Drama).
EDISON—Tracked by the Hounds (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—The Lieutenant Governor (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—Cooky's Adventure (Comedy).
LUBIN—A Question of Conscience (Drama).
SELIG—Who Wants to Be a Hero? (Farce-Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—Wanted, a Nurse (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—His Night Out (Comedy).
—In the Boarding House (Comedy).
EDISON—Mr. Daly's Wedding Day (Drama).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Baby (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Fast Mail's Danger (Eleventh of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—Shoddy, the Tailor (Comedy).
SELIG—The Primitive Way (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—War (Special—Two parts—Comedy).

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JANUARY 25, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Diogenes' Weekly, No. 23 (Comedy).
—The Boob and the Baker (Comedy).
EDISON—Joey and His Trombone (Comedy).
ESSANAY—Two Hearts That Beat as Ten (Comedy).
KALEM—The Tragedy of Bear Mountain (Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—Patsy Bolivar, Series No. 5, "Patsy in Business" (Comedy).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 7, 1915 (News).
SELIG—The Spirit of the Violin (Special—Two parts—Drama).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 7, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Slightly Worn Gown (Comedy).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—File 113 (Special—Two parts—Drama).
EDISON—Olive in the Madhouse (Tenth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
ESSANAY—At the End of a Perfect Day (Drama).
KALEM—A Model Wife (Comedy).
—Fatty's Echo (Comedy).
LUBIN—Green Backs and Red Skins (Comedy).
SELIG—The Grizzly Gulch Chariot Race (Farce-Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Life of Game (Special—Two-parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1915.

EDISON—The Terrible Trunk (Comedy).
—Lodgings for Two (Comedy).
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Syndicate Lover" (Comedy).
KALEM—The Affair of the Deserted House (First Episode of "The Girl Detective" Series—Special—Two parts—Drama).
LUBIN—The Attorney for the Defense (Special—Three parts—Drama).
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 8, 1915 (News).
SELIG—Heart's Desire (Drama).
VITAGRAPH—The Home Coming of Henry (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Milady's Boudoir (Drama).
ESSANAY—When Slippery Slim Bought the Cheese (Western—Comedy).
LUBIN—In Her Mother's Footsteps (Special—Two parts—Drama).
MINA—Black and White (Comedy).
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 8, 1915 (News).
VITAGRAPH—The Barrier of Faith (Drama).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—Her Slumbering Conscience (Drama).
EDISON—An Invitation and an Attack (Special—Two parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—The Ambition of the Baron (Special—Two parts—Drama).
KALEM—The Cause of It All (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Language of the Dumb (Drama).
SELIG—She Wanted to Be a Widow (Farce-Comedy).
VITAGRAPH—The Chief's Goat (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1915.

BIOGRAPH—The Dancer's Ruse (Drama).
EDISON—In His Father's Footsteps (Educational).
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the False Note (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Drama).
KALEM—The Little Engineer (Twelfth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).
LUBIN—Another Shade of Green (Comedy).
SELIG—The Hunt in Sycamore Gap (Melodrama).
VITAGRAPH—Under the Paint (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Drama).

THE FIVE BIOGRAPHS

The policy of producing Biograph pictures up to a standard of quality rather than down to a limit of cost is the reason for the success of THE FIVE BIOGRAPHS.

For descriptions of all Biograph releases read THE BIOGRAPH mailed free each week.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY
807 EAST 175TH STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Releases for Weeks Ending January 23 and 30.

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 17, 1915.

ECLAIR—Romance in Bear Creek (Western—Drama).
L-KO—Caught with the Goods (Comedy).
REX—A Small Town Girl (Two parts—Human—Interest—Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

IMP—On Dangerous Ground (Comedy—Drama).
JOKER—The Hicktown Rivals (Comedy).
VICTOR—Father's Three (Two parts—Comedy—Drama).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1915.

BIG "U"—The Dear Old Hypocrite (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—Smugglers' Island (Two parts—Sea Coast—Drama).
NESTOR—When Cupid Caught a Thief (Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 150 (News).
ECLAIR—The Lone Game (Two parts—Western—Drama).
L-KO—Every Inch a Hero (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1915.

BIG "U"—Their Island of Happiness (Two parts—Drama).
REX—Children of Chance (Drama).
STERLING—Dude Raffles (Comedy).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915.

IMP—The House of Fear (Three parts—Melodrama).
NESTOR—When the Deacon Swore (Comedy).
VICTOR—No Release This Week.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1915.

BISON—Old Peg-Leg's Will (Two parts—Mining—Drama).
JOKER—Fools and Pajamas (Comedy).
POWERS—Uncle Sam's Phenomenal Achievement, The Panama Canal (Educational).

SUNDAY, JANUARY 24, 1915.

ECLAIR—The Clue of the Portrait (Drama).
L-KO—The Death of Simon La Gree (Comedy).
REX—The Temptation of Edwin Swayne (Two parts—Drama).

MONDAY—JANUARY 25, 1915.

IMP—How Mary Fixed It (Comedy).
JOKER—The Magic Mirror (Comedy).
—Views of Holland (Educational).
VICTOR—His Guardian Angel (Two parts—Domestic—Drama).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1915.

BIG "U"—Alias Mr. Smith (Drama).
GOLD SEAL—The Madcap Queen of Gredshoffen (Two parts—Drama).
NESTOR—When Eddie Took a Bath (Comedy).
—A Mile a Minute Ride (Educational).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1915.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 151 (News).
ECLAIR—Cancelled (Two parts—Western—Drama).
L-KO—Merry Mary's Marriage (Comedy).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1915.

BIG "U"—The Unmasking (Drama).
REX—The Measure of a Man (Two parts—Canadian—N. W. M. P.—Drama).
STERLING—Treasure Seekers (Comedy).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915.

IMP—The Millionaire Engineer (Two parts—R. R.—Drama).
NESTOR—Jed's Little Elopement (Comedy).
VICTOR—How She Fooled Aunty (Comedy—Drama).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1915.

BISON—The Mystery Woman (Two parts—Western—Drama).
JOKER—He Fell in Love with His Mother-in-Law (Comedy).
POWERS—The Crime of Thought (Drama).

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JANUARY 17, 1915.

KOMIC—A Flyer in Spring Water (No. 15 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy).
MAJESTIC—What Might Have Been (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—A Yellowstone Honeymoon (Scenic—Dr).

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1915.

AMERICAN—Refining Fires (Two parts—Sociological Drama).
KEYSTONE—Mabel's and Fatty's Simple Life (Two parts—Comedy).
RELIANCE—Mutual Monographs No. 1 "With Julian Street and Wallace Morgan" (Topical).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1915.

BEAUTY—A Girl and Two Boys (Comedy—Drama).
MAJESTIC—On the Table Top (Drama).
THANHOUSER—Graft vs. Love (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1915.

AMERICAN—The Crucifixion of Al Brady (Western—Dr.).
BRONCHO—A Lucky Blowout (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Sea Brat (Drama).

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1915.

DOMINO—The Still on Sunset Mountain (Two parts—Dr.).
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Announced).
MUTUAL—Weekly, No. 3 (News).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915.

KAY-BEE—Sergeant Jim's Horse (Drama).
KAY BEE—The Man Who Died (Drama).
PRINCESS—An Innocent Burglar (Comedy—Drama).
RELIANCE—After Twenty Years (Drama).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1915.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Announced).
RELIANCE—The Craven (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—Her Hero (Comedy).

SUNDAY, JANUARY 24, 1915.

KOMIC—A Flurry in Art (Comedy).
MAJESTIC—The Better Man (Two parts—Western Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Dog Catcher's Bride (Comedy—Drama).

MONDAY, JANUARY 25, 1915.

AMERICAN—Silence (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—(Title not announced.)
RELIANCE—The World Upstairs (Drama).

TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1915.

BEAUTY—Evan's Lucky Day (Comedy—Drama).
MAJESTIC—The Broken Lullaby (Drama).
THANHOUSER—Finger Prints of Fate (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1915.

AMERICAN—Coals of Fire (Drama).
BRONCHO—The Gun Fighter (Two parts—Drama).
RELIANCE—The Express Messenger (Drama).

THURSDAY JANUARY 28, 1915.

DOMINO—Through the Murk (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—(Title not announced.)
MUTUAL—Weekly No. 4 (News).

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915.

KAY-BEE—The Bottomless Pit (Drama).
KAY-BEE—The Famine (Drama).
PRINCESS—The Home of Silence (Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Volunteer Fireman (Comedy).

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1915.

KEYSTONE—(Title not announced.)
RELIANCE—The Love Pirate (Two parts—Drama).
ROYAL—Ring Around Rosey (Comedy).

Simplex

PRESS AGENTS

No matter what article you have for exploitation to the public, one needs publicity in order to popularize one's wares.

Our Press Agent is our host of satisfied customers, and they earn for us thousands of dollars yearly by means of their words of commendation of our Simplex Projector.

As evidencing the general high regard in which the

Simplex
TRADE MARK PAT'D

projector is held, one of our friends only recently wrote us as follows:

"Precision Machine Co., "484 Twentieth Street,
317 East 34th Street, "Oakland, California.
New York City, N. Y.

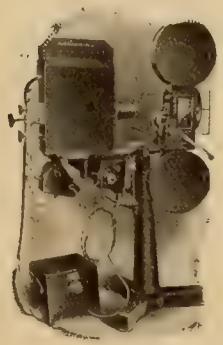
Gentlemen:

We have run a Simplex for eighteen months, and no repairs. Don't see how a machine could be better. Very respectfully yours,

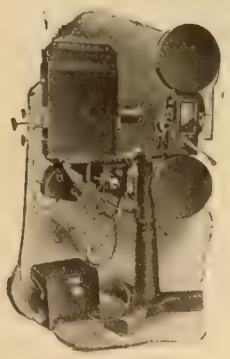
(Signed) MATTHEWS & OGBURN, DIAMOND PHOTOPLAY."

What better Press Agent could one want?

You should install a Simplex projector. We are sure you would make us a good Press Agent.



The Peerless Projector



MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

(Continued from page 563.)

On May Day, during the festival of the Virgin, he refuses to allow Fanchette, his little daughter, to attend the devotions. That night Fanchette has a vision of the Virgin smiling sadly at her and asking her if she has no flowers to offer. Fanchette goes to church without the knowledge of her father, taking with her a few faded flowers for the Virgin. Her father is out in the forest and thinks Fanchette is at home in bed. A big storm comes up and Dupre's cabin is struck by lightning. Dupre rushes home for his little daughter, but finds his home in flames and on Fanchette's bed a blackened cross. He is dazed and rushes out into the storm. As he passes the church the voices of the little children singing attracts him and he goes in. He is so overcome with joy at finding Fanchette there safe and happy that he kneels in a praper of thanksgiving to God.

BRONCHO.

A LUCKY BLOWOUT (Two Parts—Jan. 20).—Annie Crum, a country girl, dissatisfied with country life and anxious to go to the city, runs away from her uncle guardian and country lover and goes to the city. She loves John Harding, her country lover, but has told him that she could never be contented with the drudgery of the farm. A country book agent sells Annie an illustrated book of city life which fires her ambition to make her fortune in the city.

She goes to the city and becomes a salesgirl in one of the department stores. Being "green" and inexperienced, she only gets $4 a week. These slender wages barely support her. Annie makes a friend of a girl at the next counter. She wonders how her friend can dress so well, live so well and have so much money to spend when she knows that they both get the same salary. Annie's girl friend finally satisfies her curiosity and tells her that she has chosen "the easiest way." Shocked and angry Annie snubs the girl and for the time refuses to have anything to do with her.

Annie is unable to meet her room rent and finally finds herself slowly starving and friendless in the big city. She remembers her friend and finally makes up her mind to follow her example. She makes up with the girl friend who forgives her and promises to introduce Annie to a "swell young guy."

Sunday night, Annie and Ruth and the two men leave in a machine for a country road house. Annie refuses to drink with them and repulses the attentions of her escort. Her eyes are opened to the peril and she is only too glad to start back to the city. As they are passing a country church a front tire blows out. Annie hears the church choir singing "Rock of Ages." She sneaks from the machine and seeks a refuge in the church. Unable to find Annie her friends return to the city without her.

The following day Annie returns to the country village and is eagerly welcomed by her people. John tells her he will sell the farm and take her to the city to live, but, sobered by her experience, Annie shakes her head and tells him "I think we will be happier on the farm, John."

FEATURE FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE

THE MASTER KEY (Episode 9—Two Parts—Released Week of Jan. 18).—John Dore, Tom Kane and Ruth Gallon arrives in Los Angeles from San Francisco and go to the Beverly Hills Hotel for a few days' rest. Harry Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell also arrive in the city and discover that the deeds to the Master Key Mine, which they secured from the ashman in San Francisco, are worthless to them because no conveyance of the property has been made out. Wilkerson forgets this and they then take steps to seize the mine. Wilkerson wires Drake in San Francisco to go to Silent Valley and represent him there until further notice. He also sends word to the engineer at the mine that Dore is no longer in the company's employ and to recognize the authority of Drake until he can reach the property.

At the Beverley Hills Hotel, Ruth meets a young Englishman, heir to a title, who is somewhat of a fortune seeker. He is a new type to her and his breeding and sartorial good taste makes an impression on the young girl. She is not infatuated although John Dore is led to believe that she is, and as a consequence a slight coldness arises between them which neither can explain to the other.

Everett follows them from San Francisco to continue his work of raising money to develop the mine, but shows them that he can do nothing unless they secure the deeds of ownership. They, therefore, begin tracking Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell. With a few hundred dollars, which Everett has loaned Dore, the latter repays his debt to Tom Kane and sends him to Silent Valley to care for the starving miners. Kane finds the mine in the possession of Drake. Kane wires Dore, who leaves at once for Los Angeles with Ruth, arriving at the mine the next day.

An open war follows, Wilkerson hurrying to the scene of action on hearing from Drake that trouble is brewing. Without any trouble Dore drives off the intruders and prepares for further attacks. Wilkerson returns with a band of Mexicans from the southern part of the state and opens on Dore and his followers. Many miners and Mexicans are killed in the battle which rages all over the property. Ruth has a narrow escape but is again saved by Dore.

In a hand-to-hand fight Wilkerson is thrown from a high trestle down the side of an ore dump. Dore fears that he has killed Wilkerson but in the gathering darkness cannot make sure.

THE MASTER KEY (Episode Ten—Two Parts—Rel. Wk. of Jan. 25).—At the end of Episode Nine of this serial it will be remembered that John Dore throws Wilkerson from a high trestle to the foot of an ore dump near the mine. Wilkerson, although fearfully bruised, revives and drags himself to a spot where he is found by his Mexican hirelings.

The Governor of the State, upon the request of the local sheriff, sends a troop of State cavalry to quell the disturbance at the mine. The captain of the company sends for the two leaders and demands an explanation. Both claim ownership of the mine, Dore on behalf of Ruth and Wilkerson for himself.

The officer places the camp under martial law and gives the opposing leaders the liberty or the village. Dore accuses Wilkerson of abduction and forgery, but the captain and the sheriff are officially powerless to make an arrest. Dore thereupon sends Tom Kane to the nearest county seat to swear out a warrant for Wilkerson's arrest.

Dore lives meanwhile at his own house and Ruth in her old home where she is chaperoned by one of the miner's wives. Wilkerson bunks in one of the miner's cabins. Dore thinks the situation is serious enough to warrant his opening a letter left in his care by Tom Gallon which was to be opened on Ruth's eighteenth birthday or prior to that date should her welfare be threatened. Dore opens the letter which reads as follows:

Silent Valley, Cal., June 20, 1914.

Little Girl

Read carefully what I now write. On this depends your future welfare.

The Master Key mine discovered by me five years ago contains a mother lode of inestimable worth. The exact location of the lode is written on a slip of paper which I placed in the head of an Indian idol, hidden in an old sea chest which sank on the ship on which I was wrecked.

On the Master Key, the key to that chest which you wear on your neck, is carved the latitude and longitude where the vessel went down. Find that slip of paper and wealth is yours.

Your devoted daddy,
JOHN GALLON.

In opening the letter with a paper knife, Dore accidentally cuts the letter into two parts. He pieces it together in reading it but in putting the letter into his pocket a part containing the last paragraph drops on the floor. One of Wilkerson's henchmen, who has been instructed to shadow Dore, sees this through the window and when Dore goes out, enters the house and picks up the paper.

The Mexican hurries with this part of the letter to Wilkerson and the latter, who always realized that the mine was not located correctly, is elated at the discovery. His next move is to get the key from Ruth. Dore starts to read the letter to Ruth and discovers that half of it is gone. Although he makes a careful search he fails to find it.

MENGER & RING
304 W. 42nd Street, NEW YORK
Telephone, Bryant 6621

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 5 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc. 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

EXHAUST AND OSCILLATING FANS
For alternating current, 110 volts, 60 cycles.
16-in. Westinghouse oscillating.....Each, $15
16-in. Westinghouse exhaust.....Each, 15
18-in. Westinghouse exhaust.....Each, 50
22-in. Westinghouse exhaust.....Each, 70
All New, Fully Guaranteed
GEO. BENDER, 130 Centre St., New York

THE CATALOGUE OF BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
contains much that is valuable about electric lighting in general, and moving picture work in particular. Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

SAVE 35%
ON YOUR CARBONS
BURN YOUR STUBS WITH A
Carbon Economizer

Fits any lamp, gives perfect contact and conductivity, screw does not come in contact with carbon and will not weld to body of economizer. Pat. Applied for SIMPLE and PRACTICAL
OVER 3000 IN USE
"MECHANICALLY CORRECT"
Guaranteed to give satisfaction
$1.25 Each — Sizes ¼"-⅜"-¾" — $2.00 Set—Any Sizes
Sent Postpaid upon receipt of New York draft, money order or cash.
THE CARBON ECONOMIZER CO.
540 Gurney Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.

Frank H. Clark
DIRECTOR, PEERLESS CO.

WANTED
Two Old Power's No. 5 or No. 6 Heads
Condition no object if price is right. State all in first letter.
W. C. McGUIRE
220 N. State St. Chicago, Ill.

—If you want Bigger Box Office Receipts

Book Every Thanhouser Release During 1915!

Released Exclusively Through the Mutual Film Corporation In the United States and Canada

THREE-REELS-A-WEEK

Sunday, January 24th, "The Dog Catcher's Bride." A one-reel comedy-drama. The cast includes Riley Chamberlin, Fan Bourke and Morgan Jones.

Tuesday, January 26th, "Finger Prints of Fate." A two-reel drama in which Florence LaBadie is featured with Sidney Bracy, Arthur Bauer, Harris Gordon and Riley Chamberlin.

PRINCESS FILMS

Friday, January 22nd, "An Innocent Burglar." A one-reel drama of exceptional merit featuring Boyd Marshall and Reenie Farrington.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, New Rochelle, New York

The Million Dollar Mystery can be booked at any Mutual Exchange in America

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

ALL ABOARD!

True to scheduled time, the second section of the Kriterion Special has arrived at "Decision Junction." The train is crowded with those people who were sent out with our ship and returned laden with public favor. It is time for you to hop on and join this crowd on their trip to "Co-Operative Land." Those people who have been held up on that local at this Junction have their objective point in common, that is, good stories, good photography and co-operation. They have come to the conclusion that there is only one thing to do to accomplish their ends and that one thing is to get on the "Special" with the rest of the real crowd and go by the most direct and surest way:—via KRITERION ROUTE.

Do not linger or hesitate, get on now. You will go to the land of no regrets.

KRITERION SERVICE

Sixth Floor

1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

"Decidedly" KP "Distinctive"

Confidential Chat

Let us forget pictures for a moment and go back to the old days of '49. Great tales came from the West that gold had been found. People were crazed with the idea that all they had to do was to go into the "wild and wooly" and get their fortune. They found out to their sorrow (many of them) that this was not the case. They began to plan and scheme to accomplish their end by some means or other. This led to all sorts of complications. There were some men who had brains and tact, and they decided that they must band together with the right kind of men, secure the right kind of implements, work with and share among each and every one the spoils. We see today in our great mining districts these same men, who laid this great foundation, still there; the machinery in good working order, and all those concerned receiving their just remunerations.

Now, let us take the moving picture business. When pictures first came into vogue people were led to believe that all they had to do was to hang out their shingle as a manufacturer of films and produce some kind of film and their fortune was assured. This was not the case, however, and they in turn began to plan and scheme to get the "big stuff" without laying their foundations. This great industry has reached the point where a solid foundation must be laid—each and every one concerned to receive his share.

Kriterion has built its policies along these lines. We have constructed our organization on sound business principles; organized our producing companies with men who can produce film; secured the services of talent that is the best in the country. Put on a service of film that has good stories, good photography, able talent and directed by the best producing men in the business.

This service is put out at the right price, and you will receive your share of the returns along with the rest.

The organization is here; the time is ripe; the people are craving for it; and you, as an exhibitor, want it. Now, do not delay—you can't afford it. We have the goods, and you want them. Get in touch at once with our nearest exchange and secure the service now, because it is the one you will eventually use.

YOUR DEMAND HAS BEEN GRANTED

KRITERION CITIES

NEW YORK	BUFFALO	ST. LOUIS	INDIANAPOLIS	SEATTLE
PHILADELPHIA	DALLAS	DETROIT	KANSAS CITY	DENVER
BOSTON	ATLANTA	CLEVELAND	SAN FRANCISCO	MINNEAPOLIS
PITTSBURGH	CHICAGO	CINCINNATI	LOS ANGELES	MONTREAL
		WINNIPEG

Baltimore	Wilkes-Barre	Evansville	Louisville	Phoenix
Newark	Columbus	Springfield	Wichita	Portland
Syracuse	Charlestown	Des Moines	Omaha	Vancouver, B. C.
Albany	Fort Wayne	New Orleans	Salt Lake City	Toronto
				St. Johns

KRITERION SERVICE

Sixth Floor

1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

RELEASES—Week of January 18, 1915

Dramas in Two Reels

THE CRYSTAL GLOBE

Paragon

Featuring Dorothy Davenport and Lee Hill.
Directed by Donald MacDonald.

A two-reel drama in which the mystic globe tells a beautiful story full of love and life.

BIRTH OF EMOTION

Alhambra

Featuring Miss Marty Martin.
Directed by Henry Otto.

A beautiful picturization of primitive life with its settings in nature's beauty spots.

GOADED BY JEALOUSY

Santa Barbara

Featuring Fritzi Brunette, Edward Alexander and little Margaret Sheppling.
Directed by Bob Daly.

A true to life drama in which a husband's unfounded jealousy nearly wrecks the life of a happy home.

THE CALL OF THE SEA

Monty

Featuring Rena Valdez and Roy Bennington.
Directed by Henry Otto.

A beautiful story of fishermen's love in a human life drama taken on the Pacific coast.

ELIZA'S FAIRY PRINCE

Trump

Featuring Justina Wayne and Craufurd Kent.
Directed by Alex. Frank.

A household slavey inherits a fortune with a proviso that she must marry. The meeting of her prince and their tribulations is told in a beautiful drama.

JOE'S PARTNER, BILL

Navajo

Featuring Lucille Younge and Wallace MacDonald.
Directed by Chas. K. French.

A truly Western story without the embellishments of Indians. Full of love and character. You will love Joe's Partner—BILL.

Comedies in One Reel

AND PERCY GOT MARRIED

Santa Barbara

Featuring Mary Ruby, Harry Fisher and Sidney DeGray.
Directed by Bert Angeles.

The first release of a series of delightful comedies.

THE BOOB'S RACING CAREER

Thistle

Featuring Rena Rogers and Frank Moore.
Directed by Bruce Mitchell.

A funny story of a Boob who buys an automobile and is induced to enter the big race. You will enjoy seeing him "win."

THE TATOOED MAN

Monty

Featuring Tom Ward
Directed by Alex. Frank.

A comedy which purports the wanderings of a tatooed maniac who causes all ends of trouble.

BLOWN UPON

Punch

Featuring Robert Roberts.
Directed by Alex. Frank.

"Rigidal" is a patent medicine which petrifies those upon whom the fumes are blown. The inventor uses it in an amusing way in this side-splitting comedy.

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN

Pyramid

A comedy in which a suffragette shows her worth.

ZOOLOGICAL

Nolege

An educational subject picturing the lives and habits of various animals.

BEATING FATHER TO IT

Alhambra

Featuring Rena Valdez.
Directed by Sidney DeGray.

A good, clean comedy, full of excitement and funny situations, in which the old man has one put over on him.

Drama Specials—Ones, Threes and Sixes Comedies—Two Styles of Ones Heralds and Photographs

Yes, it's a program of regular film service.

KRITERION

Say you, Mr. Skeptical, these are productions that are on film and not on paper. Made by hard labor, real money and brains of experienced men, whose ability and training are ample proofs that they know what the patrons of theatres want.

Coming Releases

Now on Hand

"Prejudice Conquered"
Paragon Drama

"Billy Studies Music"
Santa Barbara Comedy

"Curse of the Black Pearl"
Alhambra Drama

"Won by a Mustache"
Thistle Comedy

"Arm of the Law"
Santa Barbara Drama

"His Double Did It"
C K Comedy

"Falsely Accused"
Monty Drama

"Domestic Revolution"
Punchinello Comedy

"The New Sheriff"
Trump Drama

"A Disappointed Suitor"
Thistle Comedy

"Environment"
Navajo Drama

"Syd's Masterpiece"
C K Comedy

"Keeper of the Flock"
Santa Barbara Drama

"Billy Put One Over"
Santa Barbara Comedy

"When is a Cousin"
Alhambra Comedy

"Beating Father to It"
Alhambra Comedy

"Sherlock, the Boob Detective"
Thistle Comedy

"Gratitude"
Paragon Drama

"A Man for A' That"
Punchinello Comedy

"The Cure"
Trump Drama

"A Wonderful Lamp"
Pyramid Comedy

"Cotton Industry"
Nolege Educational

"Thoughts of Tonight"
Navajo Drama

"Paris Hat"
Alhambra Comedy

"Adventurer"
Paragon Drama

"Billy Now a Medico"
Santa Barbara Comedy

"Syd's Love Affair"
C K Comedy

"One Night"
Pyramid Comedy

"Winter Resorts"
Nolege Educational

"Nevada"
Navajo Drama

"Poor Little Rich Man"
Alhambra Comedy

"$500 Reward"
Paragon Drama

"Billy Made Good"
Santa Barbara Comedy

"Boob's Elopement"
Thistle Comedy

"Back of the Shadow"
Santa Barbara Drama

"Capturing Stella"
C K Comedy

"The Witness"
Paragon Drama

"Billy Gets Tangled"
Santa Barbara Comedy

"The Bigot"
Paragon Drama

"She's a Cousin of Mine"
Thistle Comedy

"Billy Cops a Speeder"
Santa Barbara Comedy

"Frank's Nightmare"
Thistle Comedy

"Skein of Life"
Paragon Drama

All Dramas in Two Reels—All Comedies in One Reel

These are not merely names of subjects, but films that are completed and being shipped daily for your use.

KRITERION

You Know Them

A. M. Kennedy, General Manager of Productions

Santa Barbara Motion Picture Co.

Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dramatic Company—Santa Barbara Brand

William Robert Daly, Director
Fritzi Brunette
Edward Alexander
John Dillon
Jack Prescott
Florine Garland

Crown City Film Mfg. Co.

Pasadena, Calif.

Comedy Company—Thistle Brand

Bruce Mitchell, Director
Allen Fralick
Rena Rogers
Frank Moore

Santa Barbara Motion Picture Co.

Santa Barbara, Calif.

Comedy Company—Santa Barbara Brand

Bert Angeles, Director
Mary Ruby
Harry Fisher, Jr.

Monty Film Company

Los Angeles, Calif.

Dramatic Company—Monty Brand

Frank Montgomery, Director
Mona Darkfeather
Frederick Bartlett

Crown City Film Mfg. Co.

Pasadena, Calif.

Dramatic Company—Paragon Brand

Donald MacDonald, Director
Dorothy Davenport
Jack Livingston
Benj. Horning
Dixie Stuart
Lee Hill
Rupert Julian

All Comedy Films, Inc.

New York City, N. Y.

Dramatic Company—Trump Brand

Alex Frank, Director
Justina Wayne
Craufurd Kent
William Cowper

Alhambra Film Mfg. Co.

Santa Barbara, Calif.

Comedy Company—Alhambra Brand

Sidney De Gray, Director
Sidney De Gray
Marty Martin
Smythe Addison

C K Film Company

Santa Barbara, Calif.

Comedy Company C K Brand

Robert Burns and Walter Stull, Co-Directors and Co-Leads Peggy Paige

Alhambra Film Mfg. Co.

Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dramatic Company—Alhambra Brand

A. M. Kennedy, Director
Rena Valdez
Roy Bennington

Navajo Film Mfg. Co.

Los Angeles, Calif.

Dramatic Company Navajo Brand

Charles K. French, Director
Lucille Younge
Wallace MacDonald
Helen K. French

All Comedy Films, Inc.

New York City, N. Y.

Comedy Company—Punchinello Brand

Alex Frank, Director
Tom Ward
William Thorne
Katherine Sheldon

Pyramid Film Co.

Flushing, N.

Comedy Company—Pyramid Brand

Arthur Hill, Director
Elizabeth Baker
Philip Nares

Nolege Brand Educational

H. D. Blauvelt, Director

KRITERION

Dore tells Ruth what the letter contained and copies from the key she wears the numerals so crudely carved by her father five years before and which always have been a puzzle to her. That night the "greaser" steals the key from Ruth's neck and takes it to Wilkerson. Wilkerson leaves camp at once but is pursued to the mine entrance and its caverns by Dore's men.

Eluding his pursuers he escapes through the caverns of the mine through a secret opening at the back of the cliff. With a rope he drops over the ledge and lowers himself downward. The soldiers seize the rope and are about to haul Wilkerson up when he drops, lands unscathed in a bush and hurries away. Jumping a freight, he lands in San Diego, secures the services of a diver, wires Mrs. Darnell to join him and then sets out for the sunken ship.

Dore, meanwhile, leaves for San Pedro with Ruth, leaving word for Kane to remain in charge of affairs at the mine. At the port of Los Angeles, Dore secures a boat and diver with a hoisting apparatus. Dore and Wilkerson approach the latitude and longitude indicated on "The Master Key" at about the same time.

Wilkerson's diver is already down on the sea bottom when Dore's diver puts on his harness and sinks into the waves. Wilkerson's party attempts to prevent the diver from going to work, but Dore and his men hold them back with their rifles and revolvers. Wilkerson's diver finds the chest and it is hauled upward just as Dore's diver crawls along the sea bottom toward him.

WORLD FILM CORP.

THE DEEP PURPLE (Five Parts).—Doris Moore is the daughter of a minister living at a small country town a few hours' distance from New York. She helps her father in his work among his congregation, teaches in the Sunday school and plays the weezy old organ in the church.

The household is thrown into a mild state of excitement on receipt of a letter purporting to come from an organ supply company in New York, but which in reality is from a band of crooks who use this as one of the fraudulent schemes whereby they obtain money from the unwary. The letter offers to supply a beautiful pipe organ on receipt of an installment of one-third of the cost, the balance to be paid on time. The matter is laid before the deacons and they decide to consider the offer. The minister writes to the organ company and the chief of the crooks, Harry Leland, a handsome, dashing man of the world, arrives and explains in glowing terms the advantages of the organ. While waiting for the deacons to collect the first installment of two hundred dollars, Leland pays considerable attention to Doris, who is much fascinated by him, representing as he does a totally different type of man to what she has been used to.

In the meantime, the crooks in New York have received information from out West that Will Lake, a young eastern college man who in two years has made a fortune of fifty thousand dollars is returning east, and will stay in New York for a week. They decide to try to blackmail Lake on his arrival and at once communicate with Leland, who replies that he will return immediately as soon as he gets the organ money. Leland has become attracted by the freshness and beauty of Doris and decides to lure her to New York and then make use of her in the crooks' nefarious schemes. He protests violent love for her and proposes marriage, and Doris consents.

Immediately after receiving the two hundred dollars from the deacons, he approaches Doris as she leaves Sunday school and with well simulated despair tells her he has received very bad news and that he is threatened with ruin and begs her to go to New York with him as she alone can save him. After much persuasion, Doris' scruples are overcome and she returns with Leland who takes her to the boarding house run by 'Frisco Kate, a house which is used by the crooks as a meeting place.

It is decided to have Doris act as a decoy and to get Lake to visit a flat which has been prepared beforehand. She is therefore told that Lake has defrauded her lover Leland of a considerable sum of money and that if he could be seen, things might be arranged satisfactorily. She is told to speak to Lake, who will be pointed out to her in the hotel, and tell him that her mother who has friends in Goldfield wishes to ask his advice about mining stock.

The plan succeeds and Lake unsuspectingly goes to the flat and while alone with Doris, Leland with two other crooks rush in and accuse him of being in a compromising position with Doris whom he calls his wife, much to her amazement, and says that Lake must pay in money to avoid scandal. Lake intuitively feels that Doris is innocent and refuses. A furious fight ensues in which Lake is knocked unconscious, robbed of all his money and locked in the room, the crooks making good their escape with Doris, whom they take to their hiding place.

Their plans are defeated, however, by one of their own band, Laylock and 'Frisco Kate, who, hardened crooks, though they have been, refused to be parties to the dragging down of an innocent girl. They release Lake and go along with him to the police and lead a raid on the crooks' hiding place who are all captured and receive their just deserts.

Doris meets her father at the police station, he having come to New York to trace her. Lake, who is much interested in them, invites them to his hotel to meet his mother and sister. There is a pretty ending to the story when Will Lake, who to celebrate his good fortune and has made the church a present of a beautiful organ, pays a visit to Doris and her father, and a love romance, the seeds of which were set when she innocently acted as a decoy, is happily consummated.

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

ZUDORA (Episode Nine—Reels Seventeen and Eighteen—"Kidnapped; or the Mystery of the Missing Heiress").—Soon after Zudora's thrilling escape from the clutches of Chang, the Chinese hypnotists, in which John Storm and the mysterious Jim Baird played no small part, the sudden, strange disappearance of a child, destined to inherit millions, became the talk of the town. Zudora, like every one else, became interested in the case and determined if possible to solve it, although her uncle, Hassam Ali, busied himself with other things, often being mysteriously absent from the house for days at a time.

It was at this time that a certain Madame Duval, the beautiful, but somewhat mysterious woman, who was in the confidence of Chang in Episode Eight, was introduced to Zudora. Oddly enough, the girl, having been under Chang's hypnotic influence at the time, did not recall ever having seen her. Feeling a strange attraction for her new acquaintance, Zudora returned her call, although had Jim Baird known of it, the friendship of the two might have awakened some misgivings in his breast, for he evidently distrusts the charming fair one.

During Zudora's visit at Madame Duval's she was much puzzled at the coming and going of many strange guests, the mysterious conferences held and the frequency with which her hostess was called away. It was during one of these absences, that Zudora idly glanced at a newspaper on the table before her. An item in the personal column caught her eye and her fertile brain did the rest. Hardly waiting to say goodbye to Madame Duval she sets forth on what she believes is a clue to the whereabouts of the missing child. Nor is she far off the scent, for the hint she had received from the "personal" leads her to a deserted freight caboose in a little used railroad siding. Listening at the door she overhears the kidnappers discussing plans to get their victim in a safer place.

In the meantime Jim Baird has also been investigating certain clues which have come into his possession. John Storm, also, informed by Zudora in a hasty note, of what she has learned, begins an investigation on his own account. Thus all three are eagerly hunting for the missing heiress. But it is Zudora who first learns the whereabouts of the stolen child. Watching her opportunity, she is about to liberate the little one, when three members of the gang, returning suddenly and finding her, seize both Zudora and their captive and imprison them in the old caboose, where Zudora had first overheard their plans.

Meanwhile Madame Duval, who has some mysterious connection with the forces that are opposing Zudora, becomes worried at the delay in bringing her plans to a successful issue. Acting under instructions evidently, the gang are seen placing an infernal machine in car filled with gunpowder, which is next to the old caboose in which Zudora and the kidnapped child are imprisoned. An engine hooks up with the train and slowly moves off, hauling the caboose with it. In a few moments the explosion is certain to take place and it seems that nothing can save the kidnappers' victims, unable to get out, from being blown to atoms.

But it is not to be. Jim Baird, who by some psychological instinct or perhaps because he is never really out of touch with Zudora's doings, always seems to be on hand at the time of Zudora's direst need, appears on the scene, just as the train is starting. Instinctively, he seems to sense the danger. Running swiftly forward, he makes a flying leap upon the rods at the side of one of the freight cars, climbs upon the roof of the powder car and makes his way to the caboose. He sees Zudora's terrified face at the window. Clambering down between the cars he uncouples the caboose from the train. And not an instant too soon. For hardly has the train gone half a city block before there is a tremendous explosion and the powder car disappears in a great cloud of white smoke.

It is but the work of a moment for Baird to batter in the door of the caboose and assist the frightened Zudora and her helpless companion to the ground. He dashes into the caboose again, hoping to find some evidence against the kidnappers. He has hardly finished his hurried search, when there is a sudden explosion.

Down the track comes running John Storm, too late to aid his sweetheart and frantic with apprehension. He comes up just in time to see Zudora and her little charge descend from the caboose and the next instant he holds her close in his arms. When they turn to thank Jim Baird, the man to whose heroism and resourcefulness they owed their rescue, it is to find him gone. He has vanished as utterly as the destroyed powder car.

PATHE.

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE (Episode Three—"The Vanishing Jewels"—Two Parts—Jan. 11).—Elaine Dodge, whose father was murdered by the Clutching Hand, vainly endeavors to apprehend the mysterious criminal. She and Perry Bennett, her lawyer, are interrupted by Susie Martin, the daughter of a wealthy jeweler, who tells them that owing to her father's refusal to pay blackmail the Clutching Hand threatens to loot his shop at exactly noon that day. Elaine 'phones Craig Kennedy, the scientific detective, and informs him of this latest project of the Clutching Hand. They arange to meet in Martin's shop before noon to frustrate the dastard's design. They arrive and are met by Mr. Martin, who has the shop closed and guarded. A clock strikes twelve and on the last stroke the floor beneath a case of precious jewels caves in and the case goes hurtling to the cellar where the three crooks start to bag their loot. To prevent interruption from above, the criminals fling a bomb through the hole. Kennedy seizes the bomb and hurls it back through the opening. The crooks make a hasty getaway through a secret doorway, leaving their loot behind. The bomb explodes, the smoke clears, the party descends and finds the jewels intact. Kennedy, searching for clues, discovers the secret passage which leads him to the street. Answering his inquiry, a street-sweeper points up the street at a vanishing limousine. Kennedy and Elaine in a taxi and their friends in two other cars experience a wild ride in the chase that follows. The taxi stops at a crossroads. They question a man who makes the sign of the Clutching Hand to the taxi driver, who answers him. The driver feigns a break-down, a controversy ensues and Kennedy is black-jacked and left unconscious in the roadway as the conspirators kidnap Elaine and dash off in the taxi. Kennedy is revived by his friends in the following auto and directs the trailing of the taxi. The crooks come to a lonely part of the country and stop outside a factory to debate the disposition of Elaine. She is carried bound and gagged to the water's edge and thrust into a large tank. The entrance is then sealed by a huge stone. The pursuers track the conspirators to the water's edge and become aware of Elaine in the tank, but are powerless to help her. The rising tide makes Elaine struggle to keep her head above water. Kennedy sees hope in a sign "Oxacetylene Welding Co.," on the factory opposite. He and Jameson rush over, blow open the lock, enter and taking up an Oxacetylene outfit for metal burning, are back at the tank in an instant and work madly to burn a hole through it. They effect their purpose just in time to save Elaine, who has nearly succumbed to the rising tide.

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE (Episode Four—"The Frozen Safe"—Two Parts—Jan. 18).—Elaine Dodge, endeavoring to track down the mysterious Clutching Hand, has been rescued from his confederates by Craig Kennedy, the world known scientific detective. Elaine, Craig Kennedy, Perry Bennett, her lawyer, and Jameson, a reporter, arrive at the Dodge home after a frightful experience and are welcomed by Elaine's Aunt Susan, who warmly praises Kennedy for the part he has played in her niece's rescue. Elaine shows Kennedy a new safe, said to be proof against any manner of forcible opening. She also makes him a present of her photograph. The men depart, Kennedy and Jameson going to the former's home. Arrived there, Kennedy shows his friend a machine he has had installed in the wall outside his rooms. It is

(Continued on page 584.)

GITHCIL FILM RENOVATOR

The only renovator that cleans, softens and renovates films. Positively non-combustible nor inflammable, as shown in analysis made by Bureau of Fire Prevention of City of New York. Endorsed by leading film exchanges.

Githcil Chemical Company
220 West 42d Street,
(Candler Building)
'Phone Bryant 2968 New York City

The Fourth Factor

The establishment of the United Film Service, with its daily releases of single and double reel comedies and dramas, has added to the film business its fourth big factor.

The United Film Service represents: (1) A year of preparation; (2) an expenditure of $2,500,000; (3) an outlet through 43 exchanges; (4) a combination of famous producing companies.

In addition to the daily single and double reel releases, the United Film Service offers more than 200 great feature subjects, now ready for booking. No other concern in the world even approaches this enormous output of high-class features.

The United Film Service is complete. Write your nearest exchange for full information.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

(Warner's Features, Inc.)

NEW YORK

UNITED FILM SERVICE

STARLIGHT

FARCE COMEDIES

BEING RELEASED
WEEKLY THROUGH THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

COMING HEN PECKED SMITH WITH WELFORD
THE MIX-UP DALLAS

In Preparation
TWO-REEL SOCIETY DRAMAS

MITTENTHAL FILM CO.

Studio: Yonkers, N. Y. Office: 110 West 40th Street, New York City

MEMBERS OF
UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS
INC.

LUNA FILMS

ALBUQUERQUE FILM MFG. CO., Inc.
(Luna Brand)

FEATURING

Miss DOT FARLEY

"REAL"
COMEDIES

Direction of
GILBERT P. HAMILTON, President and General Manager

406 Court Street, Los Angeles, California

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

EMPRESS FILMS

Featuring

MARIAN SWAYNE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Produced in U.S.A.

by

Gaumont Company

MEMBERS OF

UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS INC.

FEATURES IDEAL

INCORPORATED

PRESENT

HIGH-CLASS

DRAMAS

THROUGH THE 43 EXCHANGES OF THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Released:

Nov. 15, 1914—THE LAST CHORD ..... 3 Parts
Nov. 20, 1914—THE NIHILIST'S DAUGHTER ..... 2 Parts
Nov. 23, 1914—ZANDORI'S SECRET ..... 3 Parts
Nov. 30, 1914—THE WOLF'S PREY ..... 3 Parts
Dec. 7, 1914—LITTLE MISS NUISANCE ..... 2 Parts
Dec. 16, 1914—HER DUPLICATE HUSBAND ..... 3 Parts
Dec. 22, 1914—THE LASH OF FATE ..... 2 Parts
Jan. 5, 1915—THE HONOR OF BILL JACKSON ..... 2 Parts

Coming:

Jan. 12, 1915—THE EYES OF JUSTICE ..... 2 Parts
Jan. 9, 1915—THE OTHER WOMAN ..... 3 Parts

NOTICE—to the public: We are now producing "MADE IN AMERICA" films.

FEATURES IDEAL, Inc.

126 West 46th Street, New York

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

GRANDIN FILMS

United Film offices everywhere are overwhelmed with demands for Grandin Films.

REAL Features with a REAL Star tell the story

Demand Grandin Films and raise OLD HARRY if you don't get them.

There's a GRANDIN Feature released every Monday.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION

ARTHUR N. SMALLWOOD, President and General Manager

175 Fifth Avenue, New York

MEMBERS OF

UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS INC.

SUPERBA

COMEDIES EXTRAORDINARY

RELEASING WEEKLY
THROUGH THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Demand these Comedies from your
Nearest United Exchange

COMING—A BIG SURPRISE—WATCH US

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.

430 Claremont Parkway
Bronx, N. Y. City

JOS. A. GOLDEN
President and Treasurer

BEN GOETZ
General Manager

UNITED FILM SERVICE

ALLIANCE

THE ALLIANCE FILM CORPORATION

OFFERS

THE MERRY MILITARY ROMANCE

The CHOCOLATE SOLDIER

IN FIVE PARTS

Battle Scenes—Thrilling Moments—Mirth Provoking Situations—

MR. EXHIBITOR:

The Chocolate Soldier is an elaborate film version of the most successful light opera in the world.

It was adapted from the famous play, "Arms and the Man," by Bernard Shaw, and was produced by an all-star cast of Broadway favorites.

It is known to every theatregoer in the land. As a play and opera it made over Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, and it is now your privilege and opportunity to get some of the money it is going to make as a feature film.

ALLIANCE FILMS CORPORATION

PROGRAMME

THE PICTURE'S THE THING!

After all is said and done in the film business, the one question remains: ARE YOUR PICTURES POSSESSED OF MONEY-GETTING QUALITIES?

To this question we answer YES.

Here is our list of MONEY GETTERS

"IN THE SHADOW" with GORDON DE MAINE and WM. A. WILLIAMS
By JOHN HYMER

"THE LAST CHAPTER" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

"THE TRUTH WAGON" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
From the play by HAYDEN TALBOT

"THE LAST EGYPTIAN" with J. FARRELL McDONALD and VIVIAN REED
From the book by L. FRANK BAUM

"HEARTS AND FLOWERS" with MRS. THOMAS WHIFFEN
From the celebrated play of the same name

"THE MAN WHO COULD NOT LOSE" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

"THE HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER" with MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON
From the great American story by EDWARD EGGLESTON

"WHEN FATE LEADS TRUMP" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
From the novel by JOHN HYMER

"THE KEY TO YESTERDAY" with CARLYLE BLACKWELL
From the novel by CHARLES NEVILL BUCK

"THE PATH FORBIDDEN" with OCTAVIA HANDWORTH
From the novel by JOHN HYMER

"AT THE OLD CROSS ROADS" with ESTHA WILLIAMS
From ARTHUR C. AISTON'S famous play

Get in touch with the Alliance Exchange in your territory.
It will show you how to increase your business.

EXCHANGES

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, 115 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.; 224½ E. Fourth St., Cincinnati, O. A. A. Weiland, Gen. Mgr. Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia. (Kentucky exhibitors served from Cincinnati office.)

ALL THEATRES FILM AND ACCESSORY CO., INC., Owners of Alliance Exchanges. New York State. Buffalo office, 18 Chapin Block; New York City office, 126 West 46th St.; M. F. Tobias, Gen. Mgr.

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Eastern Feature Film Co., Inc., 57 Church St., Boston, Mass. New England.

ALLIANCE FEATURE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Mecca Feature Film Co., 130 West 46th St. Northern New Jersey.

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY CO., Vine and 13th Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia.

CASINO FEATURE FILM CO., Dime Savings Bank Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Michigan.

ALLIANCE FILM CO. OF TEXAS, 1905½ Commerce St., Dallas, Texas. Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas.

HYBAR FILM CORP., Forsythe Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Florida, North and South Carolina.

CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO., 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Illinois and Indiana.

NAT A. MAGNER CO., Pacific Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.; 218 Superba Theatre Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal. California, Nevada and Arizona.

DES MOINES FILM SUPPLY CO., 218 Utica Bldg., Des Moines, Ia. Iowa.

MONARCH FEATURE FILM CO., 12th and Wyandotte Sts., Kansas City Mo. Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

ZENITH FEATURE FILM CO., Lyceum Bldg., Duluth, Minn. Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin. Milwaukee Office, 407 Manhattan Bldg.

ALLIANCE FILM SERVICE, controlled by Noted Players Feature Film Co., 613 New Birks Bldg., Montreal. Jas. D. Goldie, Gen. Mgr. Canada.

ALLIANCE PROGRAMME FEATURE SERVICE. Exchanges located at 710 Northwestern Bank Bldg., Portland, Ore.; 1214 Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.; 809 Trent St., Spokane, Wash.; 27 N. Park St., Butte, Mont.; 607 Ideal Bldg., Denver, Col. Supplying states of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico.

126 West 46th St., New York City

THE REVOLUTIONIST

AN EXTRAORDINARY STORY FULL OF REAL SURPRISES. IT HAS BEEN A LONG TIME SINCE THERE HAS BEEN SUCH TENSE CLEAN CUT DRAMATIC WORK UPON ANARCHY VS. ROYALTY

THERE HAS BEEN NO DROP FROM THE HIGH QUALITY OF THE APEX FEATURES SINCE THE WAR BEGAN. IF ANYTHING, THEY ARE BETTER

COMING RELEASES

THE STRIKERS

THE SIGN OF THE STAR

DETECTIVE HAYES and the NAVY SECRET

SEXTON BLAKE of SCOTLAND YARD in THE MYSTERY of the DIAMOND BELT

APEX FILM CO.

145 West 45th Street—New York—P. P. Craft, Manager
European Office—H. Winik—35 Little Newport Street, London

Rescue of the Stefansson Arctic Expedition

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL AND NATIVE LIFE IN SIBERIA
ANIMALS OF THE FROZEN NORTH

THREE FEATURE PICTURES IN ONE

Endorsed by American Museum of Natural History and National Geographical Society

The Greatest Moneymaker Ever Released

BECAUSE—It portrays vividly one of the greatest events of the world's history—the story of the expedition, the dramatic rescue of the survivors and the suffering and hardships of these brave men.
—It shows the most sensational animal pictures ever secured.
—It gives an intensely interesting study of life in far-off Alaska and Siberia.
—It is Dramatic—Educational—Historical.
—It appeals to all classes.

THE ENTIRE WORLD KNOWS ABOUT THIS WONDERFUL PICTURE AND IS WAITING TO SEE IT

AN UNLIMITED AMOUNT OF ADVERTISING MATTER

Good, strong, lithographs—1, 3 and 6 sheets—photos, heralds and, in fact, everything for lobby or exterior advertising.

WIRE OR WRITE AT ONCE

Here's a feature that will win for you, no matter where you are located. It has a special "punch" for each section of the country.

Stefansson Starting on His Last Dash North Over the Ice. Is He Alive or Dead? (Since starting, the party has not been heard from.)

Short, Snappy Scenes of Infinite Variety. This subject has already received more newspaper and magazine publicity than a hundred other features can ever expect to have.

FEATURE FILM BUYERS

Have You Secured Your Territory Yet?

SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO.

Suite 401, World's Tower Bldg., 110 W. 40th St., New York City.
1015-1016 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.

(Continued from page 570).

a "Kinograph" and it registers the footsteps of all visitors. That night the Clutching Hand, in league with a Dodge servant, makes another attempt to recover some incriminating papers in the Dodge safe. He has the false servant deliver to Elaine a package said to come from Kennedy with orders to put it in the safe over night. This Elaine does, remarking on its peculiar coldness. Kennedy, thinking incessantly of Elaine, decides to call her on the 'phone on some business pretext. They exchange greetings and she tells him that she has safely deposited the package he sent. He scents trouble and with Jameson rushes to the Dodge home. They find the safe covered with icicles, and as they watch it, it suddenly bursts open scattering its contents over the floor. Kennedy finds the package contains liquid air which, on evaporation, caused the high pressure that burst the safe. The servant is questioned, but says that a boy delivered the package and said it came from Mr. Kennedy. A letter, the deliverer unknown, is found on the desk. It is from the Clutching Hand and pronounces Craig Kennedy's doom. The next morning, while Kennedy is out, a large cabinet is delivered to his apartment. The Clutching Hand steps cautiously out, goes to the fire-place and rigs up an infernal machine which he attaches to Elaine's picture on the wall. He disturbs the picture so that when it is re-arranged the one standing before it will be slain. He exits and has confederate expressmen call for the cabinet which they say was delivered in error. Kennedy and Jameson on the avenue are hailed by Elaine, Aunt Susan and Susie Martin, who offer to take them home in their car. When Kennedy's apartment is reached he invites his friends up. Before entering his rooms Craig examines the kinograph and discovers that he has had visitors. He advances into the room first to make sure there is no one concealed there, then the rest enter and Elaine spies her picture all awry on the wall. She is about to straighten it when Kennedy, suspecting artifice, stops her. He drops cautiously to the floor, straightens the picture with a cane, and as he does so, the wall directly on a line with where his head would have been had he been standing, is riddled with buckshot. All shrink from the menace of the Clutching Hand and stand aghast as Kennedy tries coolly to allay their fears.

HAPPY'S MISHAPS (Jan..).—"Happy" is one of those indolent, pleasure loving, unconscionable, fly-by-night fellows, who lives only in the present and is benignly content if it affords him a taut belt-line and enough excitement to keep his playful mind from becoming morbid—in short, "Happy" is a tramp. His taste for excitement promises to be satiated when he sees a movie company doing their hair raising stunts. He makes himself presentable and applies to the film company recommending himself as a full fledged camera man and is given a job. His actual experience, however, rather unfits him for the job and he manages to spoil enough pictures to gain himself the reputation of a "reckless crank"-er and he is asked to resign on the society stuff and is sent down on the firing-line in Mexico to get pictures with "action." His search for "action" leads him out in front of a cavalry charge and he comes off second best. Even a trench is not a safe place for a movie man and the bursting shells make Happy decidedly unhappy. He decamps at an incredible speed in the direction of the peace zone and arrives on neutral territory only to find himself lionized by all as an intrepid hero and the man of the hour. His sudden popularity earns him the approbation of the fair sex.

FIRES OF AFFLICTION (Three Parts—Jan.).—Margaret lives very unhappily with her domineering husband, Baron Wolnaugh, and the Baron's son Karl by his first wife. Margaret is annoyed into leaving her home, and persuades her physician to recommend her as a trained nurse to Sir Henry, an invalid. Richard Linton, a friend of Sir Henry's, seeing the tender devotion of the nurse to his friend, and feeling a kinship of aristocracy between them, falls in love with her and asks by note for a rendezvous. They accidently meet in a garden, but she keeps her identity concealed. Lured by the promise of a divorce, she returns home, but once there she is brutally kept in subjection. Linton locates "Nurse Elizabeth," as she styled herself, and on the pretext of a real estate deal, meets Baron Wolnaugh in his home and is introduced to his wife, whom he recognizes as Sir Henry's former nurse. Margaret, realizing Linton's purpose writes him a note telling him to leave for the present, and that she will free herself for him if possible. Her letter is apprehended by her husband, whose rage overcomes him and causes a stroke of apoplexy. Margaret, seeing that her duty is henceforth at her husband's side, decides to nurse him, and informs Linton by note that her duty must needs part them forever. During a short absense of his nurse, the Baron makes the fatal error of taking an extra powder of a very potent drug and dies. Karl, happening on Margaret's note saying that she will free herself for Linton if possible, sees in it a good opportunity to connect her criminally with his father's death, and uses the note as evidence against her in court. He also induces a servant who saw the Baron take the powder to swear he saw Margaret give it. The servant confesses the truth under cross-examination, and admits it was Karl who intimidated him to bear false witness. Karl, in his rage shoots the servant. Margaret is freed, and in the Valley of Dreams, she and Richard find solace in the consummation of their tragic romance.

THE TIP-OFF (Balboa—Three Parts—Jan.).—Huntley Adams, chief of police, has every confidence in his secretary, Arthur Clarke, and Charles Donnelly, detective chief. The two young men are both in love with Blanche, the chief's daughter. Donnelly is ordered by Adams to round up "Spike" Murray's gang, a notorious band. Clarke is secretly in league with the gangsters and communicates with Fanny, their spy. "Spike," hearing that the Mayor is to give a ball, manages to work his way into the festivities, for the purpose of robbing the guests. He pulls off one robbery but is compelled to kill a man in so doing. He makes his escape with the collusion of Clarke.

This crime arouses feverish activity at police headquarters and Donnelly is given orders to raid "Spike's" hang-out. Headed by the detective, the police swoop down on the gangsters' lair but the gang have decamped. Donnelly reports his failure and says that he believes "Spike" was tipped off. Meantime Clarke's hatred is aroused for Donnelly because the latter succeeded in winning Blanche's consent to an engagement. With Fanny's assistance, Clarke succeeds in breaking the engagement by weakening Blanche's faith in Donnelly.

Donnelly tries to puzzle out the peculiar circumstances but fails to find the cause. He writes to Blanche trying to explain his innocence but his letter is returned unopened. Clarke, taking advantage of Blanche's indifference to Donnelly, tries to insinuate himself into her good graces, and receives some encouragement. Donnelly is greatly depressed.

The continued gang depredations spur the police to renewed activity. Another raid is planned. Clarke saunters to a window and signals the warning to Fanny who is stationed in a nearby apartment. A painter notices the exchange of signals and notifies the chief of police and Donnelly, who succeeds in handcuffing Clarke after a furious struggle. He is thrust into a cell and Fanny, his accomplice, soon occupies an adjacent one.

Meanwhile, Donnelly leads a raid on the gangsters and rounds them up completely. He hastens back to headquarters to report to the chief of police and meets Blanche, who has just left her father. She snubs Donnelly, but he prevails on her to listen to his pleas for a hearing. Leading her to the cells below, he shows her the two conspirators. Realizing the great injustice which she has done Donnelly, Blanche, repentant and contrite, begs his forgiveness which is eagerly given.

PETE THE PEDAL POLISHER (Jan.)—Pete is a discontented hostler. Hostlers are always discontented but Pete is a little more so. In fact, he is so sick and tired of his job as the mule's chambermaid that he is fast becoming desperate. He gives Maud her morning "Massage" and is interrupted by his "steady," a queen of the avenue, and a movie fan. She "coaches" and "wheedles" him in the naturally gentle, persuasive way of her class, in this wise: "Aw—loosen up! Separate! Give yourself another frisk!" etc. As Pete finds himself unable to supply his "best" with the wherewithal to attend a movie, his discouragement becomes despair. He sees a way out when a hostler to humans, namely a bookblack, asks him to take care of his stand for a while. A rush of business causes Pete to do unaccountable, ludicrous things, one of which is to put a fat lady's shoe in a box of flowers taken by a dandy to his best girl. When Pete discovers his awful mistake it is too late to remedy it. But he thinks he can get away with it. The lady's stocking is white so he decides to blacken it and so cover her foot and his terrible blunder. He gets tripped up by the foot of the law and has a hard time explaining between the wrath of the triple Venus and the expostulations of the slim dude. However, his dark cloud has a "silver" lining in the form of the bootblack's till, which lining he "borrows" to satisfy his charmer's desire for the movies. His tale of woe, accompanied by a symphony of clicking silver, finds in her a ready and even eager listener and their troubles slip gently from them as they head at last for the movies.

THE VALLEY OF CHAMOUNI Picturesque France (on the same reel as foregoing) (Jan.).—This interesting travel picture depicts the principal modes of travel; that which is done by ski and sleigh, after the heavy snowfalls have set in. Various scenes of skiing, a most enjoyable out-door sport, are shown. The mountains, crowned with their eternal crest of snow, are here viewed in all their wild and rugged grandeur.

AN EYE FOR AN EYE (Balboa—Four Parts—Jan.).—Elsie and her sister live on a ranch with their father. Robert Duncan, a wealthy city man, comes to stay at their house while on a hunting trip. He becomes infatuated with Elsie's sister and persuades her to run away with him and marries her. Through a telegram, Elsie and her father learn than Duncan is already married and has a child. This news kills the father and Elsie sets out for the city and finds her sister. She tells her that Duncan has another wife and pleads with her sister to return home. The sister, feeling the disgrace, disappears. Elsie later finds her in a hospital as she lies dying and plans to trap Duncan so as to avenge the wrong he has done her sister. She becomes an entertainer at a cafe which Duncan frequents. Being masked Duncan does not recognize her but becomes quite fascinated and shows her marked attention. Elsie instructs the chief of police that she may soon need his services as a married man is annoying her. One night when Duncan calls Elsie springs the trap she has set for him. She tells the story of her wronged sister and then for the first time tears off her mask and he recognizes her. She holds him off at the point of a revolver, tells him that she has sent copies of his letters to the newspapers, and the originals to his wife, and then telephones to the police who come and arrest him. Elsie then returns to the ranch and the foreman whom she loves.

QUEEN AND ADVENTURER (Pathe—Four Parts—Jan.).—This is a drama dealing with Mary Tudor, the daughter of Henry VIII, and with the intrigues of the English court. The Princess Mary, exiled with her mother, is still the object of the King's hatred. By royal proclamation she loses all rights and claims to the throne of England. Owing to the tyranny with which the King reigns, the Lord Talbot comes to warn the King that his reign is becoming insufferable, and the Princess Mary, with only the escort of Lord Talbot, defies her father before the assembled court. Lord Talbot, for his share in this, as well as for being one of the malcontents, is condemned to death, his estate confiscated, and his house set afire. His daughter and only child is supposed to perish in the flames. She is rescued by an old servant, however, who flees with her, and leaves her on the doorstep of Gilbert, the Artisan. Gilbert takes her in, and brings her up as his own. As the child grows up, Gilbert finds that his fatherly feeling is fast being transformed into one of love.

The Princess Mary, through the death of Edward VI, her brother, becomes the only heir to the throne, and as such becomes the Queen of England. Before long, her ill-concealed affection for Fabriano Fabiani, an Italian adventurer, is resented by all. Fabiani, not content with having won the Queen's affections, secretly pays marked attention to Jane, Gilbert's adopted daughter, whom he accidentally met. His visits to Jane do not remain unnoticed, for Simon Renard, the Queen's private adviser, has followed him on his clandestine calls and discovered his secret. Master Mardocheus, an old astrologer, who has become acquainted with many court secrets, knows that Jane, Gilbert's adopted daughter, is in reality the daughter of Lord Talbot and writes Fabiani to this effect, stating that for a suitable consideration, he will give to him the papers to establish the fact. Fabiani writes Mardocheus making an appointment to meet him that night. They meet and Mardocheus is assassinated by the Italian. Gilbert is called by Fabiani from his boats at the riverside, and is compelled to assist the Italian in disposing of the body. On returning home, Gilbert finds on his door, a note pierced with a knife, stating it is the knife of Fabiano, the man who has deprived him of Jane's love, but that he may be avenged if he is willing to pay for it with his life. This note has been written by Renard, who has seen the crime, and who takes to the Queen the news of Fabiano's perfidy. Queen Mary orders Jane's arrest. To avenge himself on the Queen at the same time, Gilbert is persuaded to sacrifice his life. Following the Queen's plan, he simulates an attempt at assassination of her, and in accordance with plans previously concocted is arrested.

Jane is brought into the Queen's presence, and is declared to be Lord Talbot's only daughter. Gilbert then publicly charges Fabiani with ordering him to murder the Queen. In accordance with the evidence, sentence of death is passed upon both the Italian and the artisan. The Queen issues instructions to defer the execution of the Italian. Gilbert's desperate situation has changed Jane's affection for him to love. The Queen, believing that Jane still loves Fabiani, determines to make use of her to save the favorite. She gives orders that Jane Talbot act in her stead, and whatever she does will bear the royal approval. She is advised by Renard that the people, inflamed against the Italian, are marching to claim their prey. Jane goes to the tower and instead of releasing Fabiani, releases Gilbert. He is recaptured, and to satisfy the rioting people, the Queen determines to execute him, informing the populace that he is Fabiani. Jane, however, through the aid of one of the guardians of the tower, contrives to substitute Fabiani who is marching to his death, in the place of the man she loves.

NOW PLAYING NEW YORK'S GREATEST BROADWAY THEATRE

"THE STRAND"

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's

ARCTIC HUNT

IN SIX REELS

Chance to secure the bargain of a lifetime in Exclusive State Rights

Some Splendid Territory Still Open

Native and Animal Life in the North. A revelation of life and affairs in the frigid zone. An intimate, close range study of Moose, Caribou, Sea Lion, Polar Bear, Great Kodiack Bear, Walrus and millions of Birds on rookeries. Icebergs the size of twenty-story buildings precipitated headlong into the sea.

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE TO

Arctic Film Company

Suite 1209—220 W. 42nd St., N. Y. Phone Bryant 3559
Write for bookings in New Jersey and New York States

ALLIANCE.

IN THE SHADOW (Five Parts—Excelsior).—Tom Ward visits his college chum, Bob Bell, and while hunting, is wounded by his friend by mistake. During his convalescence he falls in love with Bob's sister, Grace. The two young men leave for college. Bob is a model student and the leader in the college athletics, while Tom neglects his studies, spending most of his time in idleness and over the gambling table.

The college authorities object to his wild ways, and he is summoned to the Dean's office, where he is severely reprimanded. An altercation follows, and the Dean orders the hot-headed student from the office.

In the meanwhile, Bob, knowing of Tom's financial difficulties, posts a challenge on the board in the name of the Masked Wonder, to meet all comers, "winner take all." The notice attracts Tom's attention, and he accepts in the name of the Masked Unknown. An unfortunate blow knocks out Bob, and Tom is horror-stricken when he finds that his masked opponent is his dearest friend, and learns that the blow will probably prove fatal. To make matters worse, while the boxing match is in progress, the Dean has been attacked and robbed, and Tom is accused of this by the Dean's housekeeper.

Tom's first impulse is to stand and face the music, but the students prevail upon him to hide and then flee. Tom is pursued by the police, but makes his escape, first by rail and then by hydroplane motorboat, closely followed by his pursuers. He finally shakes them off. In an exhausted condition, Tom is fed and cared for by the fisher girl whom he chances to meet.

Mr. Bell, investigating an abandoned mine, takes his daughter Grace with him. While admiring the beauties of the scenery, Grace is approached by a snake, and it viciously buries its fangs in her foot. Grace's outcry brings Nellie, the fisher girl, to her aid. Grace assures her deliverer of her profound gratitude.

Bob recovers from the blow received in the fight, and starts out to find Tom, of whom all traces have been lost. He is unsuccessful in this, but during his search happens upon Nellie, the fisher girl, who tells him that Tom, fearing pursuit, has wandered on. Bob falls in love with Nellie and takes her home to introduce her to his father and sister, and makes new plans to find Tom. On reaching his home, Bob finds the entire household much excited over the nocturnal visits of a mysterious "Shadow." Nellie is taken into the conference, and Grace immediately recognizes her as the girl who saved her life.

Bob suspects that her "Shadow" evidently is not bent on theft, and lays a trap to ascertain why the "Shadow" prowls around the house, and distributing the members of the family in advantageous positions, turns out the lights and awaits the coming of the mysterious visitor. In due time the "Shadow" arrives, Bob springs upon him, the lights are turned on, and all present are overjoyed to find that the "Shadow" is none other than the long-sought Tom.

Tom is happy to find that Bob is alive, and when Bob tells him that he is no longer under the suspicion of the assault of the Dean, Tom turns to Grace, and Bob turns to Nellie. You know the rest.

GEORGE KLEINE.

DU BARRY (Six Parts).—At a ball at Rampaumaux, Jean Du Barry, an impecunious nobleman operating a gambling house, sees Jeannette for the first time and is strongly attracted to her. He determines to lure her into his gambling house. Jeannette meets De Cosse Brissac, captain of the Guards, and the young couple fall in love.

In the hope of bringing matters to a quick issue, Du Barry one day invites her to go out and see the King pass, after she had promised to go to the woods and pick violets with Cosse. The King is immediately smitten with Jeannette. That night she accompanies Du Barry to his gambling house.

Jeannette falls easily into the new life. She goes to the opera where the King sees her and has her followed. Cosse also catches sight of her and refuses to recognize her. However, he later visits Jeannette and begs that she leave the life and marry him. About this time the King makes a visit in disguise and asks Jeannette to take dinner with him at a merry party that evening. Cosse leaves indignant, and later writes her reproachfully.

In order to become the King's favorite, it is necessary for Jeannette to be titled. To accomplish this, Du Barry arranges for a consideration of one hundred thousand francs, to marry her to his brother. This is done and Jeannette is soon installed in the Royal Palace. Some time later, Cosse meets Du Barry and the men quarrel with the result that the now jealous King has Cosse thrown into prison. Cosse's message to Jeannette is intercepted by Du Barry and Jeannette never learns of his imprisonment. The days fly by, Cosse languishes in prison, and Jeannette becomes at once the most admired and despised woman in France.

A revolution breaks out among the people, owing to the King's extravagance. By strangling a guard, Cosse escapes and becomes a leader of the people. Meanwhile, Du Barry begs more money of Jeannette and when she refuses, threatens to destroy her. Jeannette quarrels with the King and offers to sell her pretty baubles to buy bread for the people. At this time Cosse makes bold to scale the wall and enter Jeannette's room. He is wounded by a chance ball and is watched by Du Barry, who follows him. Jeannette hides him in her bed and bribes Du Barry with two hundred thousand francs to say nothing of the incident.

In this extremity Jeannette calls upon her old friend, the Papal Nuncio, who is unable to help her, owing to Du Barry's close watch. In her effort to amuse the King and keep his mind from the subject of Cosse, Jeannette holds a great outdoor festival. In the midst of it, Du Barry tells the King of Cosse's presence in the Palace and Cosse is captured and taken out to be shot. The King suggests to Jeannette that by telling Cosse, in the presence of the Court, that she hid him in her bedroom merely to hand him over to the King, he will commute Cosse's death-sentence to life imprisonment in the Bastile. This sacrifice Jeannette makes.

After a lapse of eighteen years the King dies and the people again revolt, freeing Cosse from the Bastile. He again becomes their leader and when they determine to behead Jeannette, he pleads for her life in vain. She is taken to prison and later guillotined.

COSMOFOTOFILM CO.

THE VICTORIA CROSS (Three Parts—London Film Co.).—Mrs. Oldwood is a splendid type of Englishwoman who is proud of her husband's military record. Her husband, Colonel Oldwood, V. C., is a military hero who has been awarded the Cross for some brave deed in the South African War. Charles, the son of this elderly couple, is a fine young man, who has not yet established himself as an architect—the profession for which he has been trained.

When the story opens Mrs. Oldwood has arranged that her husband shall have his portrait painted by a celebrated young artist. The Colonel does not like the notion of sitting for the picture in military dress, but he yields to his wife's wish in the matter. When the sittings commence Mrs. Oldwood insists that the Colonel must wear his Victoria Cross, and, although he consents, it is obvious that he feels far from happy in doing so.

Meantime, owing to the failure of a company in which he is interested, Colonel Oldwood finds himself in urgent need of £2,000. Without taking his family into his confidence, he secretly borrows the money from his neighbor, Mr. Bilson. Bilson is a contractor whose character is as hard as his face; the only soft spot in him is his love for Alice, his motherless daughter of sixteen. Little Alice is great friends with Charles Oldwood.

The painting of Colonel Oldwood's portrait is progressing. For some time past the Colonel has shown signs of heart weakness. While the artist is taking a rest the Colonel rises and gazes at the picture on the easel. He seems curiously to resent the fact that he is represented wearing the V. C. and in a sudden burst of anger he tears the cross from his breast and hurls it to the floor. Then he resumes his pose in the chair and the artist resumes his painting. Later on, when Mrs. Oldwood enters the room, she sees the Victoria Cross lying on the floor. She picks it up, intending to refix it on her husband's breast, and discovers that he is dead.

Some days later Bilson, who needs a new business manager, sees a chance of getting young Charles in his grip. He calls on the young man, shows him the late Colonel's note for £2,000 and asks what is going to be done about this debt. Charles sees no way to save his mother from ruin. Then Bilson suggests that Charles shall work as his manager at a reasonable salary, one-third of which he shall hand over to Bilson every week until his father's debt is wiped out, and that Charles shall not leave Bilson's employ until the debt is cleared. An agreement to this effect is signed; but, in order that Mrs. Oldwood shall not be humiliated by the knowledge of her late husband's debt, this phase of the transaction is kept secret.

Years pass. The period is now 1914. War with Germany is declared. Mrs. Oldwood, who has always secretly regretted that Charles has not followed in his father's profession, now urges him to enlist. Charles is anxious to do so, but when he mentions it to Bilson he is told that, if he leaves the firm, Bilson will press for the immediate payment of the balance of the late Colonel's loan.

In the circumstances Charles feels that he dare not enlist. He goes home to tell his mother but cannot face the ordeal; and so commences to write her a note about it instead. His pen breaks, and, while he is searching for another, he discovers a secret drawer in the bureau, in which is a dusty letter addressed to him by his father. This letter tells Charles that the Victoria Cross honor was a mistake; Colonel Oldwood got the credit for a brave act of a comrade who was killed. And the father appeals to the son to do his utmost to restore the honor of the name.

This letter Charles thrusts into his pocket. His mother comes into the room to hear his final decision. He brings joy to her heart by saying he will enlist. Bilson, now furious, is determined to press Mrs. Oldwood for the balance of the late Colonel's debt. But Alice pleads with him and finally confesses to her father that she loves Charles. Softened by this knowledge, Bilson abandons his purpose. Mrs. Oldwood, too, learns Alice's secret, and the two women are much together while Charles is away fighting.

At the front one night Charles takes his father's letter from his pocket and scrawls across it: "Please God, I will uphold the honor of our name. Charles Oldwood," and replaces the document in his pocket. Shortly afterwards when in action Charles volunteers for the difficult task of reconnecting some telegraph wires which have been cut by the enemy's shells. The break is in a dangerous zone of fire. Several men have made an attempt to do the work, but each has fallen. Charles dashes out of the trenches, and, though he is wounded, he manages to crawl to the broken wires. He joins the wires but is almost instantly killed by a bullet.

The news of his bravery is published in the papers and it is announced that the Victoria Cross is to be awarded. Mrs. Oldwood reads the news, and, while sorrowing over her gallant son's death, she is proud of his heroism.

A wounded soldier calls on Mrs. Oldwood, bringing her a smal parcel of her son's effects. Among other things in the parcel is a bullet-pierced, blood-stained letter. The old lady opens the letter. It is the Colonel's letter to Charles; but his painful confession is blotted out by his son's blood. All that is clearly readable is: "Please God, I will uphold the honor of our name. Charles Oldwood." With this relic in her hand, the sorrowful Mrs. Oldwood turns and gazes on the portrait of her other dead hero—her husband.

Meantime, when Bilson learns of the death of Charles, he does his best to comfort his daughter. And, as proof that he is really sorry for any harshness in the past, he takes the late Colonel's note from a drawer, and slowly tears it to shreds. That debt also is canceled.

BLACK SPOT (Four Parts—London Film Co.).—Professor Scerloff of Moscow University holds revolutionary opinions. The Russian police break into his house one evening as he is propounding his views to some students. Olga, the Professor's daughter, succeeds in burning the incriminating documents, but the police nevertheless use the girl roughly and knout her old father. Under the strain of this situation Madame Scerloff dies.

While this is going on in Scerloff's house, the Grand Duke Paul, passing through the street, hears the outcries and enters the house. He looks at the unconscious victims of police authority. At the Grand Duke's order the police cease their severities and inform Scerloff that he will be let alone if he leaves the country within twenty-four hours.

The scene is changed to England, where we see Scerloff and Olga living in exile. They are members of a revolutionary circle in Soho. The revolutionaries learn that the Grand Duke Paul is coming to visit England. They decide that he must die. Olga draws from the ballot box the black spot which designates her as the instrument of vengeance.

A new member of the revolutionary society, Serge Malkow, offers to help Olga to her purpose, and brings her an order which will admit her as a typist to the mansion which the Grand Duke Paul is occupying during his stay in London, and shows her how to conceal her revolver in the typewriting machine.

At the appointed hour Olga is admitted to the Grand Duke's presence. In a tense scene, he thwarts her purpose by showing her convincingly that he is not the black despot she supposes, but an enlightened man who is really trying to help his people. So Olga goes away with her mission unaccomplished.

She returns to the revolutionaries to tell them that their attitude toward the Grand Duke is a mistake. They, however, regard her simply as a traitor, and, after she has left the meeting, it is decided that she must die. The black spot to designate the person who is to kill Olga is drawn by Serge Malkow.

Malkow goes to the home of Scerloff and it becomes clear that he is there not to harm Olga but to save her. The revolutionaries, however, follow him, and for a time the situation in Scerloff's home is extremely tense—Serge trying to gain time and the revolutionaries insisting that Olga be put out of the way at once.

The climax comes with the arrival of the Grand Duke's men, supported by officers from Scotland Yard. The revolutionaries are placed under control. When the Grand Duke's men turn to Serge Malkow, he strips off his disguise and stands revealed as the Grand Duke Paul. He quickly sets everything to rights, pardons the revolutionaries, and leaves Olga and her father happy.

A clear picture

is as essential as a good scenario. Because the basic product is right the clearest pictures are on Eastman Film. Identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

We've Moved to 42nd Street

to a more convenient locality for YOUR ACCOMMODATION. WE ARE NOW in our new quarters on the 12th floor of the CANDLER BUILDING, 220 WEST 42nd ST., NEW YORK. We invite every enterprising THEATRE MANAGER to visit us if they wish to see some remarkable exhibits for BUSINESS BOOSTING, any one of a dozen to fit your conditions which are DEVOID of complicated and unexplainable details. WE AIM AT SIMPLICITY, WHICH WILL GIVE YOU QUICK ACTION.

EVERY plan suggested by us to increase your box office receipts HAS METHOD and THOUGHT behind it.

As each locality has its own peculiar phase of humans to deal with it is evident that any plan would not fit every place.

We will send you a plan to increase your business that will fit YOUR locality if you will write us, giving details about your house.

Every conceivable kind of picture for the theatre for DECORATIVE or SOUVENIR PURPOSES. From a POST CARD TO A LIFE SIZE PAINTING. If you cannot call, write us today.

KRAUS MFG. CO., 220 W. 42nd St., N.Y.

12th Floor, CANDLER BUILDING

Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

Gundlach Projection Lenses Have Made A Reputation

They are now so well known we can refer you to almost any exhibitor, film exchange, dealer or manufacturer for an opinion about them and with certainty that every man who has seen results will tell you they are the best lenses made—absolutely the best.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

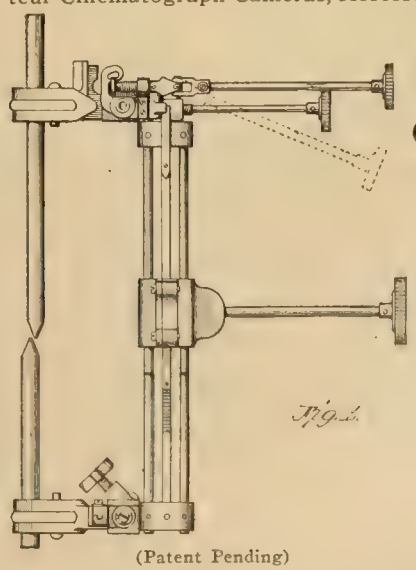
IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

HOWELL-MOTION RYDER PICTURE COMPANY EQUIPMENT

711A First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

SIMPLEX Projectors, Kimble Variable Speed Motor Drive Equipment for A. C.
MARTIN Rotary Converters, to give D. C. from 110 or 220 volt A. C. Special Emergency Panel requiring no auxiliary resistance when operating arcs on alternating current.

PORTABLE PROJECTORS, Professional and Amateur Cinematograph Cameras, Accessories and Supplies.



Special Top Carbon Tilt Control for Simplex Lamp

Operators and Users of Regular Model Simplex Lamp will appreciate the value of this device.

(Patent Pending)
Price prepaid, $5.00 net.

KRITERION SERVICE.

(The following are synopses of the pictures to be released on the Kriterion Program during the week of Monday, January 18, to Saturday, January 23, inclusive).

THE CRYSTAL GLOBE (Two Parts—Paragon).—Sheila, daughter of a banker, refuses to marry Sam Harvey, a self-made man, because he is not of her set. At a reception Sheila is summoned home and finds her father dead. Sometime after his death Sheila, now sole heiress of her father's will, goes to a mystic and while gazing in the crystal globe learns that the banker was not her legitimate father, but that she was the daughter of a bandit and had been adopted by the banker. Sam, while looking over a diary left among the banker's papers, has known all along who Sheila was. After a very beautiful fire scene we forsee that all matters are going to run smoothly for the future of Sam and Sheila.

AND PERCY GOT MARRIED (Santa Barbara).—Percy, a soda fountain clerk, and Betty are in love. Betty's father objects to their marriage and they plan to elope. Percy gives Betty a sleeping opiate to put in pa's coffee. Betty breaks the bottle. At the drug store Percy learns that the bottle containing what he thought was a sleeping potion is deadly poison. He immediately phones for an ambulance. After a series of side-splitting scenes we see father safely home, and Percy and Betty happily married.

BIRTH OF EMOTION (Two Parts—Alhambra).—This story is an allegorical play portraying the beginning of human emotions, such as love, hate, jealousy, crime, etc. There are but three people in the entire cast.

THE BOOB'S RACING CAREER (Thistle).—The Boob meets a discomforted motorist and buys his automobile for almost nothing. After much difficulty he learns how to run the car and calls at the home of his girl and informs her he is going to enter into the Corona Cup races and invites them to come to see it. To his surprise they cancel a previous engagement and come. To get out of his predicament the Boob hires a mechanician to drive in his place. All would have been well but the Boob neglected to pay the mechanician the amount promised to drive the car.

GOADED BY JEALOUSY (Santa Barbara).—Edward Alexander, the husband of Miss Brunnette, is nearly crazed by jealousy that is entirely unfounded, although circumstances seem to point differently. These scenes continue and finally reach a crisis when Alexander finds a telegram and misinterprets its meaning. After a number of thrilling scenes all difficulties are cleared to the satisfaction of everyone and lead to the restoration of the happy home.

THE TATOOED MAN (Monty).—Margery, in spite of the protests of Dr. Evans, her fiancee, decides to join a suffragette "hike," the other members of which are spinsters of the most modern type. On the same day that the "hike" starts, a tatooed lunatic escapes from Dr. Evans' sanitarium. Every endeavor is made to capture the man, who spreads terror throughout the countryside. The suffragettes take refuge in a vacant roadhouse into which the lunatic has climbed. As a result the women are thrown into a condition of terror through the antics of the fugitive, until he is first put out of business and then succored by the eldest of the suffragettes, who shows in the end an unexpected tenderness for the stronger sex. The doctor comes to the rescue of the women, only to find them contented, with the exception of Margery who, disgusted with her co-adverturers, is willing to be taken home by the doctor.

THE CALL OF THE SEA (Monty).—A fisherman, his wife and three boys find the body of a child castaway. They take her to their home and bring her up as one of their own. Years pass and the three boys now grown to manhood are in love with Nora, the castaway. Dave, the favored one, is sent to a monastery to study for the ministry. The father requests on his death bed that Nora marry Dan, as he is the eldest. In order to be alone with her thoughts of Dave, Nora goes to the rocks for solitude, and unnoticed by herself is trapped by the incoming tide. The following morning Dan and Dick find her on the rocks—dead. Later, in a dispute over which of the three she really loved, they open her locket and find within Dave's picture.

BLOWN UPON (Punch).—By breathing the fumes of Rigidal on anyone they will sleep for one hour. In this comedy there is a tramp, a farmer, a baby and several others who create much laughter.

ELIZA'S FAIRY PRINCE (Trump).—Eliza is a household slavey, and lives with her aunt. She receives word that she has inherited a million dollars with a proviso that she marries before a certain date. Time passes and she cannot be suited and at last goes to a matrimonial agency to seek a husband. Her "prince" is a young man, who has been living in luxury, but has come to the end of his string. Seeking adventure he goes to the same agency. They get married and after many serious adventures find their love for each other and live happily ever after.

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN (Pyramid).—Adolphus Brown, a traveling salesman, arrives at the town hotel about 10 p. m. Tired after a hard day's work he starts right for bed. The brilliant bell hop shows him his room, but forgets his grip. Brown goes down to the lobby, but upon his return gets into the wrong room. He undresses and is about to get into bed when a woman walks in and starts delivering a suffragette address, not knowing a man is present. Brown makes a try for the closet, but is caught in the act by the woman, who notifies the hotel staff. While the woman is downstairs giving the alarm, Brown jumps into bed feigning sleep. When the hotel staff arrives at the room, they apparently waken Brown from heavy slumbers and when accused by the woman he points to her head and says "nobody home." The woman is taken for one demented and Brown enjoys a good night's rest.

ZOOLOGICAL (Nolege).—This subject which is on the same reel as the foregoing is a study of all sorts of animals in captivity.

JOE'S PARTNER, BILL (Navajo).—Della, a gambler's wife, is informed that her husband has been shot for cheating. She goes away to start a new life and meets Joe, a young mining prospector. A short time after the meeting they are married, and Della does not tell him of her past. After a few months of happiness Della's husband comes to the town in which they live, sees Della, and demands the bag of gold which they have saved. She, stunned, wonders how he escaped death. He tells her he played a ruse on the posse, threw his hat on the water and swam under water to safety. She gives him the money, when Joe's partner, Bill, who lives with them, enters and makes him return the gold. He also gives him one hour to leave the state. Joe, returning home, overhears Bill tell Della that he won't say anything about the matter. Joe, suspicious, turns Bill out of the house. Bill goes to the saloon, and there meets Della's former husband. There is a terrific fight between them. Bill is the victor. At home Della explains matters to Joe and Bill is welcomed back.

BEATING FATHER TO IT (Alhambra).—This farce shows the antics of a widower, his son, a widow, and her daughter. The widower and widow get married and are more than surprised to learn that their children have put one over on them and are also married.

GENERAL FILM CO.

EAGLE'S NEST (Lubin—Eight Parts).—Before Philip Dane starts for the West as an emigrant he gives the deeds to his property to Geoffrey Milford, his friend, fearing to take the papers on the journey. Milford gives Mrs. Dane a little whip as a farewell present. On the journey, Dane and his wife are killed, and their child, a boy, is found by Silsbee and his wife. The little boy is the only survivor of an Indian raid. Taking the child and the whip, which they have found beside him, the Silsbees go on, locating at a spot in the mountains which they call "Eagle's Nest." Milford hears that all have perished, and later, when in need of funds to finance a business deal in Sacramento, he forges Dane's name to the deeds and raises money on his property, thinking that no one will suffer. He goes to Sacramento, taking his little daughter with him. Dane's son, known as Jack Trail, grows up with the Silsbees, and when Silsbee dies, he is the idol of his adopted mother.

Twenty years later, Milford is a wealthy man. His partner, Blasedon, discovers evidence of the forgery on which Milford's fortune is based, but keeps the fact secret, hoping to use it to force a marriage with Milford's daughter, who has rejected his love. In the mountains Jack has won the gratitude of Dibsey, an unsuccessful lawyer, by rescuing him from fighting miners. On a business trip in the mountains Milford and Blasedon, accompanied by Rose, are in an accident, from which Jack rescues them. Jack takes them to the cabin, where Milford leaves Rose and Blasedon, first giving Rose the papers belonging to Philip Dane. While waiting for the next stagecoach, Rose is much in the company of Jack, and love quickly springs up between them. Jack gives Rose the whip, telling her its story. During Jack's absence, Blasedon forces his attentions upon Rose. When he tries to take her in his arms, her screams bring Mrs. Silsbee from the cabin. In anger at the interruption, Blasedon seizes Jack's gun and shoots Mrs. Silsbee dead. Rose escapes across a narrow foot bridge, followed by Blasedon, but succeeds in eluding him. Jack is accused of the murder of his mother, but is saved from the anger of the miners by Dibsey, who takes him to his cabin. Rose has been taken to the cabin of Sierra Suze, a woman of kindly heart.

Blasedon, under the name of Crofton, searches for Rose in the town of Red Dog, near Suze's cabin, and takes into his service Sykes, a justice of the peace, and Slater, two unscrupulous miners. They succeed in capturing Rose, but Jack, disguised and aided by Dibsey, rescues her. She is taken to Suze's cabin. Dibsey has fallen in love with Suze, and has gained her promise of an early marriage. In the cabin, he finds the papers belonging to Dane, which Rose has asked Suze to keep for her and thinking them the property of his prospective wife, he appropriates them. Blasedon and his accomplices surprise Rose and Jack during the absence of Suze and Dibsey, and Blasedon forces Rose to marry him, threatening Jack with death if she refuse. Sykes, the justice, performs the ceremony. Blasedon then locks Jack in the cabin and sets it on fire. Suze hears Rose's scream, and reaches the cabin in time to rescue Jack. But Blasedon has made off with Rose. When Dibsey took the Dane papers from the cabin he put blank sheets in their place, and these Blasedon found and took with him, thinking them to be the originals. He now believes that he will be able to bring Milford and Rose to terms. Accordingly, he takes Rose to her father's house, and announces that they are married. When he produces the papers he finds them only blank sheets. Jack has followed Blasedon, and when the latter escapes, knowing that he will be accused of the murder of Mrs. Silsbee, Jack follows in pursuit. Blasedon returns to the mountains, and Jack tracks him. Milford and Rose go in search of Suze in an effort to recover the real papers. Blasedon sees them as they leave the stage for the Silsbee cabin, where Suze and Dibsey, now married, are living. He follows them. Dibsey is about to hand the papers to Milford when Blasedon rushes from hiding and grabs them. He turns to escape, when Jack appears. He and Blasedon grapple in a desperate struggle. Blasedon is overpowered and the papers recovered. As Jack releases him, he makes a dash for liberty, but falls from the bridge into the ravine. His life is dashed out on the rocks below. Later, in the cabin, Rose finds the whip. She tells her father the story of it, that it was found beside Jack on the open trail. Milford recognizes the whip as the present to Dane's wife, twenty years before. He knows that Jack Trail is really Philip Dane. He holds out the papers, telling Jack that they are his and that the wealth based upon them is his also. Jack waves them aside. He takes Rose in his arms. Wealth means nothing to him, now that he has her love. Milford smiles upon them as he leaves them in the "Eagle's Nest" together.

THE COLLEGE WIDOW (Five Parts).—Atwater and Hingham are two rival colleges in the Middle West, and Hingham has for several seasons bested Atwater at football. There is a well-grounded impression that Atwater's weakness on the Gridiron must be attributed to the inherent opposition of its president, Dr. Witherspoon, who has a notion that Atwater, being a Presbyterian institution, should play gentle and unbloody football, and, moreover, that the members of the squad must attend recitations. Fortunately, however, football has two enthusiastic champions in the president's daughter, Jane, known as "The College Widow" because she bids farewell to her fiance at every commencement, and Mrs. Dalzelle, a grass widow, who is the convenient and unwatchful chaperone of all the young women who have the entree of the Atwater Campus. These two, after much earnest argument, succeed in convincing the doctor that true college supremacy can only be attained through the excellence of its football team, and the paramount consideration is the defeat of Hingham, a Baptist institution, not far distant.

The Atwater eleven, under the charge of Jack Larrabee, a graduate coach, and Matty McGowan, a professional trainer, proves so hopeless as a possible conqueror of Hingham, that Stub Tallmadge, an undergraduate, is sent abroad to search for new athletic timber. After many peregrinations among the farms and manufacturing towns he succeeds in unearthing a young giant named Murphy, who seems to have every qualification and being totally unschooled, it is arranged that he shall enter Atwater as a special student in a course of art. But even the ponderous Murphy is not potent enough to pull the team out of the rut into which it has fallen, and further building up of the team becomes more and more of a necessity every day. Comes there at this time to Atwater a millionaire named Bolton, whose son has for three years been the unapproachable half-back of Hingham, and the arrival of the two creates great enthusiasm among the college athletes. But when it is discovered that Billy's presence with his father is only to secure the services of a tutor, to squeeze him through the fourth freshman year so that he may claim to have spent four years at college, the consternation in Atwater knows no bounds. Coach Larrabee determines to secure the famous half-back at all hazards, and although he is supposed to be almost engaged to Jane Witherspoon, he evolves a plot by which she shall work her wiles upon Billy Bolton, and induce him to enter Atwater as a regular student. This, as usual, proves to be no difficult task for poor Billy falls in love with Jane at first sight. His father is a long time patron of Hingham, which institution has often conferred honorary degrees upon him in return for financial assistance, and before leaving Atwater for a quick trip to Europe, he leaves a check for $1,000 in his office as a bet that Atwater cannot beat Hingham in the Thanksgiving game. But he has not reckoned on the wonderful deftness of the college widow as a temptress, for, no sooner has he sailed from New York, when she induces his son to resign from Hingham and become half-back for Atwater.

"The plans of mice and men gang aft aglee," however, and in luring the love of the great Hingham star, she falls deeply in love with him herself. On the night of the victory, when he won his game almost by his own exertions, At-

IN YOUR THEATRE

Wotton REXOLUX

MORE LIGHT
MORE PATRONS
MORE PROFITS

Motion Picture Houses handicapped by alternating current can obtain direct current through the most practical and economical rectifier. Direct current increases candle-power, consumes less current and makes clear, sharp pictures.

Wotton REXOLUX

Send for further information to

ELECTRIC PRODUCTS COMPANY
CLEVELAND

BIO CARBONS

Arriving in New York Jan. 10, 1915

If You Wish to Have Me Produce a Bright White Light

Write or Write

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

San Francisco
143 Second St.

New York
165 Greenwich St.

Milwaukee
114 Huron St.

Or All Live Film Exchanges

water is ablaze with lights and fireworks, and the students despoil many stores of their signs and fences of their gates. Then it is that for the first time he discovers that he has been made the dupe of a flirt and decides upon moving West with his father, where even mention of the very name of Atwater would not be possible. At the same time, Jack Larrabee discovers that his plot has become a veritable bommerang, for it has resulted in losing forever the love of Jane Witherspoon. A great celebration of the victory is arranged for the evening of the game at a hotel near the college and while the merry band of revelers are dancing about the mighty bonfire, these disclosures are made, and two fathers announce that their children shall go to the West together.

During the progress of the banquet which is to terminate the festivities of the day an accident happens in the kitchen which causes a rapid and devastating conflagration and the guests escape death only after the most superhuman efforts, many of them being compelled to walk through fire or jump from windows into fire nets. To the horror of all, it is announced that Jane has become lost in the scramble for the two stairways and is in the burning building. Billy has been injured by a leap from a window, but Jack Larrabee offers to risk his life to save Jane. The firemen and police, however, assure him that such an effort would be nothing less than a plunge to death, and mass in front of the burning doorway to prevent him from entering. Calling upon his football team, a wedge is formed, which ploughs a way through the massed firemen. Jack feels his way through the fire and smoke, and places his lost love in her more worthy lover's arms.

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION CO.

SAMSON (Five Parts).—Brachard, born in the Thieves Alley of Marseilles, breaks from his foul and evil surroundings as a youth and obtains a job as a dock laborer. Giant-muscled and slow-moving he yet has within him a spark of unquenchable ambition that is kindled when, on the docks at Toulon, he hears, of a Sunday, street preachers reading of "an old chap called Samson."

Brachard buys the damaged cargo of a stove-in canal boat and disposes of it at a profit. It is the first step that is to bring him to his financial Dagon. Bit by bit he increases his holdings till he is enabled to make a plunge in Egyptian copper. This coup ultimately makes him a financial power with all Paris at his feet.

The Marquis D'Andolin and the Marquise, both worldly financial schemers on the verge of ruin, but keeping up aristocratic appearances, marry off their daughter Marie—whom Brachard loves with all the rugged force of his crude soul—to the newly-risen Croesus. Marie, however, loathes the rough, powerful man, with the uncouth vigor of the dockyard still clinging to him despite the partial veneer that his dealings with men of millions has given him. Jerome Govaine, libertine, duelist and general man-about-town, meets the Brachards and Marie, fascinated by this polished Lothario, agrees to meet him at an orgy in a private room at a fast cafe. A "cast off" of Govaine's, Elise, warns Samson that the appointment is to be kept while the millionaire is absent on a business trip in London. He pretends to start but, instead of taking the train, returns home in time to trap his wife on her return disheveled and hysterical from the supper party. She has succeeded in escaping after a struggle when she saw into what company she had fallen. Brachard, with the intuition that has made him the master in many a financial duel, worms the truth from her at last and swears to avenge himself. Govaine, who has posed as his friend, is deeply involved in copper, thanks to Brachard's tips. The former dock laborer knows no weapons but his fists and a duel with Govaine would mean suicide for him. So he decides to ruin Govaine by "striking the market like a thunderbolt." He does so and, in the crash that follows the fall of Egyptian copper, his own fortune is wiped out and all France is plunged into the convulsions of a financial crisis. Mr. Brachard, having pulled down the pillars of his temple of gold, prepares to leave France forever; but he does not go alone, for Marie, who in his greatness has despised his rugged shrewdness, and rude strength, finds in his downfall that she loves him.

THE IDLER—"The Idler" is Mark Cross, a young man of good family, who in a wild fit of daredeviltry has emigrated from London to the far west. John Harding, also well-born of wealthy parents, but disinherited, and a poor clerk, is also seeking his fortune in the gold fields. One day Harding receives a letter from a firm of London solicitors informing him that his father has died and that he is now Sir John Harding, Bart. He sets out at once to make his preparations for his return to civilization and to take up the station in life that is rightfully his. But that very day he becomes involved in a quarrel with Felix Strong, the young brother of a miner named Simeon Strong, and Felix is shot accidentally during the dispute. Harding is accused of murder, but flees to England in time to escape the vengeance of a posse, headed by Simeon Strong, who is determined to avenge his brother. Years after in London, Harding, who has married the girl both he and Cross were in love with before they emigrated, comes face to face with Cross and Strong, who have become partners and have "struck it rich." In order to win Lady Harding for his own Cross allows the evil side of his nature to get the upper hand of him and plots to have Strong kill Sir John in a duel. Strong slaps Harding in the face in the foyer of the opera house in order that he may involve him in "an affair of honor" and avenge his brother's death by killing Harding. Cross in the meantime lures Lady Harding to his rooms where Sir John comes to seek her. She hides in Mark Cross' bedroom, but reveals herself at a dramatic moment when Harding, shouting "Curse you, I'll kill you!" springs at Cross' throat. Her splendid nature, as shown in her denunciation of both men, one as a husband without faith in his wife and the other as the would-be destroyer of a home, overcomes them with shame. They shake hands and Mark, parting forever with Lady Harding, orders his valet to pack his things for he is off "on a long trail."

A BARGAIN

THE BIGGEST VALUE TO MANUFACTURERS, EXHIBITORS, EXCHANGEMEN AND OPERATORS IS THE

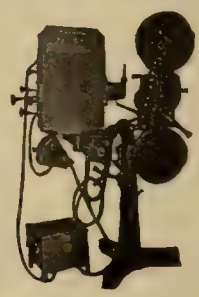
MOVING PICTURE WORLD

SEND YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS TO-DAY DIRECT TO 17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

DOMESTIC - $3.00 PER YEAR
CANADA - - $3.50 PER YEAR
FOREIGN - - $4.00 PER YEAR

POWER'S

Supplies for the Up-to-Date Theatre



SIMPLEX

Meritorious Merchandise With a Guarantee Tagged On It

Distributors for the Powers, Simplex, Edison, Motiograph Machines

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely

That's our method of convincing you, Mr. Exhibitor, that we are miles ahead of others in our line.

MOTIOGRAPH

Let Us Prove It

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

19 West 23d Street, New York

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

EDISON

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MANAGER.—Picture and vaudeville manager, at liberty. Will go anywhere. Give details in first letter. W. F. S. GLAES, 220 Market St., Wilmington, Del.

AT LIBERTY—Manager, operator, and wife, A1 pianist; references exchanged; only reliable managers reply. THE PALMERS, 137 Front St., Deposit, N. Y.

ORGANIST—16 years, plays concert and popular music; picture playing and instruction. Anywhere with large house. H. BRACKEN DYE, Upper Montclair, N. J.

CAMERAMAN desires position. Thoroughly capable, 5 years' experience with the best production companies. Can start immediately. Address C. A., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

OPERATOR at liberty; understands electricity; work unexcelled. R. W. MIDDLECAMP, care 12th St. Theater, Easton, Pa.

CAMERAMAN—At present holding temporary position, desires to get in touch with director or company requiring high-grade, artistic work. Have own equipment, Pathe Professional, with improvements. Best lenses, tripods and still camera. Develop own negatives and make sample print if necessary. CONFIDENTIAL, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN—American and European experience; also expert in all branches of laboratory work and also in toning. Can start at once. POSITIVE, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

DIRECTOR, PRODUCER AND MSS. EDITOR of Slap Stick Comedies desires engagement. Recently with Keystone Co. K. K., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

CINEMATOGRAPH EXPERT—One of the pioneers of the industry in Britain is prepared to undertake the sole agency for the handling of exclusive films and others for the United Kingdom or for the United Kingdom and the Colonies. Apply J. T. RUFFELL, 5 Gt. Newport St., London, Eng.

FOR SALE—Combined winter and summer moving picture theater located in heart of Brooklyn. Beautiful auditorium of 600 seats, same number in comfortable airdome. Long lease at low rental. Recently built for investment purpose. Splendid opportunity for those desiring to enter the business. Address INVESTMENT, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EXHIBITORS—Double your receipts. Send stamp for complete plan. L. McPHERSON, 900 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW YORK FILM COMPANY owning excellent money-making five-reel feature, with subject that is world wide, fine posters and photographs, desires representatives in every state to handle on percentage agreement. Must furnish bond, references as to film business ability and financial standing. Excellent opportunity for hustlers of the right sort. M. L. FORD, Rm. 504 Cedar St., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Coudersport, Potter Co., Pa., building lot, best location for modern picture theater, also picture house building and equipment; $3,500 takes all on your terms. Write quick, R. C. LLOYD.

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY — The J. A. Pogue Feature Film Co., 807 W. Walnut St., Des Moines, Ia., are in position to handle, route and book special features in Iowa, Nebr., Minn., N. & S. Dak. Manufacturers and producers take notice, "We are financially responsible." Write us, giving full particulars, terms and conditions. State right owners. If you have something in above territory you can't use yourself, write us.

ATTENTION—Moving picture exhibitors. What our plan has done for Mr. Marsh it will do for you. Read his letter: "Lyric Theater, W. B. Marsh, Mgr., Williamsport, Pa., Jan. 7, 1915." "Wiliamsport Moving Picture Business Booster Co., First National Bank Bldg., Williamsport, Pa. Gentleman: As my contract expired for 'Who's Who' night, with last night's picture, and the business has been so phenomenally big with 'Who's Who'? I, therefore wish to notify you that we intend to extend it for another period and will only be too glad to pay the additional royalty. Should you desire to use us as a reference, we would only be too pleased to have you do so. We can truthfully say that no feature pictures have ever gotten us as much of an increase in business. The picture house that puts 'Who's Who'? on and works it as per your instructions, cannot fail to increase its business at least 80 per cent. for that night and the following night when the correct guessers' names are shown. As you informed me at the time of making contract, your next edition or plan would be ready about the 15th of January, we hereby notify you that we will take the second edition and put it on immediately at the conclusion of our 'Who's, Who'? as we understand we are to have first chance at it. Wishing you great success, I am, yours very truly, W. B. Marsh, Mgr." You use your regular service with our plan. Use only one day each week. Our terms: One dollar with order, fifty cents each day you use our idea. Remember only one house in cities under 40,000 population. Be the early bird, send at once. This is a real one and another to follow. MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS BOOSTER CO., P. O. Box. No. 306, Williamsport, Pa.

BUY A BUSINESS of your own. Penny chocolate slot machines for backs of theater seats. F. A. TEARS, 143 North St., Middletown, N. Y.

WANTED—Reliable Film Exchange to handle our features on a commission basis in New York State (excluding Greater New York). Now releasing two features monthly. BENNED FILM CO., 110 West 40th St., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—Film exchange, excellent reason for selling; good proposition. Right price. FIDELITY FILM CO., 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WE ARE desirous of obtaining grade A theaters everywhere, especially in Greater New York and its environs suitable for photoplay purposes. Houses now in operation or to be built to suit our requirements will be of interest. Correspondence solicited. PARAMOUNT THEATERS CORP., 331 Madison Ave., N. Y. City.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER for rent in town of 14,000 population, shops working full time. Seven days, 5 and 10c; seating capacity 600. Equipment with everything ready to run moving pictures. Rent $50 per month. Write P. RUBIN, 160 Church St., Naugatuck, Conn.

THEATER FOR LEASE in middle west city of 15,000; fine location; seats 375; fully equipped ready to show. Furnishings the best. PASTIME AMUSEMENT AND SUPPLY CO., Austin, Minn.

FULLY EQUIPED motion picture theater, 320 seats, 10c admission, city 10,000 population, 90 miles from New York. Only one opposition; price and rent reasonable; long lease; owner other business. Good opportunity for live man. A. FRANZOS, care Munnich Bros., Port Jervis, N. Y.

HANDSOMEST MODERN photoplay theater in middle west, everything new. Big railroad center and manufacturing city of 50,000. Lifetime opportunity; would consider part time or a live partner. Bargain; act quickly. P. O. Box 1312, Joliet, Ill.

FOR SALE—Idle Hour Theater, runs seven days in a town of three thousand (3,000) population; four hundred seats; doing good business; only theater in city. Address Mgr. Idle Hour Theater, Rochester, Mich.

TEN-YEAR LEASE—Modern, fully-equipped picture theater, seats 500. New York town 5,000 people; no opposition; seven days. Recently built; guaranteed $50 to $75 a week profit. Box office trial. What's your offer? Address C. T., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—M. P. show, 300 seats, equipped for vaudeville. Town 6,000 in central Ind. Only one other house; a live one can clean up. Sold at invoice $1,300 cash. Address X., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

PICTURE SHOW theatre, property and business, for sale; owner going to Florida account of asthma. Rents for $60. Lease just expired. If run by owner will net $250 up per month. Machine and all equipment included in price, $4,500. Address A. W. THAYER, Thompson Falls, Montana.

MOVING PICTURE THEATRE, transfer corner, Brooklyn, has stage and 295 opera chairs. Good business; $1,500, fully equipped. Address Excellent Opportunity, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Tent for summer, for moving picture shows and small vaudeville, about 40x80 feet. HARLEY E. POTTER, Portal, N. Dak.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O., 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

OPERA AND FOLDING CHAIRS for all purposes at cut anti-trust prices; used chairs a specialty. New from ninty-five cents up. I can save you money. Tell me what you want. J. P. REDINGTON, Scranton, Pa.

WE BUY, SELL AND EXCHANGE second-hand moving picture machines and films. Write for bargains. MONARCH FILM SERVICE, Memphis, Tenn.

MUST HAVE MONEY QUICK—Will sell any part of my theater, operated only 3 months and forced to close through poor business. Power's 6A with loop setter, $125; Simplex, $140; five-ply opera chairs, 75c; Ft. Wayne compensarc, $30; iron booth, underwriters' inspection, $25; Excello flaming arc lamps, $50 pair. All goods guaranteed good as new; will ship subject to inspection. GLEN ALFRED, 2110A Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

WRITE OR WIRE—The Lears Theatre Supply Co., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo., the largest exclusive theater equipment concern in the West, for seats, all leading makes of moving picture machines, operating booths, curtains and all other theater accessories. They always have some slightly used goods in stock for immediate shipment and sell them at bargain prices. Folding chairs, 40c each up. Opera chairs, 60c each up. Moving picture machines, $50 each up. Send them an exact list of your wants and see why they sell them all.

PHANTOSCOPE—$25; good condition; used 3 times. F. A. HOLMES, Brewster, N. Y.

POWERS NO. 5—Complete, with lenses, rewinder, perfect condition, $65. Expressed subject to examination. MARTIN FREDERICKS, 3533 No. 13th St., Phila., Pa.

OPERA AND FOLDING CHAIRS—Large assortment, extra special prices; immediate delivery. Dandy bargains in large assortment of second-hand chairs. ATLAS SEATING CO., 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

BARGAIN—Power's 6A, complete, good as new; latest improvements; price, $150; silveroid screen, 12x16, cheap. A. FRANEIS, Canton, Ohio.

PORTABLE OUTFIT—Optiograph six and Ozo-Carbi gas making outfit, $150. Edison disc phonograph, $75. J. G. HOWARD, Waterman, Ill.

FOR SALE—Everywhere, moving picture theater chairs, bargains. B. B. Q., 32 W. Market St., Corning, N. Y.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

LATEST 1914 MODEL—Number 2 American with three extra magazines, changing bag, tripod with tilt and carrying case. Entire lot lists at $357.50. Price for quick sale, $275. Will ship C. O. D., with privilege examination. W. E. HANE, 537 E. Center St., Marion, Ohio.

CAMERAS WANTED.

WANTED—Couple good motion picture cameras, complete outfits. One cheap topical, other DeLuxe. MILLER "SPORTOGRAM," Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—Camera, 400 ft. professional with tripod, Pathe preferred; what have you? also projector; must be bargains. CAMERAMAN, 2078 College, Jacksonville, Fla.

WANTED—Moving picture camera of good make and in first-class condition. State make of camera and condition of same in first letter, together with price and equipment. A. LAWRENCE, 734 Mass. St., Lawrence, Kans.

(Continued on Page 592.)

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 507
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS..... 529
ANTARCTIC PICTURES..... 494
AUBREY KENNEDY IN TOWN..... 492
BIG AUTHORS WITH SELIG..... 518
BOSWORTH'S "HYPOCRITES" AT LONG ACRE THEATER..... 497
BRITISH NOTES..... 528
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES... 564
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES 566
CHICAGO LETTER..... 501
COMING BOSWORTH RELEASES..... 521
COMING STATE CONVENTION..... 547
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)... 515
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) 516
CRAWFORD, FLORENCE..... 525
"DANCING GIRL, THE" (Famous Players).. 525
DEBATE ON CENSORSHIP..... 542
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES..... 503
DOUBLE EXPOSURE CAMERA, A..... 493
EDUCATIONAL LIGHTS AND SHADOWS. 489
"EXPLOITS OF ELAINE, THE" (Pathe).. 498
FACTS AND COMMENTS.....s..... 487
FEATURE FILM STORIES..... 568
FEATURE RELEASE DATES..... 596
FIVE BIOGRAPH RELEASES..... 496
GLICKMAN TALKS ON CONDITIONS..... 491
HUDSON, WILBUR COLLIER..... 524
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES..... 558
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES..... 594
KLEINE SHOWS "DU BARRY"..... 494
"LAST CHAPTER, THE" (Favorite Players) 523
LEAGUE HOLDS MEETING..... 530
"LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, THE" (Essanay)..... 500
LIFE PHOTO'S FIRST YEAR..... 506
LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT BIG..... 504
LICENSED FILM STORIES..... 552
LICENSED RELEASE DATES..... 598
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.... 531
MICHIGAN FIRE INSPECTION..... 538
"MIGNON" (California)..... 499
MONTREAL TO CHANGE TAX..... 537
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR..... 526
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE..... 505
NEW THEATER OPENED..... 545
NOTES OF THE TRADE..... 535
OBSERVATIONS MAN ABOUT TOWN..... 519
"O'GARRY OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED" (Vitagraph)..... 521
OHIO CONVENTION..... 491
PEARCE CONTRADICTS NEFF..... 490
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE..... 509
PICTURES OF SOUTH AMERICA..... 494
PICTURE THEATERS PROJECTED..... 536
PITTSBURGERS INVITED..... 546
PRICE MADE THE GAME, THE..... 527
PRICE RAISING IN NEW ENGLAND..... 527
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT..... 511
"RIDGEWAY OF MONTANA" (Universal). 524
RITA JOLIVET ENGAGED BY LASKY.... 523
ROGERS, RENA..... 520
"RUNAWAY JUNE" (Mutual)..... 495
SCARDON, PAUL..... 498
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 552
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).. 558
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features)..... 568
SUGGESTIVE INTERIORS..... 488
"SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS" (Edison)... 497
THEATER COMPANY EXPANDS..... 491
THEATERS AWAIT THRONGS..... 544
"THROUGH THE MURK" (Domino)..... 522
"TIME LOCK 776" (Photo Drama)..... 522
TO SELL SHARES TO EXHIBITORS..... 495
"TRAGEDY OF BEAR MOUNTAIN, THE" (Kalem)..... 520
WAR CENSORS PIGEONHOLE ORDERS... 492
"WHITE MASK, THE" (Lubin)..... 493
WHITE, PEARL..... 499
WYCHERLY, MARGARET..... 500

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBONS AND CARBON ACCESSORIES.
CARBON ECONOMIZER CO..... 568
HOMMEL, LUDWIG, CO..... 560
KIEWERT, CHAS. L., CO..... 589

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIP-
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO..... 601
DETROIT MOTOR CAR SUPPLY CO..... 605
ELECTRIC PRODUCTS CO..... 589
ERKER BROS..... 602
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS..... 597
FULTON, E. E..... 605
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO..... 556
HALLBERG, J. H..... 553
HOWELL-RYDER CO..... 587
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO..... 590
SMITH, L. C., CO..... 600
STERN MFG. CO..... 559
STRELINGER, CHAS. A..... 568
SWAAB, LOUIS M..... 561
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MFG. CO.. 557

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE..... 557
BRADENBURG, G. W..... 600
CAMPBELL, DONALD..... 602
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO..... 563
ECONOMY FILM CO..... 556
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO..... 598
NEW YORK ALCO FILM SERVICE..... 593
RELIABLE FEATURE FILM CO..... 600

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTUR-
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO..... 468
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.... 455
RELIANCE MOTION PICTURE CO.....460-61
THANHOUSER FILM CORP..... 569
THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP..... 454
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.....456-57, 595

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO.. 587

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH..... 565
EDISON, THOS. A., INC..... 484
ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.....458-59
KALEM.....475, 486
LUBIN MFG. CO.....476-77
MINA FILMS.....596, 599
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO..... 607
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA..... 485

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALBUQUERQUE FILM CO..... 577
ALLIANCE FILM CORP.....580-81
APEX FILM CO..... 582
ARCTIC FILM CO..... 585
CALIFORNIA PICTURE CO..... 474
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO..... 602
COSMOS FEATURE FILM CO..... 557
CRYSTAL FILM CO..... 579
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....462-63
FAVORITE PLAYERS FILM CO..... 606
FEATURES IDEAL, INC..... 578
GAUMONT CO..... 578
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO..... 604
HISTORICAL FEATURE FILM CO..... 600
KRITERION SERVICE 570-74
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO..464-65
NIELSEN, F. O..... 554
MITTENTHAL FILM CO..... 577
PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.....470-73
PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORP.....466-67
PRIVATE FEATURE FILM CO..... 536
RENFAX FILM CO..... 593
SAWYER FILM CORP..... 469
SMALLWOOD FILM CORP..... 579
SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO..... 583
UNITED FILM SERVICE (WARNER'S FEATURES)..... 576
WORLD FILM CORP.....478-79

MISCELLANEOUS.
ALLISON & HADAWAY..... 601
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO..... 562
ANIMAL CO., CARE M. P. W..... 601
ATLAS MOTION PICTURE CO., INC..... 603
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO..... 555
BENDER, GEORGE..... 568
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 591
COMSTOCK PUBLISHING CO..... 563
CORCORAN, A. J..... 568
CRANE, FRANK H..... 568
EASTMAN KODAK CO..... 587
ENAMEL PRODUCTS CO..... 601
FEIBLEMAN, J. L. & CO..... 603
GITHOIL CHEMICAL CO..... 570
GUNBY BROS. 605
IMPERIAL TICKET CO. OF N. Y., INC.. 560
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO..... 536
KESSELL ADVERTISING SYSTEM..... 602
KRAUS MFG. CO..... 587
McGUIRE, W. C..... 568
MUELLER, LOUIS. 556
NATIONAL TICKET CO..... 594
ONE DROP OIL CO..... 603
ROSS-GOULD. 603
SCHILLER FILM CO..... 563
SENNETT, MACK. 604
SMALLWOOD FILM CORP..... 602
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO..... 605
STOCKTON'S SCRIPTWRITING SERVICE. 605
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.... 562
SHURE, N., CO..... 600

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C..... 603
SINN, CLARENCE E..... 605
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO..... 556

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
ANDREWS, A. H..... 605
HARDESTY MFG. CO..... 605
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO..... 605
STEEL FURNITURE CO..... 605
WISCONSIN SEATING CO..... 605

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
GOES LITHOGRAPHING CO..... 536
MENGER & RING..... 568
NEWMAN MFG. CO..... 560
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO..... 556

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO..... 603
POWER, NICHOLAS. 608
PRECISION MACHINE CO..... 567

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
DAY & NIGHT SCREENS, INC..... 604
GENTER, J. H., CO., INC..... 563
GOLD KING SCREEN CO..... 561

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
NIAGARA SLIDE CO..... 536
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO..... 600

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO..... 603

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (Continued from Page 591)

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED—Immediately, a great number of reels of films in good condition, cheap. S. G., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FEATURES WANTED—3, 4 and 5-reel subjects with original paper. Must be in perfect condition. D. KREIZERSTEIN, 220 West 42d St., N. Y. City.

WANTED—Second-hand film, 1, 2, 3, 4 reels. Give full particulars and lowest price in first letter or no attention paid. Address S. E., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

WANTED—Comedy negatives, also second-hand educational reels. LICHTIG, Rm. 904, 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FILM FOR SALE, in good shape, posters included. Send for list. Lock Box 691 Kalamazoo, Mich.

WANTED—To get in communication with firm interested in educational, scenic films of Canadian Rockies, ice capped mountains, great glaciers, lakes, waterfalls and canyons. Never photographed before; also wild animals, mountain sheep, goats, elk, etc. Will be in New York Jan. 20 to 31. Address B. H. H., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FEATURES FOR SALE—3, 4 and 5 reelers, original paper; perfect condition. Communicate, CONSUMERS' FILM SERVICE, 220 West 42d St., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE—200 single reels, with or without posters, no junk; also scenic reels and educational subjects. FEDERAL FEATURE FILM CO., 220 West 42d St., N. Y. City.

BRAND NEW features for sale. Released November; some state rights still open. Last two prints, one never on reels. ADLONG FILMS INC., 35-37 West 39th St., N. Y. City.

$4.00 EACH—100 reels, in good condition, with plenty posters for each, for sale. Every reel guaranteed. Write or wire GLOBE FILM EXCHANGE, Pantages Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.

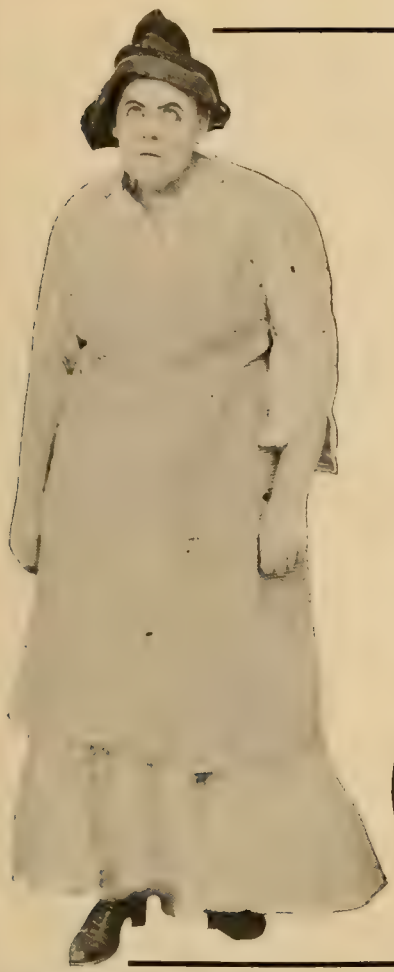
MISCELLANEOUS.

SCENARIOS WANTED.—Suitable for Comedy Films. WASHINGTON FILM CO., Seattle, Wash.

SUCCESSFUL SLIDE WRITING.—A chemical that enables you to write as easy on glass as on paper. No blurs. $1.00 box, enough for 500 slides. CHEMICAL GLASS DRYER CO., Grand Rapids, Minn.

STICKTITE CEMENT—Something new, guaranteed to hold or money refunded; special prices in large quantities; sample bottle, with brush, 25c. STICKTITE CEMENT CO., Turners Falls, Mass.

HAVE YOUR SCENARIOS neatly typewritten. 10c per page, with carbon copy. Prompt work. L. SULZER, 4306 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill.



SIX REELS OF KEYSTONE

Mack Sennett

GREATEST COMEDY EVER PRODUCED

Tillie's Punctured Romance

BEGINS WITH A TITTER—ENDS WITH A ROAR

Chas. Chaplin

Mabel Normand

New York Alco Film Service

218 West 42nd Street
New York

For New York City—State

$ $

RENFAX

MUSICAL MOVIES

SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES!

RENFAX FILM CO., Inc.

Makers of Musical Movies

110 WEST FORTIETH STREET, NEW YORK

PITTSBURG, PA.: 417 Fourth Avenue CHICAGO, ILL.: 154 West Lake Street
COLUMBUS, OHIO: 312½ North High Street

RENFAX FILM CO.
110 West 40th Street, New York City.
Gentlemen:—Please send, without obligation to me, information regarding your Musical Movies.

(Theatre)

(Address)

(State)

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

UNIVERSAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Eclair, L-KO, Rex.
Monday—Imp, Joker, Victor.
Tuesday—Big "U," Gold Seal, Nestor.
Wednesday—Animated Weekly, Eclair, L-KO.
Thursday—Big "U," Rex, Sterling.
Friday—Imp, Nestor, Victor.
Saturday—Bison, Joker, Powers.

BISON.

Jan. 16—The Governor Maker (Two Parts—Modern—Drama).
Jan. 23—Old Peg-Leg's Will (Two parts—Mining Drama).
Jan. 30—The Mystery Woman (Two parts—Western Drama).

BIG U.

Jan. 19—The Dear Old Hypocrite (Drama).
Jan. 21—Their Island of Happiness (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 26—Alias "Mr. Smith" (Drama).
Jan. 28—The Unmasking (Drama).

ECLAIR.

Jan. 10—The Dummy Husband (Comedy-Dr.).
Jan. 13—Reunited (Two Parts—Domestic—Dr.).
Jan. 17—Romance in Bear Creek (Western—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Lone Game (Two parts—Western—Drama).
Jan. 24—The Clue of the Portrait (Drama).
Jan. 27—Cancelled (Two parts—Western Dr.).
Jan. 31—The Thief and the Chief (Com.-Dr.).

GOLD SEAL.

Jan. 12—A Woman's Debt (Two Parts—Dr.).
Jan. 19—Smugglers' Island (Two parts—Sea Coast—Drama).
Jan. 26—The Madcap Queen of Gredshoffen (Two parts—Drama).

IMP.

Jan. 11—No release this week.
Jan. 15—A Gentleman of Art (Two Parts—Detective—Drama).
Jan. 18—On Dangerous Ground (Drama).
Jan. 22—The House of Fear (Three parts—Melodrama).
Jan. 25—How Mary Fixed It (Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Millionaire Engineer (Two parts—R. R. Drama).

JOKER.

Jan. 11—The Butler's Baby (Comedy).
Jan. 16—Hubby's Cure (Comedy).—Quaint Brittany (Educational).
Jan. 18—The Hicktown Rivale (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Fools and Pajamas (Comedy).
Jan. 25—The Magic Mirror (Comedy).—Views of Holland (Educational).
Jan. 30—He Fell In Love With His Mother-in-Law (Comedy).

L-KO.

Jan. 17—Caught With the Goods (Comedy).
Jan. 20—Every Inch a Hero (Comedy).
Jan. 24—The Death of Simon La Gree (Comedy).
Jan. 27—Merry Mary's Marriage (Comedy).
Jan. 31—After Her Millions (Three parts—Comedy).

NESTOR.

Jan. 19—When Cupid Caught a Thief (Comedy).
Jan. 22—When the Deacon Swore (Comedy).
Jan. 26—When Eddie Took a Bath (Comedy).—A Mile a Minute Ride (Educational).
Jan. 29—Jed's Little Elopement (Comedy).

POWER'S.

Jan. 16—An Outlaw's Honor (Western—Dr.).
Jan. 23—Uncle Sam's Phenomenal Achievement (Educational).
Jan. 30—The Crime of Thought (Drama).

REX.

Jan. 14—Pawns of Fate (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 17—A Small Town Girl (Two Parts—Human Interest—Drama).
Jan. 21—Children of Chance (Drama).
Jan. 24—The Temptation of Edwin Swayne (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—The Measure of a Man (Two parts—Canadian—N. W. M. P.—Drama).
Jan. 31—No Release this Week.

STERLING.

Dec. 31—Love and Water (Comedy).
Jan. 7—Olive's Love Affair (Comedy).
Jan. 14—Those German Bowlers (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Dude Raffles (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Treasure Seekers (Comedy).

VICTOR.

Jan. 11—My Lady High and Mighty (Two Parts—Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 15—Father's Strategy (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 18—Father's Three (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—No Release this week.
Jan. 25—His Guardian Angel (Two parts—Domestic Drama).
Jan. 29—How She Fooled Aunty (Comedy-Dr.).

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES.

Dec.—Damon and Pythias (Six Parts—Drama).
Dec. 7—The Master Key, No. 4 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 14—The Master Key, No. 5 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—The Master Key, No. 6 (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—The Master Key, No. 7 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—The Master Key, No. 8 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Master Key, No. 9 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Master Key, No. 10 (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Master Key, No. 11 (Two Parts—Drama).

MUTUAL RELEASE DAYS.

Sunday—Komic, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Monday—American, Keystone, Reliance.
Tuesday—Beauty, Majestic, Thanhouser.
Wednesday—American, Broncho, Reliance.
Thursday—Domino, Keystone, Mutual Weekly.
Friday—American, Kay-Bee, Majestic or Thanhouser, Princess, Reliance.
Saturday—Keystone, Reliance, Royal

AMERICAN.

Jan. 13—The Black Ghost Bandit (Drama).
Jan. 15—The Clubman's Wager (Drama).—Producing a Nation's Pride (Edu.).
Jan. 18—Refining Fires (Two parts—Sociological Drama).
Jan. 20—The Crucifixion of Al Brady (Western—Drama).
Jan. 25—Silence (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—Coals of Fire (Drama).

BEAUTY.

Jan. 12—The Spirit of Giving (Drama).
Jan. 19—A Girl and Two Boys (Comedy Dr.).
Jan. 26—Evan's Lucky Day (Comedy-Drama).

BRONCHO.

Jan. '27—The Gun Fighter (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 3—The Customary Wife (Two parts—Dr.).
Feb. 10—Shorty's Adventures In the City (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 17—A Chinatown Mystery (Two parts—Drama).

DOMINO.

Jan. 28—Through the Murk (Two Parts—Dr.).
Feb. 4—A Modern Noble (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 11—The Bride of Guadeloupe (Two parts—Drama).

KAY BEE.

Jan. 29—Bottomless Pit (Drama).
Jan. 29—The Famine (Drama).
Feb. 5—College Days (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 12—In the Tennessee Hills (Two parts—Drama).
Feb. 19—Mr. Silent Haskins (Two parts—Dr.).

KEYSTONE.

Jan. 4—Her Winning Punch (Comedy).—United States Army in San Francisco (Educ.).
Jan. 7—Giddy, Gay and Ticklish (Comedy).
Jan. 9—Only a Farmer's Daughter (Comedy).
Jan. 11—Rum and Wall Paper (Comedy).
Jan. 14—Mabel's and Fatty's Wash Day (Com.).
Jan. 16—Hash, House, Mashers (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Mabel's and Fatty's Simple Life (Two parts—Comedy).

KOMIC.

Jan. 10—Love and Business (Comedy).
Jan. 17—A Flyer in Spring Water, No. 15 of the "Bill" Series (Comedy).
Jan. 24—A Flurry in Art (Comedy).
Jan. 31—Cupid and the Pest (Comedy).

MAJESTIC.

Jan. 17—What Might Have Been (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—On the Table Top (Drama).
Jan. 24—The Better Man (Two parts—Western Drama).
Jan. 26—The Broken Lullaby (Drama).
Jan. 31—A Farewell Dinner (Two parts—Dr.).

PRINCESS.

Jan. 15—Pleasing Uncle (Comedy).
Jan. 22—An Innocent Burglar (Drama).
Jan. 29—The Home of Silence (Drama).

RELIANCE.

Jan. 16—One Flight Up (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Mutual Monographs No. 1. "With Julian Street and Wallace Morgan" (Top.).
Jan. 20—The Sea Brat (Drama).
Jan. 22—After Twenty Years (Drama).
Jan. 23—The Craven (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The World Upstairs (Drama).
Jan. 27—The Express Messenger (Drama).
Jan. 30—The Love Pirate (Two parts—Drama).

ROYAL.

Jan. 9—Married by Installment (Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Unwilling Bride (Comedy).
Jan. 23—Her Hero (Comedy).
Jan. 30—Ring Around Rosey (Comedy).

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 10—An Inside Tip (Drama).
Jan. 12—The Speed King (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 17—A Yellowstone Honeymoon (Scenic—Drama).
Jan. 19—Graft vs. Love (Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 24—The Dog Catcher's Bride (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 26—Finger Prints of Fate (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Volunteer Fireman (Drama).
Jan. 31—Helen Intervenes (Drama).

SERIAL PUBLICATION CORP.

Jan. 13—Runaway June (Episode No. 1, "The Runaway Bride" (Reliance—Two parts—Drama).

THANHOUSER SYNDICATE CORP.

Nov. 30—Zudora, Episode No. 2, "The Mystery of the Sleeping House" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 7—Zudora, Episode No. 3, "The Mystery of the Dutch Cheese Maker" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 14—Zudora, Episode No. 4, "The Secret of the Haunted Hills" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—Zudora, Episode No. 5, "The Case of the Perpetual Glare" (Two Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—Zudora, Episode No. 6, "The Case of the McWinter Family" (Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—Zudora, Episode No. 7, "The Mystery of the Lost Ships" (Two Parts—Drama).

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand.....$1.25
Ten Thousand.....$2.50
Twenty Thousand.....$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand.....$5.50
Fifty Thousand.....$6.50
One Hundred Thousand.....$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000 $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

Universal Weekly News

A page of vitally important news published by the Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1600 Broadway, New York, for the interest of all exhibitors

WEEK OF JAN. 23rd NEW YORK CITY 1915

IT DOESN'T PAY TO GAMBLE WITH YOUR BUSINESS SUCCESS

We will help you make 1915 a big winner.

Make use of the Universal's helping hand.

THE Universal is setting the pace for 'em all in boosting business for its exhibitors.

While the Universal Program gives you the best pictures in the world, the greatest of all film stars, and the most complete film service in the universe, it doesn't stop there. It employs for your benefit the keenest brains in America to work for you—the Exhibitor—preparing advertising matter that tells the people what you have in your theater. It keeps you supplied with an endless chain of advertising and publicity matter of the business-getting class. Strong stuff with a punch that fills your theater nightly, and the wonderful Universal Program brings them back.

Every Universal Exhibitor knows these facts. Every reader of the Universal Weekly learns to know about the Universal "helping hand," and the wise ones take advantage of its opportunities for greater profits.

Why then should you fuss around and spend your good hard dollars and your valuable time—paying $25 to $75 for features that come to you from the Lord knows where; features that the public knows nothing about, and that give you about as much co-operation as any other peddler, which is NONE?

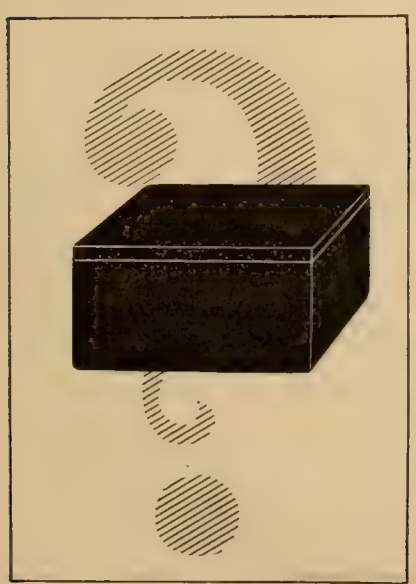
You can't sit back and wait for the people to come. You've got to tell them what you have and you must have the real goods to talk about. That's what the Universal Program and Universal "helping hand" does for you.

It's the Exhibitor's Bible Read It Every Week

IF THERE'S anything about the motion picture business that you need to know, you should read The Universal Weekly, the big 40-page magazine published every week. If you will send your name and address to the Editor and mention your house, The Universal Weekly will be sent you FREE for three months.

Write today. It's FREE.

EDITOR UNIVERSAL WEEKLY
1600 BROADWAY NEW YORK



HIGH CLASS UNIVERSAL FEATURE RELEASES THAT WILL PACK YOUR THEATRE

THE Always Winning Universal Program This Week Includes the Following Featured Photoplays:

Another corking program discloses seven multiple reel films that are top-notchers. Book now if you want the S. R. O. sign out every night. The Universal is the most comprehensive program in the universe.

THE HEART OF LINCOLN—A theme woven about the noblest and best loved characteristic of the Great Emancipator. Staged with startling realism, and marvelously portrayed by Francis Ford, Grace Cunard and a splendid company of Universal ability. A truly great production in two reels from the Gold Seal Studios. Released February 9.

WOLVES OF SOCIETY—Brother and sister, worse than social parasites, use the woman's beauty as the lure in their scheming for riches. Fortune seems to favor them, when in the most unexpected manner the tables are turned as a victim of their past arises from the depths to disclose their villainy. A society drama featuring Frank Lloyd. Produced by the Bison Company in two reels. Released February 14.

ALL ABOARD—Here's hilarious fun-making aboard a railway train, a scenario which has given the Victor Studio a wonderful chance for novel effects and screamingly funny scenes. The principal action takes place aboard a sleeping car. Lee Moran as the dictatorial porter and Eddie Lyons as the protector of babes and a fair maid in distress make good comedy-plus. Finely produced by the Nestor people in two reels. Released February 12.

EVERY GIRL—A more than clever combination of thrilling drama and the ever-attractive morality play. Mary Fuller as Every Girl rises to splendid heights of emotional acting in scenes ranging from the home of a working girl to the joy palaces where the lights are brightest in the wee sma' hours. This remarkable Victor drama in two reels will be released February 8.

THE VAUDRY JEWELS—The deepening mystery of a theft, cleverly solved in a most original manner. A striking departure from the ordinary detective photoplay, staged with realistic properties which add to the thrilling interest of every scene. This is a truly magnificent two-reel production from the Big U Studios, and the director has most happily cast Edna Maison in the leading role. Released February 11.

TERROR—A thrilling drama, the plot of which shows deep psychological study of fear. Tense situations that bring the audience to the edge of their seats gaspingly awaiting the climax which tops a crescendo of interest rarely seen in even the best of photoplay thrillers. A clever two-reel production of the Eclair's high standard, featuring Nobert A. Myles, Anna Earle and Carl M. Levinuff. Released February 10.

THE LION'S PREY—The wildest of jungles, a thrilling shipwreck, and fierce battle between man and the king of beasts provides a setting for this intensely interesting drama of love, hate, adventure, and enough other emotions to crowd two reels from the Bison Studios full of action and rapidly developed plot and action. Leading roles serve to adequately feature Wm. Clifford and Marie Wolcamp. Released February 13.

MISCELLANEOUS INDEPENDENT and FEATURE RELEASES

ALCO FILM CORP.

Dec. 14—The Three of Us (Rolfe—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec. 21—Tillie's Punctured Romance (Keystone Six Parts—Comedy).
Dec. 28—Springtime (Drama).
Jan. 4—The Garden of Lies (Five Parts—Dr.).

ALLIANCE FILM CORP.

Dec.—The Truth Wagon (Masterpiece—Five Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Last Chapter (Favorite Players—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—In the Shadow (Drama).

APEX.

Dec.—A Life at Stake (Five Parts—Drama).
Jan.—For King or Kaiser (Drama).
Jan—The Vultures of the Coast (Three parts—Drama).

BLINKHORN PHOTOPLAYS CORP.

Nov.—Jane Eyre (Whitman—Four Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Witness Invisible (Three Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Aviator Traitor (Three Parts—Dr.).

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS CO.

Dec.—The Idler (Drama).
Dec.—Samson (Drama).
Dec.—A Fool There Was (Drama).
Jan—The Children of the Ghetto (Drama).
Jan—The Gilded Fool (Drama).
Jan—The Butterfly on the Wheel (Drama).
Jan—The World and His Wife (Drama).

COSMOFOTOFILM CO.

Dec.—The Black Spot (Four Parts—Drama).
Dec.—The Two Columbines (Drama).
Dec.—A Christmas Carol (Drama).
Jan.—The Victoria Cross (Three parts—War Drama).

PATHE.

Jan—The Secret of the Mountain (Pathe—Four parts—Drama).
—Sugar Making (Cuba) (Educational).
Jan—The Life of Our Saviour (Pathe—Seven Parts—Drama).
Jan. 4—The Exploits of Elaine, Episode 2 "The Twilight Sleep" (Pathe—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan—The Old Thespian (Pathe—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan—Shot in the Fracas (Pathe-Comedy).
Jan—Nick Winter and the Mysterious Bank (Pathe—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan—The Birth of Plants (Pathe—Educational).
Jan.—The Price of Tyranny (Pathe—Four Parts—Drama).
Jan.—Romiet and Julio (Pathe—Cartoon—Comedy).
—Malga, Southern Spain (Pathe—Educational).
Jan.—A Scratch of the Pen (Pathe—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Exploits of Elaine, Episode 3—"The Vanishing Jewels" (Pathe—Two parts—Drama).
Jan.—The Tip Off (Pathe-Balboa—Three parts—Drama).
Jan.—Happy's Mishaps (Pathe—Comedy).
Jan.—Fires of Affliction (Pathe—Three parts—Drama).

KRITERION SERVICE.

Releases for week of January 18th to 23d, inclusive:

The Crystal Globe (Paragon—Drama).
And Percy Got Married (Santa Barbara—Comedy).
Birth of Emotion (Alhambra—Drama).
The Boob's Racing Career (Thistle—Comedy).
Goaded by Jealousy (Santa Barbara—Drama).
The Tattooed Man (Monty—Comedy).
The Call of the Sea (Monty—Drama).
Blown Upon (Punch—Comedy).
Eliza's Fairy Prince (Trump—Drama).
Accidents Will Happen (Pyramid—Comedy).
Zoological (Nolege—Animal Study).
Joe's Partner, Bill (Navajo—Drama).
Beating Father To It (Alhambra—Comedy).

Releases for week of January 25th to 30th, inclusive:

Prejudice Conquered (Paragon—Drama).
And Billy Studies Music (Santa Barbara—Comedy).
The Curse of the Black Pearl (Alhambra—Drama).
Won by a Mustache (Thistle—Comedy).
The Arm of the Law (Santa Barbara—Drama).
His Double Did It (CK—Comedy).
Falsely Accused (Monty—Drama).
Domestic Revolutions (Punch—Comedy).
The New Sheriff (Trump—Drama).
One Night (Pyramid—Comedy).
Winter Resorts (Nolege—Sporting).
Nevada (Navajo—Drama).
Paris Hat (Alhambra—Comedy).

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

Dec.—The Adventures of Gar El Hama (Four Parts—Drama).
Jan.—A Woman of Impulse (Four parts—Dr.).

HEPWORTH.

Dec.—The Basilisk (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec.—Through the Valley of Shadows (Four Parts—Drama).

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA.

Dec.—Jules Porel-Serpent (Three Parts—Dr.).
Dec.—The Treasure of the Louzats (Four Parts—Drama).

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, INC.

Dec.—Should a Woman Divorce? (Five Parts—Drama).

KINETOPHOTE & K. & C. BOOKING CO., INC.

Dec. 7—The Span of Life (Five Parts—Dr.).
Dec. 21—The Little Jewess (Four Parts—Dr.).

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM.

Jan. 4—Girl of the Golden West (Lasky-Belasco—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—The Dancing Girl (Famous Players—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—Aurora Leigh (Smalleys—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—It's No Laughing Matter (Bosworth—Drama).
Jan. 18—The Morals of Marcus (Famous Players—Drama).
Jan. 21—Young Romance (Lasky—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—The Goose Girl (Lasky—Five parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—After Five (Lasky-Liebler—Five parts—Drama).

PHOTO DRAMA CO., INC.

Jan.—Time Lock Number 776 (Six Parts—Dr.).

SAWYER.

As a Man Sows (Aquilla—Five Parts—Drama).
A Factory Magdalen (Five Parts—Drama).
The Lady of Lyons (Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 31—The Sibyl of the Film (Comedy Dr.).

STRAND FILM CO.

December—A Double Haul (Eaco—Three Parts—Drama).
December—A Strange Adventure (Drama).

SUNSET MOTION PICTURE CO.

Jan.—Rescue of the Steffansson Arctic Expedition (Topical).

UNITED WARNERS.

Dec.—The Little Rebel (Drama).
Dec. 21—The Adopted Daughter (Grandin—Three Parts—Drama).
Dec. 28—Cupid Kicks a Goal (Grandin—Comedy—Drama).
Jan.—The Heart of a Man (Drama).
Jan. 4—The Burglar and the Mouse (Grandin—Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 11.—His Doll Wife Grandin—Comedy—Drama).
Jan.—Are They Born or Made (Drama).
Jan.—The Honor of Bill Jackson (Features Ideal—Two parts—Drama).
Jan.—With Daddy's Aid (Luna—Comedy).

WORLD FILM CORP.

Dec. 28—The Pit (Brady—Five Parts—Dr.).
Jan. 4—Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch (Calif. M. P. Corp—Comedy).
Jan. 4—Bertlevyette—Great Americans, Past and Present (L. & O.—Topical).
Jan. 11—Bertlevyette—New York and Its People (L. & O.—Topical).
Jan. 11—Deep Purple (Lieber—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Mignon (Calif. M. P. Corp.—Five Parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—Wildfire (Shubert—Drama).
Jan. 18—Bertlevyette—Famous Rulers of the World (L. & O.—Topical).
Jan. 25—Bertlevyette—Famous Men of To-day (L. & O.—Topical).

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD REVIEWS OF

MINA

FILMS

Absolutely reliable, unbiased, unasked and conscientious criticisms. This week's release, Distilled Spirits, is a truly remarkable trick picture with the most coherent and tensely interesting story ever put into one reel.

Issue of Jan. 9, 1915.

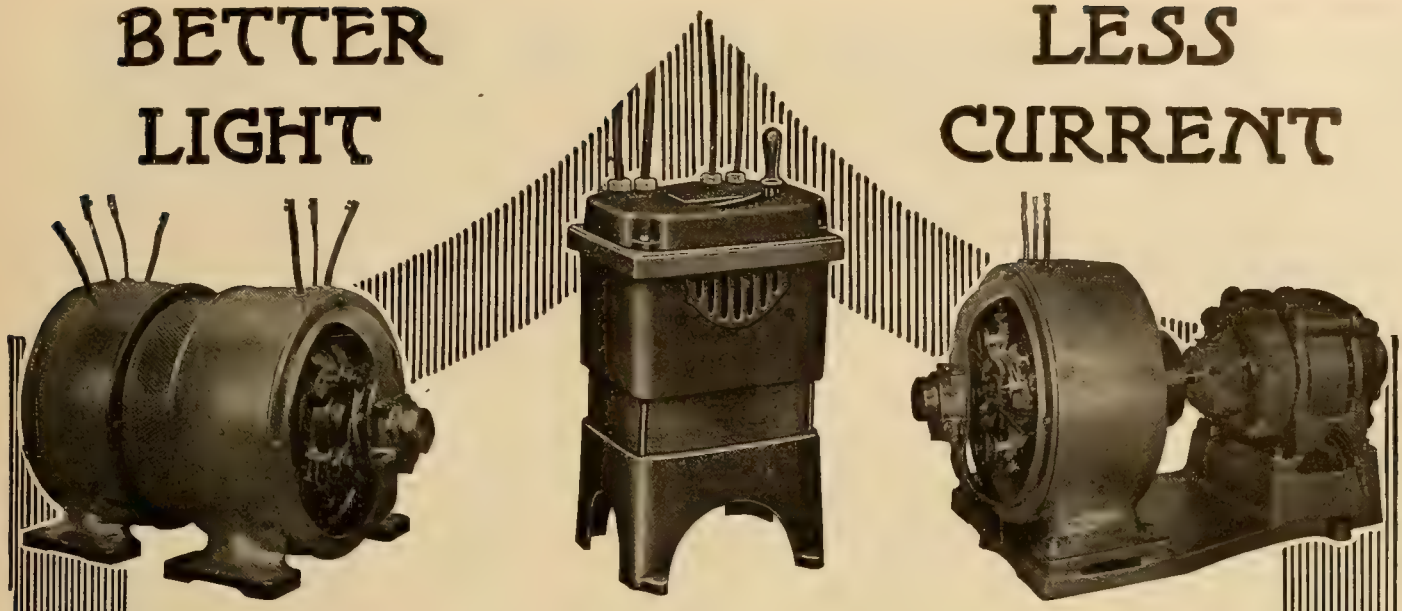
"A High Old Time (MinA) Dec. 24.—A comedy that mixes up white and colored people in a peculiar sort of a way and contains some remarkable stunts, which are not only original but awfully strenuous for the actors. This picture made an excellent hit with the audience, and if the future releases of this new brand are equal in production, they will certainly become very popular. Exhibitors will do well to try them out."

Issue of Jan. 16, 1915.

"The Siege of Liege (MinA) Dec. 31—A comedy which is greeted with roars of laughter from start to finish. What happens to Harry Palmer, war correspondent and newspaper cartoonist, is beyond description. This is one of the funniest cartoon pictures that has ever been produced."

Don't let anyone talk you out of MinA films. Insist. See for yourself. Every Thursday on the General Film Program.

BETTER LIGHT LESS CURRENT



The DC Compensarc lowers the voltage of a direct current supply to that required at the lamp without needless waste.

The AC Compensarc cuts ⅔ from your lighting bill if you use alternating current.

The AC to DC Compensarc will transform alternating into direct current and reduce the voltage at the same time without needless waste.

No matter what current you have---Alternating or Direct---or what voltage or frequency, one of the will enable you to secure a light that will give those clear, bright pictures that everybody now demands.

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARCS

What's the use of paying extra money for special screens, projecting machines, and first run films and then spoil the whole result with poor light? With the Fort Wayne Compensarcs you can get any kind of light you want regardless of the kind or quality of your current supply.

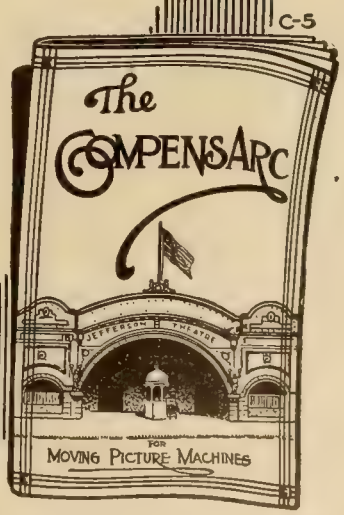
The Compensarcs will give you

STEADY LIGHT. No flickering, no sputtering, even when changing intensities or from one machine to another.

WHITE LIGHT. No yellow streaks, no ghosts.

BRIGHT LIGHT. Three times the light with two-thirds the current.

They are safe, efficient, easy to operate, fool proof and reliable.



FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1702 BROADWAY
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

Compensarcs are so commonly found in motion picture theatres that many people now call all current saving and transforming devices by that name.

But Remember

If it isn't a FORT WAYNE *it isn't a "COMPENSARC"*

Send TODAY for this FREE descriptive booklet

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph. Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 14—Getting Into a Scrape (Comedy).
—Near-Educational Series, "The Cheese Industry" (Comedy).
Jan. 15—The Inevitable Retribution (Drama).
Jan. 16—The House of Horror (Drama).
Jan. 18—The Undying Fire (Drama).
Jan. 19—The Lady of Dreams (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 21—The Gang's New Member (Drama).
Jan. 22—Heart's Hunger (Drama).
Jan. 23—His Night Out (Comedy).
—In the Boarding House (Comedy).

EDISON.

Jan. 12—Olive's Other Self (Eighth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Drama).
Jan. 13—Curing the Cook (Comedy).
—McGinty and the Count (Comedy).
Jan. 15—Lena (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Banker's Double (Drama).
Jan. 18—To Make the Nation Prosper (Drama).
Jan. 19—Olive's Manufactured Mother (Ninth of Olive's Opportunities—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Wonders of Magnetism (Educational).
—A Weighty Matter for a Detective (Comedy).
Jan. 22—Tracked by the Hounds (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 23—Mr. Daly's Wedding Day (Drama).
Jan. 25—Joey and His Trombone (Comedy).
Jan. 26—Olive In the Maunouse (Tenth of "Olive's Opportunities" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 27—The Terrible Trunk (Comedy).
—Lodgings for Two (Comedy).
Jan. 29—An Invitation and An Attack (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 30—In His Father's Footsteps (Edu.).

ESSANAY.

Jan. 12—By a Strange Road (Drama).
Jan. 13—The Fable of "The Fellow Who Had a Friend Who Knew a Girl Who Had a Friend" (George Ade Com.).
Jan. 14—When Slippery Slim Went for the Eggs (Western—Comedy).
Jan. 15—Dear Old Girl (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 16—Broncho Billy and the Sisters (Reg. U. S. Pat Office—Western—Drama).
Jan. 18—Sweedie and Her Dog (Comedy).
Jan. 19—The Misjudged Mr. Hartley (Comedy—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Fable of Hifaluting Tillie and Her Plain Parents (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Sentimental Sophie (Western Comedy).
Jan. 22—The Lieutenant Governor (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 23—Broncho Billy and the Baby (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office) (Western Drama).
Jan. 25—Two Hearts That Beat as Ten (Com.).
Jan. 26—At the End of a Perfect Day (Drama).
Jan. 27—The Fable of "The Syndicate Lover" (Comedy).
Jan. 28—When Slippery Slim Bought the Cheese (Western Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Ambition of the Baron (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 30—Broncho Billy and the False Note (Reg. in U. S. Patent Office—Western—Dr.).

KALEM.

Jan. 11—The Adventure at Briarcliff (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 12—A Bold, Bad Burglar (Comedy).
Jan. 13—The Stolen Ruby (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 15—A Boob for Luck (Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Broken Circuit (Tenth of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 18—The Leech (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—Cornelius and the Wild Man (Comedy).
—A Night in New Jersey (Cartoon Comedy).
Jan. 20—The Cabaret Singer (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—Cooky's Adventure (Comedy).
Jan. 23—The Fast Mail's Danger (Eleventh of the "Hazards of Helen" Series—Dr.).
Jan. 25—The Tragedy of Bear Mountain (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 26—A Model Wife (Comedy).
—Fatty's Echo (Comedy).
Jan. 27—The Affair of the Deserted House (First Episode of "The Girl Detective" Series (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Cause of It All (Comedy).
Jan. 30—The Little Engineer (Twelfth of the "Hazards of Helen" Railroad Series—Drama).

LUBIN.

Jan. 11—Patsy Bolivar, No. 3—Patsy at College (Comedy).
Jan. 12—Baseball and Trouble (Comedy).
Jan. 13—When Honor Wakes (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 14—The Friendship of Lamond (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 15—Out of the Storm (Drama).
Jan. 16—Mr. Stubb's Pen (Comedy).
—Spaghetti and Lottery (Comedy).
Jan. 18—Patsy Bolivar Series No. 4—Patsy's Vacation (Comedy).
Jan. 19—Gus and the Anarchists (Comedy).
—Cupid's Target (Comedy).
Jan. 20—Her Weakling Brother (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 21—The Shanghaied Baby (Special—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan. 22—A Question of Conscience (Drama).
Jan. 23—Shoddy, the Tailor (Comedy).
Jan. 25—Patsy Bolivar—No. 5—"Patsy in Business" (Comedy).
Jan. 26—Green Backs and Red Skins (Comedy).
Jan. 27—The Attorney for the Defense (Special—Three parts—Drama).
Jan. 28—In Her Mother's Footsteps (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 29—The Language of the Dumb (Drama).
Jan. 30—Another Shade of Green (Comedy).

MINA.

Jan. 7—Alias Greased Lightning (Comedy).
Jan. 14—Distilled Spirits (Comedy).
Jan. 21—Dare-Devil Harry (Comedy).
Jan. 28—Black and White (Comedy).

SELIG.

Jan. 11—The Old Code (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 3 (News).
Jan. 12—Harold's Bad Man (Comedy).
Jan. 13—The Richest Girl in the World (Dr.).
Jan. 14—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 4 (News).
Jan. 15—The Snailburg Volunteers (Comedy).
Jan. 16—Robert Thorne Forecloses (Drama).
Jan. 18—His Fighting Blood (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
Jan. 18—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 5 (News).
Jan. 19—Cactus Jim's Shop Girl (Western—Comedy).
Jan. 20—Between Matinee and Night (Drama).
Jan. 21—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 6 (News).
Jan. 22—Who Wants to be a Hero (Farce-Comedy).
Jan. 23—The Primitive Way (Drama).
Jan. 25—The Spirit of the Violin (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 25—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 7, 1915 (News).
Jan. 26—The Grizzly Gulch Chariot Race (Farce Comedy).
Jan. 27—Heart's Desire (Drama).
Jan. 28—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 8, 1915 (News).
Jan. 29—She Wanted to be a Widow (Farce Comedy).
Jan. 30—The Hunt In Sycamore Gap (Melodrama).

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 9—A Daughter of Israel (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 11—Fates of Flora Fourflush, Part 2—Treasure Temple of Bhosh (Com.).
Jan. 12—A Mix-Up in Dress Suit Cases (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 13—The Hair of Her Head (Comedy).
Jan. 14—The Legend of the Lone Tree (Dr.).
Jan. 15—Chiefly Concerning Males (Comedy).
Jan. 16—The Sage-Brush Gal (Broadway Star Features — Special — Three Parts — Drama).
Jan. 18—The Fates and Flora Fourflush—A Race for Life (Part Three of the Ten-Billion-Dollar Vitagraph Mystery Serial—Comedy).
Jan. 19—The Evil Men Do (Broadway Star Feature—Three Parts—Drama).
Jan. 20—The Right Girl (Comedy).
Jan. 21—The Navajo Ring (Drama).
Jan. 22—Wanted, a Nurse (Comedy).
Jan. 23—War (Special—Two Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 25—The Slightly Worn Gown (Comedy).
Jan. 26—The Life of Game (Special—Two parts—Drama).
Jan. 27—The Home Coming of Henry (Comedy).
Jan. 28—The Barrier of Faith (Drama).
Jan. 29—The Chief's Goat (Comedy).
Jan. 30—Under the Paint (Broadway Star Feature—Special—Three parts—Drama).

MISCELLANEOUS LICENSED FEATURES.

BIOGRAPH.

Oct.—The Charity Ball (Three Parts—Drama).
Oct.—The Power of the Press (Four Parts—Drama).
Oct.—The Genius (Three Parts—Drama).
Nov.—The Woman in Black (Four Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—Under the Gaslight (Four Parts—Dr.).

EDISON.

Dec. 19—Fantasma (Five parts—Drama).

ESSANAY.

Nov. 19—The Tell-Tale Hand (Three Parts—Drama).
Dec. 19—The Battle of Love (Drama).
Jan. 18—When Love and Honor Called (Dr.).

GEORGE KLEINE.

Oct.—The Song of the Soul (Three Parts—Drama).
Oct.—Judge Not (Four Parts—Drama).
Nov. 15—Julius Caesar (Six Parts—Drama).
Nov.—Officer No. 666 (Five Parts—Comedy).
Jan. 18—Du Barry (Six parts—Drama).

KALEM.

December—The School for Scandal (Four Parts—Drama).

LUBIN.

Nov.—Eagle's Nest (Eight Parts—Drama).
Nov.—The Sporting Duchess (Six Parts—Dr.).
Nov.—The Spy's Fate (Three Parts—Drama).
Nov.—The College Widow (Five Parts—Com.).
Dec.—The White Mask (Drama).
Dec.—The Valley of the Lost Hope (Drama).
Jan.—The District Attorney (Drama).

SELIG.

Nov. 11—The Story of the Blood-Red Rose (Three Parts—Drama).
Nov. 30—In the Days of the Thundering Herd (Five Parts—Drama).
January—The Carpet from Bagdad (Five Parts—Drama).
January—The Rosary (Drama).
January—The Servant in the House (Drama).
January—The Ne'er Do Well (Drama).
January—A Texas Steer (Five Parts—Comedy).
January—The Crisis (Drama).
January—History of the World's Greatest War (Five Parts—Topical).

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street. Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York.
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

MIRTH AND MAD MERRIMENT,
JOY, FROLIC AND LAUGHTER.
THE SPIRIT OF PURE AND HEALTHY FUN RUNS THROUGH EVERY REEL OF MINA
FILMS
NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS-
THESE UP TO THE MINUTE SINGLE COMEDIES
CAUGHT ON LIKE WILDFIRE!
EVER SEE: SUCH CLASSY ONE AND THREE SHEETS AS THE MINA POSTERS?
SUCH NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY FOR ONE BRAND AS MINA IS GETTING?
BOOK MINA FILMS NOW!
THROUGH LICENSED EXCHANGES
EVERY THURSDAY ON THE GENERAL FILM PROGRAM
MADE IN AMERICA

COMEDIES

Six releases per month—Animated cartoons and comedy.

Terms on application, pictures subject to examination.

Historical Feature Film Company

105 WEST MONROE ST., CHICAGO

EXHIBITORS IN WISCONSIN

WE HAVE SECURED STATE RIGHTS FOR

HALL CAINE'S POWERFUL STORY

THE CHRISTIAN

THE SPLENDID VITAGRAPH-LIEBLER PRODUCTION

BOOKINGS ARE OPEN

ADDRESS

RELIABLE FEATURE FILM COMPANY

605 Schiller Building, Chicago

M. SCHWARTZ
Manager

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

G. W. BRADENBURGH

FILMS IMPORT AND EXPORT 902 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Most Reliable in America. Terms to buyers: 25% cash with order, balance C. O. D., privilege of examination.

A SMALL SELECTION FROM OUR STOCK:

Name	Description	Length ft.	Maker	Price	Adv.
Exposure of the White Slave Traffic	Drama	3500	G. N.	100	1-3-6
The Devil's Gap	Drama	3600	D. B.	150	1-3-6
Ill-Gotten Gains	Drama	3250	Cines	150	1-3-8
Satan	Drama	5000	Amb.	200	1-3-6-9
Asta Nielsen Up to Her Tricks	Comedy	5000	Special	200	1-3-6
Asta Nielsen Cry of a Child	Drama	3000	Special	150	1-3-6
Asta Nielsen Spanish Blood	Drama	5000	Special	200	1-3-6
For the Queen's Honor	Drama	3000	Amb.	80	1-3-9
Custer's Last Fight	Western	2200	Bison	70	1-3-8
Officer and Gentleman	Drama	3000	Vita	90	1-3-6
St. George and the Dragon	Myth	2700	Milano	150	1-3-6
Black Ship	Drama	3000	Dragon	100	1-3-6
Sensation of the Age	Drama	3000	Chariot	125	1-3-9
Jess	Drama	4000	Kennedy	125	1-3-6
Night on the Atlantic	Drama	3000	German	120	1-6
Elsie Venner	Drama	3000	Kennedy	100	1-3-6
Across the Danger Line	War	3000	Monarch	75	1-3-6
Hearts of the First Empire	Drama	2000	Vita	50	1-3-6
Charlotte Corday	Drama	4000	Kennedy	125	1-3-6
Mexico	Western	4000	Kennedy	125	1-3-6
Diamonds of Destiny	Drama	4000	Imperator	125	1-3-6
Red Powder	Drama	4000	Apex	100	1-3-6
'Neath the Lion's Paw	Drama	3400	Gau	160	1-3-6

POSTERS AT COST. State number required. Special Bargain Parcels: 5000 ft. assorted subjects, including feature and comedy, $25.00; 10,000 ft. assorted subjects, including 2 features and Keystone, $50.00; 25,000 ft. assorted subjects, including 3 features and 2 Keystones, $75.00. Nothing too large; nothing too small.

When Writing to Advertisers Kindly Mention MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

YOU CAN ALWAYS PLAY TO A "FULL HOUSE"

if you make judicious use of PREMIUMS, such as we furnish to hundreds of MOVING PICTURE HOUSES.

If you are interested, write for our 700-page CATALOGUE No. 578, which lists an endless variety of appropriate premiums at the lowest prices.

N. SHURE COMPANY 230 West Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Carbons Carbons Carbons

Exhibitors! Why pay an Exorbitant Price for your carbons when you can save plenty of money by buying the kind made in the U. S. A. from us? Get our prices and you will appreciate the saving.

The only Jobbers in Philadelphia for the 4 best known Machines in the world—Edison, Powers, Simplex and Motiograph—ALWAYS in STOCK.

Let us improve your Light by installing a WESTINGHOUSE MERCURY ARC RECTIFIER or a WAGNER CONVERTER.

A large stock of 14-inch STEEL REELS to carry 2000 ft. of film. The best on the market, $1.00.

Scenery of all kinds made to order. Expert repairing done on all machines at short notice. The House that handles nothing but the Best and Only GENUINE PARTS of everything. If you are not one of our customers, you are losing money by not dealing with the WIDE AWAKE CONCERN.

Bargains in Slightly Used Machines. Power's No. 6A, 3 Power's No. 6, 2 Power's No. 5, 1 Edison Model B and 1 Edison Exhibition Model; all complete.

These are Bargains and will be closed out quickly. Do not Delay.

Estimates on New Theatres cheerfully given.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY, Inc.
1301 Race Street, Philadelphia

COMING
TODAY
MONDAY
TUESDAY
WEDNESDAY
THURSDAY
FRIDAY
SATURDAY
SUNDAY
TODAY
COMING
TODAY

This Set of Signs
(lasts a lifetime)
for $5.00

These twelve signs will reduce your sign expense. They will last a lifetime. They will decorate your theatre entrance. Large white letters and a rich red background make them readable and attractive.

Unlike costly cardboard signs, they will always stay clean and neat. You can easily attach them to any part of your building, expose them to all weather conditions and clean them quickly with a damp cloth. That's because they're

Tepco
The Enamel Products Co.
CLEVELAND OHIO U.S.A.

SIGNS

The indestructible kind—made by fusing special vitreous enamel on 20-gauge steel at a temperature of from 1800 degree to 2000 degrees.

The size is 4 x 17. There are three reading "Today," one for each day of the week and two "Coming."

Tepco signs can be made in any style, color or size. We manufacture to order large theatre signs or the smaller kind, reading "Program changed daily," "Reserved Seats, 20 cents," "Admission, 10 cts.," "Matinee Today," etc., or any other special style you may require.

Don't get signs of any kind without first writing us. Order this Tepco Set now. Shipped C. O. D. with privilege of returning within one week if unsatisfactory.

The Enamel Products Co.
Eddy Road & Taft Ave., Cleveland, O.

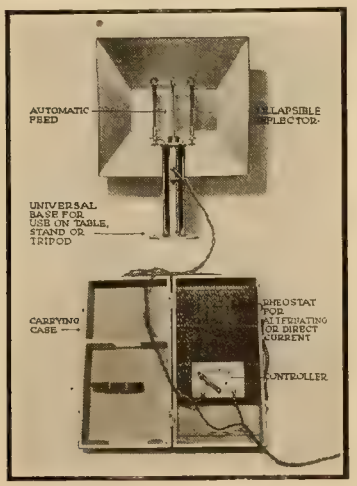
We Want One Reel Animal Scenarios

With lots of action, full of comedy situations, etc., using the two almost human chimpanzees, "Napoleon" and "Sally," with a supporting company of tamed elephants, lots, tigers, leopards, monkeys and other animals.

Send us your scenarios—we will pay cash for those accepted.

Address Animal Company
Care of Moving Picture World
17 Madison Avenue - New York City

"A great light---it gives the Director 25% more latitude in his work and makes possible scenes never before filmed"---



That is what one of the real big men wrote us about the

A&H.
Panchroma Twin Arc Lamps

8000 c. p. per unit. Weight in case, 19 lbs. Either Direct or Alternating Current. Can be transported anywhere by a boy.

The biggest advance in motion picture lighting yet made.

Write for descriptive matter or call for a demonstration.

ALLISON & HADAWAY
Photographic Importers and Manufacturers
235 Fifth Avenue New York

ALLIANCE PROGRAM

One "Worth While" Feature Each Week

For

Illinois and Indiana

Controlled by

Celebrated Players Film Co.

Leaders in Filmdom's Progress

64 W. Randolph Street, Chicago

See Alliance Films Corp. ad. this issue for releases

SCRIPTS WANTED

We require immediately two reel scripts, with the action well written out suitable for featuring a female star. Experienced writers are particularly requested to submit stories. A minimum of seventy-five dollars a story will be paid, although more money will be paid for stuff justifying the price. Prompt action guaranteed.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION
175 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK
John C. Brownell, Editor

Business-Bringing Banners

Hand Painted, Beautifully Colored, Attractive, Artistic

EVERY TUESDAY
THE GREATEST SERIAL STORY OF THEM ALL
THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE
Featuring ARNOLD DALY, PEARL WHITE AND ALL STAR CAST
READ THE STORY IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN—SEE IT IN MOTION PICTURES HERE

This is a sample of our 12-foot Muslin Banner for $1.10, sent by return mail after receipt of your copy and M. O. Substitute any wording you desire and we supply an exclusive, elaborate design. One Sheet Cards at 75c.; three for $2.00. Send for catalogue.

Kessel Advertising System

71 West 23rd Street New York City

After a weary search you will eventually

COME TO ME

A personal visit or a communication will get you in touch with an inexhaustible supply of the film that satisfies—at direct prices.

I HAVE THE GOODS

The finest stock of SINGLE REELS in the United States from $4 up.

DONALD CAMPBELL
145 West 45th Street, New York

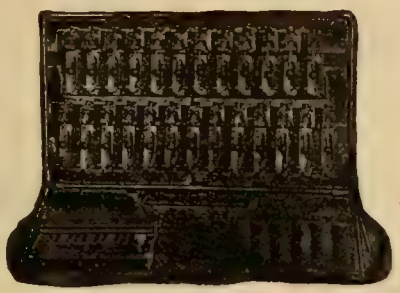
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

contains an unequalled fund of information in regard to every angle of the moving picture art. Its staff is an aggregation of the best posted men in the industry who have devoted years to a study of the requirements of all our readers. Its correspondents are located in all the principal centers and its columns contain the most complete data possible. In a class by itself as a trade paper for every intelligent student of moving picture production and exhibition.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE: Domestic, $3.00; Canada, $3.50; Foreign, $4.00
Advertising Rates upon Request

Mr. EXHIBITOR:

Attract the Crowd
To Your
Lobby
With a
Deagan Unaphone



More exciting than a
Circus Calliope
Write for Particulars
J. C. DEAGAN,
Deagan Building,
1776 Berteau Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

A man's mail will reach him where no mortal can

Mailing Lists

99% Guaranteed
covering all classes of business, professions, trades or individuals. Send for our complete catalogue showing national count on 7,000 classifications.

Ross-Gould 570 N. 9th St. St. Louis

TICKET BOOTHS
FOR
MOTION PICTURE THEATRES
DESIGNED AND MANUFACTURED BY
The Decorators Supply Co., Chicago
SHOW ROOMS AND FACTORY LOCATED CORNER ARCHER AVE., LEO & LIME STS.
SEND US YOUR BLUE PRINTS, AND WE WILL WORK OUT THE MOST ARTISTIC AND EFFICIENT LIGHTING SCHEME
Send for our catalog of moving picture fronts

Moving Picture Theatre for Rent, Newark, N. J.
Up-to-date house, centrally located, opposite one of the leading theatres. No other picture house within several blocks. Good transient trade. Excellent opportunity for right party to lease for a term of years at low rental. Communicate with us at once.
J. L. FEIBLEMAN & CO., 738 Broad St., Newark, N. J.

WHY NOT NOW?
Bull Dog Cement
and
One Drop Oil
ONE DROP OIL COMPANY
2222 W. Monroe St., Chicago

Developing and Printing for the Trade
Quality and Prices Right
WANTED—SCENARIOS
for One Reel Comedies
ATLAS MOTION PICTURE CO., INC.
600 Liggett Building Detroit, Mich.

LATEST MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

USED WHEN THE BEST IS NEEDED

THE BUYER'S CODE:

Quality, Endurance, Steady and Flickerless Projection

Satisfaction and Lowest Up-Keep Cost

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 W. Randolph St., Chicago
Eastern Office, 19 West 23d St., New York Western Office, 833 Market St., San Francisco

THE DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN REIGNS SUPREME!

BECAUSE

It is built to order to meet the precise conditions of your house! It is absolutely in one piece—without a seam! You may view it from any angle—you may open all your doors and windows—you may turn on all your house lights—and the picture is the same! It produces the most beautiful picture on record! It requires the lowest amperage of any screen on record! It will not tarnish, peel, crack, wrinkle or turn color! It can be washed freely—and requires only ordinary care! It is absolutely unaffected by atmospheric or climatic conditions! It will last forever—and is guaranteed for five years!

IN SHORT IT IS

THE SCREEN OF QUALITY ——— THE SCREEN DE LUXE

FOR CATALOGUES, SAMPLES AND TESTS, WRITE

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, Inc., 110 West 40th St., New York

LONDON PARIS BERLIN AND ALL PRINCIPAL AMERICAN CITIES TELEPHONE 7930 BRYANT

MACK SENNETT

The Keystone of the Keystone Film Success

AUTHOR AND PRODUCER OF THE WORLD'S SIX-REEL COMEDY MASTERPIECE

"TILLIE'S PUNCTURED ROMANCE"

WITH

MARIE DRESSLER

This is a Usual Scene Wherever Mack Sennett's "Tillie's Punctured Romance" is Shown

Now In Preparation — ANOTHER SMASHING SENNETT FEATURE —With An ALL STAR BROADWAY CAST

BIGGER FUNNIER BETTER

STILL LEADING IN THE FIELD OF FEATURES

GREAT NORTHERN

110 W. 40th Street FAMOUS FILM PRODUCTIONS NEW YORK

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON

HIGH Quality

LOW Price

Opera Chairs

immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.

Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.

See the New "1915" Models, After Jan. 1st

"UNLIKE THE ORDINARY CHAIRS"

ADDRESS:
THEATRE CHAIR SALES DEPT.
NEW LONDON,
U. S. A. WISC.

CASTEEL THEATRE CHAIRS

MADE ONLY BY
WISCONSIN SEATING FACTORIES

FACTORIES IN NEW LONDON
PT. WASHINGTON
SHEBOYGAN
U. S. A. GRAFTON

THE PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO

North Manchester, Ind.

Opera Chairs
Folding Chairs
Complete Line
Prompt Shipments
Write for Catalogue
With Direct Factory Prices

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office
782 Mission St.

Stockton's Scriptwriting Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

REV. E. BOUDINOT STOCKTON, S.T.B.
161 So. Arlington Ave., East Orange, N. J.

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

The HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan.

QUALITY FIRST!!

YOUR NEGATIVE DEVELOPED, PRINTED, TITLED and SHIPPED within 12 hours.

5c. per foot complete

Local work given preference over all other.

6c. TITLES per foot

We lead, let those that can, follow.

GUNBY BROS., Inc.,
145 West 45th Street, New York City

Are You Tired

of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The

Orpheum Collection

contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:

No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3

Piano, (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts, each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1842 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.

PRINTING and DEVELOPING FILM TITLES

Give us a trial. All work guaranteed
Prompt service. Prices right
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.

STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Phone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

The "Fulco" Book No. 5

NOW READY—ASK FOR IT

FITS YOUR POCKET

Most complete catalogue in existence of machines and supplies, involved in the presentation of

MOVING PICTURES

Buy the Best From the Best Place to Buy

E. E. FULTON CO.
152 W. LAKE ST., CHICAGO
Sole Agents for the Wonderful "Gull Pastil"

FAVORITE PLAYERS CB FILM COMPANY

Offices.
110 W. 40th St
New York

Studios.
Los Angeles
California

PRESENT

Carlyle Blackwell

IN

"THE LAST CHAPTER"

A FIVE PART PHOTO PLAY

From the Novel Entitled "An Unfinished Story"

By

Richard Harding Davis

Previously Released

"The Man Who Could Not Lose"

Five Parts—From the Book by Richard Harding Davis

"The Key To Yesterday"

Four Parts—From the Book by Charles Neville Buck

Book Through

All

ALLIANCE

Exchanges

Selig

Don't Be a Telegraph Pole and Stand Still; Be a Live Wire and Hum.—SELIG SNAPSHOTS.

Selig Regular Program for Week of January 25-30

Brilliant 4-Color Selig Posters Ready for Shipment on all Releases. Order from Your Exchange or from This Office

A SELIG TWO-REEL DRAMA RELEASED MONDAY, JANUARY 25

THE SPIRIT OF THE VIOLIN

Written by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

A most remarkable and picturesque Selig production which is descriptive of frontier life when our pioneer forefathers carved out their homes in the western wilds. John Graham, the pioneer, is wrongfully accused of a crime and sentenced to prison for life. His noble wife fights for a livelihood and is importuned to become the mate of a scoundrelly gambler. She keeps her faith and when Graham's innocence is proved, they make up for deferred happiness.

LATEST WAR PICTURES

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 7

RELEASED MONDAY, JANUARY 25 ONE REEL

A. E. WALLACE, the Hearst-Selig camera man, sends additional war pictures taken by imperial authority of the Kaiser. Also news pictures from world's centers.

A SELIG FARCE-COMEDY

The Grizzly Gulch Chariot Race

RELEASED TUESDAY, JANUARY 26 ONE REEL

Two cowboy rivals engage in a home-made chariot race to decide who shall marry a buxom maid. "Shrimp," a "dark horse," enters the contest and carries off the prize. It's a comical picture. Tom Mix is featured.

A SELIG DRAMA

Heart's Desire

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27 ONE REEL

The pretty secretary of a society woman is loved by the son of her employer. She disappears and he searches frantically. A toy balloon with a message attached happily reunites them.

PICTURES FROM WAR-SWEPT EUROPE

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 8

RELEASED THURSDAY, JANUARY 28 ONE REEL

More news pictures from the world's Capitals; also additional authorized war news scenes stamped with German Imperial authority.

A SELIG FARCE-COMEDY

She Wanted To Be a Widow

RELEASED FRIDAY, JANUARY 29 ONE REEL

A refreshing and remarkably funny Selig comedy from the pen of W. E. WING, and acted by the popular Selig comedians. Of course, it's an exaggerated plot, but it's full of laughs and comical situations.

A SELIG MELODRAMA

The Hut in Sycamore Gap

RELEASED SATURDAY, JANUARY 30 ONE REEL

The story of a crooked banker who deals with counterfeiters and his final detection by secret service operatives. A pretty and attractive love story runs through the picture.

ALL SELIG RELEASES THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

Executive Offices: Chicago, Ill., 20 E. Randolph St.

TRADE S MARK

Economy–Durability–Efficiency

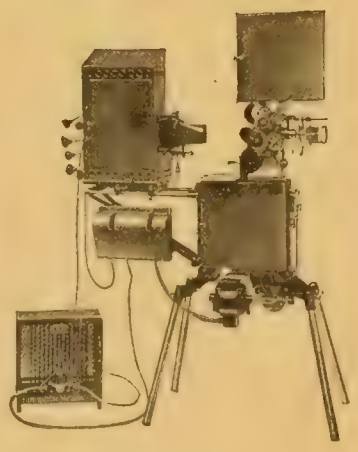
Always

THIS is the whole secret of the Power's wonderful success.

The strongest single proof of the Power's ability to serve, is the list of growing, successful exhibitors using them.

Our repeat orders for additional equipment to supply the demand of our old customers, who are already operating one or more Power's and who know their strength and simplicity is a big business in itself.

This alone proves that the POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6A has given a big "value received."



Write for Catalog G

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City

Vol. 23, No. 5 January 30, 1915 Price 10 Cents

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Glory of Clementina" (Edison).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

ZUDORA IN THE TWENTY MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

James Cruze--The Hero!

Sidney Bracy

Into this marvelous photoplay serial by Harold Mac Grath—the noted author—comes a new character—Jim Baird, the newspaper reporter hero. James Cruze interprets this part with all the action that made famous "The Million Dollar Mystery." The story by Harold Mac Grath is now appearing in 300 leading newspapers. The photoplay is produced under the direction of Howell Hansel—the director who supervised the making of "The Million Dollar Mystery". This newest Thanhouser serial—"The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery" promises to outdo all the previous efforts of Harold Mac Grath and Howell Hansel.

Sidney Bracy and Frank Farrington Are Back!

Sidney Bracy and Frank Farrington—whose work is known to millions of movie fans through their appearance in "The Million Dollar Mystery"—are now appearin "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery."—Exhibitors will be quick to see that this great cast of stars including James Cruze, Marguerite Snow, Sidney Bracy, Mary Elizabeth Forbes, Frank Farrington, and Harry Benham is indicative of an exceptional photoplay.

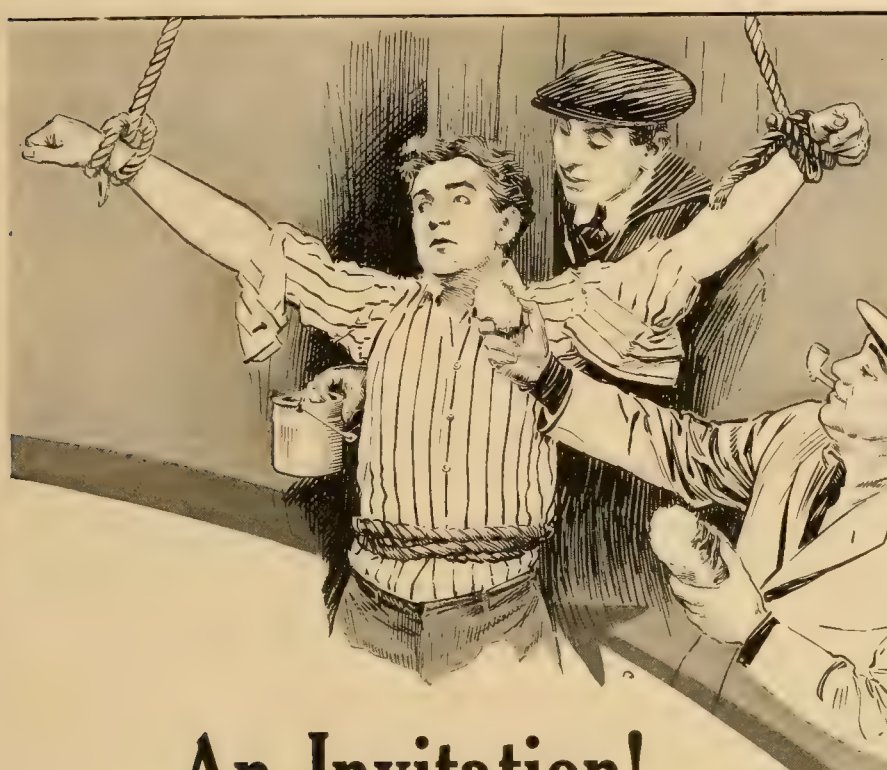
Sidney Bracy, Marguerite Snow and Harry Benham

Read This Telegram!

Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation.

Book Twenty Million Dollar Mystery for all my houses First Run. Saw Episodes Eight, Nine and Ten. They are wonderful.

—Ellis F. Glickman.



James Cruze

An Invitation!

Exhibitors— Accept this invitation! Go to the Mutual Film Exchange nearest you and ask to see the newest Thanhouser serial—"The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery." See James Cruze as the newspaper-reporter hero; See Sidney Bracy as Tom Hunt, the private detective; see Frank Farrington as Capt. Radcliffe, chief of the conspirators; see the entire Thanhouser cast of stars in this great serial; see the new, elaborate settings which cost a fortune; see the exquisite gowns worn by the women players; see what a really remarkable photoplay-story Harold Mac Grath and Howell Hansel have written and produced. See this big attraction—then you'll book it!

Book This Big Feature NOW!

If you can't get to a Mutual Exchange TODAY, wire or write or telephone for a reservation. Get the facts from the Thanhouser Syndicate representative at any Mutual Exchange in America. Don't miss this big feature—"The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery"—written by the greatest American author, Harold Mac Grath—produced by the greatest director, Howell Hansel—and enacted by the greatest cast of film stars with James Cruze as the hero. Book it NOW!

Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation
71 W. 23rd St., New York City, N. Y.

Produced by the Thanhouser Film Corporation, New Rochelle, New York, Producers of "The Million Dollar Mystery."

Mary Elizabeth Forbes and Frank Farrington

Read this unsolicited letter from the largest and finest moving picture theatre in the entire world:-

BOUND BY UNIVERSAL INTERESTS

The Strand Theatre of New York
Mark Strand Theatre Company
Owners and Operators

OFFICE OF THE MANAGING DIRECTOR

December eighteenth, 1914.

Animated Weekly,
1600 Broadway,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

The Strand Theatre has been using the ANIMATED WEEKLY as the basic for the Topical Review for some time and I have found it, in every instance, to be live, up-to-date, and full of good events well cut.

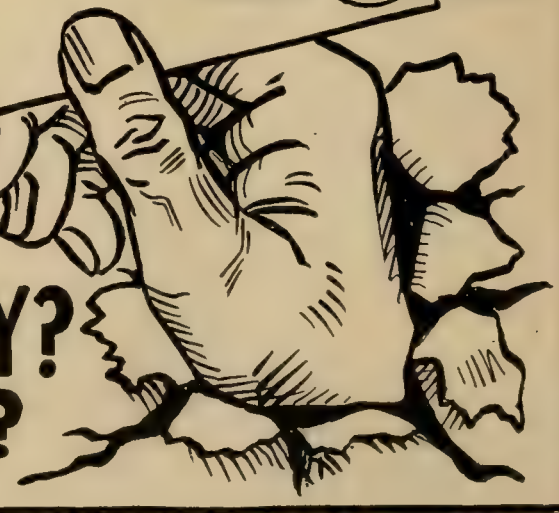
Some of your work in getting pictures to me has been really marvelous, and I can assure you that you have the heartiest co-operation and support from this institution.

Very truly yours,

Managing Director.

SLR/BS

MOVING UNIVERSAL PICTURES
1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY.



ARE YOU USING THE ANIMATED WEEKLY?

IF NOT-WHY NOT?

Universal Weekly News

A page of vitally important news published by the Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1600 Broadway, New York, for the interest of all exhibitors

WEEK OF JAN. 30 NEW YORK CITY 1915

SEVEN SUPERB FEATURE RELEASES

IN EVERY WEEK'S UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

A PROGRAM that for all 'round and varied interest has no equal on earth. Included in this strong collection are always seven smashing big features—multiple reel hits—brilliant scenarios entrusted to Universal Stars; parts that fit played by the greatest of film players. Read these brief synopses. Note how unusual are the great stories presented here. Remember they are produced by the most capable directors in the business for the World's greatest makers of moving pictures, The Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

"THE HEART OF LINCOLN"—Book this Marvelous and Thrilling Drama for Lincoln's Birthday, February 12th. A Hit with the Children and the Grownups, too.

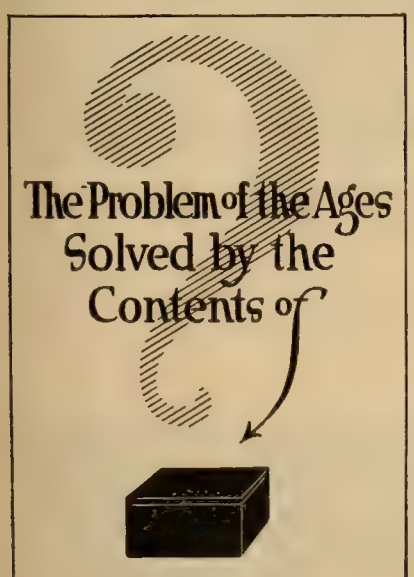
The heart interest in this beautiful play is intense. The part of Lincoln played by Francis Ford transcends any previous stage picture of the Great Emancipator. Stirring battle scenes that wrung Old Abe's tender heart; his moments of play with his little son, Tad; how he permitted a spy to escape—it is such scenes as these that will capture young and old alike. Lovely Grace Cunard in romantic scenes with a handsome young officer, a happy ending after the war, serve to round out this virile, yet tender story of the Heart of Lincoln to the supremest satisfaction of all.

If you want to pack your house with the Greatest Wild Animal Play Ever Staged Book Now "THE TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE."

Here are thrills that cause you to forget that you are watching a photo-play. Marie Walcamp, as Paula the heroine, is chased by fierce wild lions, saves herself by plunging into a jungle pool; and is finally rescued by an elephant which a hunter's boar hound guides to where she has fallen exhausted. There is no fake photography in this; scene after scene of the actual terrors of the jungle, leopards, lions, tigers, a wild man; fierce fighting and thrilling scenes make this one of the most notable film plays ever produced. Dashing Wm. Clifford and his coterie of mounted hunters, the loss and recovery of Paula's baby from the clutches of a lion, are superbly staged with stirring realism.

"THREE MEN AND A GIRL"—A Smashing Feature Film.—Western Drama Extraordinary.—The Sort of Play That Draws the Crowds.

Joe, Jim and Shorty, Western "pardners," tried and true, are mistaken for three bad men for whom large reward is offered, dead or alive. Conceive if you can the tenseness of the situation when the three pals are captured by a sheriff's posse—only to be saved in the nick of time. Complications ensue when Jim and Shorty, led by Joe, capably played by Francis Ford, finally capture the desperadoes and Joe wins the girl in whom we see Beautiful Grace Cunard at her loveliest.



FREE FOR 3 MONTHS

If there is anything you want to know about the Moving Picture game if you want the real inside facts, fearlessly told every week regardless of whom they affect—read the clean, bright, brilliantly edited big 40-page Universal Weekly. If you are in the business you need it. Send your name and address and the name of your theatre to the Editor of the Universal Weekly, 1600 Broadway, New York, and this splendid magazine will be sent you free for 3 months. Write today and begin getting it with the next issue.

L-Ko COMEDIES WILL PACK YOUR HOUSE

Every movie fan likes a good laugh, and the sure fire L-Ko brand gives them good, clean, wholesome comedy, played by the greatest laugh makers in the world—Billy Ritchie, Pathe Lehrman, Gertrude Selby and a great company of other clever comedy stars. L-Ko comedies start with a laugh. There's no waiting for the fun to commence. They open with funny situations, they introduce funny stunts; they keep your audiences in a side-splitting state until the climax, and that is always a scream. L-Ko comedies are a part of the regular Universal Program every week. Write your exchange, or address the home office, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, 1600 Broadway, New York.

GREATEST SCREEN STARS

MONEY WINNERS OF THE MOTION PICTURE WORLD

THE ESSANAY PLAYERS are the greatest boxoffice magnet in photoplaydom. Dramas and comedies in which they appear fill your theatres to overflowing and swell your receipts.

ESSANAY

1333 ARGYLE STREET ... CHICAGO, ILL.

Trademark
Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

ESSANAY

Trademark
Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

"First to Standardize Photoplays"

PRESENTS

Mr. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

The man voted the world's most popular photoplayer

in "THE ACCOUNTING"

(in Three Acts)

by H. TIPTON STECK

THE sixth complete prize mystery play, to be released in conjunction with the short story in The Ladies' World for March, is a thrilling drama of the perils of the SECRET SERVICE, with Cupid playing a leading part. The magazine offers cash prizes for the best written paragraph, which is missing in the story.

Released February 18 through the Feature Department of the General Film Company

CHARLES CHAPLIN is presented in "HIS NEW JOB"

HIS FIRST ESSANAY RELEASE

A two-reel photocomedy that is the funniest ever screened. "It is the best I ever did," says Chaplin. Released Monday, February 1st.

Released Monday, February 1

"The New Teacher"

Sweedie proves to be a great favorite as a school teacher.

Released Tuesday, February 2

"The Creed of the Clan"

A heart-interest drama of unusual quality. Adapted from The Munsey Magazines.

Released Wednesday, February 3

"The Fable of Elvira and Farina and the Meal Ticket"

By GEORGE ADE

The cheapest way to find out about society is to read a popular author.

Released Thursday, February 4

"Sophie's Home-Coming"

Slim succeeds in driving Mustang from Sophie's home.

Released Friday, February 5

"Third Hand High"

(In Two Acts)

A thrilling drama of love and intrigue with E. H. Calvert and Ruth Stonehouse.

Released Saturday, February 6

"Broncho Billy's Greaser Deputy"

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

A western drama featuring Mr. G. M. ANDERSON.

Mr. G. M. ANDERSON

Known all around the world as "BRONCHO BILLY" is presented in

"When Love and Honor Called" and "The Tell-Tale Hand"

Mr. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

is presented in

"THE BATTLE OF LOVE"

By MRS. WILSON WOODROW.

"In the Glare of the Lights" and "The Plum Tree"

These three-reel complete prize mystery plays have been pronounced by exhibitors as the greatest successes in the motion picture world.

Released through the Feature Department of the General Film Company

"One Wonderful Night"

(In Four Acts)

MR. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN is presented in this thrilling drama that is filling theatres everywhere.

"The Good-for-Nothing"

(In Four Acts)

MR. G. M. ANDERSON is presented in this emotional drama of a wayward son.

Subscription Price of the Essanay News, a newspaper which tells you all about your Screen Favorites, 75 Cents a Year

Trademark
Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

ESSANAY

Trademark
Reg. U. S. Pat. 1907

1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

The United Motion Picture Producers
Incorporated

Releasing the Following Program Through

THE UNITED FILM SERVICE

EMPRESS Produced in America by GAUMONT COMPANY. Comedies and Two Reel Society Dramas Featuring Marian Swayne.

L U N A Comedies featuring the versatile DOT FARLEY. Made by the ALBUQUERQUE FILM COMPANY, Direction Gilbert P. Hamilton.

PREMIER Dramas Produced by THE ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO., featuring Edythe Sterling, Fred'k Church and Jos. Franz.

STARLIGHT Farce Comedies of Superior Quality. Made by THE MITTENTHAL FILM COMPANY. In Preparation. TWO REEL DRAMAS.

GRANDIN Featuring the Charming ETHEL GRANDIN in two reel dramas that you cannot afford to miss. Made by THE SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION.

I D E A L Two Reel Dramas now being Produced in AMERICA. Releasing regularly a Two Reel Drama. Made by FEATURES IDEAL, INC.

REGENT Two Reel Society Dramas Produced by RAMO FILMS, INC. "NUFF SED."

SUPERBA Comedies produced by the CRYSTAL FILM COMPANY. Box office winners of established reputation.

L A R I A T Western Dramas featuring GEORGE GEBHART, JR. Produced by THE PIKES PEAK FILM COMPANY.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

THIS SUPERIOR PROGRAM BEING RELEASED

THROUGH THE

UNITED FILM SERVICE

Address all inquiries for service to the "United Film Service" at any of its 43 Exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, or the Home Office, 130 West 46th Street, New York City.

Mr. Exhibitor— You cannot afford to let the opportunity slip to secure this superlative program for your locality. DON'T HESITATE.

MEMBERS OF

UNITED MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS INC.

ALBUQUERQUE FILM COMPANY
Studio and Office, Los Angeles, Cal.

GAUMONT COMPANY
Studio at Flushing, Long Island, N. Y. City

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
Studio at Santa Paula, Cal.
Office at St. Louis, Mo.

MITTENTHAL FILM COMPANY
Studio at Yonkers, N. Y.
Office at 110 West 40th St., N. Y. City

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION
Studio and Office, New York City

FEATURES IDEAL, Inc.
Studios at Tucson, Ariz., and Los Angeles, Cal.
Office at 130 West 46th St., N. Y. City

RAMO FILMS, Inc.
Studio at Flushing, L. I.
Office at 47th St. and 7th Ave., N. Y. City

CRYSTAL FILM COMPANY
Studio and Office at 430 Claremont Parkway, N. Y. C.

PIKES PEAK FILM COMPANY
Studio and Office at Colorado Springs, Colo.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

PARAMOUNT

DANIEL FROHMAN
PRESENTS

THE ILLUSTRIOUS INTERNATIONAL STAR,

GABY DESLYS

THE SENSATION OF
TWO CONTINENTS,

(SUPPORTED BY HER FAMOUS DANCING PARTNER,
HARRY PILCER)

IN AN ORIGINAL STORY OF THE STAGE.

"HER TRIUMPH"

IN FOUR PARTS,
RELEASED FEB. 8TH.

PRODUCED BY THE

FAMOUS PLAYERS

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President
DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director
EDWIN · S · PORTER, Technical Director

36
FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PICTURES

Forthcoming Attractions

February

MARY PICKFORD in
"MISTRESS NELL,"
The Noted Romantic Drama by George C. Hazelton, Jr.
Released February 1st.

JOHN EMERSON in
"THE BACHELOR'S ROMANCE,"
Martha Morton's Popular Comedy-Drama
Released February 11th.

GABY DESLYS in "HER TRIUMPH,"
The Celebrated International Star's First and Exclusive Appearance in Motion Pictures
Released February 8th.

WILLIAM H. CRANE in
"DAVID HARUM,"
A Faithful Film Version of the Distinguished Star's Greatest Characterization
Released February 22d.

"THE LOVE ROUTE,"
Edward Peple's Sensational Comedy-Romance Triumph
Released February 25th.

A quintette of remarkable consistency and variety—a group of subjects that in every respect adhere to the traditions of

FILM COMPANY

Executive Offices
213~229 WEST 26TH ST.
NEW YORK

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

PARAMOUNT

JESSE L. LASKY
PRESENTS

MARGUERITE CLARK

(COURTESY OF FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.)

RELEASED JAN. 25TH

JESSE L. LASKY

220 WEST 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, Pres. SAMUEL GOLDFISH

PROGRAM

IN THE GOOSE GIRL

A DICTURIZATION OF
HAROLD McGRATH'S
MOST FAMOUS ROMANTIC NOVEL
BY ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PUBLISHERS
THE BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

FEATUPE PLAY CO.
NEW YORK CITY
Treas. and Gen. Mgr. CECIL B. DE MILLE Dir. Gen.

Paramount Publicity

Paramount Magazine is the latest addition to this family of publications.

Hundreds of thousands of people are reading about the pictures on Paramount Program in these Paramount Publicity mediums, and are finding the theatres where Paramount Program can be seen.

Is your theatre one of them?

Write our nearest exchange for information.

Paramount Pictures Corporation
ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

Three Powerful Thanhouser Attractions For Week Jan. 29

Here are three Thanhouser Photoplays that will prove big drawing cards for exhibitors. They are released exclusively through the Mutual Film Corporation in the United States and Canada. See the Mutual Exchange nearest you to book these big attractions.

"The Volunteer Fireman"

Released Friday, January 29

A comedy-drama that deals with small town life where the village barber is "the Volunteer Fireman." The side-splitting situations which arise are apparent without emphasis. The cast includes Dave Thompson and Minnie Berlin.

"Helen Intervenes"

Released Sunday, Jan. 31

A beautiful child-drama full of pathos. In the cast are two of the greatest child actors in filmdom—Helen Badgley and Leland Benham. They are supported by Ruth Elder, Dave Thompson, Virginia Waite, Carey L. Hastings and Justus D. Barnes.

"In the Jury Room"

Released Tuesday, February 2

An interesting two-reel drama showing how the fates of folks are decided in a jury room and how Truth and Righteousness finally win out. An all-star Thanhouser cast interprets this play in a remarkably vivid manner—Sidney Bracy, Mignon Anderson, Arthur Ashley, Carey L. Hastings, Morgan Jones and Evelyn Forshay.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION
New Rochelle, New York

Princess Films

Friday, January 29th. "THE HOME OF SILENCE," with Reenie Farrington and Boyd Marshall—A strong drama of love and finance.

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Mystery can be booked at any Mutual Exchange in America.

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Two-part feature for release SUNDAY, JANUARY 31

FAY TINCHER

A FAREWELL DINNER

A strong society drama adapted from Edward Boltwood's story in Munsey's Magazine

COMING

A new series of "Bill, the Office Boy" stories by Paul West, featuring

FAY TINCHER

as Ethel, the stenographer

MAJESTIC AND KOMIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic and Komic releases)

ON THE TABLE TOP (1 Reel Majestic).—Release date Tuesday, Jan. 19. An exciting melodrama telling how a pair of swindlers were caught through a strange clue; cleverly followed up.

THE BETTER MAN (2 Reel Majestic).—Release date, Sunday, Jan. 24. A George Pattullo western drama, different from the conventional western pictures. An English nobleman finds that an American cowboy is "the better man," and gracefully retires in his favor.

A FLURRY IN ART (1 Reel Komic).—Release date, Sunday, Jan. 24. An interesting as well as humorous comedy-melodrama in which stolen jewels and an artist's portrait lead to complications that end as they should.

THE BROKEN LULLABY (1 Reel Majestic).—Release date, Tuesday, Jan. 26. A melodrama showing how the child was saved from the flames. Not as well produced as it might have been but carrying interest and a thrill.

A FAREWELL DINNER (2 Reel Majestic).—Release date, Sunday, Jan. 31. A strong society story from Munsey's Magazine, in which the wealthy suitor discovers the deception of the designing mother and reunites the separated sweethearts.

CUPID AND THE PEST (1 Reel Komic).—Release date, Sunday, Jan. 31. An exceptionally good comedy subject showing how the pestiferous young man mixed up the marrying couples to everybody's satisfaction.

Bromide Enlargements of Majestic Stars for Lobby Display

(Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Fay Tincher, Robert Harron, Wallace Reid and others.) All sizes and shapes up to 5 ft. high. 5 x 7, 15c. each; 8 x 10, 25c. each; 11 x 14, 40c. each; 14 x 17, 50c. each; 22 x 28, $2.00; 20 x 60, $2.50; 28 x 42, $3.00. Order direct from Majestic Studio, 4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., or from any Mutual Exchange.

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Studios, 4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Office, 29 Union Square West, New York City

Mutual Movies MakeTime Fly

ABOVE ALL QUALITY

MUTUAL PROGRAM

MUTUAL PROGRAM

THE GIBRALTAR OF THE INDUSTRY

BRONCHO

Wednesday, Jan. 27.

8"-10" Photos of our Players can be had by sending to Publicity Dept. 15 Cents for one - 50 Cents for set of 4.
A WONDERFUL LOBBY DISPLAY
22"-28" Photo layouts in Character makeup of Mabel Normand & Roscoe Arbuckle
20 Cents each.

Released Exclusively through the Mutual Film Corporation

DOMINO

Thursday, Jan. 28.

KAY-BEE

Friday Jan. 29.

THE BOTTOMLESS PIT
ALSO RELEASED ON THE SAME DAY

KEYSTONE

Three One Part Comedies Released Every Week
Monday
Thursday
Saturday
A Two Part Comedy Released every Two Weeks Every Other Monday.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

KESSEL & BAUMANN, MANAGERS.

LONGACRE BUILDING, 42d STR. AND BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

FABLES FROM FILMDOM

The Very Fat Frog in the Very Small Puddle

Once upon a Time there Lived a very Fat Frog in a very Small Puddle. There was Scant Vegetation near it and few other Creatures, all of Whom were very much Smaller than the very Fat Frog. Therefore he made them Work for him and cultivate the Scant Vegetation.

If he had Done his Share of the Work and Permitted them their Share of the Water in the very Small Puddle and of the Scant Vegetation, there would have been Enough for all to Live out their Natural Lives. But so Greedy was the very Fat Frog that he Ate up all of the Scant Vegetation for Fear the other Smaller Creatures would get some of it; and when he got Hungry again there was Naught to Eat save the other Smaller Creatures. So he Devoured them, Too.

Then seeing some Birds hovering over the very Small Puddle, he Drank it Dry, so that They might get None of the Water. This so Swelled him up that he Rolled over on his very Fat Back, turned up his Toes and Burst. Thus, Ignominiously, Died the very Fat Frog,—the Death of a Glutton!

Concluding with a moral to the exhibitors.

So it is with Some very Prosperous Exhibitors, who Try to Get it all and Keep it All, for Fear that their Public will get Something Really Good, for which They have to Pay. But the Wise Ones Live Longer by Showing the Proper Enterprise and Ordering Such Exceptional Features as

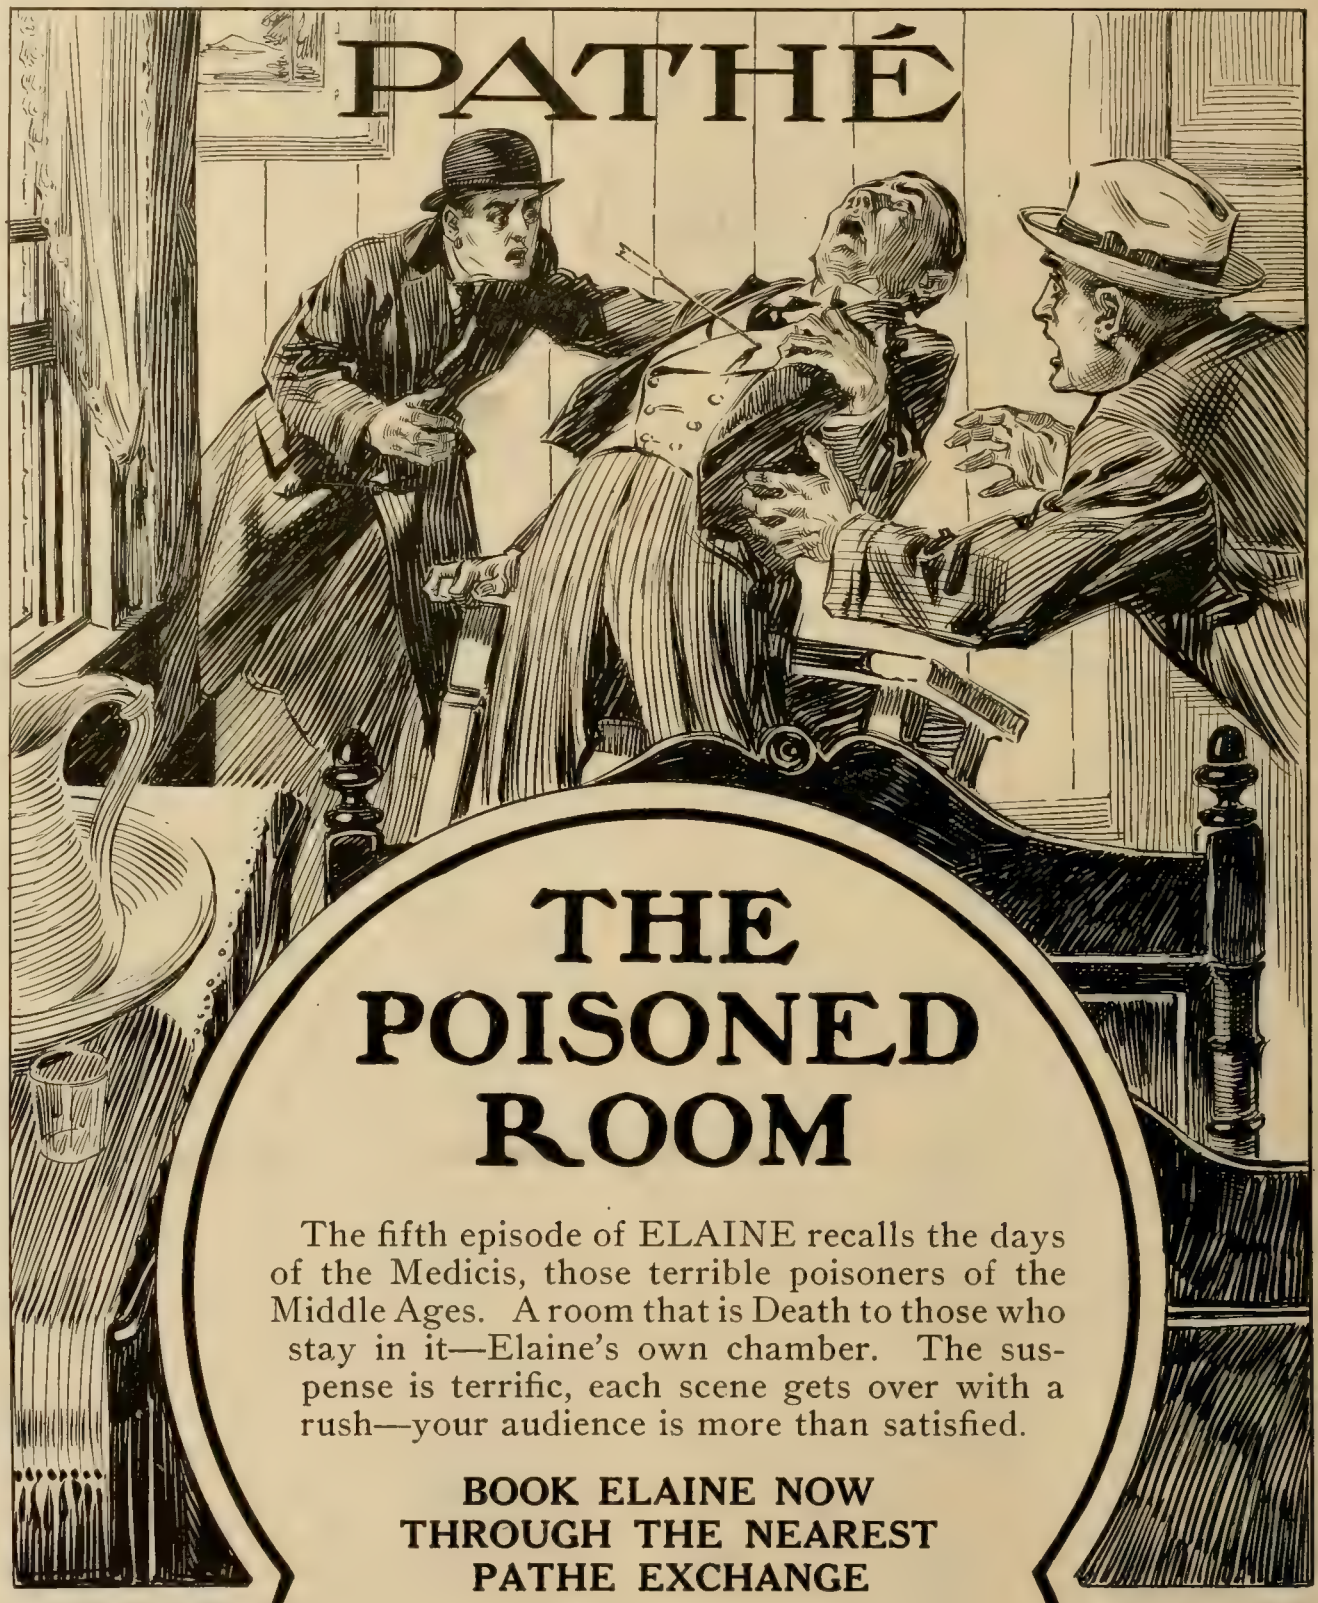
RUNAWAY JUNE

The Greatest of All Photoplay Serials

(By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER)

See the Serial Publication Corporation Representative in any Mutual Exchange— Produced by RELIANCE.

PATHÉ



THE POISONED ROOM

The fifth episode of ELAINE recalls the days of the Medicis, those terrible poisoners of the Middle Ages. A room that is Death to those who stay in it—Elaine's own chamber. The suspense is terrific, each scene gets over with a rush—your audience is more than satisfied.

BOOK ELAINE NOW THROUGH THE NEAREST PATHE EXCHANGE

THE PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.,
(FORMERLY THE ECLECTIC FILM CO.)
25 WEST 45th ST. NEW YORK.

THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE

A wonderful mind that unites with surpassing scientific knowledge a diabolic malevolence---that's

The Clutching Hand

Clues? Yes, Craig Kennedy can find them, but the name of the super-criminal is mystery itself. With each episode comes a new surprise, with each surprise an intenser interest and always the mystery deepens.

BOOK ELAINE NOW THROUGH THE NEAREST PATHE EXCHANGE

THE PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.,

(FORMERLY THE ECLECTIC FILM CO.)

25 WEST 45th ST. NEW YORK.

No exhibitor could afford to spend the money on advertising that is now being spent for him in his own locality on

The Exploits of Elaine

Such a far reaching, influential campaign has never before been seen in the motion picture business. The public is worked up over Elaine—they are fairly fighting to see the pictures. This means PATRONS READY MADE for you when you show ELAINE.

Another and very important thing—the pictures stand the acid test—your patrons will be fairly feverish with suspense after each episode and will come back for more.

DON'T DALLY, DON'T DELAY
BOOK ELAINE NOW THROUGH THE NEAREST PATHE EXCHANGE

PATHE EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE:

Atlanta, 61 Walton Street
Dallas, 202 Andrews Building
Chicago, 5 South Wabash Avenue
Minneapolis, 109 Kasota Building
New York, 115 East 23rd Street
Boston, 3 Tremont Row
Los Angeles, 114 East 7th Street
St. Louis, 3210 Locust Street
San Francisco, 67 Turk Street
Syracuse, 214 East Fayette Street
Pittsburgh, 715 Liberty Avenue
Cincinnati, 217 East 5th Street
Cleveland, 622 Prospect Avenue, S. E.
Portland, 392 Burnside Street
Philadelphia, 1235 Vine Street
New Orleans, 910 Gravier Street
Washington, 7th and E Streets, N. W.
Kansas City, 928 Main Street
Denver, 16th and Larimer Streets
Omaha, 1312 Farnam Street
Seattle, 810 Third Avenue
Salt Lake City, 68 South Main Street

The Pathé Exchange, Inc.

(Formerly the Eclectic Film Company)
25 W. 45th St., New York, N. Y.

IT'S A LONG, LONG WAY TO TIPPERARY
The three part drama that is taking the world by storm—the most timely of pictures and one that will pull at the heart strings of every one.
Based on the popular song your audience will be fairly swept from their feet, for from beginning to end the picture itself can and will be sung!
GET IT—IT'S GREAT!
1-3-6 sheet posters.
THE PATHE EXCHANGE, INC.
25 West 45th Street
New York, N. Y.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

BOSWORTH INC.

PRESENTS

AN ALL STAR CAST

IN

"BUCKSHOT JOHN"

By

CHARLES E. VAN LOAN

"BUCKSHOT JOHN" IS THE FIRST OF MR. VAN LOAN'S FAMOUS STORIES TO BE FILMED AND CONTAINS MANY OF HIS CHARACTERISTIC TOUCHES. AMONG THE UNIQUE DETAILS OF THIS PRODUCTION IS A SCENE, ACTUALLY TAKEN BY MOONLIGHT, WITHOUT THE AID OF ARTIFICIAL LIGHT

RELEASED FEBRUARY 4TH

BOSWORTH INC.

211 NORTH OCCIDENTAL B'V'D.
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

IN ASSOCIATION WITH THE OLIVER MOROSCO PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 WEST 42ND STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

BOSWORTH INC.

Lewis J. Selznick

How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 1

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

A year ago World Film meant nothing. Today it is the greatest name in the moving picture business. A year ago I preached to empty pews. Today the livest exhibitors all over the country are booking World Film Service and are fighting to get it.

WHY?

Because I was looking ahead—foreseeing the coming public demand, laying plans to cater to it—to help exhibitors bring the business to a higher plane—to bring about higher admission prices—to help you make more money—and so build a great business myself.

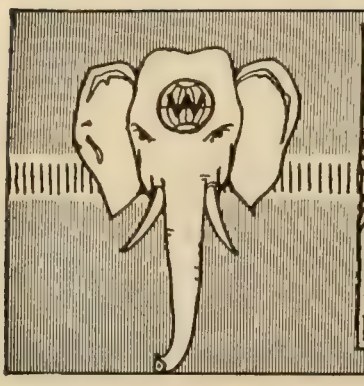
I preached Broadway Shows—the great stars and producers—$2.00 performances for 10, 15 and 25c.—better advertising—finer posters and heralds—expert advertising service as part of our service to exhibitors.

Film men refused to listen. They could not see the ideal because the path to it led away from routine.

But, hard-headed business men, who were not bound by tradition, could see it—DID see it. Exhibitors who saw their business dwindle and 5c. admissions hungrily eat up profit, could see it and DID see it. The shrewdest bankers in America have invested millions to make World Film what it is and what it will be. Its success has been wonderful.

It will be still more wonderful as exhibitors realize that to be successful they MUST have great features, better advertising and publicity, higher admission prices AND THAT THEY CAN GET ALL THESE BY WORKING WITH WORLD FILM FIFTY-TWO WEEKS A YEAR.

This is the first of a series of money-making talks. Watch for them.



SHUBERT AND DYREDA FEATURES

WORLD FILM Exclusive

Lewis J. Selznick

LILLIAN RUSSELL

IN

"WILDFIRE"

By GEORGE BROADHURST and GEORGE V. HOBART

Lillian Russell's Greatest Stage Success

Millions have seen this great actress on the stage. Her name and fame are world wide.

Offer this picture to your patrons if you want proof of the pulling power of World Film Features.

In 5 Acts

Released January 25

EXCHANGES AT

Boston	Cleveland	Denver	St. Louis	Seattle	San Francisco
Buffalo	Cincinnati	Pittsburgh	Los Angeles	Omaha	Salt Lake City
Chicago	Detroit	Indianapolis	Philadelphia	New York	Washington
Atlanta	Dallas	New Orleans	Kansas City	Minneapolis
Canada—Vancouver	Toronto	Winnipeg	Calgary	Montreal	St. John, N. B.

HOME OFFICE: 130 WEST 46TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY

EDELMAN

CORPORATION
Rights to all

Wm. A. BRADY
Picture Plays, Inc.
CALIFORNIA
MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION
FEATURES

Vice Pres & Genl. Mgr.

A Thrilling Melodrama Full of Action and Incident

"MONEY"

A glimpse of the future, produced by
UNITED KEANOGRAPH FILM MFG. CO.,
Fairfax, Cal.
Scenario written and pictured by
JAMES KEANE
Featuring
Carlotta de Felice
In 5 Acts
Released February 1

A Dyreda Art Film Feature
Produced by J. SEARLE DAWLEY
"The Master of the Screen"

A DAUGHTER of the PEOPLE

A powerful drama of love, labor and redemption, with LAURA SAWYER, FREDERICK de BELLEVILLE and ROBERT BRODERICK

In 5 Acts

Released February 8

¶The Finest Theatres of Toronto and Montreal Show World Film Features Regularly

The World Film Corporation of Toronto is now under the direction and management of Mr. Edward A. Golden, formerly General Manager of the Colonial Feature Film Co., with offices at 167 Young St.

The Montreal office is now under the direction and management of Mr. Henry Siskind, formerly President of the Colonial Feature Film Co., with offices in the Jacobs Building.

Canadian Exhibitors can book the regular releases from these offices.

For Big Plays, Big Stars, Big Money Making Productions

WORLD FILM FEATURES

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

Home Office, 130 West 46th Street, New York
Lewis J. Selznick, Vice-President and Gen. Mgr.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA MASTER PIECE

MIGNON

THE MOST SATISIFYING STORY OF THE LYRICAL STAGE

HERE IS AN EPOCH EVENT IN MOTION PICTURE EVOLUTION

AMERICA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL PRIMA-DONNA IN A FILM DRAMATIZATION OF A WORLD FAMOUS GRAND OPERA

A SCREEN INNOVATION

WALTER ANTHONY
Dramatic Critic
San Francisco Chronicle
Says:

"The highly romantic character of the play, with its duels and dangers, its contrasts and its crimes, its gypsy life and its aristocratic environment, the beautiful distances covered by the wanderings of the forlorn Othario and Mignon, and, most of all, its superb action and photography will make this production, with its beautiful heroine, a notable event in any community where the soul of poetry, pity for beauty in distress or love of adventure still persist."

SCENARIO BY CHARLES KENYON AUTHOR OF "KINDLING"

PRODUCED BY CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

DISTRIBUTED EXCLUSIVELY THROUGH WORLD FILM CORPORATION
LEWIS J. SELZNICK VICE PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER

VITAGRAPHS

VITA LAUGHS — LIFE PORTRAYALS

"The Slightly Worn Gown"

Comedy .....MONDAY, JAN. 25

Brown bought a dress for another woman. It was sent by mistake to his wife. You can imagine what happened. LEAH BAIRD, LEO DELANEY, LOUISE BEAUDET, CHARLES BROWN and ETHEL LLOYD show you just what happened.

"Life's Game"

Two-Part Drama .....TUESDAY, JAN. 26

To play it straight and win against sharps and four-flushers is taking a chance. We are all players. MYRTLE GONZALEZ and all-star cast play this one.

"The Homecoming of Henry"

Comedy .....WEDNESDAY, JAN. 27

Henry comes back unexpectedly, frightens the bungalow girls and surprises his wife. He gets in wrong but comes out all right. SIDNEY DREW as Henry.

"The Barrier of Faith"

Drama .....THURSDAY, JAN. 28

Love is the fulfilling of the law. It removes all barriers and makes all one human family. Beautifully interpreted by VAN DYKE BROOKE, NORMA TALMADGE and MARY MAURICE.

"The Chief's Goat"

Comedy .....FRIDAY, JAN. 29

WALLY VAN as Tom, and HARRY MOREY, as the Deacon, get the chief's, ALBERT ROCCARDI'S, goat; they get his money, too. They are willing to call it horse and horse.

"Underneath the Paint"

3-Part Drama—Broadway Star Feature
SATURDAY, JAN. 30

Separated by his wealthy father from his actress sweetheart, the boy disappears. She becomes a famous star. A most dramatic incident and climax reunites the young lovers. Interpreted by HELEN GARDNER and all-star cast.

Six a Week, including a Three-Part Broadway Star Feature.

"CABMAN KATE"
Comedy .....Monday, Feb. 1

"HOW CISSY MADE GOOD"
3-Part Comedy—Broadway Star Feature.....Tuesday, Feb. 2

"THE COMBINATION"
Comedy .....Wednesday, Feb. 3

"THE UNDERSTUDY" or "BEHIND THE SCENES"
Drama .....Thursday, Feb. 4

"THE GREEN CAT"
Comedy .....Friday, Feb. 5

"FOR ANOTHER'S CRIME"
Two-Part Drama .....Saturday, Feb. 6

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS

The Vitagraph Company of America, E. 15th St. & Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

BROADWAY — STAR FEATURES

PRODUCED BY THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA || PRESENTED AT THE VITAGRAPH THEATRE N. Y. CITY

RELEASED

A MILLION BID	5 PARTS
GOODNESS GRACIOUS	3 PARTS
MR. BARNES OF N. Y.	6 PARTS
LOVE, LUCK & GASOLENE	3 PARTS
CAPTAIN ALVAREZ	6 PARTS
SHADOWS OF THE PAST	3 PARTS
BINGLES' MELODRAMA	3 PARTS
MY OFFICIAL WIFE	5 PARTS
UNCLE BILL	3 PARTS
THE PAINTED WORLD	3 PARTS
FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT	5 PARTS
413	3 PARTS
THE WIN(K)SOME WIDOW	4 PARTS
THE TANGLE	4 PARTS
THE LOCKED DOOR	3 PARTS
SYLVIA GRAY	4 PARTS
THE LITTLE ANGEL OF CANYON CREEK	5 PARTS (From Book)
THE MAN BEHIND THE DOOR	4 PARTS

COMING

THE FUNNIEST PLAY IN YEARS

FOUR-PART COMEDY C. O. D.

FROM FREDERICK CHAPIN'S PLAY

5-PART HISTORICAL DRAMA

HEARTS AND THE HIGHWAY

FROM REV. CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY'S NOVEL.

LILLIAN WALKER as LADY KATE
DARWIN KARR as SIR HARRY

For Terms and Particulars Apply GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S Special Service

By Arrangement with Broadway Star Feature Co. (Inc.)

FOR RELEASE FEBRUARY 15th

THAT FUNNIEST OF FARCES
FOUNDED ON THE COHAN & HARRIS SUCCESS
FROM THE PLAY BY CARLISLE MOORE

STOP THIEF

In Five Parts—Featuring

MARY RYAN and HARRY MESTAYER

Supported by a notable cast of the original artists who made "Stop Thief" famous!

CAST OF CHARACTERS:

NELL JONES (the Maid).....MARY RYAN
JACK DOOGAN (the Thief).....HARRY MESTAYER
MR. CLUNEY (Fiance).....Harold Howard
MR. CARR (an absent-minded father).....Albert Tavernier
DR. WILLOUGHBY (who also expects to wed).....William Boyd
MRS. CARR (Mother).....Auguste Burmester
JOAN (Dr. Willoughby's Fiancee).....Della Connor
MADGE (Cluney's Fiancee).....Marguerita Boyd
THE DETECTIVE.....Dan Moyles
THE CLERGYMAN.....Soldine Powel

Ready Soon—Watch for Future Announcements!

Through the Kleine Branch Offices

New York
226 W. 42nd Street
Boston
597 Washington St.
Los Angeles
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.
Pittsburgh
509 Lyceum Theatre
Chicago
166 N. State St.
Dallas
238 Saner Bldg.
Minneapolis
210 Temple Court Bldg.
Seattle
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.
Toronto
56 King St. W.
Atlanta
43 Moore Bldg.
Denver
405 Railroad Bldg.
Philadelphia
1309 Vine Street
San Francisco
653 Pacific Bldg.

Read on ↓

GEORGE KLEINE

Released January 18th

A Tremendous Sensation
Breaking Box Office Records!

Du Barry

with

Mrs. Leslie Carter

IN THE TITLE ROLE

A MAGNIFICENT AND COSTLY PRODUCTION STAGED IN EUROPE AMID THE FAMILIAR SCENES OF THE FAMOUS STORY!

A Cast of Superlative Excellence Including

Richard Thornton ..... as King Louis XV
Campbell Gollan ..... as Comte Jean Du Barry
Hamilton Revelle ..... as De Cosse Brissac

A DRAMA IMMORTALIZED BY THE BLOODY EVENTS OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION, FORESHADOWED BY THE GAY AND EXTRAVAGANT LIFE OF LUXURY-ENERVATED VERSAILLES, AND THE SENSATIONAL AND ROMANTIC RISE OF MME. DU BARRY FROM MILLINER'S MODEL TO THE STRONGEST FEMININE FIGURE IN THE DESTINY OF FRANCE!

ARRANGE YOUR BOOKINGS EARLY. BE THE FIRST IN YOUR LOCALITY TO SHOW MRS. LESLIE CARTER IN HER GREATEST SUCCESS

A splendid line of lithographs, heralds, press stories, cuts, photographs, etc.

BOOKING NOW THROUGH THE KLEINE OFFICES

New York
226 W. 42nd Street

Boston
597 Washington St.

Los Angeles
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.

Pittsburgh
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.

Chicago
166 N. State St.

Dallas
238 Saner Bldg.

Minneapolis
210 Temple Court Bldg.

Seattle
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

Toronto
56 King St., W.

Atlanta
43 Moore Bldg.

Denver
405 Railroad Bldg.

Philadelphia
1309 Vine Street

San Francisco
653 Pacific Bldg.

GEORGE KLEINE

EDISON FILMS AND EDISON SERVICE ARE BETTER THAN EVER

From "Found: A Flesh Reducer," in which Wadsworth and Housman are here shown

Wadsworth and Housman

YOU can't mistake the temper of a Wadsworth and Housman audience; everyone in it is out for fun—for a real rollicking, old-fashioned, hearty, genuine laugh. Any moment you can hear—almost feel—it coming, and ere you are aware it has swept over the entire house like the magic wand over a great big brass orchestra. There's the big "bass" fellow over there in the audience, who has suddenly given vent to a pent-up feeling of genuine delight; there's the little tot that just "giggles and giggles" and all the way between these extremes are as many kinds of laughs as instruments in a full orchestra.

"What won't they do next?" whispers one fellow to his wife, or sweetheart, and before he has finished the words, the whole house is again in flames of laughter over a sudden turn in the plot that scores "a home run." This is quickly followed up on the part of the outwitted victim by some stealthy move that warns you to be prepared for another burst of laughter. You simply can't afford to take your eyes off the screen.

And it's all such wholesome fun; such plausible fun. It is transparent and you don't have to scratch your head to see the joke. But why attempt to analyze it? It's irresistible; it's good. That's the final analysis. It's the kind that strikes a popular chord—it's the new kind of Edison comedy, that is bringing big results.

And, of all the ridiculous assortment of convulsing plots ever conceived or hatched out, none can equal in variety and grotesqueness the following ten Wadsworth and Housman Edison reels.

Don't attempt to judge these reels by their titles, odd and suggestive as some are. See the reels; insist on seeing them all. Then, as we have said, try one on your audience! We have no fear that Wadsworth and Housman will be on your call list as long as they are on the Edison list—which will be indefinitely.

EDISON COMEDIES MEET THE POPULAR DEMAND AND FILL THE HOUSE

in two scenes; before and after Corpulency is reduced. To be Released Friday, Feb. 1st in Side-Splitting Edison Comedy

Ten Wadsworth and Housman Comedies
(Each 1,000 ft.)

"THE COURTSHIP OF THE COOKS"—Released Dec. 30
"CHAMPION PROCESS SERVER"—Released Jan. 3
"EXPENSIVE ECONOMY"—Released Jan. 6
"A SUPERFLUOUS BABY"—Released Jan. 11
"LODGINGS FOR TWO"—Released Jan. 27
"FOUND—A FLESH REDUCER"—Released Feb. 1
"DOWN FROM THE GALLERY"—Released Feb. 3
"SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS"—Released Feb. 8
"THE TAILOR'S BILL"—Released Feb. 10
"A SPIRITUAL ELOPEMENT"—Released Feb. 17

Other Forthcoming Edison Films

"OLIVE AND THE HEIRLOOM"—Released Feb. 2
"A THORNE AMONG ROSES"—Released Feb. 3
"THE STONE HEART"—Released Feb. 6
"OLIVE'S GREATEST OPPORTUNITY"—Released Feb. 9
"LIFE HISTORY OF A SILK WORM"—Released Feb. 10
"THE PEST OF THE NEIGHBORHOOD"—Released Feb. 10
"GLORY OF CLEMENTINA"—Released Feb. 12
"THE GIRL WHO KEPT BOOKS"—Released Feb. 13
"THE NEEDS OF COMMERCE"—Released Feb. 16
"IN THE PLUMBER'S GRIP"—Released Feb. 17

AN IDEAL EDISON POLICY FURNISHES IDEAL EDISON FILMS

Our settled policy is to make every Edison film crisp with action, meaty in interest and fairly sparkling in plot and intensity. Action, action, and still more action may be confidently expected in Edison films. We have cut and cut till what remains is the boiled down essence of the play. You will not be asked to buy mere footage, padded out to make a dragging play. That's not Edison policy. What we aim to do is to give the most profitable program and that, to our thinking, is one that is condensed, full of interest and variety. If you want to swell box-office receipts, rely on Edison Reels for bright, snappy action and sustained interest.

TWO EDISON FEATURE FILMS

entitled "Fantasma," a five-part film, and "My Friend from India," a really good three-part comedy, are attracting most favorable notice everywhere. In "Fantasma" is revealed a marvelous fairyland more beautiful even than the original celebrated play of Hanlon Bros. In "My Friend from India," Walter E. Perkins admirably fills the same role as he did in the original play—that of Augustus Keen Shaver. Both films supplied through the special feature film service of the General Film Co. Now Ready.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.

239 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

Edison Films are approved by the National Board of Censorship and are released through the General Film Program

LUBIN

PRESENTS

Multiple Reel Masterpieces Ready and About to Be Released

"EAGLE'S NEST" - - - - - - With EDWIN ARDEN and ROMAINE FIELDING
Mr. Arden's Great Drama — Direction Romaine Fielding

"THE SPORTING DUCHESS" - - - With ROSE COGHLAN and ETHEL CLAYTON
Comedy Drama by Cecil Raleigh — Direction of Barry O'Neil

"THE VALLEY OF LOST HOPE" - - - - - - Featuring ROMAINE FIELDING
A Powerful Drama — Direction of Romaine Fielding

"THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY" With DOROTHY BERNARD and GEORGE SOULE SPENCER
Drama by Charles Klein and Harrison Grey Fiske — Direction Barry O'Neil

"THE WHITE MASK" - - - - - - - - - - Featuring LILIE LESLIE
Drama by Clay M. Greene — Direction Joseph W. Smiley

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW" Featuring ETHEL CLAYTON and GEORGE SOULE SPENCER
Comedy by George Ade — Direction Barry O'Neil

NOW SHOWING TO CROWDED HOUSES EVERYWHERE

By arrangement with Fred Mace

EVELYN NESBIT THAW and her son Russell William Thaw in "THREADS OF DESTINY"
A Drama by Wm. H. Clifford. — Directed by Joseph W. Smiley

and

The laughing hit of the year, PATSY BOLIVAR, a series of 14 reels, one every Monday, by CLAY M. GREENE

Posters by A. B. C. Print, Cleveland — Dodgers by Hennegen Print, Cincinnati

SIX REGULAR RELEASES EACH WEEK

"Patsy Bolivar"—Series No. 5 / "Patsy in Business"—Comedy, } Monday, January 25th

"Creen Backs and Red Skins"—Comedy, Tuesday, January 26th

"The Attorney for the Defense"—Three Reel Drama, Wednesday, January 27th

"In Her Mother's Footsteps"—Two Reel Drama, Thursday, January 28th

"The Language of the Dumb"—Drama, Friday, January 29th

"ANOTHER SHADE OF GREEN"—Comedy, Saturday, January 30th

SPECIALLY DESIGNED ONE, THREE, SIX AND EIGHT SHEET POSTERS

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street

LUBIN

ANNOUNCES

ON EVERY ALTERNATE WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY BEGINNING JANUARY 21st

ALL SPECIAL 3 REEL FEATURES will be released on the regular programme of the General Film Company

and

BEGINNING FEBRUARY 1st, ON ALTERNATE TUESDAYS and SATURDAYS

SPLENDID ONE REEL COMEDIES

Featuring

ARTHUR V. JOHNSON and LOTTIE BRISCOE and on alternate Saturdays and Tuesdays beginning February 5th

ETHEL CLAYTON and JOSEPH KAUFMAN

Featured in

HIGH CLASS ONE REEL COMEDIES

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Philadelphia, Pa.
Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street

The Girl Detective Series

Two-Act Episode for Wednesday, February 10th

The Disappearance of Harry Warrington

Boldly entering Warrington's home, a band of desperate men kidnapped the young millionaire. Every effort of the police to locate the victim went for naught. Kalem's Girl Detective took hold of the case, and the result makes this a detective story which stands in a class by itself.

Are You Running This Series?

The strongest scenes are shown on the 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Four-color Lithographs.

Other Kalem Releases for Week of Feb. 8th

In the Hands of the Jury

An All-Star Cast in a Modern Two-Act Drama

Just as Dr. Haines, accused of murder, rises to face the men who are returning with their verdict, Fate unmasks one of the jurors as the real slayer!

Released Monday, February 8th. Striking 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Four-color Lithographs for this feature.

Mr. Pepperie Temper

Besides providing a score of laughs, there's a strong moral for hasty-tempered individuals in this great comedy. Don't fail to show it.

(On the Same Reel)

The Mexican's Chickens

A particularly timely burlesque on Mexico's foremost industry —revolutions. Your patrons will vote Senor Sourface's tribulations mighty funny.

Released Tuesday, February 9th.

Ham and The Sausage Factory

Ham and Bud as manufacturers of sausages are simply a scream. Bud catches the stray canines while Ham converts them into educated sausages.

Released Friday, February 12th.

The Red Signal

An Episode of the

Hazards of Helen Railroad Series

To foil a madman, Helen swims across a rain-swollen river, rushes over a blazing trestle and saves two trains from destruction in this action-filled episode.

Released Saturday, February 13th. 1 and 3-Sheet Four-Color Posters.

Kalem Company

235-239 West 23rd Street New York City, N. Y.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 748.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, January 30, 1915.

Facts and Comments

EVERY lover of Rome and Italy, and every admirer of motion pictures, has read with deep sorrow of the ravages of the earthquake which, for the first time in the history of the peninsula, has shaken the central portion of the "Garden of the World." Italy has furnished the world with the best and the greatest of motion pictures and has done much more than its share toward establishing high artistic standards in the field of dramatic kinematography. It is impossible at this time and at this distance to measure the full extent of the damage done to life and to property. Rome and much of the rest of Italy belongs to mankind as the priceless store house of the works of art of two great civilizations. The motion picture has made and preserved faithful records of many of the great monuments of both Pagan and Christian Rome, but even if we had the fullest records the loss of even a small portion of glories and beauties of Rome and Italy would be nothing less than an irreparable loss to all mankind.

* * *

RECENTLY in a small city in one of the Eastern States exhibitors were harassed by much clerical agitation against motion pictures. It was easy to see from the nature of the arguments advanced by the ministers that the latter had little reliable information on the subject of motion pictures. The leading exhibitor in the city at once communicated with the officials of the National Board and in response to his request a representative of the Board was sent into the city to allay the agitation. The man from the National Board invited the clergymen to a discussion of motion pictures and the invitation was generally accepted. At the meeting the ministers learned many things which they had never known before; they realized among other things that the motion picture was under the direct influence of public opinion as represented by the Board. All their questions were answered fully and frankly and as a result the clergy in that city are to-day the friends of the motion picture and of the exhibitors.

* * *

A DEPUTY Commissioner of Education in this enlightened Empire State objects in the course of a lecture to teaching the children by means of motion pictures. He calls motion picture teaching a mere "pouring-in process." He advances the curious claim that "attending moving picture shows leads to passivity of mind." Indeed, he is bitterly opposed to motion pictures "superseding other forms of education." "No thinking," he says, "is required; therefore habits of laziness are engendered." What is all education in its first stages but a process of "pouring in?" The blackboard and the textbook and the lecture are slightly different manifestations of the process of "pouring in." While the book and the blackboard and the oral teaching reach the mind indirectly the picture reaches the mind directly. The foundation of all human knowledge consists in a fund of impressions gathered through the senses. Only when the young mind has stored up a large enough supply of impressions can there be room and occasion for an independent and intelligent exercise of the reflective faculties. It is hard to believe that those rudimentary principles of teaching are unknown to a Deputy Commissioner of Education of the State of New York. Poured into any normal mind all impressions are bound to stimulate some mental activity. It is notorious that the subnormal mind is taught much easier by pictures than by books. Surely the effect on the normal mind must even be stronger and more beneficial. If the commissioner wants a practical proof of the value of the motion picture as an educative influence let him consult a score or two of school teachers. They will tell him that the boys and girls attending good motion picture shows are generally ahead of their classes in such subjects as geography, natural history and all the exact sciences.

* * *

EXHIBITORS in the State of Arkansas are operating their theaters on Sunday on what is called a "free-will" offering. They have no legal right at present to open their theaters on Sunday and charge an admission. This "free-will offering" is not altogether satisfactory. There are people who go to see the show and do not pay a cent. Their meanness is not altogether set off by the generosity of the paying patrons. Aside from this commercial aspect of the situation there is a lot of silly hypocrisy about it all. We are glad to note that the press of the State is taking up the question and is generally siding with the advocates of a liberal Sunday.

Made in America

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE congregation of states united under the name "America," irrespective of north and south divisions of the western continent, was formulated by men who became known the world over as "Americans" in contradistinction to "Canadians," "Mexicans," "Brazilians," and so on. What is manufactured in America means what is made in states united under that name, hence there is no urgent need of employing any more cumbersome designation of what is produced by our hands and brains than that heading this article.

Films made in America are to play an important part in the political and social economy of Europe this year unless all signs fail and should be representative of our institutions and ideals. As to what these institutions and ideals mean to us, I may be pardoned in quoting from a man who played no small part in moulding public thought at the birth of our nation.

"When we survey the wretched condition of man, under the monarchial and hereditary systems of government, dragged from his home by one power, or driven from it by another, it becomes evident that these systems are bad, and that general revolution in the principle and construction of European governments is necessary."

"Great part of that order which reigns among mankind is not, however, the effect of government. It has its origin in the principles of society and the natural constitution of man. The mutual dependence and reciprocal interest which man has upon man creates that great charm which holds society together. The more perfect a civilization the less occasion it has for government."

Writing more than a century before the present war in Europe, he goes on to say that, in spite of his natural propensity to social organization, man finds his ideals disturbed, if not destroyed, by government, especially when the latter presumes to exist for itself, not for the people. It then becomes the cause of such misery as that of war, which it should prevent. Such governments exist through the violation of every moral principle and become buried in the iniquity which led to their existence.

"What scenes of horror present themselves in contemplating the character and reviewing the history of such governments! If we would delineate human nature with an utter baseness of heart and hypocrisy of countenance at which reflection would shudder, which decent humanity would disown, they are kings, courts and cabinets that must sit for the portrait. Such government is an assumption of power for the aggrandizement of itself, whereas our own is a delegation of power for the benefit of society. The hereditary government is an imposition on society, a disgrace to mankind, inadequate to the purposes for which government is designed."

It would almost seem as if Tom Paine was with us now. I wish I had his power of wielding vigorous English, but we do not need that in moving pictures. In them we can establish that men and women are born with natural rights, the right to select labor for which they are naturally equipped, the right to enjoy security and happiness, the civil right founded on these natural rights. We can establish that no government, and no governing group of individuals, whether commercial, political, or military vultures, may invade and destroy those rights. Such pictures should be made in America.

It is only a question of time when people, worth-while people, abroad will be listening to the voice of our moving pictures. Let us make them big and broad in scope, compassionate in tone, replete with dignified and forceful purpose. Those who contend for puerile purpose in pictures overlook the fact that American minds are not infantile. We are not even amused by the weaklings forced upon our attention, merely disgusted, but hopeful that development will bring screen productions up to common intelligence. The audience addressed is one that despises whatever intrudes between the highest aspirations of the human soul and its source. The audience in this country is constantly awaiting those beams of light which intelligence throws into the hearts of men and women.

We are not bent on re-establishing the ignorance and the prejudices of other days but on advancing society and civilization to a new freedom of thought and action, and our minds are not to be fed with pap. Pictures truly representative of our ideals will soon be shown in all parts of the world. Far out over the surface of the globe, wherever there is any claim to civilization, our silent messengers will go, penetrating the minds of those crushed or oppressed by Despotism. They may be the means of ingrafting equitable systems of government on those now incapable of conceiving of anything better than hereditary rulers. Through them democracy may confederate vast territories and populations now sunk in dull misery.

This is no Utopian dream of Sir Thomas More or of Edward Bellamy. The language of moving pictures is universal and easily understood. It is not necessary for them to be inane in order to reach the comprehension of so-called "masses." The loftiest subject ever clearly presented has been easily within the grasp of those who pay admission to the picture shows. The fine art is in presenting a subject so that it will attract and hold interest. The way of putting what is to be told counts heavily, the more when there is something worth while to be told.

The fault of moving pictures made in America lies in an overbalance of commercialism. A large part of the entire expenditure goes to distribution, only one of the means to a general end. The theatrical group incline to use theatrical names and theatrical stars, all very well in a way, to the detriment, or to the disregard of, intrinsic merit. Theatrical people have brought us a lot of fine interpreters and tasteful ideas of treatment, but has not their well-known inability to grasp what was vital had something to do with the closing of the theatres from lack of patronage? They are forever and unchangingly theatrical, unable to keep up with the trend of public taste because their scope of vision is as boxed in as the stage.

On the other hand there are thousands of releases being turned out of factories that would be turned out into the street and thrown on the rubbish piles if forced to compete with a large number of releases of genuine merit. The exhibitor has to fill a daily programme and does the best he can, but he is up against combinations that limit his range of selection and is compelled to show a lot of unsatisfactory productions along with a few of high quality.

Without a dollar of additional expenditure on the part of producers, and with tremendously increased returns, the entire general quality could be raised by diverting cost of bombast to cost of artistic treatment and the exercise of higher intelligence in the selection of the subject. Before this year brings an influx of orders for moving pictures from all parts of the world, let us so conceive and frame them as to attain supremacy in the art, so that "Made in America" will be a guarantee of splendid and constantly-improving service.

The Appeal of the Screen

By W. Stephen Bush.

NOT since the days when the prophets of Israel championed the cause of the widow and the orphan has the world witnessed a more eloquent appeal than the screen-play entitled "The Silent Plea." This picture marks a new epoch in the use of the screen for the advancement of social reforms and for the assertion and enforcement of the rights of woman. I know that the motion picture has before this been enlisted as an aid to social progress, but never before has such art been displayed in demonstrating a crying evil and in suggesting a simple remedy.

The Moving Picture World would be remiss in its duty as the journalistic representative of this great industry if it did not point out the full extent of this development of the noblest purpose of the motion picture screen.

It seems to be a law of our race that all the great reforms and all the revolutionary changes for the betterment of mankind must spring from appeals to the imagination. The harsh poor laws of England survived many a wave of agitation, but they could not survive the appeal Dickens made to the imagination of the English people. In our country we know that the institution of slavery received its death blow through Harriet Beecher Stowe and her appeal to our imagination. Slavery had survived the assaults of humanitarians for more than a century, but it quaked and finally crumbled when the imagination of the people had stirred the national conscience to its profoundest depths.

Voltaire made the mind of France pregnant with the ideas of human rights long before the people of Paris marched upon the Bastille. The test may be applied to any great work of the imagination intended to appeal to other imaginations. The discussion of theories, the agitation on the "hustings" or in the legislative chamber have been slow halting and uncertain means of propagating a new faith or of combating an old evil, while the appeal to the imagination never fails. The history of every country will bear witness to this fact. The conquest of the Holy Land by the Crusaders is another proof that might be cited. Imagination kindles enthusiasm and begets action.

Herein lies the power for good which is peculiar to the screen. The silent plea rouses the conscience through the imagination. We read of thousands doomed to suffering and starvation in distant lands, but our imagination is not profoundly affected, our sympathies are but faint, our conscience sounds no alarm. Let the motion picture take us into the hut of a victim and show us every harrowing detail and the response of all our best instincts is strong and immediate.

The reform at which the Vitagraph picture aims is not intended for some distant land, but it strikes at an evil which has neighbored us in all its hideousness for many, many years. It aims at nothing more than giving the aid which the State now bestows upon many fatherless children to the widowed mother instead of giving it over to State and often to semi-private institutions.

"The Silent Plea" is a masterpiece, a veritable model of a film play with a deep social purpose. It is therefore a very proper subject for study and attention of all who claim to be the sincere friends of the motion picture. The play is remarkable because it does not obtrude its purpose, but lets the spectator absorb it. This is the only safe rule to follow in a screen appeal for any social reform. The keynote of the play is this: The family is both the unit and the mainstay of any civilization that is worth while. Whatever threatens the integrity of the fireside is one of those evils which concern the whole State.

It stands to reason that the effectiveness of the screen-appeal is in strict proportion to its art, to its dramatic power and to its fidelity to life. Judged by these criterions the screen-play I am speaking of is a specimen of perfection. What theme could be more difficult of treatment than a delineation of the subtle, scarcely visible, but irresistible influences which disintegrate the home? The sudden death of the father not only deprives the family of its head and support, but it begins to destroy what is left of family consciousness in the surviving mother and children. It is a slow process and it is traced in the film with a skill which baffles all description and makes one realize the futility of words. In the crucial years when the child-mind and the child-soul is more impressionable than wax itself the children of the widowed mother are taken from her and placed in an institution. There comes an estrangement, and with the estrangement the children lose the full influence of a mother's love. Not that the mother's love has died or even waned. That love in the heart of the mother is indestructible. In the children, however, the affection for the mother and the submission to her guidance must be kindled and kept alive by daily contact and by unceasing supervision. The bonds holding the mother to the child are as strong as life itself, but the bonds holding the children to the mother may be loosened and sometimes even broken. It is to the interest of the State and of every individual composing it to keep the bonds between the children and the widowed mother as strong as possible. We see in the picture that the strain and stress of poverty is the greatest cause of a loosening of these bonds.

We see with a sharpness which brings tears to the eyes of many the horrors of the institutional custody of children and we wonder at first mildly and then most resentfully why children are taken from their widowed mothers when the money used for the support of these institutions might with infinitely greater profit to the State be diverted into the hands of the widowed mothers.

If this picture does not help to bring about the humane and eminently rational reform it aims at it must cause great wonder to all who have been privileged to see it. We earnestly hope that every member of the legislature will look at it and every friend of humanity in every part of this country of ours. It will not only convince the public of the need of the reform which it is sought to obtain, but it must make converts to the motion pictures if any field is left for proselytizing. To those who love the screen and who delight in the great benefits which must come to mankind through the screen, this picture is a priceless inspiration and a renewal of faith.

The Vitagraph Company, which has produced the picture, has deserved exceeding well of the entire industry. It has once more emphasized the title of the picture to be classed as an art both fine and useful, it has given us a realization of the highest ideals of the screen. To the distinguished actress who played the part of widowed mother no praise that I might offer can compare with her own consciousness of noble and delicate work, nobly and delicately done. Every one connected with the picture must be an object of envy and emulation to all who are striving to uplift the picture and make the screen the mightiest teacher in all this world.

A Master Stroke by Wm. N. Selig

J. A. Berst Has Been Appointed Vice-President and General Manager of the Selig Polyscope Company and Will Make His Headquarters in Chicago.

IT IS a long stretch since April 1, 1896, when Wm. N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, signed the lease for the building at 43 Peck Court, Chicago. There he established his plant and studio. The latter was placed on the roof of the building and bore the distinction of being the first glass studio in America for the taking of moving pictures.

From this small beginning, by arduous work at all times of the day and often at night, in the face of inevitable difficulties that confronted every pioneer in the business, the Selig Polyscope Company steadily grew, under Mr. Selig's guiding hand, until the old quarters were wholly inadequate to meet the requirements.

In the spring of 1907, the building of the new plant and studio on Irving Park boulevard and Western avenue was begun, and two years later the nucleus of the plant and studio in Los Angeles was formed by Francis Boggs, who had been sent out with a company in 1908, the company stopping for a time in New Orleans and then pushing on to the coast. The Edendale plant is known as possessing the most beautiful and attractive structures and grounds, that are devoted to the making of moving pictures, in the world.

But Mr. Selig's activities in the building line did not cease here. His extensive use of wild animals, in making wild animal pictures, soon led to a large collection, and this was being constantly augmented until the building of the big Selig zoo became a necessity. Now the Selig zoo has become one of the famous sight-seeing spots on the Pacific coast.

When it is remembered that these provisions for the growth of the business were merely adjuncts to the making of moving pictures, and that Mr. Selig personally supervised and kept in close touch with every department of the studios and plants, east and west, even including in his work the reading of all the important scenarios, one can readily realize what a long, hard stretch it has been for him since that day, April 1, 1896. Now with his customary good business instinct, he has decided to relieve himself of part of the burden.

When it is announced that J. A. Berst has been appointed vice-president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, everyone familiar with the moving picture trade in America and Europe will acknowledge that Mr. Selig has made a master stroke in policy and good judgment. Mr. Berst—everyone knows, who knows anything—made the name of Pathe in America. Thoroughly familiar with all the ramifications of the trade and a past master as a judge of good moving pictures and their making, Mr. Berst is a big acquisition for the "Diamond S." brand of films.

Mr. Berst will make his headquarters in Chicago and will assume his new duties immediately.

Universal's New Ad. Service

It Supplies Exhibitors With Cuts and Copy for Use in Newspapers—Plan Meets with Success.

IN line with its policy of helpfulness to the exhibitor, the Universal is now sending out each week to the exhibitors who are using its program and who are wise enough to see the benefit of continual newspaper advertising, a newspaper advertising service which is at once unique and inexpensive. The Universal is now producing a two- or three-reel feature every day of the week, and these seven features are the basis for the advertising plan.

Each feature is made the subject of a single or double column coarse screen cut in which clever use is made of an illustration from the film and the title is reproduced in strong black and white. These cuts are made up three weeks ahead of release date and therefore are available for all classes of exhibitors, as electros can be ordered at any time during the life of a film. The master cut is kept in the home office and electros may be ordered from the advertising department.

This saves the exhibitor who has the willingness to use big space for single features the bother of making the cuts himself, which he could not do for a quarter of the price he pays now for the cut and the space rate in the paper, and it relieves him from the necessity of having a person who is not familiar with the advertising points of the picture to try to frame and reproduce an advertisement to fit it, before he has seen the picture.

To Continue the Simpson Business

It Will Be Managed Under the Old Firm Name by Mrs. Simpson—Receives Favorable Patent Decisions.

MRS. IDA L. SIMPSON, widow of the late Alfred L. Simpson, song slide maker and inventor of metalic surfaced motion picture screens, announces that she will continue the business founded by her husband under the old corporate title, Alfred L. Simpson, at the present address, 113 West 132d Street, New York, under her personal management. Mrs. Simpson says that while the demand for song slides is not strong from picture theatres, she has discovered a new and heretofore unsuspected market for that commodity and is doing a satisfactory business in that line.

The best product under her control is the Simpson Solar Screen, a curtain with a coating of aluminum and bronze which proved to be especially suited to the projection of pictures in light or semi-lighted rooms. Mr. Simpson secured basic patents on this form of coated screen and instituted several suits against infringing makers before his death. One of these actions was recently compromised by the payment to Mrs. Simpson of a large sum of money and guarantee of a royalty on the subsequent sales by the infringing manufacturer. Other suits against infringers will be instituted immediately as there is no question now regarding the validity of the Simpson patents.

The manufacture of these screens promises to prove especially profitable owing to the demand for a screen of the nature of the Simpson Solar for use in homes and class rooms, where a semi-illumination is desired. Mrs. Simpson is greatly pleased with the outlook for an increase in business under her management.

Victor Moore With Lasky

SAMUEL GOLDFISH announces that he has concluded contracts for the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co., by the terms of which this company is enabled to announce the screen debut of yet another famous legitimate star. The artist in this instance is Victor Moore, and the play to be picturized for his initial photodramatic appearance is George Bronson-Howard's successful play, "Snobs," which ran for an entire season at the Hudson Theater and is generally admitted to be the keenest satire on New York "high society" ever produced.

Victor Moore.

The leading character of "Snobs," played by Mr. Moore, is a young American of modest means who, through the death of relatives, suddenly finds himself the Duke of Walshire, the foremost nobleman of England. He has an especially romantic chum, who dreams fatuously of winning a society debutante, and when Disney goes into society himself he agrees to take this chum, Reade, along with him, on the express understanding that they are never to say which of them is the Duke. On account of his manner, everyone assumes that Reade is the Duke, and Disney, the real nobleman, is snubbed right and left. The society debutante now pretends to be in love with Reade, in order to win his supposed title, while Disney strikes up a friendship, later warming into romance, with the daughter of a rich pickle manufacturer, who is also snubbed and sympathizes with him. Of course, the real Duke finally declares himself.

Victor Moore is very widely known for his stellar work in Geo. M. Cohan productions, and especially for his engagement of two years in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." He has also starred in "The Talk of New York," "The Happiest Night of His Life," "Shorty McCabe" and various important vaudeville offerings. His first important roles were in the support of John Drew.

New Southern Film Company

Rene Plaisetty, a Young French-American, Will Produce for the Pathes With Studios in New Orleans.

RENE PLAISETTY, the young French-American who had left war-ridden France to engage in the production of films in this country, has just concluded a contract with Pathe Freres to make pictures for that company on American soil. To be specific the pictures are to be produced in New Orleans. Mr. Malitz, the vice-president of the Pathe firm, with whom Mr. Plaisetty made his arrangements, believes that New Orleans, with its quaint old-world backgrounds, with its romantic history and its marvelous light facilities, is especially adapted for the production of good subjects either taken from the great past or the picturesque present.

Rene Plaisetty.

Mr. Plaisetty is a French-American in the sense that he is French in his quick perception of dramatic values and in his good taste, and he is American in his spirit of initiative and his ability to gauge and please the taste of the American public. He had been quite successful as a director in Paris but had always longed for the wider fields of the new world, which he knew really better than the old. The war disgusted him with conditions in Europe and he came to this country establishing himself quickly in New Orleans. He started to build a studio which is now near completion. This studio with its technical departments will be large and modern in every respect. The studio is located in the very heart of a big natural park, peculiarly suited for use in film plays. Every variety of Southern scenery can be found there, a succession of charming landscapes greet the eye in every direction—it is in short a director's paradise.

Miss Leatrice Zeidler.

When Mr. Plaisetty was in New York, in the course of the past week, he called at the offices of The Moving Picture World and told of his plans and prospects.

"I will devote myself especially to American subjects," he said in the course of an interesting chat with a World man. "The facilities for making good pictures in Louisiana are exceptional and it will be my earnest endeavor to make the best possible use of them. I have secured a very charming and capable young lady for my leading woman. She is Miss Leatrice Zeidler, a native of New Orleans, a woman of the genuine Southern type of beauty and I think highly gifted as an actress. With the little experience she has had she has shown remarkable aptitude for the screen. She has long been a social favorite in New Orleans and has frequently distinguished herself in private theatricals. I believe that the demand for pictures made in America is growing all the time and I want to make chiefly American subjects. Louisiana is surely not the least interesting and picturesque part of our country. I believe that the field is full of splendid opportunities and all my ambitions are centred on making some valuable contributions to the supply of American quality pictures."

Nola Studio in Course of Construction.

Mr. Plaisetty returned to New Orleans after making his arrangements with the firm of Pathe and will soon be ready to announce his first release. He calls his company the Nola Film Company.

Subway Disaster in Pictures

District Attorney Perkins and Other Officials See Animated Weekly Views at Universal Offices.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY and Mrs. Perkins, and Assistant District Attorney and Mrs. Arthur Train of New York were the guests of the Universal Film Mfg. Co. Tuesday evening, January 12, at a private showing in the Universal's projection room at 1600 Broadway of the thousand-foot reel of pictures taken of the recent subway disaster. The invitation was extended by Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, in order to aid the investigation about to be begun by the district attorney's office.

Because of the Universal's enterprise in being "on the job," District Attorneys Perkins and Train were enabled to see animated views showing the arrival of the fire and police departments on the ground, the tearing up of the gratings at the emergency exits at 53d street, firemen lowering ladders and descending into the smoke only to reappear a moment afterward carrying unconscious forms on their shoulders, the arrival of ambulances and the application of the pulmotors which were an important factor in saving many lives, long rows of victims stretched out upon the wet sidewalks and tossing about in their agony while awaiting relief, and "close-up" views of Fire Commissioner Adamson, Police Commissioner Woods and Fire Chief John Kenlon.

To Jack Cohn, editor of the Universal Animated Weekly, belongs the credit for the scoop. He was walking to his office on Wednesday morning, the day of the disaster, when he saw smoke rolling up from a manhole at Broadway and 53d street. Quickly sensing the importance of it, he telephoned his office and in a few minutes camera men Whipple and Rucker were on the job and turning the cranks. One of the cameras was set up at 51st street and the other at 55th street, and they were in operation by the time the fire department began to arrive.

"CABIRIA" POPULAR WITH CHURCHES.

The popularity of the Itala Film Co.'s "Cabiria" among churches and societies is the subject of much comment in film circles. St. Vincent's, Chicago, has a membership of 5,500 and has arranged a big benefit performance of the D'Annunzio spectacle at the College Theater in Chicago the week of January 17. Frank Samuels, former manager of the Motion Picture Expositions at Grand Central Palace and now representing Itala's interests in the middle west, promoted the affair and is in charge of the details. A choir from St. Vincent's will render the choral accompaniment and a large orchestra will be used.

Screener's Beefsteak a Jolly Affair.

Billy Quirk Officiates as Rewinder and Picks a Fine Lot of Entertainers.

THE second monthly beefsteak dinner of the Screen Club was held on the evening of Saturday, Jan. 16, and was a success from every viewpoint. Billy Quirk was master of ceremonies, and for a title adopted the name of Rewinder, which undoubtedly will serve as the official designation of his successors. Mr. Quirk had a long list of entertainers and speakers, and these kept the party in the best of spirits. One man that stood out was Lionel Belmore, with his recitation of "A Little Hero," by Arthur Mathison. There is no better or more appreciative auditor than an actor. From a mood of highest revelry he will at the drop of a hat aboutface and in absolute quiet listen to a fine bit of elocution. Mr. Belmore was in excellent spirits and voice. When he was called on he gave graceful utterance to a few remarks and was retiring to his seat when there were calls for something more. Reluctantly he returned to the head of the room. As he told the story of the little stowaway, absolute silence settled over the gathering. There were few dry eyes when he finished. He got the ovation he deserved.

The dinner began at 10 o'clock. When the last appeal of "We want beef!" had been satisfied, Rewinder Quirk called on Founder King Baggot, who started the ball rolling. Vice-president Wilson, in the absence of President Kirkwood, who is on the Pacific Coast, appealed for the co-operation of all the members. Joseph Smiley, of Lubinville, admitted that he could not remain away after he got that personal letter from the Rewinder. He said that he had never so strongly felt good-fellowship as he found it in that group of Screeners.

John F. Skerrett spoke for the men who build the machines that make possible the showing of the work of the dramatic artists. Allen Sangree kept the party in high good humor with his observations on the art of writing and producing motion pictures. His inimitable baseball phraseology applied to the screen was thoroughly understandable, even when he referred to the bush leaguers.

Rewinder Quirk read a letter of regret from William Oldknow, of the South. It was a direct reply to the invitation, constructed on similar lines, and made a hit with the diners. John Bunny sent a telegram of good wishes and asked that the first half barrel of beer be named for him and further requested that the bill be sent quickly to him at Milwaukee. That, too, made some hit with the diners.

Walter Macnamara talked on the democracy of the club, Hughie Mack told four Irish stories and got four hearty laughs, Dick Leslie sang most acceptably, Al Lichtman told how the salesman, too, fitted into the film scheme; William Cale told a story, Sam Spedon described how he had "Nothing at All to Say," Sam Levy entertained with songs as did Billy Smith, and the Screen Club Instrumental Trio—Bill Sullivan, violin; Leslie Ennis, piano, and Harry Ennis, banjo—were encored.

Illustrated Wagner Concerts.

A Novel Entertainment Presented at Teller's Broadway Theater in Brooklyn.

IN Teller's Broadway theater on the evening of Monday, Jan. 18, a novel entertainment was presented, motion pictures playing an important part therein. Ellis and Ward have called the performance "Illustrated Wagner Concerts." The performance lived up to this characterization in every particular. Mr. Ernest Knoch, who directed the Wagner operas at the Century Theater with such marked ability and conscientious thoroughness, selected and arranged the music which accompanied the pictures. The pictures have been reviewed in these columns before, and it was pointed out then that the early part of "The Life of Richard Wagner" was (in the pictures) poorly handled, while the latter part maintained a remarkably high degree of artistic workmanship.

The entertainment was divided into three parts, each part consisting partly of pictures and partly of music. The music was all Wagner's, with the exception of the overture to Don Giovanni. It would be difficult to overpraise the musical and the singing part of the entertainment. Mr. Knoch had his singers "trained to the minute," the chorus had been well rehearsed and was at all times sure of its ground, while the work of the orchestra reminded one of a Wagner cycle at Munich. The musical program was as follows:

(1a) Chorus .....Entire Company
"Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin"
(2) Solo—"Dich Teure Halle" from "Tannhauser"..Miss Jeanette Larson
(To be sung in German)
(3) Baritone Solo—"The Evening Star" from "Tannhauser,"
Mr. Louis B. Angelo
(To be sung in German)
(4) Solo—"Elsa's Dream" from "Lohengrin".....Miss Karena Post
(To be sung in English)
(5) March and Chorus from 2nd act of "Tannhauser".....Company
(1) "Pilgrim Chorus" from "Tannhauser"....Messrs. Bailey, Schmidt, Caplan Civoru, Haskell, Dreeben, Lavitz, Spivack and Lenzer.
(2) Love Song from "Die Walkure".....Mr. Hardy Williamson
(3) "Spinning Song" from "Flying Dutchman"...Misses Scott, Haeffner, D'Avril, Armington, Post, Dodson, Rauch, Sanger, Crosby and Jennie Larson.
(1) Overture from "Die Meistersinger" followed by.....Orchestra
(2) Chorus from second act.....The Entire Company
(3) "Preislied" from "Die Meistersinger".....Orchestra
Finale—Chorus from 1st act of "Parsifal".....Company

"SIGN OF THE CROSS" EXHIBITED AT OHIO PENITENTIARY.

Dr. O. T. Reed, chaplain of the Ohio State Penitentiary, at Columbus, and many prisoners in that institution have written the Famous Players Film Co., following the exhibition of that company's masterful production, "The Sign of the Cross," in the prison chapel, thanking them for the wonderful lesson embodied in the film.

Scene at Screen Club's Beefsteak Dinner, January 16, 1915.

"Du Barry"

A Magnificent Production in Six Parts by George Kleine, With Mrs. Leslie Carter and a Superb Cast.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

CAST.

Jeanette Vaubernier, afterwards Mme. La Comtesse Du Barry .....Mrs. Leslie Carter
Louis XV, King of France.....Richard Thornton
De Cosse Brissac, Captain of the Guards.....Hamilton Revelle
Comte Jean Du Barry, an impecunious nobleman, who operates a gambling house.....Campbell Gollan
The Papal Nuncio, a friend and adviser to Mme. Du Barry .....Louis Payne
Denys, Mme. Du Barry's faithful servant.....Mr. Pouget
Hortense, the head milliner.....Miss Rawlinson
Marquise De Crenay, a lady of the court of Louis XV .....Miss Corah Adams
Marie Antoinette, Dauphine of France, afterwards Queen .....Miss Robinson
Sophia, a maid.....Miss Wilkins
Duc de Richelieu, a close friend of the King.....Mr. Barker
Maupou, a nobleman in the King's employ.....Mr. Cherney
Mme. La Gourdan, a confidant of Jean Du Barry....Mrs. Eden
Modistes, Guards, Soldiers, Civilians, Dancers, Clowns, Courtiers and Ladies of the Court.

WERE it not for the awesome tragedy in which the story of "Du Barry" culminates, its photo-dramatic production by George Kleine might well be termed a photo-drama of gay Parisian life, courtly manners and royal pageants. True, there are dread scenes near the close showing the fury of the Paris tribunal and of the long suffering mobs that stormed Paris to the strains of the Marseillaise and the pathetic sight on the gruesome guillotine stage in the vast square, yet the light and gay sides of life that precede them so fill the mind that the spectator is impressed that he has spent the greater part of his time amid the sunshine, and that the approach of evening only has painted the scenes in sombre shades.

For myself, my impression throughout in viewing these pictures was similar to that experienced when listening to a fine musical composition, well interpreted both in spirit and technique. There may be here and there a flaw, as it may have appeared to the critical sense, but in the main, in the big things that really count, and in the small things that contribute to a harmonious whole, my mind felt easy and contented. The pictures never touched the commonplace; they reflected faithfully, so far as I was capable to judge them, the life, manners and customs of the time in which the story is set.

In the matter of costumes, I do not claim a knowledge that would commend me as an expert to a Worth establishment, but I can confess to the pleasure created by the costuming of the characters in this photo-drama, which shows careful adherence to the period of Louis XV, save on the part of Madame Du Barry. Mrs. Carter wears stunning gowns, and they must have cost a great deal of money, but I cannot rid myself of the opinion that had the other members of the company taken the same license as Mrs. Carter the court scenes and others would have become anachronistic in this respect.

Too much praise can scarcely be given to the fine settings of this photoplay. Many of the exteriors are lavish in their attractiveness, and show fine skill and artistic taste in the selection of the locales. As we know, the production was made in Italy, and it must have required great care and knowledge to have selected a spot which fits in so well, as is shown in the pictures, with a scene in the famous Gardens of Versailles. I refer not only to the scene where the fete takes place, but also to that other scene where Louis XV takes Jeannette and shows her De Cosse Brissac standing, with eyes blindfolded, before a firing platoon of the Guards. A panoramic swing of the camera shows the extensive grounds, beautified by the art of the landscape engineer and of the sculptor.

Other fine exteriors are seen in the march of the King and his guards, the students' ball at Rampanaux, Mme. Du Barry's home at Luciennes, and the incensing of the mob against Jeannette by Count Jean Du Barry. These mob scenes have been excellently handled, the perfect action betraying repeated and painstaking rehearsal.

Many of the interior settings are positive gems, and there are over 100 in the pictures. I refer more particularly to the grand stairway in the palace of the King (which was built for the occasion, wholly of Italian white marble), the Court reception of Countess Du Barry, her chamber in the palace (a veritable triumph of artistic decoration and furnishing), the scene in the Opera House where Louis sees Jeannette for the second time, the sitting room in the home of Jean Du Barry, and Jeannette's room in the same mansion. I have been told that the plans of all these beautiful interiors were drawn in water colors before a single stroke of work was done.

Scene from "Du Barry" (Kleine).

In this connection it is opportune to state that George Kleine personally directed and supervised the making of the entire eleven parts of "Du Barry," which has since been reduced to six parts, to suit better the demands of the trade. Mr. Kleine took to Italy Mrs. Leslie Carter and the principal actors in her support in the Belasco stage production of "Du Barry." Chief of these were Richard Thornton, Hamilton Revelle and Campbell Gollan. He has been lavish in his expenditures on the production, and I for one congratulate him heartily on the fine results of his efforts. He has given us a photo-drama that will remain a classic on this subject.

It is really a pleasure to study the acting in these pictures. Mrs. Leslie Carter may not be convincing, so far as youth is concerned, when she appears in the part of the gay and frisky Jeannette, in the opening scenes; but her art is undeniable in these scenes and throughout all the scenes. In physical appearance, in the later scenes, she fits in better, which makes her impersonation all the more admirable. To me, as I watched closely the emotions expressed facially, and by eye and gesture, Mrs. Carter succeeds in giving one a close, inside view of Jeannette's mind and soul. Just after the King has departed from the Jean Du Barry home, and after Cosse has secretly seen Jeannette with the King at her feet and kissing her hand, he comes on the scene and upbraids her mercilessly for disappointing him. Mrs. Carter's face is a study here. One can read the deepest heart pain, the sorrow, and finally the indignation that bursts forth in a torrent. Her spirit of tantrum is amusingly shown at times in scenes with the King and Jean Du Barry, and her great tenderness and loyalty are revealed pathetically at other times for the ill-fated Cosse. These are only gleanings from the fine portrayal of Mme. Du Barry by Mrs. Carter.

What a trio of photoplay actors we have got in Richard Thornton, Hamilton Revelle and Campbell Gollan! They are always a joy to the eye when on the screen. I think Mr. Gollan's Jean Du Barry is inimitable, and this does not detract from the splendid art of the other members of the great trio. The faithful Denys is brought back to life in the person of Mr. Pouget. The mincing procurer for Louis XV, the Duc de Richelieu, is finely drawn by Mr. Barker, and old Maupeau, his companion, impersonated by Mr. Cherney, is another excellently drawn character. It is very amusing to watch these characters closely when they make their first call on that reprobate, the Count Jean Du Barry. Mrs. Eden is perfect in the part of Mme. La Gourdan, the confidant of Jean Du Barry.

PEOPLE'S THEATER BEING IMPROVED.

The People's Theater, West Park and Alder streets, Portland, Ore., is undergoing extensive alterations and improvements. In order that the house may not be closed during the renovation, the work of improvement has been going on after the closing hour at night. The old lighting system is being changed, and new heating and ventilating systems are now in the course of being installed. The work is under the direction of John F. Cordray, who has been manager of the People's for the past several months. Although the theater is about four years old and was practically up to date, one will hardly recognize in the renovated structure the old People's Theater.

FREDERICK LEWIS WITH CALIFORNIA.

Frederick Lewis, for many years a member of the Sothern-Marlowe Company, has joined the ranks of the players who are now appearing before the camera. Mr. Lewis has become the leading man for Beatriz Michelena, who is starring under the direction of the California Motion Picture Corporation. The photoplays in which Mr. Lewis will appear are to be released on the World Film schedule, and he will be permanently located at San Rafael, Cal., where the studios of the California Motion Picture Corporation are located.

FINNEGAN IN TOWN.

T. P. Finnegan, of Dallas and other Texas towns, was in New York last week getting some inspiration for his several picture theaters. He was present at the showing of the Bosworth feature, "Hypocrites," Longacre Theater, Wednesday evening, January 20.

"Souls Enchained"

Lyda Borelli Pictures Woman Who Is Passion's Slave to Tragic End (Five-Reel True Feature Offering).

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS five-reel offering, "Souls Enchained," made in Italy and distributed by the True Feature Company, is a high-class tragic picture of merit. The leading woman, Lyda Borelli, whose strong emotional acting makes the story convincing to a degree that at times grips the imagination, has a fine vehicle here that will surely widen her fame. She is the center of the picture, and her acting keeps it dramatic. There is no melodrama in it. The plot is simple to the point of slightness; but the story is logical and true. It is an offering that will go well in houses whose patrons can appreciate her art—houses where melodrama and sensational incident are the whole desideratum may not find it so profitable. We think it a pretty safe guess for the average theater.

Scene from "Souls Enchained" (True Feature).

Among the lesser things—and this will go far towards making it an offering that will achieve a general popularity—are exquisite glimpses of Venice; the old big landmarks are there, but besides these one comes on balconies, doorways, vine-clad windows, back ways—in other words, the very heart of that romantic city of canal waters, with little gardens tucked away here and there. Then Borelli has personal beauty and she wears some really stunning gowns and head dresses. We can quote Belle Gold (wife of Al. Cross, the exchange man of Pittsburgh), to the effect that these will make it an attractive picture for women. The staging, with its big, deep scenes, and the clear, life-like photography, help a lot.

The story tells the tragic fate of a married man and a woman who fell so much in love with him that she couldn't forget him and at length persuaded him to run away with her. He gets sick and they fall into deeper and deeper poverty. In Paris he dies, and she comes to her end in a hospital bed—her only consolation that her passion lived until the last; even with her paramour dead she refuses to return to a man who had always loved her and with whom, in the beginning, she had quarreled.

MARION SWAYNE JOINS UNITED FILM.

Marian Swayne has become a United Film Service star. The petite screen actress will appear regularly in single-reel comedies released by that organization, the Gaumont Company, of which she has been leading woman for a long time, having become one of the producing units of the United Film Service. Miss Swayne enjoys the distinction of having been chosen by James Montgomery Flagg, the noted illustrator and creator of the Flagg girl, as the heroine of "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb," a famous series of newspaper sketches, which have recently been released in film story form by the United Film Service.

GARWOOD NOW DIRECTS.

William Garwood, who formerly played leads in Lucius Henderson's Imp Company, hereafter will direct his own company. Robert Hill will act as assistant to Mr. Garwood. Violet Mersereau will continue as his leading woman. Mr. Henderson hereafter will direct Mary Fuller, and Director Johnston, who directed Miss Fuller, will direct Miss Ostriche.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

Films Must Be Placed in Fireproof Receptacles in Transit?

THE coroner's jury appointed to make an inquiry and finding on the deaths of Mayor Henry S. Rich and Frank L. Poultney, of Berwyn, who lost their lives in a fire and panic, in a combination car of a Burlington & Quincy suburban train, on November 14, near South Kedzie avenue, concluded their investigations on January 16, before Deputy Coroner Adolph Herrmann, in this city.

It will be remembered from former letters that the origin of the fire was attributed to a package of films carried by Joel A. Johnson, of Berwyn, who had placed the package under a seat in the smoker. Mr. Johnson, at a former hearing before the coroner, denied that the fire was due to the films and stated that the fire originated in the roof of the coach.

P. C. Richards, of Berwyn, who appeared as a witness at the final hearing, with both hands still in bandages, testified as follows:

"There was a great commotion in the car, when some one yelled 'Fire!' and a window was smashed at the same time. As I went to rise from my seat I saw a flash of fire that reached to the roof of the car, near the front end. I got out of the seat and when I got in the aisle I fell down. When I looked up the whole top of the car seemed to be a mass of flames. The aisle was crowded and I got out of the car on my hands and knees, with my head as close as possible to the floor. When I got outside and looked back the whole car was filled with flames from top to bottom."

The jury returned the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find that the coach was set afire by moving picture films, the property of the Universal Film Company, a corporation, and delivered by one of its employes to Joel A. Johnson, wrapped in a paper and tied with a rope and carried in this condition into the coach by Mr. Johnson, who placed the package containing the films on the floor, the films evidently being set afire by some person throwing a lighted match, cigar, cigarette or other lighted object on the floor, which came in contact with the package, setting it afire and causing the burning of nearly every passenger in the coach.

"The jury finds the carrying of the films in this manner to have been a violation of Section 1622 of the Municipal Code."

The jury also recommended that the Interstate Commerce Commission have adequate legislation enacted prohibiting the carrying of explosives or combustible material by any common carrier unless it is in a fireproof receptacle.

Shortly after the accident, all railroads operating out of Chicago issued drastic orders prohibiting the transportation in baggage cars, or the carrying in any passenger car, of any dangerous article or anything that is liable to cause an explosion or that is inflammable in its nature. None of the following articles is now permitted to be accepted as baggage in any form, nor will passengers be allowed to go on the train with the same; dynamite, gunpowder, fireworks, loaded firearms, moving picture films, inflammable liquids, compressed gas, gasolene and matches.

Under the railroad ruling the only way in which films can now be transported out of Chicago is in express cars, the rates for which add great additional expense to film companies.

When it is borne in mind that thirty passengers on the Burlington car were seriously burned and that two others died from their injuries in this accident, it is only too evident that great care must be exercised to prevent a repetition. Had the films carried by Johnson been enclosed in a fireproof receptacle, as prescribed by a Chicago city ordinance, the accident could not have occurred. It now lies with the Interstate Commerce Commission whether or not films enclosed in fireproof receptacles shall be carried in baggage cars. There would be little, if any, danger in carrying films so enclosed in baggage or passenger cars, and it would save film companies the heavy tax imposed by sending the packages by express.

Tribune War Pictures Contribute Largely to Belgian Red Cross.

The second payment was made by the Chicago Tribune last week to the Belgian Red Cross, from the profits of the war pictures taken by Mr. Weigle. The payment, which amounted to $10,543.63, was made to Dr. Cyril Vermeren, the Belgian consul in this city. Of the amount stated, $543.63 resulted from the showing of the pictures in Omaha, under the auspices of the World-Herald of that city.

The total of the sum turned over by the Tribune to the Belgian Red Cross, to date, is $20,543.63. Consul Vermeren forwarded the last check to Emanuel Havenith, Belgian minister in Washington, D. C., and he will forward the money to Auguste Van Langermeesch, who was head of the Red Cross in Antwerp, when the contract between the Belgian government and the Tribune was made by Joseph Medill Patterson.

"The response of the American people to the need of Belgium has been wonderful," said Dr. Vermeren. "One of the greatest troubles of the Belgians is the care of the German soldiers who are housed with the residents. In Turnhout, a town in Antwerp province, near the Holland frontier, for instance, the residents are on the point of starvation, yet they have to give all they have, practically, to the German soldiers.

"I have the letter from one woman who was in good circumstances there before the war. She had a small farm, with a cow, some pigs, and a large number of fowls. All these have been taken from her, and she is forced to feed three German soldiers. When the shipments of food come in, the Germans allow the distribution and then sit down and order up everything in the house. She works from daylight until dark for the soldiers, and yet she gets nothing but complaints from them.

"When she last wrote to relatives in Chicago, she said she was giving them that day her last supply of bread. She did not know what would happen. She said that her own family had been getting along on almost nothing."

In the Belgian minister's letter to the Tribune, acknowledging the receipt of the check, he wrote: "I add the renewed expression of our thanks for this beautiful contribution."

Great Improvement in Ventilation of Chicago Picture Theatres.

The latest bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department shows a great improvement of conditions in moving picture theaters, in the matter of ventilation.

Jan. 1, 1913, there were 630 theatres in Chicago, but only forty-five complied with the law as far as ventilation is concerned.

Jan. 1, 1914, there were 609 theatres, and 160 of them complied with the law. The hands of the department during most of this period had been tied by legislation.

Jan. 1, 1915, the total number of theatres was 616; the number in operation, though not either complying or installing alterations to make them comply, was 17.

The next step by the health department will be to get the requisite force to insure that ventilating systems will be honestly operated.

Censor Funkhouser's Work to Be Recensored.

Rigorous as Major Funkhouser's censoring of moving pictures is, it, in turn, will be subjected to recensoring by the Armstrong Neighborhood Association, composed of parents of the pupils of the Armstrong school, at Greenleaf avenue and Pingree street, this city. Permission was granted the Association recently by the school management committee to show moving pictures in the assembly hall of the school, and comedy and drama and educational pictures will form the programs.

The admission fee will be five cents, and any profits will go toward defraying expenses of the school.

"We first rejected the plan, believing some moving picture concern was back of it," said Trustee Harry A. Lipsky, "but the parents have proved they are the only ones interested, and I now believe it will be most successful, both financially and educationally."

Who Will Be "Sue"?

The interest in the "Sue" contest is increasing every day, and votes are being rolled up for the favorites with amazing rapidity. Sunday, Jan. 17, closed the third week of the contest, and the five highest number of votes were: 55,710, 52,605, 51,420, 46,490 and 46,480.

Miss Florence Tighe has led throughout the first three weeks, although her lead has been cut down considerably during the last week. Miss Gladys Swain is second on the list.

In order to prevent holding out votes so as to spring a surprise at the last minute for some candidate, the Herald photoplay editor has limited the extension of coupons for voting to the ten-day limit. The coupons are dated, and no coupons will be counted that exceed this time limit.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Franklin Fox, who owned the Opera House in Mishawaka, Ind., the Crystal in Elkhart, Ind., and the Irwin Opera House in Goshen, Ind., about three years ago, called at the World office last week. Mr. Fox managed the Roseland Theatre, 113th street and Michigan avenue, this city, for about a year. He is now open for the management of a good house, or to buy one in a good location.

* * *

Elmer A. Vidette, operator at the Rose Theatre, 63 West Madison street, called at the World office and purchased a Handbook last week. Mr. Vidette was formerly operator at the Alcazar Theatre, 69 West Madison street, for eighteen months, and when the Rose opened about eight weeks ago, he was transferred to that theatre. The Rose has a seating capacity of 300 and charges five cents admission for four reels of Mutual service. Mr. Vidette stated that the Keystone comedies draw large crowds to the Rose. This theatre and the Alcazar are managed by H. C. Miller and owned by Mr. Mohr, of the new Morrison Hotel. The Alcazar charges five cents for a program of four reels of General Film service, which recently supplanted the Universal. Mr. Vidette has been an operator for ten years.

* * *

William Buehler, formerly connected with the Kinemacolor Company, Los Angeles, in the capacity of assistant director, and, who, since the disbandment of that company, has been connected with the Kalem and the Bosworth, Inc., paid a pleasant call on Tuesday last. Mr. Buehler had just arrived in Chicago from Philadelphia, where he had been engaged in soliciting business for the exhibit of the State of Pennsylvania, in its state building, at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco. This exhibit will consist of views of beautiful scenic and historical points throughout the state. W. R. Rothacker, general manager of the Industrial Moving Picture Company, it is understood, will most likely be given the contract for the taking and making of these pictures. Mr. Buehler at present is a special representative of the Industrial Moving Picture Company. Among the pictures included in the exhibit will be the following: the scene of the Battle of Gettysburg, of Valley Forge, Delaware Water Gap, scenes around Kingston, near Scranton, where one of the most sanguinary Indian battles was fought in the early days, also views of the oil region in and around Titusville, etc. Negotiations are under way with Chester P. Ray, director general of the Panama-Pacific Commission for the State of Pennsylvania.

* * *

I received a postal card last week, from W. R. Rothacker, who was then in Rochester, N. Y. He stated that he was about to enjoy the privilege of being taken through the big Eastman Kodak Company's plant there, under the guidance of my good friend Schuyler Colfax.

* * *

McAllister Chandler, a member of the Pathe exchange staff, in the Mallers Building, paid us a call last week. He stated that Manager John Hardin had arranged to show Pathe programs on Wednesday of every week, at 2.30 P. M., in the private projecting room connected with the offices, for the benefit of patrons.

* * *

Phil H. Solomon, among other enterprises in which he is at present engaged, was recently appointed Chicago representative of Day and Night Screens, Inc., of New York city. He stated that the outlook was very promising, and that he had already contracted for three of these screens in Chicago. His office is in Room 806, 167 West Washington street, this city.

* * *

T. P. Finnegan, First National Vice-President of the M. P. E. L. of America, arrived in the city from Dallas, Tex., Thursday morning, Jan. 14. He left the city Friday, for New York. Mr. Finnegan stopped over in Chicago specially to consult with Chicago members of the organization how best to boost business just now. He stated that conditions in the South are pretty poor at the present time. Mr. Finnegan owns the Hippodrome and the Park in Dallas, each seating 1,200 people, and the Hippodrome in Waco, which seats 800 people. The Hippodrome in Dallas is a fine modern structure, erected at an outlay of $118,000, and the house in Waco cost $85,000. The Park is a large open-air theatre, which is run five months during the summer. Mr. Finnegan reported that the affairs of the League were in very good shape in the State of Texas, and that exhibitors generally are taking deeper interest in the welfare of the organization. Texas exhibitors, Mr. Finnegan told me, were looking forward to a great improvement in the business in the next 90 days.

The clean air committee of the Chicago Woman's City Club, has discovered that managers of moving picture theatres, not provided with adequate ventilation, are resorting to the use of perfume in order to conceal their fresh air shortcoming. The members say that five theatres located in the First, Ninth, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-ninth Wards, are inadequately equipped. In four of these they report that the fans are not kept in operation. Out of 600 moving picture theatres in Chicago, the members state that only 50 have inadequate ventilating systems. This report was made after an exhaustive inspection which covered the entire city.

* * *

Williamson's Submarine Exposition moving pictures are still drawing notable crowds to the Fine Arts Theatre. One day last week I saw hundreds of public school children waiting outside in a long line under the escort of their teachers.

* * *

"The Escape," a feature subject adapted from Paul Armstrong's play of that name, and produced under the direction of D. W. Griffith, has entered upon a run at the Studebaker. Blanche Sweet, Mae Marsh, Robert Harron, Donald Crisp, Owen Moore and Ralph Lewis are seen in the important characters.

* * *

"The Morals of Marcus," with Marie Doro in the leading role, is now occupying the screen at the Ziegfeld Theatre.

* * *

Alfred Hamburger, it is learned, has again leased the Fine Arts Theatre, and will take charge of the house early in the spring to present high class feature subjects. This is really a renewal of the contract held by him last spring and summer, when he presented Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter" for twenty-four weeks. It has been learned that Mr. Hamburger is at present negotiating for "The Blue Mouse," the rights of which for nine states have been purchased by the Photoplay Productions Releasing Company through A. M. Gollos, president.

* * *

The Photoplay Productions Releasing Company has moved its offices from 37 South Wabash avenue to Suite 414-415 in the Mallers Building. These offices are finely furnished, and occupy 3,800 feet of floor space. The working staff has been largely increased, and a fine working system has been put in operation. President A. M. Gollos recently purchased the state rights for "The Blue Mouse" in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kentucky, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Nebraska. He has also purchased the rights for "The Littlest Rebel" in eighteen states. The company has local representatives in all the principal cities in the Middle West, it is understood, and on the Pacific Coast. The advertisement elsewhere in this issue gives full particulars.

* * *

The Selig Company from Los Angeles, during the stopover in New Orleans, while en route to the Panama Zone to produce "The N'er Do Well," spent most of the time in taking interesting scenes of the French quarter and of Creole life for use in certain forthcoming photoplays.

* * *

Skilled musicians, who live on the West Side, Chicago, have formed a society for the promotion of good music, under the direction of Professor A. V. Cerny. This little circle of pianists, violinists, cellists and singers, descendants from music-loving people of southern Europe, are jealous of the steady growth of the moving picture business in the poorer sections of the city, where music once held regal sway. "We are going to bring back good music to the West Side," says Professor Cerny. "Perhaps, I should not say that, for good music really has never left it. The people are being drawn away from it by the rag-time piano tunes played for moving pictures, but they are always willing to return to their first love. The artists of the West Side have been unanimous in the offer of their services without compensation. We have arranged for four concerts, and we intend to give more if we find the people willing to give us their support." Good luck and success to your efforts, Professor Cerny. Moving pictures promote the fine arts, perhaps, as powerfully as music. Why then decry the pictures?

* * *

H. E. Aitken, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, New York city, paid a flying visit to the city last week.

* * *

M. Schwartz, head of the Reliable Feature Film Company, with office in Room 605 Schiller Building, this city, returned from Milwaukee early last week, and reported satisfactory bookings for "The Christian," for which he holds the Wisconsin state rights.

Doings at Los Angeles

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS! Conducted by a live wire manager. Al Watson, of the Republic Theater, this week had Bert Vincent sing higher than any mezzo soprano or high-pitched siren, for he was on the top of the Metropolitan Building singing "Tipperary." The stunt attracted considerable attention, and people gaped as if an aero battle were in progress over the street. After the war song came "After the Ball," to advertise the film of the same name which was showing at the theater way down on the ground.

* * *

With President Del. Henderson at the heel, the Photoplayers' Wednesday night fellowship dinner joy wagon broke all speed and attendance records this week. It seemed as if the very hub had turned out in a body to attend the big event when the new president of the club took hold. Never had so many members been present, and a great time was had by all. Afterwards many more, who could not be accommodated at dinner, returned and a general get-acquainted session started. The evening was a joyous one, no business interfering with the merry affair, although most everyone expressed their interest in the coming ball in February.

* * *

Here is part of an interesting letter sent to me by Mrs. Earl Fraser, of Venice, California, a former resident of Australia. It is from a friend of hers "back home," and tells some really good news:

Doublebay, Sydney, New South Wales, December 21, 1914.

My Dear:—

* * * and there was a good comedy that was made right near your home. We wished we could have seen them make it. For all we know you might have. The picture houses here are always full. The Australians do not look at anybody but Charles Chaplin. After him, the big drawing card is Ford Sterling, and Mabel Normand. Most everyone likes Little Billy Jacobs, too, in the kiddie pictures. I expect you see a lot of the artists as the Keystone studios are at Los Angeles somewhere. Do you ever really see them? What do they look like off the screen? Write and tell me all about them. * * *

* * *

Congratulations to the Exhibitors of Southern California. Their big ball in the Shrine auditorium on Saturday night, the sixteenth, was a huge success, due to generous advertising, much publicity, and a bunch of really charged wires behind the guns. The evening before the ball, a great parade was made on the business streets with Little Mary at its head. The ball was for two purposes: to welcome Mary Pickford back to the west, and also to gather in funds for the battle against measures before the legislature which will, if passed, be detrimental to the business in this state. Parties were made up from many outlying cities, and the representation of fans and people in the business was good. These people are the ones who do not want the laws enacted which would close theaters on Sundays; eliminate multiple reel features by requiring five-minute intervals between each reel; bar children under sixteen, without parents or guardian, and segregate the sexes within the theaters. The funds realized from the successful ball will be used to fight this proposed ruling, and, therefore, the many men who make the industry what it is are to be shaken by the hand for their hard work in pulling off such a big event with the success that attended.

* * *

Bruce Mitchell and the Thistle comedians from the Crown City Company have returned from Skyland, way up in the mountains, where they spent several days getting snow stuff. Donald MacDonald has just completed "The Secret Formula" for the Paragon brand with Rupert Julian, who was only secured last week by this concern, in the lead.

* * *

Not satisfied with putting on a fight between two humans, George Seigmann inadvertently caused a near-fight between himself and a bull dog. He picked up a pipe on a nearby bench. The bull owned the pipe; result: Director George limped to the hospital and received an injection of peroxide in his wounded leg. The real fight was between Gene Pallette and a real boxer, but Gene knocked him out (in the picture); however, he put up a stiff fight.

* * *

At the Exhibitors' ball, some new fancy dances were recorded. The most interesting were the Pickford Prance, the Chaplin Canter, Roland Rag, Cunard Crawl, Tincher Two-Step, Walthal Wiggle, Photoplay Patter, Bunny Hug, Filmy Fox Trot, One-Reel One-Step, Inceville Innovation and a number of others just as clever.

* * *

"One man's loss is another man's gain" may well be applied to the pictures, for the other day a big fire at the oil wells near here was taken advantage of by the Bosworth players to film some exciting scenes for Lois Weber's "Sunshine Mollie." The fire of the oil well is one of the best in the world for a camera, and this fire was a great one.

* * *

Aided by the powerful rays of electric arcs, Carlyle Blackwell and his director, William Taylor, did some big and exciting scenes down town, the other night. They also caused some mild excitement and no little amount of anxiety by doing some scenes in a bank for "The High Hand." People passing outside, unable to see the camera man and the lights, saw a line of people inside the bank, while the doors were locked. These people were drawing out money, apparently, and the result caused a flock of reporters to rush to the bank to interview the president, the rumor spreading that the bank was suffering a run; in fact, a few straggling depositors even started a line, so realistic was the scene within the marble place. The company, with John Sheehan and Douglas Gerrard, also worked from midnight until four A. M. in the lobby of the biggest hotel in town, the Alexandria, doing scenes that could not be shot in the daytime. Many guests stayed up with the company to see it making pictures.

* * *

And still they change around. It's like playing tag or pussy wants a corner; these actor people certainly would be good subjects for a clever detective to shadow—they would give him a chase. It certainly is a hard task to keep track of them all the time. Now Donald Crisp has concluded that the Famous Players' money is better than the Mutual's cash, so he heard the call of Al. Kaufman and is already working in "The Love Route" with Winifred Kingston and Harold Lockwood. Jack Pickford is also in the cast. Of course, everyone knows Mary is here and now working under the guidance of James Kirkwood. Her first story is "Rags."

* * *

Ad. Kessel, president of the N. Y. M. P. Co., accompanied by C. O. Baumann, secretary, and Miss May Kenney, secretary to Mr. Kessel, arrived in the city early in the week and made a tour of inspection of Inceville. They were surprised at the growth and improvement of the mountain studio, and expressed their hopes of seeing this great plant eventually one of the largest in the world. These two heads of the big concern have plans for the year, but would not divulge much other than that they and Mr. Ince would produce some great features during the season. After visiting the Sennett studio, where the funnies are made, the officials of the concern went south to view the Fair, and will return soon to spend a couple of weeks here.

* * *

Mack Sennett has secured Harry Cribbon, formerly leading comedian for the Gaiety Company here at the Morosco Theater. Mack says he has a find in Harry. He must have, for the new funny man has such a well-trained face. It is like a kaleidoscope; it moves and changes so much and in so startling a manner that it is wonderfully funny.

* * *

Henry King and Ruth Roland are on the second of the Balboa series, "The Pursuit of Pleasure," in two reels. The story is by Will Ritchie, and is a good one. Mr. Horkheimer only smiles when asked what he is doing, and he certainly is putting out the pictures. In this story, Daniel Gilfeather, who is six feet and two inches tall, in the part of the minister, chokes King. He actually choked the leading man, and King nearly became insensible, so hard did Daniel choke him; but it was so realistic. It took two husky automobiles to pull King and his little car out of the mud a night or two ago when he got stuck while en route to the club.

* * *

"The Mother and the Law," a coming Mutual release, will be full of good atmosphere for a real prison warden overlooked the building of prison sets, and a real priest consented to act for the camera. Other little details will add to the quality of the production. R. A. Walsh is now directing at this plant, having started "The Double Deception."

* * *

The Lasky firm has again signed for another plot of ground, this time a lot 100 by 390 feet, near the plant, which will be utilized for storage space and warehouses. Victor Moore has been engaged to play in "Snobs," and will leave on January 25 for the west. Rita Jolivet is here and working in "The Unafraid." Margaret Turnbull, the writer, has also come west to aid William DeMille in the scenario office. "The Country Boy" is nearly done, and, in one of the scenes, a big crowd is used, but it is a select gathering, in a cafe; and to inject the proper and real atmosphere and detail Mr. Lasky engaged the waiters and musicians from Levy's cafe and bought real food to be served. Everyone ate lunch at noon, while at the same time the camera man ground out film, and the picture was actually made while the people ate their lunch!

* * *

J. P. McGowan, Kalem's director of railroad stories, is out of the hospital and, what's more, he is directing from a motor car and wheel chair. He would not take it easy; so the best had to be made for him, and he is hard at work. He is producing "The Death Car" for the Helen Holmes series.

* * *

The San Bernardino Motion Picture Co. has put out its first camera, and it seems to be meeting with the approval of many men who have seen it. The machine is a direct view one, with two lenses, showing the camera man the scene as it is really made. It is like taking pictures with a Graflex; you can see what you shoot. The officers are H. K. Fairall, whose name graces the camera, L. J. Mosley and W. H. Seeley. Will H. White is sales manager.

* * *

The Navajo Company is putting on another comedy company this week to add to its studio force. "The Girl and the Bandit" is being completed with Lucille Younge and Charles K. French.

* * *

Lillian Hamilton is the latest filmite to be injured, suffering a badly wrenched ankle when taken from the side of a rapidly careening stage coach up at the Premier studio in Santa Paula. Edythe Sterling is back at work after a forced vacation of two weeks on account of a sprained ankle. She was struck by one of the little "jitney" busses in Los Angeles a couple of weeks ago.

* * *

William N. Selig will be here for the opening of his great zoo next month. Many local people are interested in this park, and it will certainly be a great asset to the city. The head of the big film making company will arrive about the first of the month.

* * *

The Times, of this city, says: "All arrangements for the formation of a large film corporation to take pictures at the Panama Exposition in San Francisco were completed yesterday, according to a statement made by Jess Dandy. George Collins is to be general manager; Paul Cooley, secretary, and Jess Dandy, director. * * * The new corporation is to have the sole rights to the moving picture concession on the grounds, which includes not only moving picture shows, a plant, etc., but a big serial story of the Fair. * * * The company has already invested $21,000 in buildings."

* * *

Busy Bosworth built a building! Why? A concrete one to house a new office, that of Charles Eyton, who has been appointed to manage the Bosworth and Morosco companies. This place is a busy one, indeed. In one picture, "It Was Ever Thus," Elsie Janis and three other satellites appear. They are Mr. Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman and Owen Moore.

* * *

Wallace Reid and Lillian Gish are being featured at the Mutual in a film version of "Enoch Arden." They are taking in all the beach towns in their location tours for scenes.

* * *

The Inceville cow punchers enjoyed a Saturday night dance at Ocean Park, a popular beach resort near the camp, it being their annual event of this kind. Every mother's son of 'em were out in their best rig and, believe me, a time they did have. The public and many of the players for the silent house were there.

* * *

George Beban, lately returned from New York City, has started work on "The Sign of the Rose," a filmatization of the story that he used on the vaudeville stage for many months.

* * *

Thomas H. Ince has put out a neat sheet of newsy matter from the camp in the canyon. Kenneth O'Hara is the editor, and the Volume I issue is a live one. The sheet will be mailed to everyone in the business who is interested in productions. It is cleverly called "Inceville Incidents."

* * *

Louise Glaum came near being killed this week, when an automobile in which she was riding to Inceville upset on the narrow beach road. The car skidded on the wet roadway, and only the maneuvering of the driver kept it from turning completely over.

* * *

"Justified" is the name of a two-reel picture that Producer Henry Otto has just completed at the American studio up north. During the rains of late the director secured some fine rainstorm effects which he screened well. The two companies up there are busy as ever, every day except for a few hours when a spell of clouds or rain stops work.

As for Los Angeles, one night and a morning of rain and mist has kept the people busy and all at work.

CLARKE IRVINE.

Bland Talks to Churchgoers

Player Who Portrayed the Saviour in "Manger to Cross" Speaks at Sunday Service.

AT Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, One Hundred and Fourth street, Dr. Christian F. Reisner, the pastor, has been showing to his Sunday evening congregations consecutive parts of Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross" production. The third part fell on January 17. The 1,500 seats were entirely inadequate to accommodate the throng. During the showing of the picture the organ was played softly and the choir hummed old familiar hymns.

At the conclusion Dr. Reisner introduced R. Henderson Bland, the English actor who portrayed the Saviour in the production. "Of course, I cannot ask you to express your approval of his work by applauding him," said the pastor, "but I suggest that those of you who feel like manifesting approval do so by raising your hands." Seemingly every hand in the great church was raised. It was an impressive sight.

Mr. Bland described how he had become interested in taking up the work by Mr. Olcott. He told of the journey to the Sea of Galilee a week after the arrival in Jerusalem and of the filming of the calling of the Apostles, which the audience had just witnessed. On the return scenes were taken in Nazareth, Bethlehem and Bethany and in other villages.

"What I would like to impress on you," said Mr. Bland, "is that the work was not undertaken in light mood. Every one realized its gravity and far-reaching significance. We knew that this film would be exhibited all over the world. I myself have spoken to and corresponded with persons who have seen it in India, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, France, Italy, Spain, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Great Britain, Canada and America. I have in my possession nearly a thousand columns written about this film in Great Britain alone. It has provoked controversy wherever exhibited.

"The Garden of Gethsemane, where the Agony in the Garden was portrayed, belongs to the Franciscan Order. Several monks helped when we were arranging the betrayal scene. At its conclusion they congratulated us on the reverent manner of all.

"I shall never forget the day I toiled along the Via Dolorosa with the huge symbol that has carried the message of mercy through the ages. Great crowds stood for hours in the blazing Syrian sun and numbers lined the walls and covered the roofs of the houses. The crowds around my carriage were so dense that police were tolled off to keep the people back. When I left the carriage to take up my position in the scene a way was made for me with no word said. Women stepped forward and kissed my robe.

"Most of the scenes in this film were taken on the actual locations that tradition has pointed out as the locale of that immortal story which has transformed the world."

Mr. Bland spoke for about ten minutes amid profound silence. After the service he was invited to address, the coming season, an audience in the Auditorium at Ocean Grove, N. J., following the showing there of the film. The Auditorium seats ten thousand persons. Mr. Bland replied that if his engagements permitted he would be very glad to do so. He is now playing Lord Inglehart in "Kitty MacKay."

FEIST SAYS: "GET BUSY."

Felix Feist, head of the Celebrated Players Film Exchange of Chicago, which represents the Alliance Programme in Illinois and Indiana, was a recent visitor in New York and made the Alliance offices his headquarters.

In remarking upon present conditions and future prospects of the film business he expressed a very practical opinion. "It is a waste of time and effort to utter foolish prophesies about the return of good times and then sit down like Micawber and expect 'something to turn up.' My advice to film men is to get busy and stay busy. In my territory conditions are on the mend slowly but surely. What money that is being made comes in on high-class pictures that offer a strong attraction to the public. This is the only type of film that will survive this period of depression.

No Stock for Exhibitors

Mr. Selznick Says the World Film Corporation Will Not Offer Its Shares to the Public or the Trade.

IN AN interview with Lewis J. Selznick of the World Film Corporation, published in the Moving Picture World of January 23, it was stated that the World Film Corporation proposed to sell stock to exhibitors.

Mr. Selznick was quick to repudiate that announcement, declaring that the representative of the Moving Picture World did not quite comprehend his proposition. In a letter to The World, which is herewith printed in full, Mr. Selznick explains what he was trying to convey to our representative by giving an extended review of his profit-sharing plan as applied to World Film employees:

January 16th, 1915

Moving Picture World, New York City, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

I take exceptions to that part of the article entitled "Lewis J. Selznick Plans to Give Picture Men Opportunity to Acquire World Film Stock," that appeared in your issue of January 23rd, on Page No. 495, which says that the World Film Corporation proposes to sell stock to exhibitors.

The World Film Corporation has never offered a dollar's worth of stock to the public. All the stock in the World Film Corporation was purchased by a banking syndicate. I did tell your representative that I was working on a plan that would do for the exhibitors what my profit-sharing plan was doing for our employees. To explain how this works, I shall give the details of the plan.

The branch manager receives in addition to his salary the following premiums based upon weekly excess of gross cash collections over the minimum established for his branch:

For the

1st	$100	over	minimum	$2.50
2d	"	"	"	5.00
3d	"	"	"	7.50
4th	"	"	"	10.00
5th	"	"	"	12.50
6th	"	"	"	15.00
7th	"	"	"	17.50
8th	"	"	"	20.00
9th	"	"	"	22.50
10th	"	"	"	25.00

And $25.00 for every additional $100 over such minimum.

Under this system the branch manager taking in an excess of $1,000.00 in gross cash collections in any one week over and above the minimum established for his branch receives a premium of $137.50, and if he takes in $1,100.00, $25 in addition, or $162.50.

Each salesman is entitled, after deducting the amount of his salary and expenses, to a commission based upon the amount of gross cash collections received by the Corporation on account of contracts which he may have made, as follows:

Four per. cent of gross cash collections on pictures specified in Schedule "A."

Eight per cent. of gross cash collections on pictures specified in Schedule "B."

Twelve per cent. of gross cash collections on pictures specified in Schedule "C."

In order to encourage all employees of the Corporation, under his immediate supervision, including stenographers, reel winders, shipping clerks, inspectors, office boys and others, the branch manager sets aside, every four weeks, ten per cent. of any premiums (exclusive of prizes) which he receives, and to this amount the Home Office adds an equal amount.

The total amount thus fixed is divided every three months among the various employees in amounts proportionate to their respective salaries.

All employees, other than officers or the general manager of the Corporation, who do not participate in the profits of the Corporation under the preceding sub-divisions, participate proportionately to their salaries in two per cent. of the excess in gross cash collections, over the total minimums established for all of the branches.

I intend to embody some such general idea into a plan that would give exhibitors, who co-operate with us an opportunity to share in the profits of the World Film Corporation.

The details of this plan have not been worked out yet. If we succeed in properly working out this plan we will work it just as we did the profit-sharing plan of the employees. We will put it into printed form so that there can be no further misunderstanding.

I am not surprised that my idea was not clearly understood, because it is such a radical departure from the methods and business practices of this industry, but I have not been guided in the past by what others do. Therefore, I do not hesitate to adopt new ideas which I feel are for the best interests of the customers who co-operate most efficiently with the World Film Corporation.

There has been a great deal of selling waste in the moving picture business. This can be eliminated if our customers will work with us for our best interests just as we are working with them for their greatest prosperity. By giving a fair share of our profits we feel we can best attain these things providing we can work out our theories into a practical plan. In other words, we wish to do for exhibitors the very thing which is proving so successful with our employees.

Instead of trying to sell stock to make a momentary profit we realize that we can make a bigger, more lasting success by giving better methods of doing business to our customers and giving them a share in the business they helped to create.

We feel certain that the Moving Picture World would be more than glad to co-operate with us in the furtherance of these ideas, now that they understand just what we are trying to do.

Yours very truly,
LEWIS J. SELZNICK.

As the most important consideration at this juncture is to set Mr. Selznick right before the readers of the Moving Picture World, the above letter is submitted for their careful perusal that the World Film Corporation may be cleared of any suspicion that it contemplates a stock-selling campaign.

The Moving Picture World is especially pleased to learn that the impression derived from the first interview is erroneous. We are firm in the belief that the legitimate business of making and marketing motion pictures will suffer incalculable injury if the reprehensible methods of "high finance," so-called, are permitted to become a part of that business. That Mr. Selznick denies any such intention on behalf of the World Film Corporation is gratifying. It is to be hoped that any other concern with similar plans in mind may be induced to follow Mr. Selznick's lead in this particular.

Cape Town Notes

GREAT inconvenience is being caused to motion picture theaters in Cape Town and other parts of the union by the late arrival of the weekly mail boat. No definite arrangements can be made in regard to changes of program, for there is no regularity in the arrival of new films. Programs are advertised subject to alteration should the mail steamer arrive in the meantime. Cape Town theaters must perforce show whatever old pictures can stand the public test. But needs must when the devil drives, and the public is broad-minded enough to realize the efforts made on its behalf.

Business in Cape Town, with perhaps one outstanding exception, has not been of too brisk a nature. The exception is Fisher's Grand Theater. Rarely a performance goes by without the "house full" notice being displayed. The pictures are beautifully projected on a special silver screen; the orchestra consists of first-class musicians under so well-known and capable a conductor as Isidor Fisher. Two pictures of outstanding merit just shown at this theater were "England's Menace" and "Two Little Britons," both produced by the London Company. Another subject recently shown which created a furore among the regular patrons of Fisher's was the film depicting Joe Fisher's visit to the Edison studio, New York. This film was presented to Mr. Fisher by the Edison Company as a souvenir of his visit to the States. The photography of the picture was especially praised by all.

Of the other theaters, the Alhambra comes in for a fair measure of support, the films being of very good quality and the music quite up to its high standard. The feature there this week was "The Dead Heart," a Hepworth production, which was received with enthusiasm.

Walfram's and the Majestic also report good business.

All the theaters are showing "Lord Roberts' Funeral," an Eclair Topical, which, although being of poor quality, is greatly appreciated by the public. War pictures of any description at once meet with public approval. The subjects screened this week are "Dixmude and Yser Canal" and the usual war editions of the Gazette and Graphic, the latter continuing to receive the usual applause.

Now that South Africa has practically quelled its rebellion, a more normal state of affairs is expected in regard to things in general. As far as the exhibition business is concerned for the next few weeks, at any rate, a boom can safely be expected. There are about 20,000 soldiers concentrated in and about Cape Town, and I just learn that another 20,000 men will be down here shortly prior to being dispatched for active service in German Southwest Africa. Although their departure from our city will mean bad business for trade generally, our soldiers nevertheless will have our best wishes for the very best of luck.

A large number of managers, operators and others connected with the motion picture trade in South Africa have volunteered for active service, and a special corps has been formed in Cape Town, named the Allied Arts Corps, in which will be found representatives of the leading Cape Town shows, including Frank Potts, Joseph, Harry and Isidor Fisher and W. Wolfram.

AN INCIPIENT MUTUAL STAR.

Reaves Eason, Jr., newest of all new things at the American-Mutual studios, making his first appearance recently before the moving picture camera, scored an "emotional triumph." He was playing the part of an infant, and at the right time injected the proper punch by yelling lustily. Despite his youth, if his director, Henry Otto, is to be believed, there is nothing to prevent this two months old baby from forging to the forefront of his profession, and soon becoming one of the stars featured in the Mutual program.

HOWARD HICKMAN WITH BRONCHO.

Howard Hickman, for years a noted leading man in Pacific coast stock circles, will make his debut as a member of the Broncho soon in "The Chinatown Mystery," an absorbing newspaper story now released in the Mutual program. Mr. Hickman plays the part of a star reporter, who degenerates into an opium fiend, and is restored to health by his friends.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

A RESIDENT of Hoboken, N. J., who has attracted considerable attention in recent years by foretelling events of national and international importance, announced a few days ago that in two years motion pictures will have become one of the bygones. He makes the prognostication without assigning any reason for it. Possibly he has been influenced by some of the motion picture shows he has witnessed in Hoboken. It may be that his reading of some motion picture companies recently going the route of receivership, or the arrest of motion picture company managers for embezzlement, has influenced him in making the prediction.

It would be exceedingly interesting to learn the grounds upon which it is based. At the present time he appears to be the only person entertaining such a thought, and there appears to be nothing in view to justify the belief that others will be brought to his line of reasoning. It is only from local standpoints that the prediction warrants any serious reflection. There are exhibitors who so far forget the interests of their patrons and are so blind to their own interests that they leave room for such predictions as the Hoboken man makes. It is surprising that some of this kind of men are among those who class themselves as "leading exhibitors." Greed has eclipsed their better judgment. These comments emanate from conditions existing at one of the leading exhibition houses on Flatbush avenue in Brooklyn. During a recent exhibition six reels of Keystone comedy were projected upon the screen within fifty-five minutes. To be exact, one of the exhibitions was run off in fifty minutes. The man who did the timing made inquiry as to whether the fault lay with the operator and learned that the record beating was done with sanction of the management. The show was "drawing big," the house was not large enough to accommodate the patrons on the usual schedule, and the idea was to get the place empty as often as possible. So that none of the dimes would be missed six reels were being rushed through in less than two-thirds of the required time.

* * *

This Flatbush case revives consideration of the much-mooted question as to the right of manufacturers of films and the rental exchanges to exercise authority over the use of their goods while they are in the hands of exhibitors on a rental basis. Many exhibitors have claimed that so long as they pay the price asked for the rental of films for a certain period they may run them as often as they see fit. A well-known motion picture man who heard of the Flatbush incident stated that at the next convention of the exhibitors this subject will be discussed and effort will be made to have the rights of exhibitors in that respect defined. It is said that an effort will be made to have representatives of manufacturers and exchange men take part in this particular discussion. A number of exhibitors have condemned the Flatbush management. In their own behalf they claim that such reckless exhibitions injure the subjects as attractions in other houses, particularly where these houses depend upon prior exhibitions for prestige. The manufacturers and exchange men take the same stand. One of the latter has stated that such abuse not only kills the action of the subject, but also unwarrantably shortens the life of the film in use, which deprives the exchange of the returns ordinary and reasonable use would bring.

But how are such exhibitors to be dealt with? An exchange owner says the quickest and most decisive method is to refuse to supply the offenders. Exception is taken to this on the ground that competition for the rental trade is so sharp that no exchange can afford to drive away customers by such drastic measures. From another source comes a suggestion that, as the popularity and life of a film subject is of as much importance to exhibitors as it is to other interests, and as there is a doubt as to the ability of exchanges to deal directly with the offenders, that the exhibitors' association provide the relief. One of the plans mentioned is that the association adopt a rule forbidding such abuses as are complained of against the Brooklyn management under penalty to be paid to the association, the rental exchanges to co-operate in its enforcement by detecting the violations and lodging complaints with the association.

An exhibitor hearing of these suggestions said he doubted the feasibility of such a plan. He did not think the exhibitors' association could devote the time that would be required to handle such cases. If they were to be brought up at regular meetings of the association the effect of the rule would be killed by lapse of time. If the association is to become a court to hear and pass upon the complaints you must find members who are willing to become part of it. "It is hard enough now to keep a majority of the exhibitors alive enough to their own interests to attend the regular meetings of the association," he said. "It may be possible," he continued, "to get at these people by invoking the aid of the Board of Health. Films run as has been charged must necessarily have an injurious effect upon the eyes of the audience. If such a charge is sustained either the Board of Health can prevent a repetition of the offense, or the Bureau of License will have sufficient grounds for revoking the license of the place. Association fines, or the driving of such people to other exchanges, will not remedy the evil. The most effective way is to get the municipal authorities after them and drive them out of the business."

* * *

Another instance of the rebounding of avaricious management came to light at a picture house in the Bedford section of Brooklyn. The place had won an excellent class of trade and business was increasing right along when the owners found a man who, they thought, could acquire the same results at less salary than the manager who opened the place was receiving. A change was made and the new manager proceeded to cut down expenses by reducing salaries and the cost of service. It must be conceded that this was not an unusual procedure, and such methods have been frequently adopted with good results, but in this particular case there was a deplorable lack of foresight. The manager who curtailed expenses knew little or nothing about the motion picture business, and he soon found that all pictures do not look alike to audiences. Business dropped off to such an extent that one week the new manager found the box office producing barely enough to pay his own salary. He departed without formality and the house closed. The owners have since reopened it with all the old force of employees, from manager down, on the salary list, and the place is once more a success.

* * *

This recalls the case of the old Central Opera House on West 67th Street. The Jacob Ruppert Estate owned the property. It had been idle for years. The owners were urged to make a moving picture house out of part of it. They smiled dubiously, but were finally induced to try the experiment. James Costello, an old-time picture house manager, was put in charge. He made the prices five cents for children and ten and fifteen for adults. Children not accompanied by parents were not admitted. Persons, undesirable in appearance or conduct, were also barred. The place became, in fact as well as in name a family theater. Listen! Box office statements will prove the assertion. In no year did the receipts fall below $72,000. One year they went up to $84,000. After four years the Ruppert Estate disposed of the whole property on an attractive deal and with the change of ownership came a change of policy in the theater, including the management. Prices were reduced to five and ten cents. Little attention was given to the class of patrons. The cost of film service was reduced and, of course, the quality. In a few months the house went to the wall. "It was a pity," said Mr. Costello the other day. "I used to have automobiles lined up in front of the house. The reputation of the place made me independent of much of the patronage in the immediate vicinity. Film service? I had the best money could get. The one thing I lacked was the style of organs they are using now. I think if I could have got hold of one of them, then I would have been obliged to enlarge the building to accommodate the people. Yes, it pays to do things right when running a picture house as well as in other lines of business."

HELEN'S NEW PLAYMATE.

Helen Badgley, who as "The Thanhouser Kidlet" has been featured in dramas released in the Mutual program, has a new baby brother. The child was born January 13th, and little Helen adores the nine-pound addition to the Badgley household.

TRICK PHOTOGRAPHY IN "EVAN'S LUCKY DAY."

The American Beauty Company present in the Mutual program a delicate piece of trick photography in "Evan's Lucky Day," when Joseph Harris is shown double in the restaurant scene.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by the REV. W. H. JACKSON

TRADE SAFETY INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION DEPENDS UPON MOVING PICTURES.

THE STATE Industrial Commission of Ohio, during the week of Jan. 13-16, held a "Safety" exposition—under the guidance of experts—with special attention to safety, principles and appliances as related to industries. The first part of the program called for "Round Table Conferences," at which papers were read, followed by discussions on all associated subjects. During each afternoon and evening of the exposition days moving pictures were shown illustrating different phases of safety work. Around each is woven a story to add interest. Among the film subjects announced were:

"The Workman's Lesson," by the National Association of Manufacturers, in which is shown a young man injured through the carelessness of a foreman in the factory.

"The Making of an American" is a United States Steel picture, in which is shown a newly arrived immigrant being shown various safety appliances in the factory where he is to work; this also gives an exhibition of those safety appliances at the same time.

"The Price of Thoughtlessness" is produced by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and illustrates the dangers of traffic and travel on city streets, with right and wrong methods of street car travel.

"The Crime of Carelessness" exhibits a large factory being burned, the fire having been caused by the careless throwing of a lighted cigarette in the basement. Workmen are seen trapped by a locked fireproof door, thus showing an added and unnecessary danger.

"The Lineman" is an especial picture prepared by Safety Director Noonan of the Industrial Commission. In it are illustrated the hazards of the electrical industry, and it is a picture for both the lineman and the electrician. Appreciative of the value of kinematography as the most explicit teacher of the principles of prevention and safety, such exhibitions as this cannot fail to be of great service wherever held; the above program is an excellent outline for others to follow.

TRULY EDUCATIONAL.

Growth is of two kinds, forced and natural. That which is forced is not so likely to endure as that which is natural. True, the first growth may be fostered and forced, but afterwards, if nature is allowed to take its own course, more permanent and profitable results follow. The educational picture is of the latter class, forced in its earlier stages its growth now is perfectly natural, and according to true and natural laws.

Education also is a growing or leading outward, expanding from an inner power. This also the picture is doing; it is enlarging its outward appearance and fruitfulness according to those principles which govern true educationalism. Left alone now the educational moving picture requires no force or alien power to cause its advance, it possesses within itself all the essentials for all that is required for growth and education.

Today it is impossible to read any paper, journal or magazine, secular, educational, governmental or religious, but the moving picture is found to hold a controlling influence as a giver of knowledge, advice or instruction.

Non-secretive it reveals all it sees and knows. Truthful, its information is given out exactly as it is received in; there is not, and cannot be any deception in its revelations. Social and economic conditions are now dependent upon what the picture reveals. To what extent now this power is being used is revealed by the fact that classified lists of suitable pictures are being printed in the individual magazines or trade journals. The religious magazines are publishing lists of film subjects, obtainable and suitable for sacred purposes.

School journals are also doing the same thing. Governmental commissions now look for the pictures to bring them the best evidence for their guidance—railway workings or failures, subway problems, sanitary conditions and safety plans are all the outcome of, and dependent upon, what the picture teaches.

While great claims have justly been made upon the pleasure value of the moving picture as the "Working Man's Theater" or the "Children's Entertainer," the writer claims with pride justifiable and true, that the naturally growing educational moving picture is the World's Educator.

REAL TRAVEL PICTURES.

Too often travel pictures have been misnamed. They are really only scenics, occasionally longer scenic views have deserved the dignity of a descriptive journey, but not for great distances.

In preparation for the San Francisco Exposition, the Pennsylvania Railway Co. have during the last year had photographers taking pictures along the entire route of their system. From these, films are now made up into a full series, so that real travel is revealed; passing through stations and the principal towns, cities and attractive villages; country life, picturesque scenery, industrial centers, customs and manners of life from east to west, combine to make one of the longest and most real travel pictures ever exhibited. Not only in the exposition, but in all parts of the country and abroad, this series will be at once interesting and attractive, compensating in a great measure for a journey through the real country traveled.

A CHARMING COUNTRY FOR PICTURES.

There is every evidence that the charms and alluring nature-settings of Seattle and the Puget Sound districts, are to be embodied in moving pictures. Through its great variety of scenery, its mountains, plain, forest and marine perspectives, the Puget Sound district offers most unusual advantages for the setting of moving picture scenarios, especially in the radiant days of the long summer.

Alpine settings may be found in the snow and declivities of the Cascades and Olympics, only a few miles away; the great sweeping beaches of the Sound offer most fitting surroundings for the activities of shipwrecked sailors, pirate crews, or seaside romances. The great naval station at Bremerton contributes, with its guns, the real touches of war, while the blue reaches of the sound furnish all that can be desired in marine settings. Farm life, with the old homestead, and the mystery of the forest, together with the silvery Cascades and great fall of the waters at Snoqualmie all furnish at once the common and uncommon needs of the scenarios. City requirements, with skyscrapers, crowded streets, with a busy and commercial populace are also within easy reach.

Southern California has long enjoyed much popularity as a setting for moving pictures, yet there are phases of scenery about Seattle and the Sound that California cannot furnish; indeed, it is doubtful if, in their combination, they can be excelled anywhere.

These great advantages have led to a new industrialism in these regions, moving picture studios and manufacturing plants are being erected in many places, what the neighborhood has to give to the pictures in perfect surroundings will be returned in commercial profits; the time having arrived when even the still life of natural beauties can be a source of profit.

Again, the value of pictures will be enhanced, and while people everywhere will be made acquainted with the beauties of these attractive regions, the pictures themselves will be improved a hundredfold because of the superior and real nature of the background. Nature and the moving picture form a splendid and educational partnership.

New World Film Department

Mrs. Eugenie Ingleton Is Librarian of the Reference Department at Fort Lee Studio.

WHEN seen recently at the World Film studio at Fort Lee, Mrs. Eugenie Ingleton had the following to say regarding the workings in her new department: "When I first came to the World Film studios I was intensely interested with everything. The beautiful dressing rooms, the shower-baths, the splendid carpenters' workshops, the scenic department, at the head of which is a master of art. All these things, even at a hurried glance, showed possibilities of delightful work for anyone who loved things artistic.

Mrs. Eugenie Ingleton.

"When I was engaged as reader, writer, designer, and anything else I could prove useful in, I went into the business, heart and soul. Each week has, I think, added to my enthusiasm. I have started, what I hope will prove a valuable, though never completed Library of Reference Department. Pictures and sketches of everything under the sun, at all periods, and at all times, I am collecting and classifying, so that directors wanting helpful ideas, for scenes, costumes, locations, historic dates or detail, will find several sketches or pictures of whatever they seek. It is amusing to note the unexpected things that are wanted. The first thing I was asked for was a Burne-Jones stained glass window, a plane tree, an angel and a hotel kitchen followed, etc., etc. Everyone is most kind in helping me to add to the collection, bringing all sorts of unexpected little sketches that are bound to come in useful at some unexpected moment. The most of my time is taken up in reading and writing, however. I have just completed a five-reel scenario of Dion Boucicault's play, 'After Dark,' which is to be made by the William A. Brady Picture Plays Co., and in which Robert Warwick and Alice Brady are to be starred. I have brought it forward—how many years? Substituted the Spanish-American War for the Crimean, and changed the London of our grandmothers into New York of the present day, and I don't think the good old play, so full of human interest, has suffered one bit by becoming a naturalized American.

"Some years ago I was connected with Mr. Hepworth's fine studios at Walton-on-Thames, England. I wrote scenarios and played the principal parts, but could not decide then to give up theatrical work altogether. Since then I have written the three-act opera, 'Aphrodine,' about which I am in negotiation with Messrs. Shubert. My one act opera, 'The Willow Pattern Plate' (originally produced at Terry's Theater, London, seven years ago), was reproduced at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theater recently, with William Pruette in the leading part. Vernon Dalhart, who sang Ralph in 'Pinafore' at the Hippodrome, was principal tenor. Lately I have written 'The Little Brown Mouse,' for Miss Charlotte Granville. But every day I work at the World Film studio, the more absorbing and interesting I find it, the more I marvel at the genius of masterful picture direction, the more I strive to write something wonderful and beautiful with full scope for directors, actors, scenic artists and operators. I suppose every scenario department is full of these desires and ambitions, but isn't it very splendid and isn't the competition full of stimulus?

"I played my first part, 'Little Eva,' in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' at the age of ten, and at one time played 104 leading parts in two years at a well-known old London stock theater. I acted with the late Charles Arnold, and was nurse, newspaper correspondent, and did Secret Service work through the South African war and came to this country first from the Haymarket Theater, London, where I played in 'Bunty Pulls the Strings.' I took Miss Jean Cadell's place when she left the Comedy Theater, New York, and also played the part (Aunt Susie) in Chicago. Messrs. Shubert and Brady have been my only managers in America, and, during my long engagement with them, I learned to love America. But from Little Eva at ten years old, to an hour spent in New York's wonderful library last night, there is hardly a moment that passes without gaining some knowledge or experience that is helpful to one's work in a big moving picture studio."

"The Apartment House Mystery"

The Society Girl Detective Solves Mystery of Death on House Top (Kalem Two-Reel).

By Hanford C. Judson.

THE second of the "Girl Detective Series" is in no sense a continued story, for each episode is self-contained and free from dependence on incidents told in preceding instalments. The two leading women, Cleo Ridgeley and Ruth Roland, both at times take the central role. In this picture, "The Apartment House Mystery," the villain is played by Thomas Lingham, who pictures very acceptably a shifty individual, while William H. West, who was the chief crook in the first picture, is here the janitor. Ruth Roland is the detective, and Cleo Ridgeley is wife of the "murdered" man—whose death it is proved both by the girl detective and later by the coroner's office was due to heart failure.

Scene from "The Apartment House Mystery" (Kalem).

The story begins in the early morning when the janitor goes to the roof to beat his rugs and finds the dead man. A call to the police brings the girl investigator and she finds a clue. The suspense of the story comes from the fact that we ourselves think the man was murdered and work with the investigator trying to fathom it all; trying to fasten the crime on the keeper of the gambling joint in the house. The more we go into it the surer we feel that he is a murderer until under the third degree of the girl detective he breaks down and confesses or rather tells a story which deeply interests us because it is all possible, yet with the prejudice the scenario has carefully nursed in us we believe it a lie. It proves to be the simple truth.

There is good action in this part of the picture, in the last 1,500 feet or thereabouts. The acting of most of the characters is excellent, and the staging and photography are good. It is a very fair offering.

LUBIN PLAYERS TO WED BEFORE CAMERA.

Following a romance of two months' duration in the big studio of the Lubin Manufacturing Company in Philadelphia, Clarence Jay Elmer, a widely known Lubin photoplayer, will wed Miss Edyth Stroud Anderton, another Lubin photoplayer, on February thirteenth. The wedding will be unique, for the young couple will be married in the daylight studio on the top floor of the Lubin plant, and motion picture cameras will record every detail of the wedding.

Elmer played the title role in "The Patsy Bolivar Series" of comedies that the Lubin Company is now releasing each week. Miss Anderton is the daughter of Gus Anderton, a well-known automobile man of Philadelphia and a niece of Judge Stroud of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania. For some time she played with Lubin's Southern Company at Jacksonville, Fla., and later was transferred to the Philadelphia company.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Are You a B. B.?

SENDING in a new issue for the Paramount Theater, Brooklyn, A. G. Wunderle commences:

> Dear Big Brother—It certainly feels good to have a big brother, especially when that brother and his friends are under one cover, striving to pave the way for others. Did I benefit by your last instruction? I tried. Please look it over.

We don't know who told Mr. Wunderle that we hook up the scales around the 230 mark, but we like that "Big Brother" idea, if Mr. Wunderle will admit the other editors of this department to that classification; for this section of the paper is not the work of one man but of all the big brothers who are good enough to send in their ideas for the benefit of the others, who may profit. Be a big brother yourself and send some stuff in.

The last time Mr. Wunderle came in he offereu a typographical atrocity in which the printer tried to crowd samples of every face he had in the shop. Apparently he has changed printers as well as plan, for now he presents a monthly instead of a weekly, a four-page sheet, eleven by seventeen inches. He gets two fourteen em and one twenty-eight em columns to the page, the double being in the centre and constituting the programme proper. This time every title is in uniform type, special names in caps, and no display lines other than the titles and dated days. The side columns are used for his own and foreign display matter, and he is his own best patron in this regard. The display ads, too, are well set, but we think that some of this display might be replaced by some general reading items about films and players. There are fifteen trade advertisements at five dollars each thirteen taken in trade, the goods being used to further the matinee business, but Mr. Wunderle has an option of four dollars cash or even five dollars in trade, as he elects.

He thinks the trade benefits him more than the cash would, so he takes the trade. This represents $65 in trade and eight dollars in cash against a printing expense of $24, which is a profitable proposition.

The page is a trifle deep for the width, making it look unwieldly, but if the page could be folded once again to get eight pages, eight and a half by eleven, there would be a better proportion. But against this is the cost of stitching and cutting and the more important matter of getting the people to read the eight pages. This would require at least two solid pages of gossip scattered through the eight pages. It is not probable that it would pay to have the paper folded again and stitched, but it would be well for others not yet committed to remember that a well proportioned page helps the general effect and if it is too long it hurts the effect. Mr. Wunderle has made a decided improvement in his advertising medium.

Makes You Look.

The Arcade Theatre, Paducah, Ky., sends in a Christmas card so attractive that you have to open it to see what is inside. It is a double card with a flap, the flap being sealed by a stamp at one end and a fancy seal at the other. Being open at the ends it goes for one cent. One side carries the address and the other the greeting. Inside is a reprint from a local paper of the opening of the house and a sample musical program of decided attraction. It is printed in green on white, very slightly marbled on the outside, and is as carefully and as attractively done as a private greeting card. It suggests "class" in its every aspect, which is a very good suggestion to convey to the possible but "not yet" patron.

From Detroit.

A correspondent, writing from Detroit, says he sees few mentions of the Detroit houses in this department, so he sends in three programs of as many of the downtown houses. All three are six page folders and much alike with the program on the three inner pages and underlines and very brief gossip on the back, one-third serving as the front page. This is an arrangement that cannot well be improved on in a sheet of this size.

We like best the Forest program, partly because it gives complete information as to prices, times of performance, etc. This is matter that should always be given. The program may be intended for the regulars, who know all about it, but even at that the issue might fall into the hands of a stranger, who would be more apt to come did he know just when to come. The only omission is the times of the evening performances. This should be added. The program is a running one, a story turning a page where necessary, but the days are not dated. There is a uniformity of type that adds much to the appearance. The word "reels" is not used, the more elegant "acts" or "parts" being employed instead.

The new Empress uses all display advertisements, dating the days and running two to the page. There is a little too much type and too many kinds of type.

The Liberty runs its features for a week and has plenty of space to give to coming attractions. Here, as in the Forest program, the typographical display is excellent. With the current week the house gives only the program, a cast of characters and the musical program, the latter being well chosen. The coming features are advertised in reading notices instead of display, the matter being leaded to give a clean looking page, or where there is too much copy, the paragraphs are divided by pica slugs. They use a catchline. "The Liberty Runs Like a Watch," to epitomize the idea of careful, well ordered management. Of the three they have the better looking issue, the one sent being green on green stock.

But isn't it odd that an outsider has to send the stuff in?

Good and Bad.

There are both good and bad points in the Photoplay Review used by the Hippodrome, Louisville, for a house program. There is some good reading matter in the eight page issue, and the make-up is open and inviting, the majority of the stuff being set in ten point. It is a mistake, we think, to use so many clipped jokes, even if it does aid to an easy make up, but the crux of the matter is that this eight page issue, inviting as it is, is designed to get the program read, and the program here is about the last thing that actually will be read. It is all set in twelve point bold face caps, a solid column of names, dates and titles, with hardly a relief for the eye save in an occasional upper and lower line or an eight point "in." Only the Sunday is dated, the rest being merely the name of the day as is shown in this sample.

MONDAY
KING BAGGOT
in
"THE MILL STREAM"
and
THEIR UPS AND DOWNS
Nestor Comedy
TUESDAY
GRACE CUNARD AND FANCIS FORD
in
"THE GHOST OF SMILING JIM"
and
LOVE DISGUISED
Joker Comedy
WEDNESDAY
CARROL HATHAWAY AND F. SUMMER
in
"A GAME WITS"

With so much space at command, two columns should have been used and the titles set in upper and lower case of an attractive face about twelve point, with the names of the stars in eight or ten point italics, upper and lower, the days dated and each day's program separated from that above and below by a rule clear across the column or a dash half way across. If two pages are used it would be well to raise the titles to eighteen point, the player's name to twelve point and go across two columns, using the same face all the way through. It will get a much better program and one that will sell the show better. Mr. Jablow should have a very serious talk with his printer and tell him just what he thinks of a man who would let such a job get out. After he settled with the printer he should make the resolve to get more photoplay stuff and less miscellaneous clips, and then the program will work harder for him.

Imported Talk.

Philip Wright Whitcomb, publicity manager for Hepworth Films, gets out what he calls the Union Jack, because the cover is in colors and a reproduction of the British Jack. He is writing to his English patrons, but that's no reason why much of what he has to say does not apply over here and he hands out some corking good advice. Here is some of it:

> We believe in reading the trade papers. In every business that man that knows the most about the whole field is the man that wins. If the trade papers don't tell you things you want, write and tell the trade papers. They desire to help you.
>
> Advertising the pictures.
>
> There is one great rule that will always help you to advertise films with the greatest success.
>
> The rule is: Be specific.
>
> Say something different, something specific, about each picture on your bill that is worth it. You can see the reason for yourself. It's this: By the time a man has heard that four hundred and seven pictures are all "wonderful," "thrilling" and "enthralling," it is too late to impress him by using those same words. If you say "wonderful" again it does no good. You fail to distinguish your picture from the other four hundred and seven. You must distinguish so that he will think of this picture as an individual. It's the same way with men. The man that looks much like other men is not remembered. The man who shows that he has particular points of his own is remembered.

Now take an example. Suppose you are advertising "The Basilisk." What is your purpose? It is to make each individual person in your district desire to see the picture. Now he won't desire to see it unless you tell him something about it that will arouse that desire. If you say "thrilling," you give nothing specific. You must give some definite point that will make your prospective patron want to see the picture. You must say: "Basil Reska drove two men and a gun away by the mere power of his eye. 'The Basilsk' shows his attempt to conquer a girl."

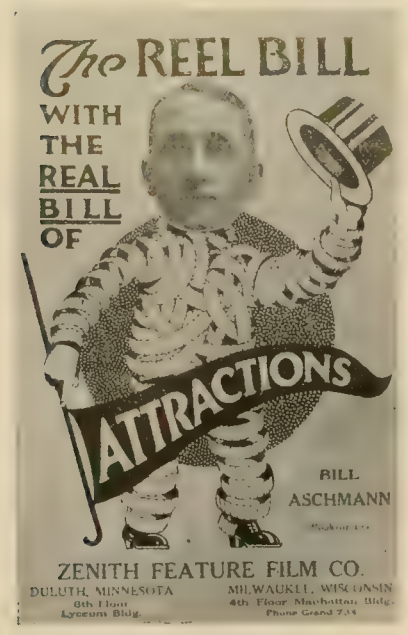
Do you see the point? Be specific.

And to help them to be specific he uses an idea that might well be copied by manufacturers' press men over here. Each story starts off with the theme in two lines, and winds up with the "Special Point." Take Mr. Meek's Nightmare, for example. The theme is: "A man falls asleep and dreams that everybody he meets has the same face as himself. It drives him to distraction." Here the special point is: "The double photography of this picture has never been equalled by any other company. It is so perfect that no spectator will ever be able to detect the way it is done.".

The theme gives the story in a line. The talking point supplies a ready made challenge to the curious in that last sentence that is bound to make for business.

A Reel Man.

The Zenith Feature Film Company, of Duluth and Milwaukee, send in an avant courier of one of its salesmen that might be used by men in other territory. A halftone of the salesman (William Aschman) surmounts a line sketch of a man's figure formed of tangled film. It is a well-planned idea and the company writes that every letter from a client in Mr. Aschman's territory refers to "reel Bill." The idea might be adapted by house managers in towns small enough for personality to count. It will serve to fix the idea of pictures and might be made a sort of trade mark. The company, by the way, is getting out o book of advertising suggestions, much of which, it states, is derived from this department.



It is pleasant to know that the department appeals to other than exhibitors proper. It is only lately that one of our own advertisers asked for comment on their advertisement in this paper, and a vastly better pulling proposition has been the result. Though not a part of the province of this department, we are always glad to help advertising patrons to make their advertisements do more work for them.

Not Tactful.

The New Pastime theater, some place or other, has just opened. By the time the program got to us the envelope had been lost, so we do not know just where it hails from. We do not like the tone of the special notices that are run on the back page. Here they are:

> Children under two years of age not admitted to the evening performances. We do not object to you bringing them to the matinees, but in justice to our patrons we must insist that you keep them quiet, or else leave the theater. Your money will be cheerfully refunded.
>
> To Our Lady Patrons—The established rule at the New Pastime requires ladies to remove their hats while witnessing the performances. It is essential to the comfort and convenience of our patrons in general that this rule be strictly enforced. Ladies who are unwilling or unable to conform to the rule are earnestly requested to leave the theater without delay, and to receive the price of their tickets at the Box Office.
>
> Not a Lunch Room—Please remember that the New Pastime is a theater and not a lunch room. We ask all our patrons, and especially the children, not to bring candy, popcorn, peanuts or other eatables into the theater. If you cannot refrain from eating during the short time you are here, we would prefer that you do not enter.

Now these are good rules in their way. Noisy children should not be tolerated, women with large hats should not be permitted to spoil the pleasure of others, and eating in the theater is uncouth. There is no objection to be made to the rules as such, but to the truculent manner in which they are laid down. It is possible that conditions are so bad that courtesy is out of place, but we cannot conceive any condition that will excuse these dictatorial phrases. Infinitely better is the line.

> Ladies who do not wish to remove their hats are courteously requested to occupy seats in the rear row, where their obtrusive headgear will not destroy the pleasure of other patrons.

The other rules might be similarly dodged, for instance:

> For the comfort of the majority, we are compelled to refuse admission to children in arms at the evening performances. Mothers will find the matinees equally desirable. Should a child become noisy, the management will gladly refund the admission.
>
> Please do not bring candy, peanuts or other eatables. It annoys our other patrons and we want all to enjoy themselves in the Pastime.

Then get a set of cards printed, one applying to each rule. If a woman insists on wearing a large hat, pass her a card reading:

> It is the rule of the Pastime that large hats may not be worn except in the last row. Please comply with this rule. If, for any reason, you cannot remove your hat, will you please present this card at the box office and receive your money back.

Herding cattle is one thing and running a theater another.

Labor Saving.

The manager of the Iris theater, Topeka, Kansas, seems to have the scissors habit. He sends in a well printed sheet about 10 by 13, and all he has written is thirty-eight words of introduction and the dates. The rest is all clip, the entire back page and a column on the front being press clips and the rest from the Paramount advertising. It's easy to get help, but if he had written that front page column himself, it would have been worth all the rest of the sheet. No one gives much attention to press clips. The man in Topeka is not interested in the opinion of the Los Angeles Times or the Chicago Tribune. One or two brief extracts may give force to the local argument, but all clip is not convincing, and the sheet would have been just as good if the back had been left unprinted. Stand back of your own stuff. Tell them you got it because you know that it is the best to be had. Have the nerve to come out and say "I did this. If it's bad I'm to blame, but I'm so certain it's good that I'm perfectly willing that I should be blamed if there is any blame coming." That stands for something.

Cocksure Managers.

James C. Quinn, of Los Angeles, in jocular mood, recently asked how many "world's greatest theaters" there were, along with some other bromidic catchlines, and right away a local man with a vacuum cleaner where his brains ought to be gets sore at the "personal" thrust. Wonder how many more will put on this cap from the same source:

> Isn't it funny that other trades and professions feel that it is essential to their success to exchange ideas with each other, but we in the motion picture business, which is one of the very youngest of the big industries of the world, think we are so darned wise with our few years of experience in it that no one can tell us anything very much, and instead of thanking him for suggestions we jump all over the fellow who offers them? Not all, to be sure, but a lot of them are that way. I know at least one manager here who receives you with open arms if you have a suggestion to offer. He uses only what he thinks fits his particular case, but he thanks you for them all. But then he's an old-timer, was in the business before I was born, and plays "according to the rules," as you say.
>
> I was discussing this with a manager who confined his energies to his own ideas, and he didn't seem to think he needed any from any one else. While we were talking he was fussily trying to get a broken cork out of a bottle into which it had fallen. Finally a boy who was watching him said, "I'll get that out for you, mister, if you'll let me in the show." Having exhausted his patience, he gave it to the boy, who, knotting the end of a piece of string, dropped it down into the bottle, and then inverting it so that the corp dropped down into the neck of the bottle, he gave the string a jerk and out came Mister Cork a-popping. I turned to him and asked him if he got the point. He did.
>
> We can't all be Montgomerys, as you say, but Lord knows we can all try and there isn't anything or anybody that can't be improved with trying. Trouble with most of us is that we are either too lazy or too egotistical to try and improve.
>
> I'm going to put one finger on the wish-bone and wish all my good friends the best in the land for 1915.

There is nothing sadder than the man who knows it all. He doesn't even know enough to know he doesn't know, so he cannot be helped.

Good for a Year.

Last time we saw a picture of Jack Warren Kerrigan Mustard, he was a baby. Now he looks quite a young man with his hair parted and a man-style coat on as he looks out at us from the calendar of the Blue Mouse theater, St. Paul, which is run by his father. He's some regular little man, and Kerrigan has no cause to be ashamed of his namesake. A calendar with a local appeal is much more effective than the stock stuff, but, judging from our mail, few calendars were used this year.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

INQUIRIES.

Questions concerning photoplay writing addressed to this department will be replied to by mail if a fully addressed and stamped envelope accompanies the letter which should be addressed to this department. Questions should be stated clearly and should be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Under no circumstances will manuscripts or synopsis be criticized, whether or not a fee is sent therefor.

A list of companies will be sent if the request is made to the paper direct and not to this department, and a return, stamped envelope is enclosed.

Here's Spec.

IN the good old days when "Spectator" stood for the last word in photoplay authority, because Frank E. Woods, the owner of the signature, was the first in the field in point of chronology, just as he is still first by virtue of his experience and applied knowledge, we started a scrap. "Spec" contended that the idea was the thing, while we stood for idea done into proper form through technique. Spec is now head of the Reliance-Majestic editorial room, but he hasn't lost his interest, and in the subjoined letter it seems to us that instead of hailing our conversion to his side, we are receiving his endorsement. He writes from Los Angeles:

> I want to congratulate you on the wise conclusion you come to in your leading comment in the "World" of Dec. 12th, headed "Plotting." After advising the beginner as to some of the fundamental principles of plot invention, you say, very truly, "but unless you have a real plot, it is useless to offer a script anywhere, no matter how good the business written in may sound. The plot is the first requirement. If you have a really good plot, you cannot very well help writing a good story. It will almost write itself. Study plotting and find success, and do not even try to sell until you are certain that you have mastered plots."
>
> I am not anxious to resume an old controversy with you by calling to your mind that your statement above is a belated endorsement of my own position of long standing that the synopsis of a story (i. e., the plot) is the main essential in the consideration of a script. I have claimed, as you will remember, that the novice should first exert himself to write plots, and let the technique of photoplay construction follow. After he has proved himself fairly well qualified to invent plots he can then take up the study of technique. It is for this reason that I have encouraged writers to submit their ideas in synopsis form first. Good plots with some originality are so rare that any careful editor will be glad to pay for them almost as much as for the finished script. As you put it: "If you have a really good plot you cannot very well help writing a good story. It will almost write itself."
>
> But I am not going to belittle the matter of technique in photoplay construction. It is a pity that this branch of the art is so little understood, particularly by many of those who now are engaged in making pictures. I am, therefore, glad to see you starting in again in the "World" to teach the fundamentals. I hope you will follow up by repeating to your readers more of the truths that you and I used to preach, three or four years ago, about the art of picture playing, as we saw it. It seems to me that taking the general run of pictures of today and comparing them with those of three years ago, there is a distinct falling off in technique. There have been many newcomers in the producing end, who appear to have no conception of the niceties of construction. No matter how good a script may be, there are directors who consider themselves above being taught, and who will violate, in the production of the script, every rule of correct construction. I do not mean that these men are altogether incompetent. They often have great ideas, but they are crude and amateurish in presenting them in pictures. Their works are bungled, unfinished and inartistic, and yet they present them as "masterpieces." Why should not the motion picture be presented with just as much care and technical skill as any other branch of art? Can you imagine, for instance, a great work of literature full of misspelled words, errors in grammar, blunders in statement, and badly printed? Or can you imagine a great painting that is slapped on in a slipshod way? And yet there are so-called "masterpieces" of motion pictures that are so replete with violations of proper technique that they disgrace the art. They are so common today that they constitute the rule rather than the exception. I could wish that every director of motion pictures were required to study your book on photoplay technique. There are a host of errors that these directors now fall into that they might then avoid.
>
> You may say that you write for the author and not for the producer, but you must remember that many of these producers pretend to be able to correct and improve on the work of the author. That they fail in this endeavor is more often than not due to their ignorance of rudimentary technique. By again bringing to the front expert discussion of this subject, as you are so well able to do, you cannot fail to arouse indirect influence that will reach the deficient directors, and, besides, will be of great benefit to all photoplay writers who read your department.

Here is the whole thing in a nutshell. You must thoroughly master plotting before you even need technique, but, having mastered plotting, you need the technique of development in order to give the fullest expression to that idea. The theme, the germ of your story may be told in ten lines, but that theme, given to a hundred trained writers, might result in even as high as a hundred different stories. You have your own idea as to how the story should be developed. You can tell that only by going into details, and the more complete these details, the more complete the exposition of your version of the basic plot.

The trouble has been that Spec, in recent announcements, has given the impression that it is useless to send plots of action to him, as he needs only the bare idea. We are glad to be able to give in his own words his ideas on the great need of technique of development. It is only through the careful and painstaking development of the idea in action that the writer can ever hope to arrive at the point of real success. The synopsis only man is no more than a literary tout. He is not an author.

And one of the truest things that Spec ever said is that many directors are sadly in need of technique. They are, but they will never have sense enough to see it.

It is not merely a case of getting a story down somehow. There are an infinity of little refinements that are needed to supplement the bare plot, to give it color, character, detail. And how many directors are competent to do this, even when they are supplied with a properly edited manuscript of action by scenes?

Keeping Posted.

We know a writer who is too competent to do good work—at least he thinks he is. He has written all sorts of short stories and he knows that if he can do that he can do this piffling little photoplay stuff. Why should he worry about details! A story writer is some person, and much too superior to bend to the intrusive new school. In a word, he is above the task of doing a good job. To him Mary Pickford might be the name of a steamboat. He has never seen her, we do not believe he has seen any pictures. He likes to lounge around his room in a bathrobe and write stuff he knows is good. He knows it is good because he has sold reams of it, but he won't even allow himself to be told that the photoplay should represent real life, and his best hold in stories was writing fanciful stuff about desert islands and the interiors of Africa and India. He knows as much about those as any one who reads his stories, but he doesn't know much of real life and he won't find out and he won't waste time going to study the pictures on the screen, but he does waste time writing photoplays after his own fashion, and he does waste stamps vainly trying to sell them.

You cannot take out of your mind anything that has not been put in there. You can take out what has been put in, and you can get it all elaborated so that it does not seem to be the same thing at all, but you must fill your mind with stuff to start with and you must study demand in order to do the proper sort of elaboration. That is, you must if you want to do anything. You can be stubborn if you want to, but it does not pay, either in checks or results.

Darn the Dawg.

Here's a question:

> The principal character of a certain scene goes into the house to get, say, a piece of paper, a deed; or an apple for a boy or to get his handbag—he has been called suddenly away. A friend is with him on the porch. I don't want to show the interior, so I have a dog for the friend to play with while the man is in the house Is that right? Or what method would you suggest?

The limits of time are so brief that it does not pay to have ten seconds wasted just showing a man playing with a dog. Cut over to some other plot incident, or even flash three feet of something else rather than run ten feet of dead action.

Please Don't.

Please don't write and remark you are taking up a course of photoplay acting by mail the better to fit yourself for writing scripts. Don't do it. A horrespondence course of acting, mostly consists of making faces at a helpless looking glass, expressing rage, surprise, horror, love and a lot of other rot. The rest is more or less to this effect. Build a stage and act in it. Rather than see you spend fifteen dollars foolishly, here is how to build a stage: Get a flat surface. Drive a peg in the center of one end. Forty feet from this peg drive two others twenty feet apart; that is one ten feet to the right and the other ten feet to the left of this center line. Now run string, or tape from the single peg to each of these double pegs. This will give you a sort of V. At the point where the V gets to be six feet wide lay down a piece of stick. This is the "front line" of your stage. From there to the base line is the photographic stage. If you want a deeper stage run the lines further back continuing the angle, which is supposed to be the angle of your lens. Even if you do not want to learn to act, build a stage and realize that with a slight difference in the angle this is what all photoplayers have to work in, and that they have to work up to the front line to let their expressions register. You may get a clearer idea of how to lay out your action if you'll keep this "stage" in mind.

Thinking.

A man has written us three letters about the best way to handle a certain piece of business. It is tricky stuff and he wants to get it just right. It looks like a waste of time—his and ours—to spend so much on just part of a single scene ,but it is not. He has learned a lot about busts and inserts and close-ups and we have been glad to help. You never waste time studying.

Leaning.

If you walked with a pair of crutches constantly, though there was nothing the matter with your legs, you would find that in time you could not use your lower limbs. They would have become atrophied through want of use. It is pretty much the same way with the beginner who wants to rush all his work off to some critic, feeling that he cannot judge his own stuff. In the course of time he will find that he must always have his work criticised because he has developed no judgment for himself.

No man can judge his own work as accurately as another can, but on the other hand a man can learn within reasonable limits to tell about how good or bad a story is, and until he has worked enough to get to this point, he is not ready to start selling.

Either you have it in you to do good work or you have no capacity. If you lack ability, it cannot be given you. The best that can be done for you is to teach you how to develop your inherent talent.

Don't lean against someone else. Stand on your own feet and they'll carry you through.

Saving Ribbons.

Typewriter ribbons quickly lose their freshness. If you want to get the most out of a ribbon and are willing to go to a little trouble, either use Steve Talbot's plan or our own variation. Mr. Talbot's idea was to cut the ribbon into halves, using half of a new ribbon fastened to half of a partly used one. He did his practice work on one half and his clean copying on the new. Our plan is to work with an old ribbon on the machine we do first drafts on, and take that off and put a new one on for copy to be sent out. It's a little trouble, but it gives a fresh looking copy to the editor.

Not a Precedent.

Suggesting to a writer that her story was too improbable, she came back with the confession that it was virtually a paraphrase of an opera comique. "You ought to know that this has been very successful," she added, and we'll bet she is still waiting to hear of our sudden demise through shame, but divil a bit of it.

As a grand opera the story is all right—and better told. The whole libretto is keyed in a spirit of fantasy, and its atmosphere is delightful, but done into photoplay it seems unreal, unnatural and uninteresting, because photography suggests reality, unless the keynote of travesty is sounded at the very start and this was offered as a comedy-drama.

What is all right in opera may be poor as a photoplay, and what is good in one style of photoplay may be poor in another. Lubin's The Smuggler's Daughter, played as a comedy was a ghastly crime. Done as a travesty and with adherence to the script as it was written, it might have been very funny.

Get out of the belief that anything that has an idea will do. It won't.

Mental Gymnastics.

Circus gymnasts and bar performers are careful not to develop the wrong set of muscles. Once the proprietor of a troupe of women gymnasts was discussing with horror the fact that the proprietor of another troupe let his girl "chin" the bar. "I don't let my girls use those muscles," he explained. "That's why they are so good on the swings." He let them exercise only a certain set of muscles and too much walking was barred because it put weight on their legs, where it did no good.

Some writers develop their minds along the same narrow lines. They write only a certain style of play and essay nothing else, with the result that they cannot change to another style should the demand shift. More than that it is well not to hold to photoplays alone, but to write fiction, short filler stuff and anything else that comes in the writing line. Get a broad, even development and you can tackle anything that comes up. Stick to one idea and if that idea ever is abandoned you'll have to start anew on some other line.

And let your reading be equally catholic. Read everything that will give you ideas, and learn to use what you gain through reading. Get a fund of general information, even if you aim to be a specialist. Even if you write only dramas, you may be able to twist a humorous incident into a dramatic one, so take notice of the humor.

Critics.

"All my friends say it's fine," is the sentence that gets into many letters that come to our desk, but what of it? They are not buying the stuff, so their approval doesn't count. Lately a writer wanted to do murder because we ventured to suggest that a college professor of English Literature did not know as much about the value of a script as we did and that possibly the manager of the photoplay theater she patronized might be equally lacking in ability to judge the practicability of a play. The professor looked at the literary quality and the manager looked at the patronage of the author. Neither knew much about the practical side of the motion camera and could not translate words into pictured action.

Don't consult your friends. Don't even show them your scripts. Fight your fight alone. You'll find your hands full of that without letting ignorant but well meaning persons get you all swelled up.

Not Quite That.

Taking exception to our suggestion that a minister was not precisely fitted to write about the stage, a clerical correspondent rises to remark that he cannot always be writing about the church and that he has read much about the stage, and, anyhow, his story about a girl "lured to the stage for her own good," has sold as such instead of having been turned into a story of a girl ruined by going on the stage.

We did not mean to suggest that a minister must always write Bible class stories: indeed, it is seldom that he will write as interesting a story of a minister as the layman will. He, like all other authors, will do better with stories of life with which he is familiar rather than that of which he is a part, but it is seldom that a minister gets sufficiently intimate with the real stage life to write truthfully.

There are three classes of stories: those of your own life, those of the life you can observe closely and those of imagination without knowledge. It is seldom that an author can write convincingly of unfamiliar modes of life, and it is still less often that he can write from a proper perspective of his own life. There remains only the life with which he is familiar, but not too intimately a part of. That is something he knows and yet can stand apart and watch, and so he can write accurately, convincingly and interestingly. But most beginners, and some further advanced, for that matter, go to the two extremes. They either idealize themselves on paper or they think that the true test of imagination is to write of the most unfamiliar subjects, so the country girl writes of the white slaves and the underworld in general, the east side girl writes of high society and the society woman writes rural stories. None of them get accurate color. None of them write convincingly, and so they say their stories are too good to gain the appreciation of incompetent editors.

Now the farmer's daughter does not have to write stories in which she always ends by marrying the rich city chap or Jed Perkins, whose father's farm adjoins her father's. That is too close to home. But she can write stories of the life about her. She can write of Mary Armstrong, who was engaged to Bud Jenkins, who run away with a circus and was killed by a falling tent pole. If she possesses imagination, she can see the possibilities of Mary Armstrong far better than could the city girl, because she knows every phase of Mary and her life; not merely the high lights. She knows what Mary eats and wears, where she sleeps, where she attends church and all that. She can give an idealized but correct picture of her character, where the city girl might use a single incident so untrue to the facts that the whole story might be discredited, just as the writer of Mary Armstrong might write a society story and have the heroine go down to the kitchen and tell the cook to run down to the corner and buy another bottle of champagne because company had come.

Only the other day we saw a stage story in which a chorus girl missed seeing the man she loved because it was Saturday and she had to wait to get her salary. That sounded all right, but theatrical companies are not paid off on Saturday night, particularly when they are playing week stands and must move the show out on that night.

In the years when we wrote dramatic criticisms we were on the stage of every New York theater many more times than one during a performance, but we never really knew intimately life behind the scenes until we dropped that end and became a press agent. Then we were a part of the life, not a newspaper man on a visit, and we entirely rearranged our ideas. It was for this reason we wrote that perhaps the minister was not qualified to write convincingly of the stage. We still think so, but this difference of opinion perhaps serves to freshly point the moral that too high a flight of the imagination is apt to result in a bad fall.

Translating Leaders.

You may think that you simply must have a leader in front of a scene and yet find out that it is not necessary. You can translate the leader into action with no trouble at all. Suppose that you want to tell the audience that "Jim comes home from college." You'll think that this must be told in words, since you can show him coming home but cannot show that he has come from college. You write it down and then write:

11—Front of house—Jim enters scene—Father and Mother from house—they kiss him—all enter house.

You have a five-word leader and a scene of rather dead action, but—

11—Front of house—Father and Mother rush from house—look expectant—rather surprised—Jim enters—typical college boy gets up—kisses mother—shakes hands patronizingly with father—takes out a huge pipe—lights—Father looks him over—points to cane—Jim laughs—unwraps college pennant rolled around cane—waves flat—imitates cheer leader—rar-rar-rah stuff—Mother admires—Father looks impressed—Jim catches up suit case—proudly leads way into house—Mother and father look at each other. Ain't he great!

The action runs additional footage, but you get something for the extra length and that something is not a prosy leader but action that helps the scene and gives Jim's character in a few feet. There are some things that must be told in leaders, but lots of times when you think you need leaders you merely need to think a little harder and a little longer to translate leader into action.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles have been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study. Canadians should send P. O. M. O., or coin only.

Question No. 69.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Speaking of a projection circuit, what is meant by "the loss in the resistance?" Explain in detail. Can this loss be entirely avoided? Is resistance always necessary? Explain in detail.

Roll of Honor on Question No. 63.

There were a large number of answers to question 63, but only a very few who, even by stretching things, are entitled to be on the Roll of Honor, which consists of the following: Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Tex.; John Solar, Watertown, N. Y.; H. W. Seward, Reading, Pa.; J. I. Roberts, Nashville, Tenn.; Montreal, Can.; M. W. Larmour, Waco, Tex., and G. D. Bullock, Hobart, Ind.

I have decided to publish the replies of both Brother Larmour and Brother Bullock by reason of the fact that there are some points in each not contained in the other. Outside of these two answers, and that of Brother Smith of Fort Worth, I had to stretch things a good deal to have any Roll of Honor at all, not but that the answers of those on the Roll were correct enough as far as they went; the trouble was they did not go far enough. They did not sit down and study the matter. You will observe that both Brothers Larmour and Bullock have given this matter considerable thought. They have considered the thing, just as they would do or ought to do if they were planning an operating room, with result that very little has been overlooked.

I give you this little talking to, gentlemen, not because it makes any difference to me, personally, whether you answer fully and completely or not, but because I want you to improve yourselves in and through this series of questions, and the only way you can do that is to study each question, and answer it fully and completely. A question that is easy to answer does not teach you anything, remember that. And some of the easy questions, 63 for instance, is not at all easy—see the two replies.

Reply to Question No. 63.

By M. W. Larmour, Waco, Tex.

The Question:

What are the essentials of a good operating room? Look out! This involves quite a number of things. Don't overlook any of them. What should be the minimum dimensions when one projector is used? When two are used? When two and a dissolver are used? What size should the observation ports be and how ought they to be fitted? Explain your ideas by sketch, if necessary.

The Answer:

1. The room should be located central with regard to the screen.

2. It should not be placed nearer to the screen than 50 feet, or farther away than 100. Personally I would select 75 to 100 feet as the ideal distance. (Correct, but 125 or even 150 is not excessive.—Ed.)

3. It should have a solid foundation so there will be no vibration in the floor.

4. It should be absolutely fireproof in every respect.

5. It should be built so as to be as nearly sound-proof as possible, to the end that the noise of the machines, rewinding or anything else which occurs in the operating room will not annoy the audience.

6. It should be provided with sufficient incandescent lights arranged to instantly and brilliantly illuminate all parts of the room. (Both Brother Larmour and Brother Bullock overlooked the necessity for a lamp on an extension cord.—Ed.)

7. It should be reasonably easy of access, preferably not opening into the auditorium.

8. It should be amply large enough to hold all apparatus, without any crowding.

9. All openings should be equipped with shutters which will close quickly and automatically in case of fire, except the vent flue, which must be unobstructed. (The vent flue should have a damper, but it should be arranged exactly opposite to the shutter arrangement, viz.: weighted to remain normally open and only held shut by a cord fastened to the fire shutter master cord, so that when the shutters are dropped, in case of fire, the vent flue damper will, by the same action, be thrown open. In cold climates it would be almost inhuman to ask the operator to work in an operating room with a two-foot vent flue wide open during the winter season. Brother Larmour, of course, does not experience any cold weather, or at least anything we would call cold weather up here, and that is probably the reason he overlooked that point.—Ed.)

10. There should be a vent flue leading directly to the open air, not smaller than 2 feet in diameter, and even larger if there be more than one machine, or better still a vent flue over each machine.

11. The interior should be painted with a dark green, or black, flat paint.

12. All wiring should be in conduit, with fuses and switches in cabinets.

13. If iron lined there should be a good insulating floor covering. (Correct, but iron-lined rooms should not be allowed at all.—Ed.)

14. It should not contain anything except the things necessary to the operator's work.

15. The arrangements should be such that all apparatus, switches, etc., will be easy of access to the operator, both for manipulation and repair.

16. The exterior of the room should be as inconspicuous as possible; that is to say, it should be decorated to blend with the rest of the interior of the theater, or to form some ornamental part of the general scheme of decoration.

17. It should be well ventilated. This is a feature which is often overlooked, but of great importance.

18. It should contain only the most up-to-date apparatus, and that apparatus should be kept in perfect condition.

19. It should have observation ports large enough so that the operator can get a clear, unobstructed view of the entire screen at one time when in operating position.

20. And, above all, it should be in charge of a competent, reliable staff of operators, possessed of an adequate supply of "horse sense."

21. Personally I prefer a room constructed of reinforced concrete 4 to 6 inches thick, with arched ceiling and cement finished concrete floor, but brick and hollow tile also are excellent, and two layers of sheet iron separated by a layer of asbestos board supported by angle iron makes a fairly good room. Sheet iron nailed on a wooden frame or asbestos on an angle iron frame does not make a fireproof room, and should not be used. (Don't quite "get" the brother there. If he means sheet asbestos, he is perfectly correct, but asbestos mill-board on angle irons is fireproof, and is approved in most cities, though I personally very much prefer concrete, brick or hollow tile.—Ed.)

22. Where one projector is used the minimum dimensions should be 6x8 feet; for two 8x10 feet, and for two projectors and a dissolver 8x12 feet. I do not give the height because that will necessarily depend somewhat upon local conditions; however, it should always be as great as possible. I have merely given the above as the smallest dimensions allowable. The operating room should be, within reason, as large as possible. It should be large enough for the projectors to be placed so that a man can walk entirely around them, and in this allowance should be made for a fat man, too.

In making observation ports it is better to get them too large rather than too small. Very few operators will take the trouble to keep their faces glued to the wall over a little 4x6-inch hole to try to get a clear view of the screen, and the result of an incomplete view of the screen is bad projection. Twelve inches wide will be about right, except for extremely short throws, where the port should be even wider. So far as the height be concerned, make the port high enough that the operator, be he short or tall, gets a clear view of the screen either seated or standing. If this makes the hole in the wall too large, then make an auxiliary shutter, separate from the fire shutter, with a hole in it, say, 12 inches square. (8 inches high by 12 inches wide is ample.—Ed.) Arrange this auxiliary shutter in grooves to slide up and down, and hang it on a counterbalance, and then the operator can adjust it to his own satisfaction. But be sure that the auxiliary shutter is long enough to completely close the observation port in both the high and extreme low positions. The auxiliary must not in any way interfere with the fire shutter, the latter being arranged to close automatically and to be smoke-tight when closed.

Reply to Question No. 63.

By G. D. Bullock, Hobart, Ind.

The essentials of a good operating room are as follows:

CONSTRUCTION:

The room must be absolutely fireproof. The ports should be protected by shutters so suspended that they will be dropped automatically immediately in case of fire and allow no trace of the fire to be visible from the auditorium.

The room must be of such dimensions that the operator will have free access to all parts of his equipment. The room should be of sufficient height to allow of free ventilation and not confine the smoke unnecessarily in case of fire. There must be a vent in the ceiling of such dimensions that it will freely carry away the smoke by its natural draft, and so constructed that it will be fireproof. The floor must be rigid and not subject to vibration.

EQUIPMENT:

The equipment should be of high grade throughout. The controls should be arranged conveniently and readily accessible to the operator. A work-bench with drawers as receptacles for spare parts and tools should be included. There should be lockers for clothes and a lavatory so that the operator can leave the room in a presentable condition (also for other reasons. Ed.). There should be an ammeter so that the operator may watch the current consumption at his arc. There should be plenty of good illumination, conveniently placed, and available for instant use. Also a perfect absence of illumination, or as nearly a perfect absence as possible should be had when the incandescents are extinguished. This involves the color scheme of the operating ceiling and walls. They should be coated with a non-reflecting paint of a color which absorbs light. There should be a good chair or stool, plenty of carbons, slides, ink, etc.

MAINTENANCE:

There should be spare parts for the equipment so that the operator can make immediate emergency repairs. The tools necessary for the operator to handle and repair his equipment speedily and in workmanlike manner should be present. There should be an operator and assistant capable of handling the equipment to the best possible advantage.

DIMENSIONS:

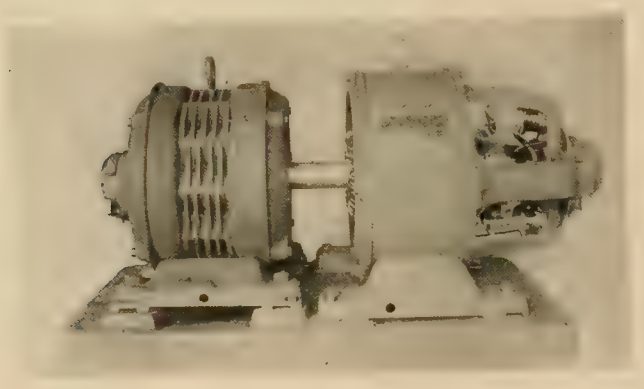
No operating room can be less than 6x8 feet for one projector, 8x10 for two projectors, 8x12 for two projectors and a dissolver, and allow the operator sufficient elbow room. In calculating this I assume the machine tables to be 4 feet long and 20 inches wide.

Observation ports should be large enough so that the screen is in full view of the operator, and long enough so that the operator can see the bottom of the screen when sitting and its top when standing in operating position. These ports should be fitted with a fire shutter and if conditions cause the port to be of extreme length a second fire shutter should be installed, with a port cut in it so that the screen is easily visible from any position. This auxiliary shutter must be so arranged that the operator can raise or lower it, and it must be sufficiently long so that it will cover the hole in the wall, regardless of the position of the port in the shutter; it should be counterbalanced.

[Now you fellows who sent in answers take a good rubber at these two, particularly the one by Brother Larmour, because I think he has it on Neighbor Bullock this time. Friend Bullock entirely overlooked specifications 1 and 5, both exceedingly important ones. Brother Larmour's and Bullock's remarks about the observation ports can be studied with profit by several thousand operators in the United States, Canada and other countries, and in some instances it would not do any harm for the operator, provided he be a good, husky man, to invite the manager up to the machine room, show him the knot-hole observation port and then rub his nose on this article. Of course it would not be advisable to try that unless you are a good, stout man, also unless you are ready to quit, but, nevertheless, sometimes it takes strenuous measures to cure abuses, and I am prepared to say right here and now in thousands of operating rooms in this country the observation port is nothing more or less than an outrage—a little knot-hole which makes for bad projection and inconvenience to the operator. Ed.]

Motor Generator Set.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company is putting out a motor generator set for moving picture work; the motor a 220-volt a. c. machine, and the generator, which is direct connected to the motor, a 70-volt generator of any desired capacity. Electrically the motor and generator have a combined efficiency of approximately 80 per cent, but from this must be subtracted the loss through the necessary resistance in series with the arc.



The picture shows the general appearance of the outfit and, mechanically, it is the best constructed device of the kind I have yet looked at. The motor, particularly, is a peculiar proposition, and is believed to be entirely fool-proof. The Westinghouse people claim that the armature cannot be burned up. The coils are set in cement and the end-ring is attached thereto by being placed in a mold and the casting run in so that as a matter of fact when they finish with it the whole thing is one solid piece. The field of the motor is composed of steel. Mr. di Moise of the Westinghouse Company tells me that the motor can be dropped bodily a considerable distance without doing any material harm, and I believe what he says is true. The generator is simplicity simplified, and there really is not much of anything about it that can possibly get out of order, all of which is a great recommendation to John Jones out in Smalltown, Texas, two, three, four or five hundred miles from supplies, and almost an equal distance from any one who could, by any stretch of the imagination, be called an expert dynamo repair man.

In conversation with Mr. di Moise, who is not only a very obliging gentleman, but also an electrical engineer of high standing, the care of commutators was touched upon, and I asked his opinion as to what care the commutator should have. Mr. di Moise said in effect: "Almost no care at all, provided the commutator bars be made of drawn copper, instead of cast copper, which latter is unfit for that kind of service, but is nevertheless used to a considerable extent by some manufacturers. Provided the commutator bars be of hard, drawn copper, then I would advise the use of soft brushes, and would especially recommend the 'Le Carbone' Brush, which is of foreign manufacture and rather expensive in first cost, though cheap in the long run. Le Carbone is a soft brush, and to use soft brushes successfully it may become necessary, two or three times in the life of the generator, to under-cut the mica insulation of the commutator. This is accomplished by the means of a thin hack-saw blade, the manipulator scraping off about 1/32d of an inch of the mica between the bars. It is a job which must be done with extreme care, and might better not be attempted by the novice.

"If the commutator becomes roughened and dirty a light touch with OO sandpaper, while the machine is running, followed by just a touch of waste, is all that is necessary or advisable."

This is the advice Mr. di Moise gives, and, while it is somewhat contrary to the experience of the editor, still Mr. di Moise must be listened to with respect. His opinions and views have weight; much greater weight, in fact, than my own, because he is paid a salary by the Westinghouse Company on the assumption that he knows his business in things of the kind, and you may take it from me that the Westinghouse corporation does not pay a man a salary very long unless he delivers the goods.

I shall try and find out where the Le Carbone Brushes can be had and will let you know later.

A Corking Letter and Good Laugh.

L. F. Guimond, Monticello, New York, is here with the following It is a little lengthy, but is a dish of good sense and good data served with a relish of laughs.

> Dear Mr. Richardson: Telephone for the reserves!! Some one left the door open and he's in again! I hope by this time you have been able to recover from turkey and plum duff to the extent of being able to wade through the letters we up-State and out-of-State jays send in. They do say that a "go-devil" is the greatest thing in the world for digestion. I dunno. I'm sticking to four wheels and when we hit the high places occasionally I am always thankful that it's four wheels instead of two. Merely a matter of opinion, however. But that has nothing to do with projection, except we hit something like a stone wall or a tree, and then we get projection in plenty, with a rather squashed-up definition and lots of chromatic aberration. But to get down to brass tacks. You know how I have been trying for a better picture for the past few months. We have gotten pretty disgusted at times, and all our experimenting has seemed well nigh fruitless of results. Even the changes in lenses, objective and condenser, didn't seem to make much difference. I have to report to the Court of Last Appeals in the projection game that we may now flap our pinions and shriek with the National bird, "Eureka!" We have installed a Brush Electric Lighting System, manufactured by Chas. A. Strelinger of Detroit, Mich., and she sure are delivering the goods. And, if we do say it ourselves who, etc., etc., we are getting a dandy picture. No blue spot, no yellow edges, but clean cut right to the border, and a soft even light, very pleasing to the eyes after our session with local a. c. I cannot say that my experience with M bi C condensers was very successful while I used alternating current, but I can assure you that the contrast between them and the old plano is very marked with direct current. We now have what we want in a picture and intend to sit back and breathe for a moment while we read the Projection Department and lay for something new. I don't suppose I am offering anything new when I expatiate on the wonders of direct current, but I am writing, just the same, to assure you that I believe fully ninety per cent. of all projection troubles come from the same source mine did, i. e., a very poor quality of local power plant alternating juice. This is probably not at all a startling discovery, but I'd like to have known it a year ago, and I wouldn't have spent that year trying to make a silk purse with nothing for material but the proverbial porcine coherer. My advice to the small town exhibitor looking for good projection is to get a D. C. plant. Of course, I haven't tried out rectifiers, rotary-converters, etc., but my main reason for this was mercenary to a degree. Inasmuch as these appliances cannot be secured with trading stamps or green coupons I felt that if I must spend some money I'd better spend a little more and secure something which would not only give me the desired d. c. but would also light my place at a saving over the ten cents per k. w. hour I have been paying. At present we are using approximately (peak load), four k. ws. and it is costing us exactly three cents per k. w., this cost including oil, gasoline at 12c and an hour's time per diem. We have put in a transformer 110 to 60 volts (the plant is 60 v. 66 amps.), and we are able at a moment's notice to switch over to the town light and, with a few minor changes at the machine, go right on with alternating, direct to the machine, without any resistance to speak of. At twelve each night we throw over and stay on the town until dark the following night. Altogether we are satisfied and we have found the answer to a good many things. I only hope you can climb on that there thing of yours, push it into "high," and run up here in beautiful Sullivan County and see some scenery and incidentally tell us what we are doing that we shouldn't do, and what we are failing to do that we ought to do. We've still got a lot to learn and when it comes to learning, why "Barkus is willing."

As to publishing the question and answers thing, most certainly yes. If a man could go back through the files of the department he could, of course, get all this dope, but it is not practical to do so, as you very well know. Why not gather together the best of it and embody it in a book. Do that and I will send my check for five iron men as the very first subscriber. Call it "Practical Helps from Practical Men, from Practical Experience." Hum! Some name! Looks like the title on a padded reel. Speaking of mottoes this is ours, from the brain of yours truly: "The public is the Big Boss. Watch your job."

Some letter! I had one rattlin' good laugh over that motorcycle projection stunt. It was all the more hearty because I have been projected and had my definition smeared up and in the projection there was quite some chromatic aberration, too—in fact all the colors of the rainbow seemed to answer roll.

There is a good deal in what you say with regard to alternating current being responsible for poor projection, but it really is not altogether the fault of a. c., as such, but chargeable to the fact that (a) operators don't know how to handle their carbons and lamps; (b) don't realize that the carbons and lamp must be handled with great delicacy where anything less than 60 amperes is being used, and very careful even with 60 amperes; (c) and last but not least, the fact that just about half enough amperage is usually used. With 80 amperes a. c., using ¾ carbons, it is quite possible to approach d. c. results, provided the man is reasonably careful with his carbon setting and the handling of his lamp. But 80 amperes is often an impossibility when one takes current through a small-town generating station, first by reason of the cost and second by reason of lack of generator capacity. Moreover in order to do that one would almost be compelled to have a special economizer built, since using 80 amperes through a rheostat, even at 110 volt pressure, would be some waste.

No, Brother Guimond, I will not call any reserves to put you out. I had the rare pleasure of handing your letter, with just a few minor changes, to the stenographer and saying: "Turn it in for copy. There is less than one letter in a thousand I can do that with.

As to the book matter, why I dunno. There is a vast amount of valuable stuff in the department but very much of it is of value through and by reason of the fact that it has set men thinking and thus has advanced us in knowledge. I feel that the department has done a really wonderful work when we come to consider it from all points of view, but I doubt if it would be a practical thing to build a book from its pages. My Handbook in its past and future editions is very largely a summing up of the knowledge brought forth by and through the medium of the projection department, and my private correspondence. As to selecting the best of the questions and answers for publication under the title you suggest, why I will give that matter some thought later on, though I'd made up my mind not to.

His First Time.

Ray M. Harding, Des Moines, Iowa, arises to make the following remarks:

This is my first time to break into the projection department, but when I read Mr. Leininger's article, December 26th issue, the temptation was too strong. Why anyone calling himself an operator should doubt the value of knowledge of electricity is beyond my understanding. I don't claim to know it all, by any manner of means, but believe me when I get a chance to study the electrical end of projection I jump at it, I am a firm believer that if one expects to get anywhere one must study and advance in learning. Suppose Mr. Leininger's manager should install a motor generator set. Where would he be without any knowledge of the electrical action of a generator or motor? Soon be looking for a new job, I am afraid. My advice to operators is: Look ahead, at least a little farther than the end of your nose. Learn all you possibly can, not only about the mechanical and optical end of projection, but about the electrical end as well, for the day is coming when most theatres will have their own light plant and you can take it from me it will be up to the operator to thoroughly understand dynamos and gas and gasoline engines. Projection in Des Moines is, taken as a whole, good—much better than in some larger cities—Chicago at least. We were organized under the I. A. July 10, 1913, and have about every house in town, are getting along fine and dandy, for which much credit is due Brother E. Metzger and Business Agent Will Merrell. In closing let me wish you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

What friend Harding says is true, every word of it. Brother Leininger's position is absolutely untenable. You might as well say that the locomotive engineer ought to know nothing about his engine, except just merely how to reverse, open and shut the throttle and manipulate the air brakes. Would not that be a silly proposition? To show how utterly foolish Friend Leininger is in his contention let me call attention to the fact that there is a very distinct relation between the amperage, the type of screen, the revolving shutter and flicker, and flicker is, as we all know, highly injurious to the eyes. Yet Neighbor Leininger would tell us that knowledge of these things is of no value to the operator. He may claim he did not say anything of the kind, but he did nevertheless, because one cannot have an adequate knowledge of this proposition without having a considerable knowledge of the electrical end of the combination. I am more than pleased to know that the Des Moines boys are prosperous. If I remember right I had something to do with them switching over from the I. B. E. W. to the I. A., and I guess they are not sorry for the change. Incidentally, in a recent letter addressed to the editor by the I. A., general office, the following clause appears: "We also are glad to be able to say that all the locals formed with and through your assistance are doing well." From which it will be seen that the editor has been instrumental in forming several unions. Evidently the brother has no very great admiration for the brand of projection put on in the Windy City—Chicago.

Not an Operator.

I am not an operator, but am interested in projection. Regarding Mr. Leininger's letter inquiring why the operator should know anything about electricity, Harold Holmes in "The Test of Efficiency," says: "It is in every way creditable to handle the pick and shovel. The only discredit consists in having an ambition whose range is confined to the limits of the tools mentioned. There are few who succeed because there are few who think. It is the thinkers who solve the world's problems and receive the world's reward. Again he says "No man will prove a shining success in any calling who does not use his brains, and think beyond the immediate necessities of that calling. The man who fails to search for knowledge outside of the domain of his own position can not become an absolute master of that position. He will never startle the world with his brilliancy, or have better positions seeking his service. If you would become an expert in your line devote some of your leisure time to studying the technique of your business. If you are in a mechanical field do not perform your work by rule o' thumb, but know the why and wherefore of the things you do."

I could quote more on the subject but I think Mr. Leininger will see the "handwriting on the wall" and begin studying electricity.

We have one theatre in this town. Projection is like a moving picture machine that wobbles. It is fine in spots, but poor when taken as a whole. Athol, a town five miles east of here sports two theatres and it would be hard for you, Mr. Richardson, to find any fault in the projection at the "Gem." The "Lyric" projects a better picture than the average, but as the operating room is located at the side of the balcony the picture is distorted. I am not going to claim the one dollar prize offered by the St. Louis subscriber, but I think pages 331 and 332 of the Handbook contain the correct solution.

I have printed this letter because it is mighty good stuff for operators to read. I have been trying to pound these same facts into their heads for, lo, these many years. I have been trying to make them understand that one cannot do a thing in the best possible manner by simply knowing the mechanical methods of doing it; one must go beyond that and know the why and wherefore in order to do the best possible work. There is reason behind all that, and it is very ably set forth in Friend Blake's quotations. It is the man who uses his brains who succeeds. As I have told you time and again, the man who works with his hands is cheap, but the chap who uses his brains is the lad who sooner or later gets the good job and the coin. Come again, Brother Blake, when the spirit moves you. It makes no difference whether you are an operator or not. If you can write things of value to operators you are as welcome as the flowers in May, though your trade or profession be that of spearing walrus on the northwest coast of Greenland.

Static.

New Orleans, Louisiana, sends in the following:

The day I visited the Lyceum (Pictorium) and viewed the projection of Pathe's Weekly, No. 84, 1914, there was a huge spider in the picture, and the effect was odd, especially on a street scene. The spider object was formed by white lines or streaks not intended to be in the development of the film. Last week the writer projected a film that contained lines and waves not intended to be in a street scene. It looked like the screen actors were doing a high voltage wave demonstration.

New Orleans has run into a case of our friend, the enemy, "static." If you want to see a motion picture cameraman foam at the mouth and have papsy lal combined with hydrophobia just say "static" to him. However, such film should not be sent out. It is probably the fault of poor inspection, though in the case of a "weekly" the trouble may be in the negative, and there may only be one negative.

Hot Stuff.

From New Orleans, Louisiana, comes the following clipping taken from one of the daily papers: "'The Girl from New York' proved to be hot stuff Monday night when she got too warm for Henry Bush, the operator at the New Wonderland Theatre, 934 Canal Street. In fact the lady became so exceedingly incandescent that he threw her out of the window of the machine room into the audience. She landed on a man's neck, and he, indignant, left the place in a hurry. Then she went out too, after several sputters."

All of which is exceedingly exciting until one comes to consider that "The Girl from New York" is a Keystone Comedy reel, which caught fire, it is said, through the carelessness of the New Wonderland operator. The audience had no time to get frightened, and the only damage done was to the feelings of the man upon whom "The Girl from New York" in her blazing wrath descended. He was not burned but his feelings were materially ruffled. There was no panic.

Condensers.

A. W. Eckman, Jr., Latah, Washington, inquires:

> What kind of condensers ought I to use to get the best results for spreading the light? Also what kind of carbons should I use to get the best results?

Friend Eckman is in a small town, therefore can be forgiven for his lack of knowledge. I cannot advise you about the lenses without knowing the exact width of your picture, and distance of projection. I cannot answer with regard to carbons without knowing your amperage, but presumably you are not using more than 35, therefore I would advise ⅝ cored above and ½ solid below if it is d. c.; if it is a. c., then two ⅝ cored. You will find the carbons made by the National Carbon Company to be excellent, also the Electra and Bio, though they are hard to get just now, on account of "de wah."

I Don't Blame Him.

Albert Busby, Shelbyville, Indiana, says:

> Attached find sample of the kind of patches we occasionally get here. I don't see how any man with an ounce of common sense would make a splice like this. I often get a film in which there will be a break patched together with a paper clip, but this one is in a class all to itself. I won't tell you the name of the exchange it comes from this time, but if I get any more will send you the name and let you do the rest. Keep up the good work in the department.

This particular patch is a corker. It is more than one inch long, the emulsion is not scraped off and on top of that there was a pin through it. Some patch! But what earthly use is there in all this if you do not give me the name of the exchange. The names of exchanges that send out uninspected films ought to be published. It is an outrage on every one connected with the business.

Non-Inflammable Film.

Thomas W. Waters, Camden, New Jersey, asks:

> Will you kindly advise me why "cellite" or non-inflammable films have not come into general use for moving picture work?

As I recollect the matter it is because there was trouble experienced in making the non-flam stock durable. It contained faults which seemed to be insurmountable, one of which was that it cracked readily.

An Odd Request.

The editor of this department is from time to time in receipt of some very queer requests, but here is one that I think will cap the top of the pile for quite a spell. For obvious reasons I do not give the man's name.

A convict in San Quentin States Prison, California, writes as follows:

> I imagine this letter is different from any other that has come to you in the ordinary routine of correspondence. I have given the matter of making the request I shall prefer a good deal of thought, but I have been told by friends in local —— that you are a broad-minded and impartial man. This is written from a place I presume you rarely hear from—a prison. Now, as you read that last word please don't get busy with the waste basket. An old issue of the Moving Picture World finds it way into San Quentin occasionally and, after reading the projection department, it occurs to me that it is just what I need to study and improve myself against the time when I shall again go forth into the world, and, therefore, my request is that the Moving Picture World put me on the free list for a year.

The friend writes more but this is the gist of the matter, and it certainly is an odd request. I do not believe in condemning a man because he has made a misstep. If all the actions of everyone were known and all received their just deserts it would be interesting to know how large our penitentiaries would be and how many would sojourn there for a more or less extended period. This man wishes to improve his time in study, to the end that he may be better fitted to live a useful life when he has paid the penalty of his misdeed—whatever it may have been. The Moving Picture World has no "free list," but I have taken steps to supply him with what he needs, and I trust that when he again enters into freedom he will become a useful member of society.

Best Ever.

George R. Collins, Wildrose, N. Dakota, says:

> I can safely say the Moving Picture World is the best paper ever published for the manager or operator, and the best investment the manager or operator can make of the sum of $3.60. In a town of 300 I have to do a lot of figuring to make things go, and have received much valuable information through the World. And now may I ask you what causes the light to dim at the arc after running two reels? I have a splendid light on the first two reels. Find enclosed $2.50 for the Handbook.

Well, Brother Collins, it is a pretty hard proposition to answer you with any degree of certainty. However, make the following test: Watch an incandescent light closely when you strike your arc. If it dims down it is evidence that the supply lines are overloaded somewhere, or possibly it is the generator at your power house. Any way, it is up to the power company. Quite likely the wires which connect your theater with the street mains are too small, also perhaps you are using alternating current through a transformer, and the transformer is too small. In addition to the foregoing, make the following test: Run until the light goes dim and then pull your machine switch, keeping close watch on an incandescent light. If the incandescent gets brighter when you pull the machine switch it is evidence of overload. I think most likely you are using a transformer and it gradually heats up, or your supply wires are too small and they slowly heat, thus increasing the resistance. It is also possible you are using D. C. through resistance which is too small, and gradually heats up, finally becoming very hot, which increases its resistance. Your data is not sufficient to allow me to do more than make a few general guesses. A loose connection, which heats up moderately, would also do the trick.

In Trouble.

J. J. Langlois, Abeline, Texas, arises to remark:

> Another poor operator in trouble and, knowing your specialty is the settling of such things, I take pleasure in submitting my difficulty. The Rex theater has bought an Edison Model B and I find the geneva movement is not parallel—that the cam and star shafts are out of line by 1/64 of an inch. I would not accept the machine, knowing that the film will not pull evenly, and furthermore, the sprocket teeth at the low end are going to wear faster than those on the other end and have a tendency to injure the film. The machine has been at the exchange for three weeks, and this morning it is returned to me in this condition. Am I right or wrong in refusing to accept?

You are right in refusing to accept the machine Brother Langlois, or at least theoretically you are right, provided you are certain the fault exists. However, it is a somewhat difficult matter to get an accurate measurement between the two shafts on an Edison machine, and, moreover, even supposing the shafts are out of line 1/64 of an inch it is a simple matter to line them. As I understand it, you claim the right-hand end of the intermittent shaft is 1/64 of an inch higher than the left-hand end. All right. Turning to page 232 of the Handbook, loosen set screw 18141 and its mate at the other end of the shaft, and then by turning eccentric bushing 18705, Plate 3, page 234, and its mate at the other end of the shaft, 18705, Plate 5, page 238, you can move the intermittent sprocket shaft, and line it with the cam shaft. I would suggest, however, that before doing this you apply certain tests. First with an inside caliper measure the exact distance from the top of lower or take-up sprocket on one side to the bottom of intermittent sprocket on the same side, and then from the top of the lower sprocket to the intermittent on the other side. The lower sprocket shaft of a new Edison machine is "square" with the mechanism, also the cam shaft is square with the mechanism, and if you make the distance from the top of the lower sprocket to the under side of the intermittent sprocket the same on both sides you can pretty nearly conclude that the intermittent is square with the cam shaft. I have no caliper at hand, and I am not certain whether the cam shaft of the Edison is the same diameter throughout or not, but I think it is, and I am quite sure the intermittent shaft is. While theoretically you are perfectly right in rejecting a machine that is not in perfect adjustment, still, practically, I would accept it and make the adjustments, since it is an adjustment that can be very easily accomplished.

More Light Trouble.

Portland, Oregon, orders a Handbook and says:

> During the last week my light has been giving trouble. It is yellow around the edges, with a small ghost in the center. I use a mercury arc rectifier and a Powers Six machine; have tried different carbon settings, but without result. Am using one 6½ and one 7½ condenser; with the 7½ in front. Distance of projection about 75 feet. Can I get a better light by using meniscus and plano-convex condenser? Have lamphouse back as far as it will go. Bio carbons top and bottom Have an aluminum screen which has a coating of whiting, but is not giving good results.

If your condensers have not been changed it is difficult to diagnose your case, Portland. I think, however, you have probably changed condensers, or put in a new lens which is not of the focal length it is supposed to be. You say the distance of projection is "about" 75 feet, and do not give the width of the picture, therefore I cannot form any idea as to what focal length lenses you ought to have. Turning to page 356 of your new Handbook measure the two lenses as directed on page 356, beginning at: "This may be done as follows" in the sixth line. I think very likely you will find one or the other of the lenses is not what it is supposed to be. You might also try spacing the condensing lenses different distances apart, which can be done by pushing the lenses back against their springs, holding them temporarily by a strip of asbestos at the top and bottom. Be sure, also, that your lenses are not discolored. If the glass shows yellow, purple or green when you look through the lens edgewise, it should be discarded. As to meniscus plano, no; not enough to justify.

Not the Machine's Fault.

Hay & Nicholas, Fairmount, Minnesota, sends in a piece of film with the following:

> Attached sample was taken from a reel we ran recently. Upon inquiry at the exchange we found the film had last been run on a Powers Six A, but beyond that we know nothing about it.

The injury consists of the edge of the film being doubled over, and it was not done by a projection machine. Looks more as if the film had fallen on the floor and someone had stepped on the edge of it, but that is merely a surmise. However, whatever it was that caused this damage it was not a projector, that is sure.

OPERATORS Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

420 Pages Illustrated

By F. H. Richardson

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

A BOLD, BAD BURGLAR (Kalem), Jan. 12.—This is a comedy, embracing in its character an old maid, a burglar and a sheriff. It is meritorious in its construction and the director has taken advantage of all its points in producing it and the actors have caught the spirit of the situations and complications. The funniest part is where the old maid captures the burglar and wants him for herself, but he insists on going to jail, to escape her. An entertaining comedy that is greeted with continuous laughter.

BY A STRANGE ROAD (Essanay), Jan. 12.—Adapted from a story in the Smart Set magazine. This picture play is not very pleasant, although it is quite original. It contains much of a sensational nature that will perhaps please some and be repugnant to others. The photography is excellent and the acting on the part of all in the cast is up to the mark. It seemed to take with the audience. It can be recommended.

OLIVE'S OTHER SELF (Edison), Jan. 12.—This picture has been reviewed at length by Louis Reeves Harrison, in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 196, issue of Jan. 9, 1915.

BASEBALL AND TROUBLE (Lubin), Jan. 12.—This is one of those comedy pictures that while full of absurdities, are, nevertheless, laughable in many places. The plot and theme have been used in many constructions, in many ways. It is the old story of a man who used all sorts of deceptions to get to a baseball game. He gets in bad with his boss, his wife, the doctor and finally himself. If it is impossible it is funny and it gets over in great shape.

HAROLD'S BAD MAN (Selig), Jan. 12.—This comedy picture contains some good points. A man who is elected sheriff has a daughter who has a lover, to whom the father objects. When it comes to a show down, the sheriff is lacking in nerve, although he is a great "hornblower." There is a bandit to be captured and the daughter and her sweetheart corral him, giving credit to the old man, winning his consent to their marriage. This is a satisfactory and well produced comedy.

CURING THE COOK (Edison), Jan. 13.—A comedy dealing with college boys, in a students' boarding house, who deal with the cook for being dilatory in her duties. To console herself, she draws consolation from a black bottle. The laughs come in where they attempt to cure her, and all kinds of things occur. It is all very laughable. On the same reel with "McGinty and the Count."

McGINTY AND THE COUNT (Edison), Jan. 13.—On the same reel with "Curing the Cook." A very laughable little comedy which mixes up the characters in a tango. It ends with a very comical "dool," as McGinty calls it, with swords. It earns many laughs.

THE FABLE OF THE FELLOW WHO HAD A FRIEND WHO KNEW A GIRL WHO HAD A FRIEND (Essanay), Jan. 13.—A particularly funny and well produced George Ade comedy, featuring Leo White and Royal Douglas, supported by a splendid cast. Mr. Ade's comedies are always enjoyable, as they are so different, and this one is no exception, but rather an acception as a "corker." It is a very amusing tale of love. Moral: "The enemy is seldom dangerous, but keep your fingers crossed when an old friend shows up." Everybody should see this.

THE RICHEST GIRL IN THE WORLD (Selig), Jan. 13.—With an income of over a million dollars, a girl becomes disgusted with the life of a society butterfly and leaving behind a host of wealthy admirers secures a position in a department store and finds happiness among those who work for a living. She also finds a young farmer with whom she falls in love and whom she thinks will make an ideal husband; they make a try at it anyway. A release of a mild sort but very interesting and wholesome.

THE HAIR OF HER HEAD (Vitagraph), Jan. 13.—A comedy picture written by Frances L. Garside and produced by Sidney Drew, who plays the leading role, supported by Jane Morrow, Gladden James, Marian Henry, Ethel Lee and others, which is significant of a fine performance. Credulity and jealousy are used as vehicles for the comedy situations and creates a fearful mess. A lock of hair and a fortune teller help along with the misunderstandings, which are finally straightened out. This is an excellent comedy release.

GETTING INTO A SCRAPE (Biograph), Jan. 14.—A fair comedy which does not get over with great strength. On the same reel with "Near Educational Series, The Cheese Industry."

NEAR EDUCATIONAL SERIES, THE CHEESE INDUSTRY (Biograph), Jan. 14.—A travesty on the manufacure of cheese, which is nonsensical. There is nothing very enjoyable about it, only some of the acrobatic stunts indulged in by the actors. On the same reel with "Getting Into a Scrape."

WHEN SLIPPERY SLIM WENT FOR THE EGGS (Essanay), Jan. 14.—This is one of the best of the Slippery Slim series and keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter. Anyone that owns hens can for the price of admission gain a wonderful lot of information as to how they can induce them to produce eggs by the dozen; of course Mustang Pete and Hiram Clutts helped along some and eggs went up to six dollars a dozen. There is clean, wholesome fun in this offering.

DISTILLED SPIRITS (MinA), Jan. 14.—This is one of the finest exhibitions of trick photography that has been shown upon the screen for many moons. The story starts out with a booze fiend husband taking his wife's wash-money to buy the wherewith to quench his thirst, then he crawls into a barrel and falls asleep and the things that happen to him in his delirium are wild and wonderful. This picture is an out of the ordinary one, and will please any audience in any house.

THE LEGEND OF THE LONE TREE (Vitagraph), Jan. 14.—The picturization of an old Indian legend, with the scenes laid in the middle west, in the lands of the Chippewa and Delaware Indian tribes, before the white men came. Archie R. Lloyd has written a very interesting and romantic story, which Ulysses Davis has produced beautifully. The exterior scenes have been well selected and clearly photographed. Credit is due the cast, which includes Myrtle Gonzalez, Alfred Vosburgh, George Kunkel, Otto Lederer, George Holt and others, for artistic make-ups and clever renditions. This is a splendid Indian offering.

THE INEVITABLE RETRIBUTION (Biograph), Jan. 15.—A peculiar sort of picture, which is not very pleasant to view. It discloses the weakness of a man who is disposed to take advantage of his opportunities to commit an unpardonable crime, but the juggling of fate saves him. The picture is enticing and contains a certain amount of suspense; the finale redeems the morbidity in the first part. An average offering.

A BOOB FOR LUCK (Kalem), Jan. 15.—A comedy in which the characters are made up of rubes, confidence and green goods men, who get mixed up in a peculiar sort of a way. It is funny in spots and highly ridiculous in others. It is greeted with considerable laughter, especially in the ending, where the rubes come out victorious and Jed gets Mary, whom he is just crazy about. Quite a laughable offering.

OUT OF THE STORM (Lubin), Jan. 15.—Adapted from a Munsey Magazine story. Just what the caption has to do with the plot is not quite clear, but, nevertheless, it is an interesting and sensational story. Some little absurdities creep into the action, which are pardonable. John Ince, John Delson and Josephine Longworth are the principals in the cast. A little terrier dog does some great work; jumping off a roof. The scenery and photography are exceptional. This is rather an out of the ordinary production.

THE SNAILBURG VOLUNTEERS (Selig), Jan. 15.—An original comedy that is really funny in some respects and absurd in others. It reminds one of the "before the war" hayfoot and strawfoot militia. It is a farcical comedy and gets quite a few laughs. Two hoboes disperse the militia and secure a good meal.

CHIEFLY CONCERNING MALES (Vitagraph), Jan. 15.—A most enjoyable comedy written by Elsie Bronson and produced by Tefft Johnson, featuring "Sonny Jim," Bobbie Connelly. There is much in this picture that gets over and reminds one of childhood days. Sonny has an ambition to be a real postman and when intrusted with a letter of importance to mail, he deposits it in the oat bin in the barn. Fortunately it is the best place he could have mailed it, as he saves his father from a fraud. The ending is all satisfactory, and Sonny and Toto, his dog, unconsciously makes themselves heroes. An excellent release.

THE HOUSE OF HORROR (Biograph), Jan. 16.—A picture that is filled with many things which are not so awfully pleasant to view. There is no doubt that it contains in its construction much that might be considered a lesson to those who indulge in drink. It is quite melodramatic in places and the ending, while sensational, is satisfactory.

THE BANKER'S DOUBLE (Edison), Jan. 16.—Adapted from the Felix Boyd series, "Below the Dead Line." Featuring Robert Conness as Boyd, the detective. This is another story of Wycoff and his gang, concerning a banker's clerk, who proves to be an accomplice of the gang. Boyd succeeds in recovering the money which has been stolen. A very good detective release.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE SISTERS (Essanay), Jan. 16.—A rather different story from the usual Broncho Billy series, containing considerable sentiment. It concerns two sisters, one a cripple and the other the fiancee of Broncho. An unselfish act causes a transference of love from one sister to the other. It is a moonshine story, and some fine scenery is shown in the mountains, which is clearly photographed. It is quite an enticing number.

THE BROKEN CIRCUIT (Kalem), Jan. 16.—Tenth of the "Hazards of Helen" series. Helen attempts to prevent the robbing of a safe in the telegraph office, of money intrusted to her care. She is overpowered, but suceeds in doing some stunts which are wonderful and result in the capture of the desperadoes. This series is certainly exciting and causes the spectators to sit up and take notice.

MR. STUBB'S PEN (Lubin), Jan. 16.—A man is the recipient of a fountain pen presented to him by friends and his adventures with it are conducive of much comedy. He tries in every way to lose it, but it will come back. Quite a novel comedy. On the same reel with "Spaghetti and Lottery."

SPAGHETTI AND LOTTERY (Lubin), Jan. 16.—On the same reel with "Mr. Stubb's Pen." A comedy more ridiculous than funny, but which gets over for some laughter. The spaghetti throwing is not pleasant to look at, and the chase is rather tame.

ROBERT THORNE FORECLOSES (Selig), Jan. 16.—A story of the south, involving the foreclosure of a mortgage on a Southern home. There is quite a pretty love story concerning a beautiful girl. The creditor falls in love with her and a marriage cancels the debt. The exterior scenes are beautiful and the interiors are true examples of old Southern furnishings. This picture is well acted and wholesome in tone. A good offering.

TO MAKE THE NATION PROSPER (Edison), Jan. 18.—A picture produced to aid the movement for promoting the purchasing of goods made in America. Although this picture contains much that is dramatic in its construction, it is educational to a high degree and illustrates the ideas of Miss Genevive Clark, daughter of Speaker Clark. It is presented on a practical basis with the slogan, "Made in America." The picture is finely made and acted, with Bessie Learn in the leads. This release should appear in every house in the United States.

THE UNDYING FIRE (Biograph), Jan. 18. A picture drama of rather curious construction, mixing up the governor of the state, his wife and a convict, her former fiancee, in a series of complications that contain much tenseness and suspense. There are some fine scenes pertaining, especially interiors. Augusta Anderson is splendid as the governor's wife and she is ably supported by Herbert Barrington and Charles H. Mailes. A finely produced picture drama.

SWEEDIE AND HER DOG (Essanay), Jan. 18.—A comedy that is hardly up to the standard of the prior Sweedie releases. It contains some things which are rather absurd, such as giving her dog a bath in the dish pan and drying him with the table napkins. There is the usual cleaning out of the police force and dog catchers. It gains some laughs.

PATSY BOLIVAR SERIES, NO. 4, PATSY'S VACATION (Lubin), Jan. 18.—Written by Clay M. Greene and produced by Percy Winter, with Clarence J. Elmer as Patsy, who becomes a victim of his friend Sykesy (Edwin De Wolff) and gets into all sorts of trouble at the college, is fired out and back to the farm again for his; where he gets into more trouble and concludes to shift for himself. There is quite a lot of good comedy in this release.

THE FATES AND FLORA FOURFLUSH (A Race for Life) (Vitagraph), Jan. 18.—Part three of the Ten-billion Dollar Vitagraph Mystery serial. This travesty is a wonder and makes a decided hit with the audience. It is a continuation of the "Treasure Temple of Bhosh," and shows how the lovers escape from the "alligator pit." A description of this offering is almost impossible. One must see the make-ups and acting to fully appreciate it. Wally Van is doing himself proud in the direction of this series. Built for laughing purposes only.

Licensed Specials

A MIX-UP IN DRESS SUIT CASES (Vitagraph), Jan. 12.—A feature comedy in two parts, written by Edward J. Montagne and produced by Lee Beggs, who plays one of the leading parts. Billy Quirk is featured, also in the cast are Florence Natol, Eulalie Jensen, Frank Currier, Helen Relyea and others. The theme is not new but it is made up of complications, which are original and it is not only entertaining but extraordinary laughable throughout the two reels. This is a fine comedy offering in every respect.

THE THIRD ACT (Biograph), Jan. 12.—A strong two-part dramatic picture of the stage, in which there is much emotional work. In the first part it shows how an actor neglects his wife and children, which results eventually in the death of his baby and insanity of his wife. The little daughter who is left, fifteen years later brings the neglectful father to a realization of his past shortcomings. It is strongly acted and holds close attention. It is worth viewing.

THE STOLEN RUBY (Kalem), Jan. 13.—This two-part picture play has been reviewed at length by Hanford C. Judson, in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 57, issue of Jan. 2, 1915.

WHEN HONOR WAKES (Lubin), Jan. 13.—A special two-part drama which is original in conception, with its scenes located at San Francisco during the earthquake. There are psychological moments, particularly in the first reel, and the story throughout is beautiful. It has a military flavor and a young lieutenant, who is in disgrace, redeems himself by his heroic work among the refugees. The scenes during the earthquake are very gripping and fine specimens of mechanical construction. It all ends happily This is a strong release that will go in any house.

THE FRIENDSHIP OF LAMOND (Lubin), Jan. 14.—This is a two-reel picture drama of extraordinary merit, taking into consideration the plot, the embellishment of the interior scenes and the excellent acting of the cast, which is confined to a half dozen characters in all. Omri Hawley is the frivolous young wife, who is finally brought to a sense of her shortcomings by the self sacrifice of her husband's best friend. She is ably supported by Earl Metcalf, Herbert Fortier and Kempton Greene. Emmet Campbell Hall is the author. An entertaining picture.

LENA (Edison), Jan. 15.—This two-part picture play has been reviewed at length, by Louis Reeves Harrison, in The Moving Picture World, and can be found on page 1852, issue of Dec. 26, 1914.

DEAR OLD GIRL (Essanay), Jan. 15.—A picture story of college life. A heart touching romance which is beautiful but full of sadness. Francis X. Bushman does some elegant work as the lover, particularly when he is in a demented state, after learning of his sweetheart's death. There are many things in this picture which go straight to the heart and leave a lasting impression. It is finely produced and acted. An exceptional production.

THE SAGE-BRUSH GAL (Vitagraph), Jan. 16.—A Broadway star feature, in three parts, written by Frederick Chapin and produced by Rollin S. Sturgeon, picturized by Doris Schroeder. A strong western drama produced at the Vitagraph theater, New York City, now being released on the regular service. It is a most meritorious production.

THE LEECH (Kalem), Jan. 18.—A two-act dramatic picture of the Alice Joyce series, in which Miss Joyce has the part of a Salvation Army girl. This is a very attractive and interesting offering and she is ably supported by Guy Coombs, Mary Ross, Robert Walker, Delores Decker and others. This is the picture, while during its taking among the Salvation Army workers, Miss Joyce with her tamborine collected quite a sum of money for the Salvationists. It is a fine release.

HIS FIGHTING BLOOD (Selig), Jan. 18.—A two-part story of Kentucky mountaineer life, written by James Oliver Curwood, featuring Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton. Mr. Santschi is also the director. The story has to do with a Kentucky feud and is filled with many thrilling scenes. There is much picturesque scenery shown in a mountainous region, also some taking of cabin interiors. The acting is commendable and the camera man has accomplished his part of the work finely. For a picture of this nature it is very pleasing.

Independent

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS, NO. 2, Jan. 6.—Bomb testing by French engineers, the inauguration of Governor Whitman at Albany, and views of the happenings in the war zone are interesting items of this issue.

ONLY A FATHER'S DAUGHTER (Keystone), Jan. 9.—An eccentric comedy with rube characters of an amusing type, particularly the old man. There are some funny spots all through this; the tent scenes are of a slightly vulgar sort but may be easily cut out.

PATHE'S DAILY NEWS, NO. 3, Jan. 11.—An animated map illustrating Austria's dream, a big French gun bombarding the German position, and views of the towns on the English coast, where the German warships made havoc are all interesting items which appear in Pathe's Daily News, No. 3.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 149 (Universal), Jan. 13.—Scenes of Canadian troops in training, war ravages in Belgium, Secretary Daniels and the Vera Cruz heroes, flood waters in Tucson and others are contained in this number.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 2, Jan. 14.—Among the many interesting items in this number of the Mutual Weekly is a view of the Woolworth building aglow with its 12,000,000 candle power lights, and also the views of the top of New York from its dizzy heights. Interesting scenes on the Shrewsbury River at Red Bank showing the ice yachting, and again at Boston similar scenes have been photographed.

THE CLUBMAN'S WAGER (American), Jan. 15.—An amusing half-reel skit in which a hobo proves that it is possible for a tramp to get a thousand dollar bill changed. He wins the reward offered by the clubman.

PRODUCING A NATION'S PRIDE (American), Jan. 15.—On same reel with above. Instructive and entertaining views of the process by which big guns for battleships are manufactured.

PLEASING UNCLE (Princess), Jan. 15.—Another variation of the old comedy, "Jane," in which the nephew borrows a wife and child to deceive his trusting uncle. In this case a whole bedful of babies adds to the amusement of the story. An old theme well handled.

A FLYER IN SPRING WATER (Komic), Jan. 17.—No. 15 of the "Bill the Office Boy" series with Fay Tincher. There can be no question about the quality of this offering. It is distinctly a good one. The office boy and his pal decide to make some money on peddling "spring" water, fresh from the upstairs tap, to their employers, taking advantage of a complaint made against the city water. To dispel its unpleasant odor the stenographer's perfume bottle is made use of, hence a pretty mix-up of affairs ensues.

MUTUAL MONOGRAPHS, NO. 1, "With Julian Street and Wallace Morgan" (Reliance), Jan 18.—Julian Street and Wallace Morgan, author and illustrator of "Abroad at Home," which appeared serially in Collier's Weekly, are featured in this number. The little burlesque, showing them on a visit to Squeedville, will be best appreciated by those familiar with their descriptive articles. The series promises to be entertaining and different.

ON THE TABLE TOP (Majestic), Jan. 19.—Billy West and W. E Lawrence appear in this number. The story is rather ordinary in character, the chief situation being that in which the reporter finds the imprint of a message revealing the girl's whereabouts on a table top This is fairly entertaining.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF AL BRADY (American), Jan. 20.—From an ordinary story a not uninteresting picture has been developed. Winnifred Greenwood, Ed Coxen, George Field, Josephine Ditt, John Steppling and Edith Borella appear in the cast.

AN INNOCENT BURGLAR (Princess), Jan 22.—In which a monkey, belonging to an Italian organ grinder, enters a window and steals a necklace. The action almost brings disgrace upon the reformed hero Boyd Marshal and Muriel Ostriche are the lovers. The story is slight in plot but quite entertaining.

THE DOG CATCHER'S BRIDE (Thanhouser), Jan. 24.—Riley Chamberlain appears in this comedy number as a newly-married dog catcher He picks up strange canines and loads them in his wagon, even carrying off the entries in a dog show. An amusing conceit with laughable moments.

DEATH OF SIMON LEGREE (L-KO), Jan. 24.—A very good burlesque on "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The characterizations are good and the scenes of the famous old story are brought out in a laughable manner. This is a good offering of the type.

THE CLUE OF THE PORTRAIT (Eclair), Jan. 24.—A western story of about average interest. The hero is a young cattle king who corners the cattle market and ruins the girl's father. Later she comes East and he recognizes one of her paintings, when their love develops. The photography is good and the cast pleasing.

THE MAGIC MIRROR (Joker), Jan. 25. An eccentric number, with Ernest Shield, Betty Schade and Beatrice Van in the cast. The chief interest centers in the trick photography, which keeps the observer guessing. It is an agreeable change from some of the comedies now being shown.

VIEWS OF HOLLAND (Joker), Jan. 25.—An educational on the same reel with above.

ALIAS "MR. SMITH" (Big "U"), Jan. 26.—Murdock MacQuarrie plays the part of a bandit masquerading as a gentleman in this. The truth leaks out during an attempted hold-up and he is made prisoner. The story is not developed very strongly and is of about average interest.

WHEN EDDIE TOOK A BATH (Nestor), Jan. 26.—An Al E. Christie number in which Eddie goes to his friend's home, takes a bath and goes to bed. The wife arrives and later the husband. This is breezy but acceptable and proves entertaining. The photography is good.

A MILE A MINUTE RACE (Nestor), Jan. 26.—An educational subject on the same reel as the foregoing.

HER LESSON (United—Warner—Starlight), Jan. 27.—The picture has a fair situation, but is not in any way out of the ordinary. It is, however, a picture that would interest the average audience.

MERRY MARY'S MARRIAGE (L-KO), Jan. 27.—Several rube characters supply the action in this number. The girl puts her drunken husband in a barrel and the police, thinking he is dead, give chase. This proves fairly amusing.

THE UNMASKING (Big "U"), Jan. 28.—This tells a story of how a young Italian immigrant comes to America, wins fortune and forgets his wife and child. Later they follow and meet him under pathetic circumstances. Sydney Ayres is pleasing as the young Italian. The story is well handled and though somewhat familiar in its general trend, holds the attention.

TREASURE SEEKERS (Sterling), Jan. 28.—In this eccentric comedy number Wm. Wolbert appears as a cobbler. He finds a treasure map in an old shoe and he and his companion dream of exciting experiences among cannibals. This is well-pictured, but only fairly successful from a humorous standpoint.

JED'S LITTLE ELOPEMENT (Nestor), Jan. 29.—Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Victoria Forde appear in this comedy. Eddie owns the only auto in town and is popular with the grocer's daughter. They elope in spite of much opposition. This is quite pleasing, though not very new.

HOW SHE FOOLED AUNTY (Victor), Jan. 29.—A comedy number with Matt Moore and Irene Hunt in the leads. The latter impersonates a boy to fool her aunt. She goes bathing with the man. The situations are of a spicy turn, though not offensive. The plot is moderately strong.

THE FAMINE (Kaybee), Jan. 29.—A picturesque one-reel offering, enacted entirely by a Japanese cast. Tsuri Aoki is the daughter of a farmer whose rice crop fails. The action which centers about her is tragic. The story is handled artistically and contains some exquisite settings.

THE BOTTOMLESS PIT (Kaybee), Jan. 29.—This pictures the seamy side of life. Shorty Hamilton appears as the friend of a girl whose mother cannot pay the rent. He robs the landlord and later is caught. This gives a good idea of the way the under dog feels when oppressed by those above him; it makes a fairly strong offering.

HE FELL IN LOVE WITH HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW (Joker), Jan. 30.—A low comedy number, with an unusually good idea in it for this type of film. The married man with the lazy, shiftless wife, reverses the usual custom and forms a liking for his energetic mother-in-law. The photography is good.

THE CRIME OF THOUGHT (Powers), Jan. 30.—This story is written by Sherman Bainbridge, who also appears in the cast. Wm. Clifford plays the part of the lover, Marie Wolcamp being the girl. He becomes jealous of Bainbridge and, after reading a crime story in a newspaper, has a vivid dream of himself as a criminal. He awakens to find that Bainbridge is the girl's brother. This is not new in plot, but well-constructed and entertaining. The photography is good.

A DAY ON THE FARM WITH THE BOY SCOUTS (Pathe), Feb. 18.—An interesting demonstration of how the English boy scouts enjoy themselves at work on their farm, tending the various kinds of domestic animals, including the honey bee.

MISSIONS OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA (Pathe), Feb. 18.——On the same reel with the foregoing, this film gives an excellent idea of the beauties of Southern California with its old missions, grottoes, etc.

Independent Specials

THE MASTER KEY (Universal Special), Jan. 11.—Ninth episode. This two-reel number is about of average interest. The first reel is given up to introducing a new character, an English gentleman named Sir John Faversham, who meets Ruth and Dore. Later in the instalment Wilkerson and his friends and Dore and Ruth and Kane all return to the mine. Wilkerson has hired a band of Mexican outlaws to fight for possession of the property and there is a well-staged battle between the rival factions. Ruth saves Dore's life by wounding Wilkerson, who falls off a trestle and rolls down into a gully.

ONE FLIGHT UP (Reliance), Jan. 16.—A thrilling two-reel production, in which Irene Hunt plays the feminine lead, with Ralph Lewis playing opposite. The production treats of how a young newspaper woman tracks a group of burglars to their headquarters, is held by them, administers an overdose of morphine to a wounded member of the gang, in the absence of the others, cleverly arranges a raid of the place, and gets a big newspaper story in the bargain.

REFINING FIRES (American), Jan. 18.—A two-reel production in which Harry von Meter, Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson and Charlotte Burton play the principal roles. The development of the story is pleasing, the action smooth, the sets deep and artistic, and the direction of the picture is in every instance commendable. Perhaps its one drawback is to be found in the quality of its sub-titles and inserts.

GRAFT VERSUS LOVE (Thanhouser), Jan. 19.—Flo La Badie appears as the heroine of this two-reel drama. She suspects the executor of her father's will and calls upon her lover for aid. The executor has Jack placed in an asylum. These first scenes are quite mystifying. The girl then enters the employ of the executor as stenographer and learns of her lover's whereabouts. She brings about his release by a personal visit to the asylum. There is a touch of the sensational in this plot and certain portions of it are unconvincing, but it has considerable suspense and holds the attention throughout.

THE MAN WITH THE BLACK VAN DYKE (Reliance), Jan. 20.—This second instalment of Runaway June, in two reels, shows June riding down Fifth avenue, pursued by Gilbert Blye. She escapes and goes to the Bletherings, a young married couple she knows. Ned, her husband, finally traces her to the Bletherings, but June again evades him because of her quixotic antagonism to being dependent upon him for support. Blye and a friend appear in numerous scenes taken at Rector's, where the former's wife comes and creates a scene because he is with another woman. The story does not progress very far in this instalment, but the interest is maintained.

THE TEMPTATION OF EDWIN SWAYNE (Rex), Jan. 24.—This three-reel number contains an intermingling of strength and weakness. It holds the attention quite firmly and has a well-knit story; its chief fault is that it deals with a low level of life and contains much unpleasantness. A pretty country girl is taken into a private gambling house by her uncle, to act as a drawing card. Swayne abandons his mistress and marries the girl. The mistress conspires to have Swayne murdered and then kills herself. The widowed girl then marries her young lover. The characterizations are strong and the photography good, but the story has little to commend in it.

GENTLEMEN CROOKS AND THE LADY (Zudora), Jan. 25.—Tenth episode. This two reel instalment contains a plot but the scenes are very confusing and the continuity is broken repeatedly. Zudora finds a trunkful of family heirlooms with a letter left by her father concerning some diamond mines. Madame Du Val and Captain Radcliffe join forces in an effort to rob her of her possessions. Many of the scenes are on a liner at sea. The number is not as good as some of the early ones.

HIS GUARDIAN ANGEL (Victor), Jan. 25.—A two-reel offering, with Mary Fuller, Charles Ogle and others in the cast. The story is one of jealousy. Eva intercepts the flowers and note of proposal intended for Mary. By so doing she diverts Tom's love to herself. They are married and live unhappily. Visions of Mary come to Tom at critical moments through the years and when his wife is killed by an auto he goes to her. The story is well constructed, though not exceptional in incident. The photography is good.

THE MADCAP QUEEN OF GREDSHOFFEN (Gold Seal), Jan. 26.—A two-reel number, with Grace Cunard and Francis Ford in the leads. The story is one of light, romantic interest. The girl princess becomes queen on the death of her father. Ford plays an American traveler who saves the throne for Elaine after some exciting incidents. The court scenes contain a mixture of costuming, but the settings are all attractive and the story entertaining. Grace Cunard is at her best in this sort of productions. The photography is good.

THE GUNFIGHTER (Broncho), Jan. 27.—A two-reel western number, with Walter Edwards and Leona Hutton in the cast. He is a gunman of the plains. He brutally makes the wife leave their baby on the sands, where it is found by Lawson and his wife. The gunman is hired to kill Lawson, but the mother of the child ties his gun so Lawson will kill him. The death of the gunfighter is shown in a dramatic way. The story has much brutality in it, the chief sympathy being with the mother of the child in her struggle to give it a home.

CANCELLED (Eclair), Jan. 27.—A two-reel number. Two boys, one a weakling and the other a bully, grow up and become a lawyer and a bandit respectively. The lawyer falls into the bandit's hands and is rescued through the aid of a prying postmistress, while the desperadoes are trying to collect ransom. The action in this is very confusing in places, which robs the story of suspense. The settings are pleasing, and this could have been considerably strengthened by a rearrangement of some of the scenes.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN (Rex), Jan. 28.—A two-reel story of the Northwest, following somewhat in the style of previous offerings along this line. The girl marries a gambler and later falls in love with a young officer. The gambler, who has his good points, decides to make the supreme sacrifice by giving his wife to the other, but at the last moment her love returns to him. Pauline Bush and Wm. Dowlin play the leads in this. The story has numerous tense moments and is well photographed throughout.

THROUGH THE MURK (Domino), Jan. 28.—An unusually appealing two-reel Western number, with some genuine characterization in it. The drunken old hag of a mother tries to trade her slovenly daughter off for a keg of whiskey, but the barkeeper says the "gal ain't wuth it." Then along comes Missouri Joe, an equally slovenly character, who falls in love with the girl. The dawn of the divine passion has a regenerating influence on the girl and Joe, and when the barkeeper finally decides to make the exchange proposed by the mother, the lover saves her for himself. This deals with a low type of characters, but is warm with human sympathy and makes a powerful appeal to the observer.

THE MILLIONAIRE ENGINEER (Imp), Jan. 29.—A two-reel number, with King Baggot in the leading part. He plays the part of an engineer who has been made president of his road. The strike scenes are well handled and the photography is pleasing throughout. The story itself is a little obvious in plot. During a forest fire the president and his sweetheart run a train through the flames to save some children in a burning building.

THE MYSTERY WOMAN (Bison), Jan. 30.—A western two-reel story, quite well constructed and unique in development. The girl heroine is first discovered wandering across the hills, half demented. Cleo Madison makes this part rather attractive in spite of its somewhat depressing nature. The villain pays attention to her and tries to force her into a marriage. He is almost successful in this, but the hero turns up and it develops that the latter is already her husband. The girl has a fall and her mental powers are restored, and the missing parts of the tale are flashed on the screen as visions that come to her. The photography is good and the cast pleasing.

THE BOMB THROWER (Pathe), Jan. —.—Edwin August is seen to advantage as the "bomb thrower." The role of the Italian organ grinder, who is converted into a bomb thrower by a band of black hands who lead him to believe that his wife has been poisoned by the District Attorney under pretence of friendship, fits this clever actor as though it had been specially written for him. The story is not out of the ordinary, but there is evidence of care in construction and direction. The picture is in three reels.

THE CALL OF A CHILD (Pathe), Jan. —.—An artistic but morbid production in two reels. Asta Mielsen is seen in the role of the mother of the child. The child of the beautifully housed, but neglected, mother dies; and through grief at the unhappy incident, the mind of the mother wanders, and at last, overcome by the thought of her little one sleeping out under the cold snow, she herself walks out in her night clothes, bares her breast to the storm and sinks dying amid the snow.

ALL LIT UP AT INCEVILLE.

A new lighting system that will permit of perfect photography on dark days has just been installed at Inceville, where plays are made for use in the Mutual program. It embraces one hundred immense lamps and reflectors, each operated by electricity, and is declared to be one of the most important innovations introduced into the Ince studios in some time. Inceville is also fortunate in possessing its own power plant.

BLANCHE SWEET IN "THE WARRENS OF VIRGINIA."

The first Lasky-Belasco release with Blanche Sweet as the star, "The Warrens of Virginia," is to be given to the public on February 15. For the production of this picturization of Wm. C. DeMille's famous Civil War drama, which ran for a year in New York at the Belasco Theater, the Lasky firm engaged a veritable army. It is said that the battlefield scenes eclipse in realism and in fidelity to detail anything of the sort ever attempted before the moving picture camera.

"The Warrens of Virginia," however, is not a "war picture" in the ordinary sense, but proceeds along sound dramatic lines with the tragic separation of two young lovers as the romantic motive. The girl is Southern in every fibre —the daughter of a gallant Confederate general—and the man is just as faithful in his adherence to Northern principles.

Quite apart from the martial scenes, the plot is complete and absorbing. The hero, by the orders of his superiors, is obliged to take advantage of his welcome, during the final stages of the conflict, into the Warren household to bring about, by a feat of strategy, a last and overwhelming disaster to the Southern arms. In spite of her fidelity to the Southern cause, the girl strives to rescue her Northern lover when it appears that he must be court martialed and condemned to death; but he is too proud to accept his life at her hands under such conditions. In the end he is saved by the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, which is very graphically shown on the screen.

Scene from "The Warrens of Virginia" (Lasky).

Miss Sweet assumes the role of the Southern girl, Agatha Warren, and the part of the Northern lover is played by House Peters.

Ross Sues Pathe Freres

Injured by Fall from Unruly Horse, Actor Demands $15,000 Damages.

THE life of a moving picture actor is not all love and roses, according to James B. Ross. His experiences, as related in a suit filed in the United States District Court, show that the life of a film star has its ups and downs.

In August, 1912, the actor avers, he was playing leading roles in photoplays portraying Western life under a contract with Pathe Freres.

The actor states in his complaint that he was assigned to fill the role of dashing rider, but, instead of being furnished with a nice tractable horse, he alleges that he was supplied with a vicious, unruly animal, whose chief delight was in bucking, running and cavorting. No sooner had he mounted his fiery steed when he was off on tempestuous ride, at the finish of which the actor says he has a faint recollection of finding himself lying on the ground in a heap.

As the result of his fall he alleges that he suffered a dislocation of his right shoulder, besides minor bruises and injuries which required the services of a surgeon and time to remedy; that he was incapacitated from filling the role of a hero for many long months and lost a tidy sum which he might otherwise have earned.

Damages amounting to $15,000 are asked for in the suit, in addition to the costs of the litigation. Samuel H. Wandell represents the complainant.

Ruth Shepley

RUTH SHEPLEY, one of the most beautiful women on the American stage, has been engaged by the World Film Corporation to appear opposite Robert Warwick in the film version of the great Paul Armstrong success, "Alias Jimmy Valentine." This feature will be released on the World Film schedule February 22. From all indications it will be one of the most striking successes on the very popular schedule.

Ruth Shepley.

Miss Shepley's experience on the stage has been of comparatively recent history. She made her debut under the management of William A. Brady, in Rupert Hughes' comedy, "All for a Girl," in which Douglas Fairbanks was featured. When that play was withdrawn, because Mr. Fairbanks was wanted for the Tom Wise play, "A Gentleman from Mississippi," Miss Shepley was secured for the part of Hope Langdon, the Senator's daughter. Then she appeared in other Brady plays and has had the good fortune to play opposite Mr. Fairbanks in "A Gentleman of Leisure." When Frederick Arnold Kummer's comedy, "The Brute," was produced with Ernest Glendenning in the title role, Miss Shepley was seen in the leading female part. Last year Miss Shepley had the major female role in the Selwyn comedy, "Nearly Married," in which Bruce MacRae was featured. That was her first appearance under the Cohan and Harris management. She is now playing in "It Pays to Advertise," the very successful farce comedy that Cohan and Harris are presenting at the Cohan Theater.

Miss Shepley is making her debut before the camera in 'Alias Jimmy Valentine," and Mr. Warwick is most enthusiastic regarding her work.

SEIGMANN'S "FAREWELL DINNER."

At the Griffith-Mutual studios in Los Angeles George Seigmann has made and released in the Mutual program a two-reel film adaptation of a story by George Baltwood which appeared originally in Munsey's Magazine. Story and film are both called "The Farewell Dinner," and show what came of a society woman's overweening ambition for her daughter. Billie West and Cora Drew are featured W. E. Lawrence and Howard Gay are also in the cast.

Booming Pennsylvania Convention.

Special Efforts Being Made to Bring Out a Large Attendance of Exhibitors at the Harrisburg Meeting.

THERE is a lot of boosting being done for the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Pennsylvania that is scheduled to be held at Harrisburg on January 26, 27 and 28. Headquarters have been established at the Bolton House, Harrisburg, and arrangements have been made to give the visiting delegations an interesting reception.

James Delves, secretary and treasurer of the Exhibitors' Association, with headquarters at Pittsburg, has sent out a call announcing the arrangement of an interesting program which will provide for discussions on the following subjects:

Design of Sticker Advertising Harrisburg Convention.

Legal censorship of pictures by the state, restrictions on large advertising matter for motion picture theatres, the proposed new building code governing motion picture theatres, the possibility of controlling the length of program for various prices of admission; city, state, and borough taxation; souvenirs, country store and many other little details which are of the greatest importance to all concerned.

Mr. Delves calls attention to the fact that it is up to the exhibitors of Pennsylvania to be at Harrisburg and to use what influence and power they have with the legislature to induce its members to give proper consideration to the picture theatre interests.

J. G. Hansen of Reading, secretary of the Exhibitors League of Pennsylvania, is sending out letters urging picture men to attend the convention. Ten thousand stickers advertising the convention have been distributed by the League while the Association is sending out buttons giving the date and place of meeting.

Great importance is attached to this convention because of the fact that the legislature, which has before it a number of measures affecting picture theatres, is now in session.

Pearce and Neff Get Together.

President and Ex-President of the National League Discuss Their Differences and Agree to Work in Harmony.

FOLLOWING the publication of President Pearce's denial of a conversation with M. A. Neff, attributed to him by an item published in the Morning Telegraph, a conference was arranged between Mr. Neff and Mr. Pearce which was held at the Elk's Club, New York, on Monday, January 18. Others present were M. E. Cory of San Francisco, and representatives of the Moving Picture World and the Motion Picture News. The points of variance between the parties to the controversy were fully and freely discussed and it was disclosed that much of that controversy was based upon misunderstanding and hearsay.

Before the meeting ended an understanding was reached by Mr. Pearce and Mr. Neff that neither would encroach upon the rights of the other in a manner not in keeping with the constitution of the National League and that both would work together for harmony and the best interests of the organization.

The friends of both gentlemen will be pleased to learn that they have got together and it is believed that there will be little further differences between them. The Moving Picure World sincerely hopes that harmony will speedily rule in the ranks of the exhibitors' organization and that the Exhibitors' League will become a power for good in the industry.

WALTER ARTHUR UNDERGOES OPERATION.

Walter Arthur, head camera man of the Vitagraph Company, on Tuesday, January 19, underwent an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Arthur is reported to be progressing finely.

ARRANGING FOR OKLAHOMA CONVENTION.

The Executive Officers of the Oklahoma Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, met at the Lee-Hucking Hotel, Oklahoma City, Jan. 6, pursuant to a call issued by the president, to arrange for the next annual meeting which takes places at Oklahoma City, February 12, one day only. It is planned to make this meeting a "big get together" affair, for everyone engaged in the theatrical business in Oklahoma, whether they are members of the State League or not. All members of the State League in good standing will be given a free ticket to the banquet, which takes place at 6:30 P. M. The Entertainment Committee have already arranged an excellent program of music, speakers and entertainers following the banquet. The meeting will be called to order at 10 A. M. All exhibitors are welcome. If you are coming, drop a card to B. H. Powell, Chairman Entertainment Committee, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, who will make hotel reservations for those requiring them.

L. W. BROPHY, Secretary.

FREDERICK LEWIS WITH CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION.

After nine years with E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, playing important parts in Shakespearian classics and earning an enviable reputation as one of the best of the younger interpreters of the Elizabethan drama, Frederick Lewis has taken the leap to motion pictures and will be Beatriz Michelena's leading man in the California Motion Picture Corporation's big company.

UNIVERSAL LOBBY DISPLAY FIRST PRIZE.

The Universal received in all about 400 photographs of lobbies of theatres using the Universal program. About 150 of these were reproduced in the Universal Weekly. The judges of the contest then made their choice from the selected 150.

After several protracted meetings the judges in the Lobby Display Contest have awarded the prizes as follows: First prize, $10, Rex theater, Spokane, Wash.; second, $5, Acme theater, Sacramento, Cal.; third, $5, Alcazar theater, Baltimore, Md.; fourth, $3, American Movies, New York City; fifth, $2, Dream theater, Columbus, Ga.

Rex Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The committee consisted of Epes W. Sargeant of the Moving Picture World; P. D. Cochrane, Poster Department, Universal Film Manufacturing Co.. and Ben Wells, of the Morgan Lithograph Co.

"The Avalanche"

Life Photo Film Corporation to Present Attractive Five-Reel Production Based on a Domestic Tangle.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

BECAUSE it has been staged with fine discrimination, because it has been enacted by players who know their business, and because there is much more than a semblance of the artistic in every effort made throughout the film, whether in a dramatic or photographic sense, "The Avalanche," written by Robert Hilliard and W. A. Tremayne, in its filmed state will appeal with more than the ordinary force to the taste of a fastidious public.

Less praise must be given to the story, however, than to the action of the play, for the theme is not of an altogether healthy consistency, and situations frequently present themselves which are somewhat forced. And again there appear other situations of unusual force, which form a thoroughly natural sequence to what has gone before.

Scene from "The Avalanche" (Life Photo).

The Life Photo Film Corporation has chosen wisely in selecting its cast of players, and it is seldom that such a fine assortment of types is seen together in one picture. This latter is particularly noticeable in the Stock Exchange scenes, where "Avalanche" stock has its fall, and later its triumphal rise, and in which said types have not spared their vitality in making the occasions tremendously realistic.

Catherine Countiss has taken the role of the detestable Mrs. Vaughn, of which she has given an unusually fine portrayal. Among the many scenes in which her dramatic instinct triumphs is that where at the reception in the Vaughn home during which she makes an attempt to recover the love of John Grey, her former lover; her husband, the unhappy witness of his wife's disgraceful actions, drops over dead from heart failure, brought on by the shock, the joy of again being free eclipses the primal instinct of horror that at first spreads its pall over the face of the woman.

William Tooker as John Grey has given an excellent illustration of the average man of brains and passion, strength and weakness, with a final power of reckoning on a solid basic principle.

Others of the cast to whom much credit is due are Violet Mersereau, Sue Balfour, Edward Roseman, Miss French, Vivian Tobin and Fraunie Fraunholz.

No expense has been spared to make the production one of real merit. Depth, and exquisite taste in arrangement, are noticeable in the settings of the picture. Its people are well costumed; and, should space afford it, many scenes of especially fine photographic quality could be singled out for special comment.

The production has been made under the direction of Will S. Davis, upon whose good judgment much of the interest of the picture depends.

VIVIAN RICH IN "THE LAW OF THE WILD."

"The Law of the Wild," a Western story released in the Mutual program by the American Company, shows Vivian Rich in a "woodsy" type, a role most suitable to her appealing nature. She appears as Jennie, the wife of good-for-nothing Pete. Jack Richardson plays Pete. As Storm, the proprietor whose selfish love for Jennie is illuminated by the darkness of Baker's passion, Harry von Meter is well cast, and as Baker, Reaves Eason does excellent acting, too.

Harry Mestayer

HARRY MESTAYER, who is playing the lead of the secretary in "On Trial," at Cohan's Grand Opera House, Chicago, completed his baptism as a picture star about three days prior to his opening in Chicago. Mestayer was engaged by George Kleine to perpetuate in celluloid his famous rendition of the thief in that funniest of farces, "Stop Thief."

Harry Mestayer.

Mr. Mestayer is delighted with his experience, and while he doesn't contemplate any cessation of his active and successful stage career, he does hope and expects to be seen in a number of other George Kleine films this year.

"It did seem funny to be going through those familiar scenes for the 'movie' camera," says Mr. Mestayer, "and I think Miss Mary Ryan found the experience quite as delightful and quite as odd. You know it seemed like one long, constant rehearsal without the audience and the music. Miss Ryan and I had played those familiar parts together so long that we naturally fell into the old 'lines' and frequently 'crabbed' a scene by getting it about twice as long as it should have been. Miss Ryan and I would hardly get fairly started when Director Fitzmaurice would shout, 'Enough!'—no holding a situation or waiting for the other's 'cue' in the good old-fashioned way.

"But I have learned that the picture-actor works, and works with a vengeance. There is one scene in which I go into a saloon and order a glass of beer while I wait for Miss Ryan to come in and help me frame the hold-up job. That scene was taken at least eight times with always something showing up that didn't please Fitzmaurice. Each time I would get seated, the camera would start and a waiter enter with a glass of beer. In the spirit of my part I was compelled to toss that beer off in a single swallow. Now, if you think it easy to toss off eight glasses of beer in that many minutes, well, just try it! I was amazed when the film was projected to see myself moving about and talking with Miss Ryan just as if I had known what I was doing all the time. But I guess I could go through 'Stop Thief' sound asleep.

"Another odd experience was watching myself in the picture after the film was made. Here was a brand new Harry Mestayer. No mirror shows you your true self like a picture film. At least that's what they told me, and I hope it's true."

Carl Laemmle and Isadore Bernstein Reviewing Mounted Police at Universal City.

"A Fool There Was"

Box Office Attraction Company Presents Six-Reel Version of Kipling's Immortal Poem.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE ball that Kipling set rolling in his immortal poem, known as "The Vampire," hit here and there on the high spots, and was perused more or less by the thinking public. The stage version by Porter Emerson Browne, which served for several seasons as a starring vehicle for Robert Hilliard, trickled into a few more crevices of the great human machine. It remains, however, for the film version to penetrate with the baldness of its nauseating truths the depths of the human tide where the language of a poetic oration is non-understandable.

"A Fool There Was," as presented by William Fox, hits

Scene from "A Fool There Was" (Box Office).

its mark squarely. The first exhibition of this splendid production for the benefit of representatives of the press, and a few other fortunate ones, was aided largely in its effect by the good offices of Mr. Rothapfel of the Strand Theater, where the exhibition was given at 10 a. m. on Tuesday. Following the well-applauded rendering of a medley of national airs by the Strand orchestra, the Kipling poem was given a fine oral interpretation, presumably by Edouard Jose, who appears as the "Fool" in the pictureplay. And then the ghastly theme following in the wake of a ghastly blue glare from the footlights, which aided largely in preparing the mind to receive it, started on its way through the six splendid reels of its development accompanied by appropriate music from the Strand orchestra.

Frank Powell has directed the picture, the scenario of which was prepared by Roy L. McCardell. The "Vampire" has been given an inimitable interpretation by Theda Bara, leading woman at the Theater Antoine, Paris. Little Runa Hodges, as the child of the "Fool," brings a wealth of childish sunlight into a production which, but for the interpolation of a few beautiful and realistic bits of home life, reeks with the foulness, the sorrow, and the horrible consequences of the life wasted in the toils of a human vampire.

The degeneration of the man, or the "fool," as Kipling has chosen to call him, as interpreted by Edouard Jose, formerly leading man with Sara Bernhardt, leaves little, if anything, to be desired; and at the end of the fifth reel he has reached the fearful climax in his career where he discovers at last that "she never knew why, and did not understand." Here his exploitation of the dramatic art is perhaps more complete than at any other point of the play.

Others of the cast who have done splendid work are Clifford Bruce, Victor Benoit, May Allison and Mabel Fremyear.

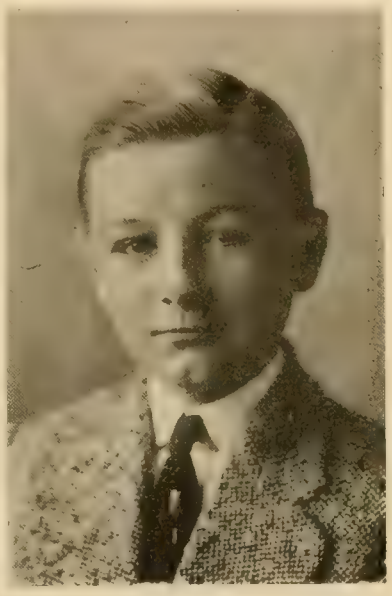
There are moments in the first and second reels when there seems to be some little tendency toward padding; but even this as a possible fault in the production is altogether a matter of opinion; and it is even possible that some suspense and a better understanding of the main theme are created thereby.

There is also noticeable, beside the fine photographic results achieved, a marvelous attention to the smallest human detail, all of which tends toward the realism of the picture. And again perhaps what strikes one most is the splendid contrast drawn between the two walks of life.

The production is a successful artistic effort in every respect. True, there has been made no attempt to get under cover; moral truths have been given in all their nudity, and "sin" has been presented in its most revolting aspect.

Paul Willis

IN THE screen children's gallery there are several divisions. In what is probably the first division there are little tots with but few words and lesser actions. Then come the boys and girls whose ages are from about 4 to 9 or 10. In the more professional class of children who do emotional acting are those in the early 'teens. Little Paul Willis belongs in this segregation, and as a screen artist he is one of the few who are destined to become stars. This is not an idle rumor, a statement on a flimsy foundation, but a stern conclusion drawn from a unanimous vote of several hundred fans who have written to this lad.



Paul Willis.

"Little Kaintuck," and "Pore Folks Boy," two Vitagraph releases featuring Paul, are causing letters to still pour in to the beach home of this boy. His mother is in receipt of a letter from an unknown admirer in the Middle West who says: "I cannot refrain from writing to you in regard to the wonderful work and talent of your son—I have never seen such understanding and characterization for a small child. In 'Pore Folks Boy' he stands alone, and he carries you with him to such an extent that one is ready to hiss the villain off the stage if it were possible. 'Little Kaintuck' brought the tears to my eyes," etc., etc.

Paul is a bright boy of but thirteen years, although he looks sixteen, and he is still very much a child. He was born in Chicago on the ninth of April in 1901. In his second year he was taken sick and was later brought out to Arizona, where the great outdoors and plenty of sun and air brought him out into a husky youngster. After about nine years of the desert, the family, father, mother and son, came all the way west, locating at the Cooper apartments in Ocean Park. Now, two years have passed, and a year and a half of that period Paul has worked for the screen.

His first appearance in the films was with Ruth Roland at the Kalem studio. He worked little boy parts and alternated between the Vitagraph and the Kalem studios until Robert Thornby, child director, discovered him, and gave him the star part in "Little Kaintuck," and from that time Paul has appeared in leading and title roles. He will be remembered in "Johanna the Barbarian," another Vitagraph release.

During the summer this young man danced at some of the biggest social balls and affairs, doing the latest steps and trots. He was the feature at the Charity Ball in the Alexandria Hotel in Los Angeles, and also at the Morosco Theater on benefit night.

Since joining the Mutual studio in Hollywood he has been in "The Milk Fed Boy," "The Old Maid in the Garret," and several other later releases. Paul will hereafter be seen in many films put out by this big concern and his many friends and admirers will be glad to know where to look for the boy of "Little Kaintuck" fame.

REGENT ONE-REEL COMEDIES.

The Regent Film Mfg. Co., of which Irene Tams is the star and S. L. Warner the producer, is making one-reel comedies in the Centaur Studio at Bayonne. The Tams-Warner pictures are scheduled for release on the United Program.

"Queen Margaret"

Pathe Freres Releasing Splendid Picturization in Five Parts, of the Dumas Novel, "Margaret de Valois."

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IN the filming of a brief period in the history of the persecution of the Huguenots, according to the impression of the times fashioned by the pen of the great novelist, Alexandre Dumas, the Pathe Freres have lost no opportunity in making the production a good one. Its historic value is enhanced by the photographing of many of its scenes on the exact locations where incidents of the story of the troubulous times of the Inquisition have actually taken place.

An added charm of the production lies in the fact that it has been hand colored. And perhaps one is glad of this more especially in the out-of-door scenes; for instance, the stag hunt which has been interpolated to emphasize the devotion of King Charles IX to out door sports, and to make more lucid the reason of his undying gratitude to Henry of Navarre, whose brave act prevented the king's being gored to death by an infuriated stag, and which forms one of the main pillars of the story. This latter scene, and the chase across country of stags, hounds, horses and men is, as before said, especially effective in colors.

Scene from "Queen Margaret" (Pathe)

The character of the cruel queen mother, Catherine de Medici, has been splendidly portrayed by Madame Grumbach, while Leontine Massart wins favor in the sympathetic role of Queen Margaret. Also fine impersonations have been given of Cocomas and La Mole, the adventurous characters, who in their devotion to widely divergent causes, become friends through strife, companions in misery, and lose their heads on the same block, by the hand of the same executioner, and within a few seconds of one another.

The production is necessarily spectacular. The scenes following the order of the king for the massacre of the Huguenots are splendid samples of composition and realism. There are deep and effective sets true to the period, and there is present throughout the picture that atmosphere of romance and nervous tension which marked this era of uncertain human existence.

To the American audience the dramatic action of the picture, which is distinctly French in style, may appeal as somewhat exaggerated or conventional; but in criticism of this point it must be remembered that it is the French character and mannerisms that the players are seeking to portray, and that of a period distant several centuries from our present day conditions.

The picture classes as a large and splendid feature production upon which expense has not been spared, which has value not alone from the entertainment standpoint, but as an educational exploitation. It is a beautiful production, and one which reflects great praise on its makers.

McLAREN OPENS THE COLONIAL.

W. S. McLaren opened the Colonial Theater at 1420 East Main street, Jackson, Mich., on January 11. The house played to heavy business on the opening night, and many were unable to gain admission. It is one of the two houses in that city which gets 10 cents admission. A Baird moving picture machine is a part of the equipment, and the pictures are projected upon a Master Gold screen which is manufactured by the Masterlite Company of Detroit, Mich.

Billy Jacobs

"MY NAME'S Paul Jacobs, but I'm Billy Jacobs in pitchers." That is what three-year-old Paul will tell you if you ask him, and if he is in a fairly happy mood he will say "n-da you wanna see me play dead?" If you do you will say yes and soon after Billy will suddenly be stricken with heart failure or be shot by an "Injun," and fall heavily but cleverly to the floor, and no amount of questions or talk will bring him to his senses. For five minutes he will lie there, never a quiver showing that he is alive. A good and clever actor is Billy Jacobs.

Billy Jacobs.

This pocket edition of a famous leading man is but a little over four years old, but he passes for three all the time. He is small and even the clerks in the stores take him for a two-year-old. Little Billy was born in Idaho, near the border, in Laclede, on the last day of July, 1910. The first seven months of his little life were spent there when he and his mother and father went south, and ever since 1911 Billy Jacobs has been a manly little citizen of Los Angeles.

His advent in pictures was gradual. In the early part of 1913 he made his first appearance in Keystone films. He lives next door to that studio. One sunny day Pathe Lehrman was doing a picture out in the street near the plant, and he needed a child. There was Billy, playing happily in his front yard. On the corner was an ice cream vender. A nickel bought a cone, the cone bought Billy, and ever since that blessed day it has taken many bribes of coaxers of ice cream cones to get Billy to do his picture acting.

Then followed a score of months of tedious work for the directors who handled this miniature star. Lehrman even used to stand on his head to get a desired laugh out of the sober little man. Faces and funny gestures fell shy with Billy's laugh nerves, but when Pathe stood on his head Billy laughed, but Pathe laughed last— in the projection room where he would chuckle at the kid's little screen smile. Gradually people began to look for the kid films, and to this day the name of Billy Jacobs is always linked with the foremost kiddie pictures by fans and exhibitors throughout the country. It was nearly a whole year that perfectly good film had to be wasted on Billy, for he would insist that the camera be cranked while he rehearsed. More footage was lost on Billy that would be thrown out of the average company doing a single reel.

Another few months of hard work and Billy was quite an actor, even local papers devoting considerable space to "Billy Jacobs, actor, twenty-nine months old" when he was that age. Billy has worked under several good directors, his last one being Robert Thornby, at the Sterling-Universal studios in Hollywood. Thornby has spent more time in a day with his "kid company" than the average directors spend with their companies in a week, in actual hard work. One paper spoke of Billy as "the most wonderful child actor, and from the moment he flings his irresistible smile across the screen until he winks his eye in a mimic imitation on his father, he is just the best little scream ever—this little chap in his lovable characteristic child mannerisms, etc."

At the present time Billy is not at work, or play, for he likes the work as if it were play, because his company has ceased production, and all the actors have gone. The Sterling brand still exists, but there are no releases, at least for a few weeks. Billy likes to direct. Sometimes his director will have to stop and let him put on a scene or two before the real scene can be made, so interested is Billy in the pictures. To describe Billy's screen personality is a difficult task, besides everyone who knows Billy on the screen is fully aware of his ability, personality, and loveableness, if it can be called that—so this is but a sober statement of the famous little child actor's history. For his story of today, and his acting, read his chubby face on the screen.

"It's No Laughing Matter"

A Story of Old Home Folk Told in a Captivating Manner by Bosworth Players.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THERE can never be an oversupply of such pictures as these. "It's No Laughing Matter" has an abundance of clean kindly humor and a wealth of wholesome pathos. It is refreshingly free from the conventional b'gosh melodrama, though it is reminiscent of Denman Thompson and Richard Golden when those two artists were in the heyday of their careers.

Maclyn Arbuckle is a most infectious radiator of sunshine and laughter. In this play he is the village postmaster, the village poet and the central figure in a circle of admiring cronies. You don't have to travel very far either on the Jersey side, or "up-state," to find the types that in this play gather about the general store swapping stories and watching the business of the post office, the latter being located in the rear of the general store. The village poet is a sort of inglorious Browning, for he sees mostly the good in life and he is always ready with a laugh and a joke. Maclyn Arbuckle brings the sublime philosophy of Browning down to the comprehension of the simplest understanding and converts the lofty teachings of "Pippa Passes" into the more current coinage of homely every-day wisdom and common sense. The direction of Lois Weber has never achieved a more creditable result; the proportion of fun and heart interest is an ideal one, the grouping and the acting of the types is very clever work and the settings contribute to the charming atmosphere of reality.

Scene from "It's No Laughing Matter" (Bosworth)

While others may go in search of new melodramatic possibilities or rather improbabilities, Lois Weber has found a gold mine of screen material right at our very doors, where it has lain despised or ignored. The stage and the printed page have not neglected the rustic life and the rustic drama and we are glad that the screen has now followed this old lane and in following improved it.

The scenes of this play may have been taken from the village life of New England or from the Middle West or from any typically American part of the country. Page after page is unrolled of the "simple annals of the poor." We smile and laugh most of the time while we watch the picture, but the touch of pathos is by no means wanting. No maiden is seduced, no "cheeild" is carried through the snowstorm, no papers are secreted in the old mill, but on the contrary everything is real, genuine and true to nature in even the minutest detail. Instead of being hissed off the stage or turned over to the grim minions of the law, sporting large tin stars, the villain is told that he ought to be ashamed of himself and take care of his wife and baby. Instead of gloating or defying, the villain sensibly takes the advice of "Hiram Judd" and promises to behave, giving an immediate example of his reformation by holding and carrying the baby. Poor good old Hi has a passion for poetry, greatly to the disgust of his wife, who is inclined to scold and take a fiercely practical view of everything. Like poets, "Hi" is a poor business man; he loses the post office and is about to lose his home when a large sized check from a publisher saves the day. The publisher had seen good commercial value in the original literary style of "Hi" and was willing to buy his entire output and contract for more. A happy finale ends the story, everybody gets into the picture and the villain still holds the baby. I cannot imagine any American audience which would fail to enjoy this feature from the first inch of film to the last. I consider Arbuckle's performance equal to his work in "The County Chairman." He had splendid support throughout. Altogether this is a picture which does belong on the Paramount Program.

"The Treasure of the Louzats"

Four-Reel Itala Romance of Mystery and Adventure.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

AMONG the stories that lend the charm of variety to a program, romance will always have a sure place in both of its aspects. "The Treasure of the Louzats" represents what has always been popular, the emphasis of sensation and ingenuity of plot, as in the Sherlock Holmes series, though there is another form of romance, that portraying idealistic phases of human character, on which it impinges at times. The liking for stories of mystery and adventure has never been extinguished, especially for those of strong local color. The ancient backgrounds, the old castles, the bits of scenery in which nature and art combine to fascinate the eye, the natural fitness of the types—all these contribute to the necessary "atmosphere" of the Itala romance without obtruding too much on attention.

The story opens with a glimpse of two Italian castles belonging to the ancient Louzat family. In the finer one is Count Jules, a young man of limited means, the last representative of the senior branch. In the less pretentious edifice is old Count Gerard and his niece, Lydia, last representative of the junior branch. Between them is an old feud, dating back to an act of their common ancestor when hard pressed by an attack on his estate, and involved with it is a great treasure artfully concealed at that time. No trace of the treasure has been found, though the old Count had grown morbid in searching for it—its discovery is the aim of his existence.

A mysterious communication reaches Lydia on her eighteenth birthday, in which is given a clue to the secret hiding place—a description has been written in the title page of a missal book bearing the family coat-of-arms. Unaware of her uncle's greed, Lydia shows the communication to him, but he pretends to make light of it and throws it in the waste basket. She turns suddenly when about to depart and discovers him eagerly scanning the letter he declared to be of no value.

From that moment the old Count's greed transforms him into a veritable instrument of destiny. Each move he makes in the solution of what he supposed to be his problem causes him to unconsciously bring about an entirely different solution, a plot bound to awaken suspense when handled with skill. Finding no such missal book in his own library, he contrives to visit the other castle with his niece and excuses his action by presenting the two young cousins to each other. Their remote kinship acts as a stimulus to mutual admiration, and their relations become intimate, when Lydia confides in Count Jules during a ramble about his castle. Their sudden action discovers Count Gerard prosecuting his search and he is ordered from the house.

In a fit of anger he sends Lydia to a convent school of rigorous methods. There she is actually forced by her uncle's harsh conduct into finding what he has sought in vain. In the chapel is a massive volume which excites her curiosity and she manages to tear from it part of a leaf containing information as to where the lost treasure is hidden, but it is not the descriptive part—it merely contains a warning. Her sacrilege is discovered and she is locked in her room.

Lydia's escape is very ingenious, forming an attractive feature of the story, but her uncle obtains the major part of the description and reaches the buried treasure in advance of his niece during a race that excites high suspense. The absent warning proves fatal, however, and the young cousins triumph in the end. The romantic settings, the excellent types, the stimulus of mystery, the ingenuity of treatment, and the unifying fact that the story is a good one, all contribute to raise "The Treasure of the Louzats" far above the average screen release from the point of view of those who believe in entertaining an audience.

H. H. WINSLOW, EDITOR.

Mr. Herbert Hall Winslow, for many years a well-known dramatist, and who is the author of over one hundred successful vaudeville sketches, is the scenario editor for the George W. Lederer Stage Filmotions, and recently adapted Bayard Veiller's "The Fight" for the screen. Mr. Winslow wrote the screen version of "Manon Lescaut," in which Lina Cavalieri starred last year.

"Wolves of Society"

Two-Reel Rex Release, in Which an Adventuress and Her Accomplice Form the Pivot of the Action.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A FRANK LLOYD picture, both as to authorship and production, "Wolves of Society," interests as a sample of what one man can accomplish in one picture, playing a triple role, that of author, of actor and of director.

It is a difficult matter to accomplish good results in all three at the same time. The combination is not a cushion-lined affair; in fact, if the view "from the outside looking in" gives an accurate idea of the situation, its ways must lead through torturous paths.

"Wolves of Society" deals with the story of a plot to gain possession of the wealth of an old millionaire. The role of the adventuress, whose clever wiles lure the old man into a marriage with her, is played by Gretchen Lederly, and Hester Leslie appears as the daughter of Millionaire Mayhew. Frank Bennett plays the lover and Frank Lloyd is seen as the accomplice of Paula, the adventuress. The honors of the play, so far as the action is concerned, fall unquestionably to Mr. Robbins, who plays the role of Millionaire Mayhew. His work is finished and is a truly pleasurable exhibition of the dramatic art.

Scene from "Wolves of Society" (Rex)

The story of a former and younger victim of the adventuress has been rather cleverly told by means of double exposure. The story as presented in the picture is not always well connected, and the photographic work is not exactly up to the standard. Nevertheless, the production as a whole will satisfy the average motion picture audience.

CASTLE AS SETTING IN NEW CUNARD PICTURE.

Grace Cunard and Francis Ford have given to the world another scenic masterpiece. In "The Madcap Queen of Gredshoffen" they utilize a magnificent castle as a setting for several scenes. The splendor of this palace enhances the beauty of an unusual play and Miss Cunard, in her gorgeous robes, makes an ideal queen.

CANADIAN TROOPS SEE GERMAN ENEMY IN KLEINE FILM.

George Kleine's Toronto office reports the completion of a contract whereby the troops of the Second Contingent, now in training at Military Headquarters Camp, Exhibition Park, Toronto, prior to their departure for the seat of war, saw all the George Kleine attractions, starting with "Quo Vadis?" on Monday evening, January 18. This will be followed by "Antony and Cleopatra," "The Last Days of Pompeii," "European Armies in Action," etc. This last-named picture shows much of German military tactics, including field gun evolutions, artillery practice, infantry manoeuvres, crack German regiments, the fighting Crown Prince, and many of the generals whose names have figured in recent dispatches from the front. Hence the Kleine picture will carry an unusual interest to the troops at Exhibition Park.

These entertainments were arranged by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, which, after careful consideration, decided in favor of the Kleine attractions as most suitable because of their high moral character.

Leona Hutton

IF you had come west from Kansas City, Mo., after being in an automobile accident in which you lost your voice and could not work on the real stage any more, and had been lucky in securing a position with a well-known moving picture concern, and had done well in your first picture, and in the last scene been blown through a door by an over-charge of powder and confined to bed for some time, you might have tried to remember whether you had walked under a ladder, failed to throw a horseshoe over your left shoulder, or Friday the 13th may have been your day of misfortune.

Leona Hutton.

Well, that was Miss Leona Hutton's reason for trying pictures, and her debut in the screen world was attended with thrills galore. At Inceville, Jay Hunt was directing "The Crimson Stain," in which Miss Sutton was the mulatto girl, and one of the scenes carries an explosion, in which a door is blown out. Miss Hutton had to be in front of the door, and when the over-charge of powder went off, she was thrown to the ground and badly bruised. Since the first picture everything has been fine and she would not leave the films for anything.

This popular leading woman, who has appeared in many Kay Bee, Broncho, and Domino releases of the N. Y. Motion Picture Co., lives at the Beach near the studio and has two machines for use between the studio in the canyon and her home in Santa Monica. She is a Missourian, having been born in Kansas City in April in a year that is not so very very far back. (These women, even if they don't vote, won't tell their ages), and first appeared on the stage in 1908 in "Shenandoah." She has been seen in her home town in stock and musical comedy for some time. A season with Kolb and Dill added to her versatility, and a tour in the middle west in stock gave her another bit of dramatic experience.

In Kansas City, Miss Hutton was in an automobile accident, the resulting injury robbing her of a fine voice, and it was then, 1912, that the call of the screen was heard and promptly answered, the canyon studio being her first point, and ever since she has been seen in these brands of films.

Miss Hutton is a lover of outdoor sports, having two motor cars, a California bungalow, and a desire to tour and tour over the beautiful southland. She swims and is an exponent of many of the athletic games, besides being an excellent horsewoman and driver of an automobile. Some of her best pictures were "The Pitfall," "The Woman," "Thieves," and many others under the New York releases. Although she plays emotional leading parts, she is a regular comedian off the screen and can make you laugh in spite of yourself by her bright and witty sayings. She is a well-liked player and has a host of friends and admirers here as well as throughout the country where her pictures are released.

"On the High Seas" is a coming release, made by Richard Stanton, in which Miss Hutton and Stanton, the heavy, have a fight on the deck of a steamer. The fight becomes so real that passengers not knowing the pictures are being made, rush to the assistance of the pretty traveler, thinking that the heavy is trying to kill her. At that, she is nearly forced overboard, the fight progressing near the ship's rail. The whole film was made on the high seas, on board a coasting vessel, the Congress, which recently came west to the Pacific. The release is a wonderful one and ought to be well appreciated.

DOROTHY GISH IN "AN OLD FASHIONED GIRL."

Dorothy Gish is now rehearsing as the simple country maiden in "An Old Fashioned Girl," a quaint, pastoral drama soon to be released in the Mutual program. The part was written for her especially, and the direction of the picture has been assigned to Donald Crisp. Signe Auen, Eleanor Washington and William Hinckley are also in the cast.

"Wildfire"

Lillian Russell a Tennis Playing Heroine in Her Old Melodrama, Released by the World Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

SUPPORTED by a good cast, Lillian Russell plays a picture role in one of her old Broadway successes, a rather youthful heroine—we certainly have to hand it to her for the marvelous way in which she gets away with it in more than one scene. The plot is not high class, but it sets forth those always interesting types, jockeys and race track people. It is also made after the right receipt and mixes good man and bad man, hero and villain, to the gallery's taste; has a whole world of good and evil and assures punishment to the latter when it becomes time for him to get what is truly his.

Lillian Russell, as Henrietta Barrington, appears in a number of frocks, and in the back of a watch worn by the heroine's father is a photograph of her when at the zenith of her beauty—she was a wonderfully pretty woman. She doesn't, it is true, look to be only twenty-two or three, even when she comes out to the tennis courts and starts a game; but it is simply astonishing how young she does look, the more when we remember that picture cameras have a way of calling a wrinkle a wrinkle even on the faces of royalty. Among those who support Miss Russell, Lionel Barrymore, who is always strong in pictures, has the chief role, that of the gambler, who kills Barrington after a game of cards, and, having his papers forges a bill of sale for his Eastern stable of race horses. The heart-character, that fatherly and straight-edged Matt Donovan, is played by Sam J. Ryan. Bud, the stable boy, is taken by Georgie Mack, and the jockey, Chappy, by James Jeffrey. Myrtle, Henrietta's younger sister (Leone Morgan), and Ralph Woodhurst (William Powers) play the secondary love story. Gorman, the Westerner, who saw the killing, is played by James J. Gorman, and the hero's part by Glen White. The father, Bob Barrington, who is killed, is played by Stewart Morris.

Scene from "Wildfire" (World Film)

The script is by C. H. Hoadly and the direction was in the care of Edwin Middleton. In photography and staging, the offering is up to the standard.

MAKE-UP AS IMPORTANT ON SCREEN AS ON STAGE.

"One of the principal reasons that I prefer to use actors with stage experience in making photoplays is that they have a thorough appreciation of the necessity for strong make-up," said Edgar Lewis, director of the Box Office Attraction Co., in a recent interview. "The casual observer of moving picture plays would not realize the necessity of careful work in this direction. The camera accentuates the slightest blemish and brings out points that would be entirely missed by the eye.

"Those of professional experience know how flat the vivid lights make the ordinary face. When make-up is skilfully applied, the camera produces a perfect simulation of the natural characteristics, which is lost when either too much or too little is used. Even for outdoor scenes I find it necessary to have the characters carefully make up in order to produce proper results."

"The Morals of Marcus"

In a Superbly Staged Five-Part Famous Players Subject Marie Doro Is Markedly Successful.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Famous Players have uncovered another young woman who has been hiding herself behind the footlights—a young woman who has altogether too much acting talent to be permitted permanently to remain in but one town instead of appearing in a hundred on a given day. Marie Doro, who is seen in "The Morals of Marcus," the Famous Players' five-part adaptation of the novel and play of the same name by William J. Locke, has a decidedly attractive personality; furthermore, she is given a character that fits that personality. The makers of the play classify it as "a picturesque romantic comedy"; anyone trying to improve on that description would seem to be wasting time.

Miss Doro has the role of Carlotta, a girl who by her widowed mother is taken into the household of an old Turk and at the age of eighteen learns of the plan of her foster-father to sell her to a still older Turk. She is aided in escaping by an Englishman, who gets her to England. The good friend is arrested on his arrival, and Carlotta is thrown into the home of a medium young philosopher. Carlotta's rearing, apparently, has been notable chiefly for what it has not taught her. Her disregard of convention forms one of the interesting phases of the story. When it seems she is to be carried back to Turkey she clings to the distressed and shy Marcus. It is the contact of childlike innocence with adult Puritanism.

"The Morals of Marcus" is filled with delicate bits. If there are not many big situations, their absence is more than compensated by the many smaller ones. There are times when we are moved to mirth; there are other occasions when we feel the tug at the heartstrings. Miss Doro makes herself felt right at her entrance into the picture. Her grasp is firm throughout.

Eugene Ormonde is another factor in the picture. His portrayal of Marcus Ordeyne, the book-lover and the philosopher, who is unexpectedly confronted with the responsibility of deciding whether to cast out from his home the waif that has appealed to him for protection against the world in general and her enemies in particular, is finely done. His work is marked by the display of pronounced acting intelligence. It is hard to forgive Julian L'Estrange for misleading us as to Pasquale's character. In the several scenes in which he appears prior to the abduction of Carlotta we have a right to believe him the somewhat breezy but nevertheless wholesouled friend of Marcus. His rascality comes as a surprise. Russell Bassett as Hamdi, fosterfather of Carlotta, gives a good performance.

Scene from "The Morals of Marcus" (Famous Players)

In staging and general direction the picture is notable. Messrs. Porter and Ford have chosen for their exteriors one of the show places of America—and the mistress of which, by the way, was thirty years ago one of the playgoers' favorites. Remarkable backgrounds are these. The interiors, too, whether of the Turkish home of Hamdi or the English mansion of Marcus, are elaborate, luxurious.

"The Morals of Marcus" is an expensive production; what is to the point, it is a mighty fine picture.

"Hearts and the Highway"

Notable Cast Portrays Vitagraph's Adaptation of Brady's Historical Drama of Adventure.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

CAST.

Lady Katherine, Daughter of the Earl of Clanranald, Lillian Walker
Sir Harry Richmond, of the King's Own, Darwin Karr
King James II. of England.....Donald Hall
Lord Jeffries, Chief Justice of England, L. Rogers Lytton
Earl of Clanranald, an Unwilling Conspirator Against the King.....Charles Kent
Master Dunner, Clanranald's Family Advocate, Charles Eldridge
General Ramesey, Governor of the Castle, Charles Wellesley
Chief Justice of Scotland.....Anders Randolf
General Feversham, One of the King's Advisers, Ned Finley
Lord Stenwold, a Tool of King James II., Harry Northrup
Alison McLeod, a Farmer.....William Gilson
Dame McLeod, His Wife.....Rose Tapley

THE foregoing is a strong cast even for a vitagraph five-part picture. It speaks for itself. "Hearts and the Highway" was produced by Wilfrid North from the script of Colonel Jasper Ewing Brady, adapted from the novel of the same name by the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady. It was shown as a Broadway Star Feature at the Vitagraph Theater during the week beginning January 17. The story is one of adventure during the reign of James II. of England. It is well told and interestingly played.

There is a smashing opening, and this statement is literal as well as figurative. The soldiers of the King break in a great door and place Clanranald under arrest for conspiracy. The closely following trial shows a great stage setting as well as a situation of dramatic strength as the daughter pleads with the chief justice of Scotland not to condemn her father to the block. Situations of comedy and drama alternate when the daughter carries out her determination to array herself in man's garb and intercept the messenger who is conveying the death warrant to the king for signature.

Scene from "Hearts and the Highway" (Vitagraph).

If Miss Walker be less convincing in her male attire, she shows strength in her femininity—as the woman in love with the swash buckling Sir Harry or as the daughter scheming to save the life of her father she will appeal. Mr. Karr plays Sir Harry with a sure touch. Mr. Lytton gives a vivid portrayal of the dissipated chief justice of England. Mr. Randolf shows us the antithesis of Jeffries, judicial, benevolent.

There are lighter moments when Lady Katherine's appearance at the inn is closely followed by the arrival of Sir Harry. Her dismay as the landlord tells Sir Harry he will have to share a room with "Sir Henry Carthew" is not lessened as the bearer of her father's death warrant proceeds to fill up on ale and insists that his new friend keep him company. There is a tense moment later, following the combat between the two. Sir Harry has been stunned by a bullet. When he recovers consciousness he discovers the loss of his papers. He finds his assailant, faint from loss of blood, owing to a sword wound in the shoulder. It is a delicate situation and it is delicately handled. Sir Harry arrests Lady Katherine, but that does not prevent his falling in love with her and aiding her.

Producer North has done much to overcome the difficulties of securing suitable backgrounds. The view of the ship on which the fugitives are to leave England is a striking piece of stagecraft. "Hearts and the Highway" makes excellent entertainment.

Solving "The Million Dollar Mystery"

Here they are—three of those who caused the mystery in "The Million Dollar Mystery," in the room in which the judges examined the solutions sent in with the $10,000 prize offer as the incentive. The Thanhouser studio at New Rochelle has been literally swamped with mail carrying solutions of eager fans. If New Rochelle is ever raised out of the third class postal rank it will be due to "The Million Dollar Mystery."

"Mystery" Stars in the Solution Room at the Thanhouser Studio (Left to Right): Sidney Bracy, Marguerite Snow, Florence La Badie.

The name of the winner of the $10,000 will not be disclosed until the twenty-third episode is completed. In this episode, which will be released about February 22, the successful contestant will be shown, together with the principals in the great serial and Harold MacGrath, the famous author.

From all over, the "solution room" for "The Million Dollar Mystery" at the Thanhouser studio has received millions of letters telling where, how and when the million dollars were hidden. Concealment of the million dollars, as conceived by a few of the contestants for prizes, are as follows: In a Bible, threshold of door, behind sliding picture, in statue, in top of table, behind mantel, in flower pot, drawer in cabinet, upholstered armchair, vault under hall, secret hole in fireplace, in fountain, secret room, bedroom, on chain in a well, under flooring in room, under water in a pit in cellar, in bank, in mahogany bed, in shark's stomach, in gas meter, summer house beneath vines.

KRITERION GETS PASADENA ROSE TOURNAMENT.

One of the biggest events in the routine of California's yearly program is the Tournament of Roses, held in Pasadena. Its pageant surpasses anything of its kind ever held and each year is more beautiful than ever. The Crown City Film Manufacturing Company has taken advantage of the beautiful settings and lively scenes and used its combined companies in making a two-reel comedy with a clever story woven with this big event. This film will be released on the regular program of the Kriterion Service.

Director Clem Easton of the Victor (Universal) company has just completed "A Lesson from the Far East," which will be cut to one reel. Ben Wilson, Joseph Girard and Dorothy Phillips play the principal roles.

Denis Ward, who so often plays the part of captain of police or of boats in Edison plays, has only to "look natural" to look the part. For he was for the most of his life one of the best known police captains of the New York police force before he was retired.

"Love, Speed and Thrills"

Highly Amusing One-Reel Keystone Travesty of Melodrama Which Outthrills the Thrillers.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Villain.....Chester Conklin
Hero.....Mack Swain
Heroine.....Minta Durfee

ONE of the most strenuous farces ever shown on the screen, "Love, Speed and Thrills," is fully up to Keystone reputation as an amusing release. It is even better than the average, because there is a real purpose behind it, though real purposes are not to be expected in farce. It closely follows the regulation pattern of highly-seasoned melodrama with a skill that makes a show of the article it burlesques. There is a hero, a heroine and a villain of the deepest dye. The hero rescues the villain when the latter is at the point of death and carries him home, only to warm a snake. The villain instantly makes love to the hero's wife. All this is done by athletes—I cannot call them anything else—for there is an incessant by-play of muscular force out of the reach of ordinary, chalk-faced theatricalism. Thereafter the play proceeds along triangle lines.

Scene from "Love, Speed and Thrills" (Keystone).

Mark Swain is apparently under heroic treatment for his fatness—any other stout man would lose twenty-five pounds in one such performance, and Miss Durfee is a marvel of endurance to come through such strenuous activities uninjured. Chester Conklin carries off the honors with an entirely new impersonation, so far as Keystone comedies are concerned, and one that comes in the nature of relief after constant repetition of one characterization by the ex-star. Conklin admirably portrays the monocled type of English sportsman in hunting costume, though he burlesques it for farce purposes. We might not laugh at a perfect imitation of this sort of simp, but his awkwardness, his clumsiness, his utter inanity become ludicrous in Conklin's skilled interpretation.

Conklin is as much of an athlete as the others, if not more so, but his comic imitation, his gestures, postures and mannerisms of action speak of the imbecile. It is almost impossible to define the art of creating laughter—I have often been amused without being able to say exactly why—but the nearest explanation I can lay hands on is that physical actions and reactions in such strenuous farce as "Love, Speed and Thrills" are made to reflect mental deficiencies. We read by physical expression the stupidity that lies behind it.

"Love, Speed and Thrills" might be described as a cartoon of individuals and situations, though there is nothing ordinary about the latter. Many of the terrifying experiences of the characters are cleverly faked, but no more so than in pretentious melodrama, and the reckless falling from horses and vehicles is apparently real. In ridiculing the melodrama this lively farce is on lines deserving our thanks. Scarcely a feature of the sensational play has been neglected—though the "eggsplozion" has been omitted. That may be used next time.

ELSIE JANIS ON HER WAY TO LONDON.

Miss Elsie Janis, the Bosworth photoplay star, left the studio at Los Angeles on her way to London last Monday. She stopped over for a day in Chicago, on the 20th.

Coates to Star in Jungle Picture

South American Explorer Goes South to Take Part in Dyreda Subject Under Producer Dawley.

FRANKLIN B. COATES, who a little under a year ago returned from a trip of exploration in South America with the Captain Besley Expedition, has been engaged by the Dyreda Art Film Corporation to play the lead in a jungle picture. The subject will be an adaptation of a Charles K. Harris song, "Always in the Way." It will be produced by J. Searle Dawley and released through the World Film Corporation. Mr. Dawley left New York with his company the first of the week. His first point will be Florida, where he will seek the best jungle backgrounds. It is intended later to extend the tour to the Bahamas and the West Indies. Mr. Coates' knowledge of jungle life and its many dangers should enable him to be of marked assistance to Mr. Dawley in an advisory capacity.

Franklin B. Coates.

Readers of the Moving Picture World will recall the story of Mr. Coates' South American adventures which appeared in this journal last April. In his eight months' trip he was a member of three distinct expeditions. It was the last one which involved by far the greater hardship and danger. This was a journey of 1,200 miles, beginning at the source of the Amazon River and ending at Iquitos, the head of navigation on the great river. Thirty-six days were spent on a frail raft traveling through rapids. There were many excursions into the jungle, one of six days in search of a trace of two American explorers. The four men found the bones and gave them Christian burial.

Mr. Coates would seem to be an ideal selection for a characterization such as he is about to undertake. He is not new to the camera, either in front of it or behind it. Many thousand feet of film were taken on the South American trip.

AN OFFER TO THE CASTLES.

Bosworth, Inc., through Frank A. Garbutt, made an offer of five thousand dollars to Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, the famous dancing pair, to appear in a forthcoming Bosworth production, in which a scene in a ballroom is one of the principal incidents.

Mr. Castle, appearing at present in "Watch Your Step," at the New Amsterdam, would not give any definite reply, but promised the Bosworth office that he would give the offer his earnest consideration and if it were possible to secure the sanction of his manager he would give Bosworth the preference.

If Mr. and Mrs. Castle decide to accept the Bosworth price, the scene in which they appear must, necessarily, be staged here in New York, but this will not interfere with the plans of the Bosworth people, who will bring the principal players on for the occasion and probably use the Famous Players' studio for the making of the scene. An answer is forthcoming from the Castles next week.

STAGE NOTABLES SEE KLEINE'S "DU BARRY."

George Kleine's propensity for doing things new and unusual is well illustrated by the extraordinary success of the "professional performance" of his beautiful six-part "Du Barry," at the Candler Theater, New York, Sunday, January 10. It was necessary to give two performances to accommodate the throngs that clamored for admission, and the roster of his guests was a most representative gathering of artists. Among those in attendance were: Mrs. Leslie Carter, Marguerite Clark, Sam. H. Harris, Sol. Bloom, Irene Fenwick, Louise Dresser, Jack Barrymore, Hamilton Revelle, Richard Thornton, Campbell Gollan, Mary Ryan, Sam. Forest, Herbert Brenon, Arch. Selwyn, Harrison Grey Fiske, Asa Cassidy, Walter J. Moore, George Fitzmaurice and the members of twenty-four shows now playing in New York.

"The Revolutionist"

Apex Is Releasing a Stirring Four-Part Melodrama of Anarchists and Royalty.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Apex Company is showing a stirring four-part melodrama of love and a throne, of royalty and of Anarchists. "The Revolutionist" is well staged and well played, and it is well photographed. There is an idealistic ending, one wherein a young king turns his throne over to his people and leaves his kingdom for England, where he may spend his days with his wife, a daughter of the people. The kingship was unexpected, there being at the time of the marriage two lives between the prince and the throne. Fate decreed or chance decided that it should be the hand of the wife's brother who dealt the blow killing the king and the crown prince.

Ethel Barcewell has the role of Vera, who marries Andreas. Miss Barcewell enlists and holds the sympathy and displays strength in an emotional characterization. Prince Andreas is played by Henry Victor; his work is good. George Foley makes an impressive king. There is a good cast and a large one. Great care has been taken with the costuming.

Scene from "The Revolutionist" (Apex).

There are strong scenes sprinkled through the story. One of these is where the prince, who has been concealing his identity, is asked by the father of Vera if he is willing to propose mariage. When the young man declines to answer he is ordered from the house, but he changes his mind and informs the clergyman if he will perform the ceremony it may be done immediately. Others are where Vera comes to the new king asking for the life of her brother, not knowing it is her husband to whom she is to appeal; or where the king goes to the cell of the brother, intending to pardon him, and is told by the dying man that his wife had never been other than faithful to him; or the closing, when the revolution has been declared, and the king elects to retire that he may have the wife of his heart rather than the one selected by his advisers.

LOOKING FOR JONES.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 12.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—About the first of December a man giving the name of J. E. Jones appeared in this city and called upon the various exhibitors making contracts to furnish slides which he made by a new process. The slides were very nice and he was successful, and sold the formula to several operators, exhibitors, etc. On December 28th he disappeared after having gotten various sums of money from different exhibitors on false statements, and leaving his hotel bill unpaid.

We would appreciate it if you will give this letter publicity, and ask all exhibitors to be on the watch for him, and if he appears to notify the writer by wire at our expense.

Truly yours,
Spokane Motion Picture Exhibitors' League,
A. R. Patten, Secretary.

A FRESH ECLAIR.

Emile Offeman, the genial general manager of the Eclair Film Company, Inc., became the proud father of a bouncing baby boy on New Year's morning, at 7 o'clock. Mother and child are doing nicely and the young scion of the Eclair head already dominates the Offeman household with an iron hand.

James L. Daly

AT the Lubin studios "Uncle" Jimmie Daly is as live a wire as they have there and he doesn't look his sixty odd years the least bit, for "Uncle" Jimmie is one of those gifted persons who simply refuses to grow old. Over forty years ago he became an actor and since then he has played something like 1,200 parts in different productions. Thirty years ago he had a dramatic school in Philadelphia and today some of his old pupils have become famous in the theatrical world.

Only a few Lubinites refer to him as Mr. James L. Daly. Nearly everyone calls him "Uncle" Jimmie, and this young old man is today the equal of almost any man in the studio in rough riding, swimming and other stunts that require agility, strength and nerve. "If any of them can beat me in taking chances before a motion picture camera," said he, laughingly, "they've got to cheat."

James L. Daly.

Nearly all of "Uncle" Jimmie's old associates in the dramatic world are dead. He received his first dramatic instruction from the late Dion Boucicault and the late E. L. Davenport. For a number of seasons he played with William E. Sheridan, who was one of his most intimate friends, and among some of the other well-known men he played with were Laurence Barrett, John McCullough, Joseph Jefferson, Roland Reed, Sol Smith Russell, Mrs. John Drew, John Sleeper Clarke, Annie Pixley, Lotta and many others.

"Uncle" Jimmie says one of his happiest seasons was with Eugene Blair, fifteen years ago, when he played Jeminy Triplet to Miss Blair's Peg Woffington. Thirty years ago, when "Youth" was produced by the late John Sleeper Clarke, father of Wilifred Clarke, "Uncle" Jimmie played one of the leading roles with Charles Vanderhoff, the English actor. When Jarrett Palmer and Slavin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was produced "Uncle" Jimmie played the character of "Uncle Tom" and he played it so many times that he lost the count. Incidentally he has played every male part in the production countless times.

Few men have had as varied an experience in the theatrical world as "Uncle" Jimmie. For some time he talked decidedly at the idea of becoming a photoplayer on the theory that all the old traditions would be shattered if he did, but finally yielded and now he thinks the moving picture play the greatest thing ever. "Uncle" Jimmie plays all sorts of character parts at Lubin's, but he is never happier than when he gets an opportunity to straddle one of the Lubin bronchos and "cut loose."

Clara Lambert, who in private life is Mrs. James L. Daly, is also a Lubin photoplayer. They have been married for a great many years and have always played in the same productions. They agreed on the day they were married to do this and no manager of a production has engaged one without the other, at least not up to the present writing.

"HOW UNCLE SAM WORKS."

A nine reel picture story entitled "How Uncle Sam Works," has been produced by Henry W. Savage, based upon Frederic J. Haskin's book, "The American Government." This subject has been shown in Washington for the past two weeks and has aroused considerable interest in the National Capital. At the conclusion of the Washington run this picture will be shown at some Broadway house.

WAR TAX CLOSES PICTURE HOUSES.

The Universal Film & Supply Co. of Oklahoma City reports that several motion picture theatres in the southwest have closed in preference to paying the theatre war tax. The theatres in most instances are in hamlets of limited theatre-going populations. It is also reported that a few other theaters have been quarantined on account of an epidemic of diphtheria which has stricken several localities.

"The Girl of the Secret Service"

Miss Florence M. Higgins' Prize-Winning Story Produced by the Universal.

MISS FLORENCE M. HIGGINS, of Miami, Fla., author of the prize photoplay, "The Girl of the Secret Service," which is to be released in two reels by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company on February 2, tells this interesting story of the circumstances under which she came to write the $100 prize-winning photoplay in the moving picture stories contest:

"I wrote 'The Girl of the Secret Service'," said Miss Higgins, "for the pure pleasure of seeing my favorite picture folk living the story out on the screen, not with the slightest hope of ever being able to win the prize, which fact, of course, tends to add to my pleasure in having received it.

Miss Florence M. Higgins.

"The fact that my first effort was picked out by the judges of the contest from so many others naturally is a source of great satisfaction to me, and I am deeply grateful to Francis Ford, Grace Cunard and the other Gold Seal players who have whipped the play into shape.

"I am an ardent motion-picture fan and exceedingly interested in seeing Grace Cunard enact the principal role in the play. My friends, to whom I have shown the $100 check which I received from the Universal, already have organized a 'Higgins Photoplay Party,' and when the film comes to Miami it is our plan to have a special 'run' of it for the guests of the Hotel Royal Palm where I live.

"Recently our morning paper contained a moving appeal to the people of Miami for help for the Belgians, and although I gave what I could to the fund I would have liked to do more. Using the newspaper editorial for a motif, I wrote a photoplay, intending to send it to the Universal (not with any intention whatever of offering it for sale), but my courage failed me. The Universal, however, has asked me to send the play on and has promised to produce it if it in any way compares with 'The Girl of the Secret Service.' However, to have had one photoplay produced is sufficient honor, and when the Universal sent me their check and informed me that I was the prize winner in a competition in which 8,000 other contestants had failed I felt like the man who said: 'Luck like that ain't healthy'."

Scene from "The Girl of the Secret Service" (Gold Seal).

The story of "The Girl of the Secret Service" is as follows:

The Japanese spy, Kawakami, desiring to learn the whereabouts of Fred Langford, an inventor who is perfecting a marvelous device for the defence of his country and who has suddenly dropped out of sight, kidnaps Langford's wife upon her arrival in San Francisco. He forces from her the secret of her husband's hiding place.

He then sends a note to Langford, ostensibly from blackhanders, demanding that he bring a certain sum of money to a certain place in Chinatown, hoping in this way to get the inventor in his power and to force from him the secret of his latest device.

A member of the secret service has witnessed the kidnapping, however, and, the plan of the Japanese being suspected, Francis Gordon is put on the case. He is assisted by a female operative, Barbara Ward, who is also his sweetheart.

Barbara disguises as a Japanese and obtains admittance to Kawakami's house where she finds Rose Langford. She succeeds in spiriting Rose out of the place, but is herself caught by the Japanese spies. Gordon, sending the car containing Rose Langford speeding away to safety, forces an entrance into the house and rescues Barbara. Barbara, however, dies from wounds she receives in the struggle.

"What Might Have Been"

A Forceful Presentation of the Consequences of the Drug Habit Interpreted by Majestic Stars.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

HAD the subject of this two-reel production been presented with less force it might have escaped special notice. The work of Mary Alden in portraying the character of the drug fiend is, however, not to be overlooked. She has clothed the drug habit with all its degenerative qualities, and made the unfortunate woman of the story not only a repulsive type, but a pathetic example of the terrible consequences of the addiction to intoxicant or stimulative drugs.

Scene from "What Might Have Been" (Majestic).

The strength of the story appears to have been a minor item in the making of the picture; in fact, one forgets in a measure that any particular tribute is due this usually essential part of the production, so strongly is the primal motive of the picture driven home.

It is even possible that the production may meet with aversion, so horribly realistic is the manner in which the character of the drug fiend has been presented; but the aversion will be a healthful one, and the lesson which the production carries is one that cannot fail to strike home.

Jack Conway and Spottiswoode Aitken have also done good work, the former as the nephew whose career was ruined by sympathetically obeying the dictates of his afflicted aunt, to the point of becoming a thief that she might have money to squander in her favorite drug; and the latter as the uncle of his sweetheart who took upon himself to enter the boarding house of the aunt of his prospective nephew-in-law, that he might ascertain something of the character and environment of the young man.

The close of the picture gives an effective glimpse into what might have been, had the influence of the drug been successfully resisted. The production was released on Jan. 17.

JACK BYRNE KRITERION EDITOR.

A. M. Kennedy, producing manager of Kriterion, has acquired the services of Jack Byrne, long and widely known in the motion picture production field. Mr. Byrne will shortly go out to Santa Barbara, Cal., where he will make his headquarters as scenario and film editor. He invites scenario writers to send in their stories to him at the Santa Barbara address. Mr. Byrne is especially anxious to receive good two-reel dramas and comedy dramas and one-reel comedies, for which the best prices will be paid.

"The Heart of Lincoln"

Thrilling Story of the Days of the Civil War, to Be Released under the Gold Seal Brand.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

AS A BASIS for the multiple-reel picture perhaps no period of history has lent itself so unstintingly to the screen as that of the Civil War; nor has any single personality of history been more largely monopolized as a subject for screen impersonation than that of Abraham Lincoln. Being without any degree of personal vanity, Lincoln would no doubt feel highly flattered at the tribute paid him, no matter which way his forelock twirled. And it cannot be denied that the crudest attempt at impersonation of the famous president is a compliment to the great nature of the man.

The Universal Film Company has again undertaken the Scene from "The Heart of Lincoln" (Gold Seal).

filming of a story of which Abraham Lincoln is the central figure, and in which his kindness of heart shines forth with its usual brilliancy. This time Grace Cunard has written the story, and Francis Ford has again played the role of Lincoln, as well as having directed the picture which is in three reels. The story has been presented in an interesting manner, with splendid realism in the battle scenes. One of the most effective photographic results obtained is in the scene sub-titled "The Sorrows of Lincoln," in which he is seated in sorrowful meditation at his big library table, while on the far side of the screen the smoke of battle partly obscures the horrors of the field.

Grace Cunard in the role of Betty, the pretty daughter of Col. Jason, is an attractive figure, and plays with vivacity and good effect. The big situation of the story has been brought about through the illness of the wife of Col. Jason, when in answer to a message sent him from home he braves the consequences and attired in a stolen uniform of the enemy reaches the bedside of his dying wife, only to be discovered and held a prisoner. A trip made to Washington by Betty with an appeal to the President to intercede on behalf of her father appears at first to be unsuccessful, and Betty goes away in sorrow and disappointment; but on a mysterious visit to the battle line made by the President that night the order is given to the Confederate leader to allow Betty's father to escape. This is cleverly brought about by the apparently accidental firing of the sentry's gun by the Confederate leader which brings the soldiers rushing to the scene, thereby giving the captive colonel an opportunity to escape, which he is not slow in grasping.

There is a pretty love thread interwoven in the plot of the story, and a distinctive Colonial atmosphere permeates the entire production.

UNCUT DIAMONDS IN "ZUDORA."

Uncut diamonds valued at $25,000 were used in a recent scene in "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," in which Marguerite Snow plays Zudora. The gems, when not in actual use in a scene, were kept in the vaults of the National City Bank of New Rochelle.

TOM COX DEAD.

Tom Sinclair Cox, a former member of the Kalem players at Glendale, Cal., died on December 6 at La Crescenta, Cal., after a long illness. The deceased was a nephew of Tom Wise of "The Gentleman of Mississippi" fame. His mother, Adelaide Wise, was present when he died.

Charles Hirliman

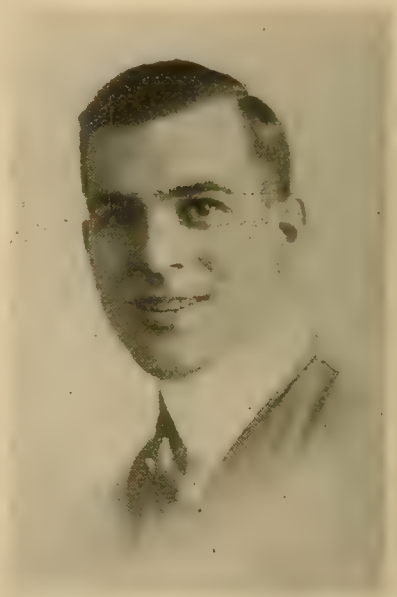
CHARLES HIRLIMAN, superintendent and laboratory manager of the Life Photo Film Corporation, and the Commercial Motion Pictures Co., Inc., is one of the rare examples of "practical perfection" in laboratory work.

Mr. Hirliman, in the course of his association with the Commercial Motion Pictures Company has devoted every spare moment of his time to experimental work in an endeavor to carry the art of tinting and toning of motion picture films to its highest point.

Mr. Hirliman has prepared more than 300 formulas before using one, that to his mind, would give proper results in tinting and toning various colors, disregarding one formula, only to prepare and try out another.

The result of his efforts, as shown on the screen, has been such as to call forth commendation from almost every motion picture manufacturer in the United States.

It can be said without fear of contradiction that Mr. Hirliman is one of the most competent laboratory superintendents in the industry. The proof of his ability is shown by the work turned out of the Commercial Motion Picture Company's laboratories, now under his sole charge, and the large numbers of orders which are placed with that company for developing negatives and making prints of some of the largest motion picture manufacturing concerns in the country, most of them owning and operating their own laboratories.



Chas. Hirliman.

The marvelous tinting and toning in such pictures as "The Ordeal," "Capt. Swift," "Northern Lights" and "The Avalanche," produced by the Life Photo Film Corporation, "Mignon," produced by the World Film Corporation, "A Fool There Was," "The Thief" and "The Idlers," produced by the Box Office Attractions Company, and Paul Rainey's African Hunt, released by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, all of which productions were printed in the laboratory of the Commercial Motion Pictures Co., under the personal supervision of Mr. Hirliman, prove his ability, and place him in the front ranks of technical and practical laboratory managers.

The contract of employment between the Commercial Motion Pictures Co., Inc., and Mr. Hirliman, has been renewed for two years at a large and substantial increase in Mr. Hirliman's salary.

Mr. Hirliman has been placed on the board of executive managers of that company in an advisory capacity.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY ELECTION.

The annual election of officers of the General Film Company occurred at the offices of the company, 200 Fifth Avenue, on Tuesday, January 19. J. J. Kennedy of the Biograph Company, was elected president; C. H. Wilson of the Edison Company, vice-president; A. E. Smith of the Vitagraph Company, treasurer; Paul Melies of the Melies Company, assistant treasurer, and F. R. Clark, secretary. All the employees of the company including P. L. Waters, General Manager, will remain the same. There was a full representation of stockholders and directors present.

MARGARET TURNBULL NOW WITH LASKY.

Miss Margaret Turnbull, widely known throughout the United States as a successful author and dramatist, has gone to the Lasky studios at Hollywood, California, to become a photodramatist in association with Wm. C. De Mille, who has charge of preparing the scenarios for all the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. productions. Miss Turnbull collaborated with Mr. De Mille in writing "Classmates" and she wrote "The Deadlock," in which Edith Wynne Mathison starred last year. She has recently published a story entitled, "Looking After Sandy," which has been one of the leading "best sellers" of the year.

"The Three Black Trumps"

Picture Playhouse Company Releases a Four-Part Story of Daring Aerial Feats.

THE Picture Playhouse Company is releasing a four-part story based on daring feats in the air by a man, and of a thrilling rescue from a burning building by the steeplejack of a woman caught by the flames. The latter episode is risky enough for the average thrill-seeker, but it falls beside the one that followed it, the descent by the steeplejack from a very high chimney.

The steeplejack is shown in the ordinary course of his work making his way slowly up a great chimney by means of a pole and two ladders. As he stands on one he uses the pole to elevate the second ladder to the next higher hook fastened into the chimney. After completing his work at the top he begins his descent when he loses hold of his second ladder, which falls hundreds of feet to the ground.

Scene from "The Three Black Trumps" (Picture Playhouse).

The steeplejack's wife is notified. The extension ladder of the fire brigade is helpless. The wife uses a number of toy balloons to carry a string to the man imprisoned on the top of the chimney. Then gradually the weight of the line is increased until it is of sufficient strength to hold the jack's weight. The descent is followed all the way by the camera. The man is exhausted when he reaches the ground—or else he is an amazingly good actor.

There is a story running through the four reels, but plainly it is built around the agility of the man who takes the leading part. It is a story of a woman who marries her rescuer—she was in love with him before that—and is forbidden her old home by her unrelenting father. The young family prospers, however, until the day of the mishap on the chimney. This robs the man of his nerve. His wife takes up the work, so the titles tell us, and before we see her on the job the two get something easier in a circus. Reconciliation with the parents comes in due time.

VITAGRAPH THEATER'S NEW BILL.

Twelve of the Vitagraph Company's popular stars, including Edith Storey, Ned Finley, Norma Talmadge, Van Dyke Brooke, Harry Morey, Wally Van and members of the company at Santa Monica, Cal., will appear in the Vitagraph Theater program arranged for the week commencing Sunday, January 24. The three-part Broadway star feature, "O'Garry of the Royal Mounted," will head the list of pictures.

The shorter pictures that go to make up the remainder of a program that includes a variety of subjects introduce Sidney Drew and Jane Morrow (Mrs. Sidney Drew) in "The Home Coming of Henry"; Norma Talmadge and Van Dyke Brooke in "The Barrier of Fate"; Harry Morey and Wally Van in "The Chief's Goat," and Myrtle Gonzalez and Alfred Vosburg and members of the Western Vitagraph Company in "Life's Game," a thrilling dramatic story in two parts.

ROMANELLI DESIGNS GATES OF JUNGLE ZOO.

The art gates of the new million-dollar Jungle Zoo, built by Mr. W. N. Selig at Los Angeles, Cal., were designed by Sculptor Carlo Romanelli, of Florence, Italy.

Jean Dumar, a New Edison Star

THE story of Jean Dumar, one of the latest—and one of the prettiest actresses—to be selected by Edison for stellar honors in their stock company, reads much like the characters so often seen in plays but seldom in real life.

For, less than a year ago Miss Dumar, still in her teens and with the courage born of unsophisticated innocence, came to New York to make her name and fortune. She went to the metropolis to learn a profession. Without friends and—soon—without money, she by some chance applied at the Vitagraph studio for employment. Though without any stage or motion picture experience, the director was quick to see in her unusual beauty extraordinary material when blended with a sweetness of nature and emotional depth of sincerity as is Miss Dumar's nature.

Jean Dumar.

With large brown eyes sympathetically expressive and a wealth of hair framing in her oval face, Miss Dumar's girlish beauty has added charm to all pictures in which she has appeared. For her type is one that registers on the screen with astonishing fidelity. Her serious nature has imparted the ring of sincerity to all parts entrusted to her and the Edison Studio expects much from this pretty and capable Miss.

Miss Dumar, in a short year, has been with the Vitagraph, under D. W. Griffith, with the Reliance and also the Famous Players, and her selection by the Edison stock is a distinctive honor as she has been with the Edison forces but about two months. She was born in Pittsfield, Mass.

PHOENIX WELCOMES FIELDING.

There was a welcome awaiting Romaine Fielding and his company of twenty-one Lubin people on their arrival at Phoenix, Arizona, the like of which, perhaps, has never before been experienced by a film producing company entering a city for the first time. The Lubin folks were in a private Pullman and arrived over the Southern Pacific at 10 o'clock Friday morning. More than five hundred Phoenicians were at the train to extend the glad hand. Among these were: Mayor George U. Young, Secretary T. D. Shaughnessy, of the State Fair commission; Secretary Harry Welch, of the Board of Trade; J. J. Sweeney, Wayland Wood and other important business and political men of the city and state. Dr. F. H. Redwell's Regimental band, the most famous band in the state and one which will perform at the Panama Exposition, was also at the station and played as the train pulled in.

Studios for the company will be established at the state fair grounds, which have been donated for the occasion by the state fair commission. However, pictures will be taken at the state prison at Florence, the state asylum and other institutions and locations in this section. A two-reel feature, started around the railroad station in Philadelphia, will be completed in Phoenix at once. Written by Mr. Fielding, it is entitled "West, Two Thousand Miles." The company worked on the picture on the train en route to Phoenix and there will be incorporated in the picture both eastern and western scenery.

Phoenix is to be the first stop in the world-tour scheduled for the Lubin's star producer and his company. The winter months will be spent here after which the company will move on to California and then to the Hawaiian Islands. Mr. Fielding feels particularly at home in the southwestern town in that he is a member of the local Shrine.

LAWRENCE JOSSENBERGER RECOVERING FROM WOUND.

Lawrence Jossenberger, who was accidentally shot December 28, while working in a scene in "The White Trail," a recent production of the Pike's Peak Films Company of Colorado Springs, is rapidly recovering and expects to be able to leave the hospital in a short time.

Runaway June---Episode 3

The Interest in New Reliance Serial Deepens, and Affairs Have Taken an Unexpected Turn.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE question of "money and the woman" broadens, and now we are alive to the fact that June is not the only woman in the world to whom the problem is a serious one. The domestic troubles of another, and to us a nameless family, have been brought to have an important bearing on the plot of the story, but merely in incidental detail.

When last we left June she had succeeded in escaping the embrace of her immediate family, and had disappeared we knew not where. In Episode 3 we find her faithful maid taking her to an obscure boarding house where she herself had lived in former years. The "man with the black Vandyke" still in pursuit, discovers her whereabouts from the chauffeur whom he knows drove the car in which she went to the boarding house, sends "Tommy" Thomas to offer her a position which she accepts, and from which, also through the instrumentality of Blye, she is later discharged, for what reason of his we will doubtless learn in the next installment.

The comedy element brought into the story by Blye's wife increases in quality, and it is with considerable mirth that we witness her forcefully presented intention of holding on to Blye's trunk even if she fails to retain her grip of him; for be it known that the Blyes have now parted company, and private detectives on the trail of both Blye and June are preparing to mix up things generally.

We are breathlessly awaiting the capture of June by her husband, who, having caught sight of June's maid about to enter the boarding house, has mounted the stairs in her wake, and that of Blye, who is in the act of calling at the house when the husband Ned plunges into the hallway, when the curtain draws on Episode 3, and June has again disappeared, leaving her maid on all fours under the bed, with Ned despondently making his way out again.

This instalment of "Runaway June" marks a period in the story where any uncertainty as to the permanent interest of the serial vanishes. We are now prepared for a breathless run. One more excellent type has been added to the cast in the person of the boarding house mistress, a role which, though a minor one, has been cleverly handled.

May Allison Now a Screen Artist

ONE of the most charming of the rising young actresses to forsake the legitimate stage for the screen is Miss May Allison, who has signed a long-term contract with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co., and who will play the second lead with Edith Wynne Mathison in the Lasky-Belasco picturization of "The Governor's Lady." Miss Allison, only nineteen years of age, is a brilliant blonde and absolutely an "ideal picture type."

May Allison.

Miss Allison was born on a Georgia plantation, coming of old aristocratic Southern families on both sides of the house. Her mother belonged to the noted Wise family of Virginia, of which Governor Wise and Brigadier General Henry A. Wise of the Confederate army were members.

On first coming to New York with her mother, Miss Allison, who had stage ambitions, interviewed Henry W. Savage and was cast for the role of "Vanity" in "Everywoman." She also became the understudy for "Beauty" and played that role the latter part of the season. William Harris, Sr., happened to see Miss Allison in "Everywoman" and engaged her for the No. 2 "Quaker Girl" company, but at rehearsals, she was transferred to the No. 1 company and alternated in the title character with Ina Claire.

Last season Miss Allison played leading roles with De Wolf Hopper in "Miss Caprice" and in "Iole."

Pitched Battle in "Master Key"

It is doubtful if in any of the previous chapters of the "Master Key" series, despite their unquestioned merit, there has been so sensational and dramatic a series of incidents staged as those that were recently put on at the Universal's mine in Silent Valley, Cal.

The plot of the story as written by John Flemming Wilson called for a pitched battle between the hirelings of the unprincipled Wilkerson and the faithful miners of the Master Key mine who were determined that Ruth, their beloved mistress, should not suffer the loss of her property.

Every available player at the studio and at Universal City was pressed into service, and, in addition, more than two hundred extra men were hired from about the city and drafted into the two armies. Mounted men, some in uniform, others dressed in the nondescript costumes of the soldier of fortune, circled about the hills on each side of the mine and rushed pell-mell into the melee. Hand-to-hand conflicts in the open, in crowds, about the houses, on their porches and on the brinks of bluffs and precipices, fighting knots of men imbued with a fiendish hatred, individual clashes between single oponents and by no means least in importance, the unusually realistic duel between John Dore, engineer-in-charge of the mine, and Wilkerson, the former superintendent and would-be despoiler. Taken all in all the scenes that mark the conflict are of a nature calculated to awaken and stir the blood. No idea of rehearsed action or cut-and-dried plot is to be found anywhere. On the contrary, it appears like the inadvertent photographing of a real struggle between two armies engaged in an actual struggle.

Scene, Just Before the Battle, in "The Master Key" Universal.

The accompanying photograph was taken at lunch time and just before the armies made their attack upon each other.

THAYER A MASTER HAND AT MOUNTAIN PICTURES.

Otis B. Thayer, producing director of the Pike's Peak Film Company, which is starting operations at its studio at Colorado Springs, as one of the producing units of the United Film Service, is recognized as a master maker of mountain pictures. Thayer was formerly producing director of the Colorado Motion Picture Company, which was responsible for some of the most fetching films of the west ever shown. One of his last productions with that organization was "Across the Border."

H. B. MULLER, PRESIDENT OF PEERLESS FILM CO.

H. B. Muller is president of the Peerless Film Company of 145 West 45th Street, New York, which is engaged in importing, exporting, trading and renting feature films. Mr. Muller was at one time with Warner's Features, the Industrial Motion Picture Company, and the Great Players Film Corporation. Associated with Mr. Muller are M. H. Whitelaw, treasurer, and Bertram Wolff, vice president.

"Twilight," fifth of the light series written by Marc Jones, has been released in the Mutual program by the American company for which it was produced by Thomas Ricketts. "Twilight" is more ambitious than its predecessors, "Daylight," "Firelight," "Moonlight" and "Candlelight," and its long cast calls for the entire company and a number of extras. Thirty-four scenes were taken at the John Moore ranch at Goleta.

Getting Hearst-Selig Pictures

Much Depends Upon the Bravery and Daring of Cameraman Wallace—A Mark for Sharpshooters.

E. A. WALLACE is an intrepid motion picture camera man who has taken his life in his hands in order to obtain the latest pictures of the activities on European battle fields for the Hearst-Selig Twice-a-Week News Pictorial. The latest pictures of the awfulness of war are coming in and are proving of absorbing interest to all the people.

A great deal of red tape was necessary before Mr. Wallace was granted an opportunity to join the German army on the battle lines in Belgium. The United States Government granted him special passports and these were later personally 'vised by the Imperial officials of Kaiser Wilhelm in Germany. It was owing to this fact that Mr. Wallace has been enabled to obtain the many exclusive pictures of war incidents.

An unusual letter was received at the executive offices of the Selig Polyscope Company in Chicago the other day. It was from Mr. Wallace, and the letter was unusual from the fact that the envelope had not been opened by foreign censors. This was made possible because the letter had been personally approved by the Kaiser's officers. It had passed the German censors unopened, and had escaped the scrutiny of other foreign authorities.

In this letter Mr. Wallace tells of an unusual number of startling motion pictures he has recently been enabled to take on the battle fields and along the firing lines. These pictures arrived in America almost simultaneous with Mr. Wallace's letter, and they bear out his descriptions in each and every detail. They show new sights and scenes on European battlefields which will greatly impress and interest the onlooker.

In part, Mr. Wallace's letter says: "I have had many and varied experiences since joining the German advance in France and Belgium. On several occasions my motion picture camera was mistaken for a new sort of rapid-fire gun and it became necessary to instruct the new levies just what the motion picture camera was for. Notwithstanding the fact that the Allied soldiers are also now fairly conversant with the uses of the motion picture camera, yet the camera man remains a shining mark for sharpshooters. Two of my cameras have been rendered useless by shot and shell. One was demolished by shrapnel while within its case, and the lens of another was struck and demolished by a shot and rendered useless, even while I was turning the crank. The camera man is permitted more latitude now than when the war first developed. At that time it was almost impossible for a camera man or a war correspondent to join any of the forces. I was luckier than most of the photographers and correspondents, for influences were set to work in my behalf which afforded me opportunities to take pictures at the very forefront of battle."

Mr. Wallace is an American, and when the war cloud lowered in Europe he was assigned to take motion pictures for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial. He has already forwarded many interesting scenes of the battle grounds, including intimate pictures of Kaiser Wilhelm and the General Staff of the German army. His latest pictures, yet to be released, are said to surpass anything of the kind ever shown on the animated screen.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS AS CHINESE GIRL.

Dorothy Phillips of the Rex, Universal, is playing a Chinese girl in "The Message from the Orient," now in preparation. Possessed of purely Anglo-Saxon features, she succeeded in transforming herself into a celestical mongolian. Several real Chinamen were used in the picture to give it a Belasco atmosphere, and so perfect was Miss Phillips' makeup that upon entering the studio the leader of the imported atmosphere addressed her in his native tongue.

NEW KRITERION EXCHANGES.

The Kriterion announces that it has added the following new exchanges to its already large and important list of distributing agencies: Manhattan Kriterion Film Corporation, 730 Seventh avenue and 48th street and Broadway, for New York City, with a branch office at Newark, N. J.; Empire Kriterion Film Corporation, Chaplin Block, Buffalo, N. Y., with a branch office at Syracuse, N. Y.; Criterion Film Company, 1309 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., with a branch office at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Criterion Film Company, 710 East Baltimore street, Baltimore, Md.; New England Kriterion Film Corporation, Boston, Mass., with a branch at Albany, N. Y., and Portland, Me.; Kriterion Co-operative Service Company, Sincere Building, 4th and Prospect streets, Cleveland, Ohio.

Fireproof Storage

Joseph Miles and Charles Abrams Form Lloyds Film Storage Company to Operate a Safety Vault Proposition.

OUT of the recent crusade of the Fire Commissioner against companies and individuals storing quantities of motion picture film in office buildings without adequate protection from fire has come the formation of a company to operate a system of safety vaults designed for the storage of positive and negative film under conditions fully approved by the various City Departments having jurisdiction. The company was organized by Joseph Miles and Charles Abrams and is known as Lloyds Film Storage. The vaults of this company are located on the 10th floor of a fire-proof loft building at 345 West 40th Street, New York.

Upon the considerable floor space afforded, a series of storage vaults are to be constructed with 720 cubic feet interior volume. One of these vaults has already been built, its walls are of fire-proof material and reach from floor to ceiling. It is furnished with racks ranging around the sides and across the middle and has a capacity of about 3,000 reels. It is ventilated by a 12-inch vent extending through the outer wall of the building.

Other vaults similar to the one described will be built as the demand for storage increases, two others being now under construction. Between each vault is an interval of ten feet. This space will be enclosed by a fire-proof wall across the front on a line with the storage vault. The area thus enclosed will be used for examination rooms, equipped with tables and rewinders. All the furniture in the place will be of steel.

Each patron storing film in the vaults of the Lloyds Film Storage will keep the film in galvanized iron cans holding five reels, properly labeled and locked. The success of the proposition seems to be assured. The offices of the company are in the Candler Building.

Train Calls on Screen

By Arrangement With Railroad Sayre Picture Theatres Run "Calls" for Freight Train Crews.

MOVING picture theatre owners and a railroad management have found a chance for a splendid bit of cooperation at Sayre, Pa. Sayre is completely a railroad town—the system shops of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, one of the largest railroad shops in the world, are located there; it is an important division point for the line, and most of its 7,000 citizens are employes of the company or dependent upon its employes.

The other day a visitor in Sayre went into a moving picture house. Imagine his surprise, following a western photo drama, to see thrown on the screen an announcement like this:

"James Brown, Thomas Jones, William White and John Black, boarded for 10 P. M."

That was all there was to it. The announcement apparently did not cause the least ripple of curiosity in the house, unless it was on the part of the visitor. But here is the answer:

These men are a crew scheduled to go out on a train leaving Sayre at 10 o'clock. Freight train crews on all railroads work on a more or less irregular schedule. Their hours of duty depend in the main on the volume of traffic. Going off duty the crews are told they will be "called" when they are wanted. The division superintendent at Sayre has made an arrangement with the moving picture theatre men so that freight crews can be called on their screens. The crew dispatcher notifies the theatres that crtain men are wanted, and up go their names. This means the men can amuse themselves when they are in Sayre without fear of being wanted for duty and not found by the company's call boys.

The plan has worked splendidly. The theater men are glad to have the patronage of the railroad men and the railroad management is delighted to have its men where they can be easily and promptly reached and enjoying themselves at the same time.

NEW THEATRE FOR JERSEY CITY.

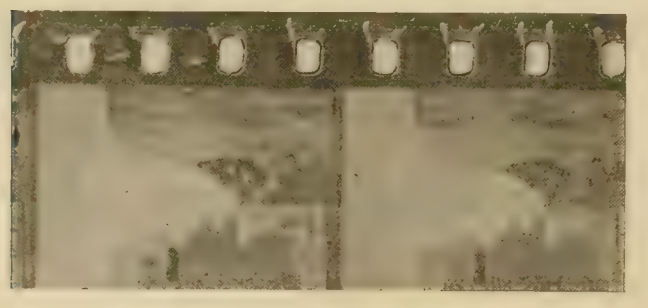
The Aeolian Amusement Company of Jersey City, N. J., is building a moving picture theatre in Fairmont avenue, near Bergen, that city, to be known as the Strand. It will be a 700 seat house, and the owners expect to have the theatre open in March next. When completed the structure will represent an expenditure of $30,000, and will be one of the finest in Jersey City. The Strand will be devoted to the presentation of high class moving pictures. Benjamin Berkowitz will be manager.

Standardizing of Perforations Essential

E. B. Dunn Tells of Conditions as He Finds Them in Talks with Managers and Operators.

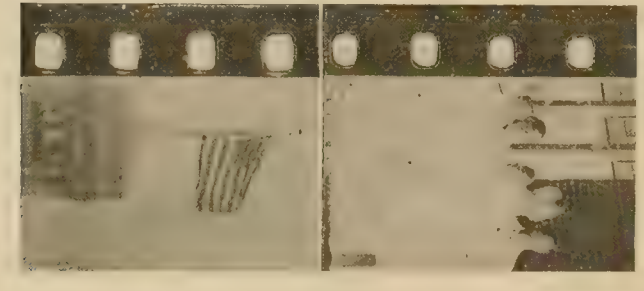
THE demand for standardization will not down. The subject is brought forward from time to time, is discussed by some of those who have at heart the best interests of the motion picture industry, and then is dropped. Perhaps in no one branch of manufacture is there greater necessity for uniformity than in the perforation of film; it is doubtful if in any division there is greater variation. Some of the sprocket holes are small, some are large; some are round, some are square; some are rectangular, some are oval—and there are other shapes seemingly.

The writer was talking the other day with E. B. Dunn of the Speed Controller Company, who not only is an old timer in the moving picture business, a pioneer, but also a man who visits many theaters, talks with managers and operators, and learns of many of the difficulties of those who are seeking to secure the best projection. Mr. Dunn will be recognized by old New Yorkers as the Weather Man of twenty years ago, when he was affectionately alluded to by all newspaper men, whether in print or privately, as "Farmer" Dunn, and as such he became well known to the millions in and about the metropolis who read newspapers. Mr. Dunn resigned from the Weather Bureau to take up motion picture work. In the beginning of things kinematographic he built his own camera, printer and projector, the former and the latter of which he still possesses, and both of them are today in working order. Mr. Dunn's first pictures were of the vertical type, as opposed to the wide style, and he still believes that in the photograph of height as opposed to width there are advantages over the form which later prevailed.



Section of Film Showing Cracks Caused by Square Perforations.

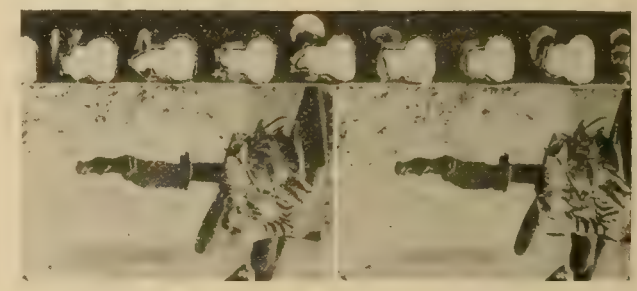
"Yes," said Mr. Dunn in response to a question of a World man, "it is to be regretted that the various manufacturers of moving picture machines cannot get together and agree on a standard of size for perforations. Aside from those who build perforators for sale, there are film manufacturers who design their own perforating machines. Quite naturally, each has given much thought to the design of his particular perforation and, consequently, much persuasion will be required to induce him to alter it.



Two Sections of Film Showing Large and Small Perforations.

"No matter how perfect or how careful an operator may be, no matter how perfect the projection machine may be, the vibration in the picture on the screen cannot be overcome unless there be perfect perforation of the various films which pass in front of the light. Perfect perforation added to perfect light makes what we may describe as the perfect picture—and it is the perfect picture that draws the crowd. These two fundamentals are essential for real exhibiting success. Today we have critical patrons of picture theaters, and these must be catered to if the business is to continue to expand as it has in the past. The best should be the motto. Let the manufacturers of all branches in the trade get together quickly and improve these simpler mechanical conditions, or there may be a closing up of some of the houses that today are doing a good business; no one should be contented to let matters rest because they are 'getting by.' The cost involved in the standardization of sprockets and perforations is small, especially when compared with the great benefits that would result. Improve pictures and light, and the box office will go far toward taking care of itself."

Mr. Dunn showed the writer several bits of film he had picked from the floor of projection rooms. The wide variation in the size of the sprocket holes gave emphatic if silent confirmation to what he had said. One piece contained perforations so greatly enlarged by sprockets that the sides nearly were stripped off. In another, for seven pictures one side was gone entirely. What happens to that scene when the subject is thrown on the screen requires no comment.



Perforations Torn by Sprocket Wheel.

"Beyond doubt," continued Mr. Dunn, "the moving picture industry is the only one that has ever acquired such mammoth proportions without being standardized. It is remarkable that such success has been attained under such handicaps. This disregard for uniformity is becoming apparent to patrons of picture houses—and many of these, by the way, are as competent judges as to what constitutes good pictures as some of the men in the business. Many patrons who criticise productions of course judge by results; with causes they are not familiar. They do not know why the vibration occurs, but they know it is there.

"The greatest mistake that many managers are making is to rest secure in the belief that their patrons are satisfied, that their projection is as good as they want. They are not deceiving their patrons; they are fooling themselves. While many houses get marvelous results on the screen, it is only by the exercise of the greatest vigilance, and in a majority of cases these are the ones that show new film. It is in the smaller houses, that have to run film that is showing the effect of wear, that the greater pinch comes. Why should not the manufacturers get together and see what may be done? Certainly it is worth while."

PASTIME COMPANY TO BUILD THEATRE.

Having decided upon a site in King street, south of Calhoun street, Charleston, S. C., the Pastime Amusement Company of that city, owners of the Victoria, a vaudeville and picture house, and the Majestic and Princess, moving picture theatres, all in Charleston, will in the near future begin the erection of another big theatre. Garden is the name tentatively selected for the new structure which will have seating accommodation for 1,600 persons. It will be erected of fireproof material, and will be up-to-date. It is the intention of the Pastime Company to have the new house devoted to the presentation of first class motion pictures.

LOU TELLEGEN WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS.

It is commonly supposed that Lou Tellegen, the prominent foreign star, who has just won a great personal triumph in the current dramatic success, "Secret Strings," made his first appearance before the American public last season in "Maria Rosa." This is not entirely true, however, for Mr. Tellegen toured this country on the screen three years ago in support of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt in the great photoplay triumph, "Queen Elizabeth," the initial production of the Famous Players Film Co. Lou Tellegen portrayed the role of the Earl of Essex in this production.

Theater Lighting

Illuminating Motion Picture Houses with High Efficiency Mazda Lamps.

By A. L. Powell.

THE value of display lighting is appreciated by every well-informed business man. Through long years a torch or fire has been used when hunting wild animals at night, to draw the prey to the vicinity of the marksman. Human beings are equally susceptible to the magnetic power of bright lights. The most casual observation will bear this out. The brightest street has the most traffic—Broadway and 42d street, for example.

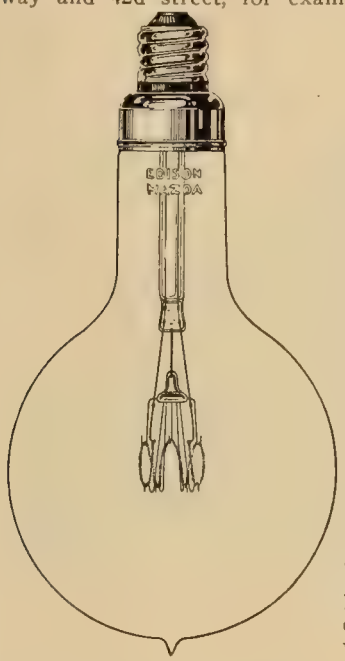


Illustration 1—Sketch showing construction of the high efficiency Mazda lamp.

Merchants are awakening more and more to the value of lighting, and the standard of the intensity of illumination in commercial service is rapidly rising. The managers of motion picture houses have been unusually wide awake in this respect.

Building front lighting has several distinct advantages: it is simple to install, but few units are required and these are relatively low in first cost; second, the skeptic can easily be convinced of the added attractiveness of his building, as a demonstration can be readily made. A temporary installation can be easily put up by means of a few feet of flexible cord.

Heretofore the 250, 400 and 500-watt Mazda lamps, with suitable enclosing fixtures, have been used for this class of service, but with the advent of the new type lamp it is to be expected that increased interest will be shown.

Certain changes have been made in the construction of the Mazda lamp which greatly improve its efficiency. In brief, these are as follows:

The filament now operates at a higher temperature, giving a whiter light than was formerly secured with incandescent lamps and rendering it unnecessary to use enormous bulbs to obtain lamps of the higher candlepower, say 1,500 to 2,000.

The concentrating of the filament within a small space gives more accurate control of the light when using properly designed reflectors.

The light obtained is of great brilliancy, an important feature where spectacular effects are aimed at.

The construction of the lamps is shown in Figure 1. These are available in 105 to 125-volt range, with the following ratings:

Size Lamp	Efficiency W. P. C.	Type and size of bulb	Bulb dia. in inches	Maximum Overall length in inches	Light center length in inches	Base.
200	.80	S-30	3¾	7⅛	5 7/16	Med. Screw Skirt.
300	.78	S-35	4⅜	8¾	6 1/8	" " "
400	.75	S-40	5	10	7	Mogul Screw Skirt
500	.70	S-40	5	10	7	" " "
750	.60	S-46	5¾	13	9½	" " "
1,000	.55	S-52	6½	13⅜	9½	" " "

A number of fixtures, developed for out-of-door service, are particularly well suited to building front lighting. These are adequately ventilated to take care of the heat generated by the larger sizes. A diffusing globe is provided to protect the eye and a metal housing used to protect the socket and lamp from the weather. It is very essential that suitable diffusing media be used where the lamps are hung low, for the glare of the bare, unshielded lamp is quite severe.

Illustration 2—View showing the effect of using an opaque reflector above the lamp for building front lighting.

The higher efficiency Mazda lamp is particularly suited to the illumination of motion picture exteriors, as this class of service requires a great flood of light to attract attention. A unit must be used which, after the first installation, will take care of itself, as there is usually no mechanic available to make repairs or adjustments.

Obviously, the simplest method of applying the light is to suspend the units from the face of the building. In such cases a type of fixture should be used which diffuses the light. In non-technical language this means the spreading of the light equally in all directions; some down to the sidewalk, some to the front of the building and some upward, allowing the light to shade off gradually and bringing out the architecture of the building.

Fig. 2 illustrates the effects secured when an opaque reflector is used above the lamp; all the light is sent directly downward, making the sidewalk, street and lower portion of the building extremely bright by producing a sharp line of shadow opposite the lamp. In this case a 750-watt lamp is used in an enameled steel dome-shaped reflector about 16 feet above the sidewalk.

Illustration 3—Group of night photographs showing the use of high efficiency Mazda lamps in diffusing ball fixtures lighting motion picture houses.

In Fig. 3 may be seen a group of motion picture houses which have from two to five lamps suspended from the building by iron pipe fixtures. In each case a spherical opalescent glass ball surrounds the lamp and is held up by ventilated holder, which also serves as a protection to the socket. In the three upper pictures 1,000-watt lamps are used, while the houses in the lower row are lighted by 750-watt Mazda lamps. These provide a flood of light, which, supplementing the decorative outline lighting, makes the entire surroundings of a high intensity of illumination and causes the building fronts to present an attractive picture.

Illustration 4—Night photograph showing the use of 1,000-watt lamps suspended from the marquise of a prominent vaudeville house.

A slightly different arrangement is used at the Lyric Theater, Market street, Newark, N. J., which is illustrated in the night view, Fig. 4. At each corner of the overhanging marquise are 1,000-watt Mazda lamps in diffusing balls. The sidewalk is very evenly illuminated, and sufficient light escapes upward to illuminate a portion of the building front.

Not only should the front of the theatre be well illuminated, but the entrance and foyer offer an additional opportunity for drawing the crowds. Direct, semi-indirect and totally indirect lighting may be used here, and the system installed will depend on local conditions. With light-colored ceilings, semi-indirect illumination has proven very popular. With this system a white or opalescent glass bowl is placed between the lamp and the observer, directing most of the light to the ceiling, from which it is reflected downward, at the same time transmitting a small part of the light, giving life to the fixture.

Dishes or bowls of varying contour, design and composition are available. The La Salle foyer, Chicago, Ill., shown in Fig. 5, uses seven 750-watt high efficiency Mazda lamps in hemispherical leaded art glass dishes about two feet in diameter. The effect is striking and without glare, and the illumination very even.

It is hoped that the few examples given above will be of service to those managers studying methods to bring the crowd to their theater.

Illustration 5—Semi-indirect illumination of the corridors of prominent Chicago theater.

KLEINE'S "DU BARRY" BREAKS MANHATTAN BOOKING RECORD.

What is undoubtedly New York's booking record was that made by George Kleine's New York office with the latest Kleine subject, "Du Barry," in the eight hours following its showing to the trade on Monday, January 11. In this short space of time forty-eight bookings were registered. The following Tuesday morning, in spite of cold, inclement weather, thirty more were added. All Kleine branch offices report unprecedented advance bookings.

FIGHTING CENSORSHIP IN OHIO.

Senator Louis C. Myers of Marion, O., hailing from the District of Governor Willis, has introduced a bill in the Senate of Ohio, providing for the repeal of the present Censorship Law. The bill will shortly come up for second reading, and it is expected that it will be referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The Cleveland Chamber of Commerce has asked for a conference with Governor Willis on the subject of the repeal of the Censorship Law. It is expected that arrangements will be made at once for the holding of such a conference at an early date.

TURNER RETURNS TO LUBIN.

William H. Turner, the well-known character actor, has returned to the Lubin studio after an engagement with the E. E. Albee Stock Company, in Providence, R. I. Mr. Turner has been on the stage for over twenty-five years. For ten years he was starred. He is best remembered for his portrayal of "David Harum," in which he toured for four years, going from coast to coast, and visiting almost every city in the country.

NEW EDUCATIONAL.

The new daily program service being issued by the United Film Service will be made the more interesting by the introduction of occasional educational films which will put forth the workings of various industries, scenic attractions and subjects of current interest. These films will be produced by the Nelson Film Company, recently organized. J. Arthur Nelson, of San Diego, Cal., is president of the new concern.

Thomas H. Ince Busy with a Scenario.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

BOSWORTH IN "BUCKSHOT JOHN."

As its next release Bosworth, Inc., announces its initial Charles E. Van Loan subject, "Buckshot John," a highly dramatic story presenting many unusual features and a remarkable cast. Hobart Bosworth, in a sympathetic central character which gives him one of the greatest opportunities of his brilliant career, affords added proof, were such needed, of his unusual versatility. That unusually clever screen artist, Courtenay Foote, appears at the head of an exceptional cast including such talented players as Helen Wolcott, Oscar Linkenhelt, Herbert Standing, Rhea Haines and Carl Von Schiller. Art Accord, the famous cowboy, and Frank Lanning, most popular in plays of this nature, were specially engaged for this production.

Scene from "Buckshot John" (Bosworth).

Besides appearing in the title role, Mr. Bosworth personally attended to the direction of the subject. Each scene has been staged in a manner entirely in accordance with the painstaking care evident in every Bosworth release, and nothing has been overlooked, to the smallest detail.

Many novel photographic effects, including a scene taken by moonlight without the aid of artificial light, the first of its kind in the history of motion pictures, have been successfully handled by George W. Hill, Bosworth's expert cameraman. From all points of view, dramatic, artistic and technical, "Buckshot John" will immediately assert itself as one of the strongest feature productions ever made. The release of the photoplay is scheduled for February 4th, through the Paramount Program.

"THE HIGH HAND" (Favorite Players).

"The High Hand," next production of the Favorite Players, is rapidly nearing completion. The picture is taken from the novel by Jacques Futrelle, and is the story of a successful fight wagered against the grafters and gunmen of a political ring. It is a strong story of red-blooded action, in which stirring situations of dramatic interest abound. Carlyle Blackwell takes the leading part; enacts a character eminently suited to his abilities. As Jim Warren, the factory hand, he meets, fights with, and finally conquers the all-powerful political boss, raising himself up from his lowly position to gain the love and be the equal of the lady of his desire.

William Brunton, who did such excellent work as Count Lecoff in "The Man Who Could Not Lose," and in the part of Roy Arbuthnot in "The Last Chapter," has been assigned the part of Tyson, a political grafter, in "The High Hand." As one of the gang of crooked politicians, he and Carlyle Blackwell meet in several clashes of will and force, which bring out most convincingly the natural talents of these two noted actors.

"THE MASQUERADE HERO" (MinA).

"The Masquerade Hero" is another of the MinA comedies which is bound to set people talking. It is an excellent story with many comic situations, brought about by the desire of the father to appear as a hero in his family circle.

He is justly punished for his egotism by his own little son, who dreams of the tales father tells him and, unfortunately for father, walks in his sleep.

The many dissolves in this picture are a striking example of the very fine photographic work in all MinA films, and should meet with the approval of all.

PATHE MOVING TO BIGGER QUARTERS.

Owing to a very considerable extension of business and new plans shortly to be carried out, the Pathe offices have been moved to 25 West 45th Street, New York. At that address are now located not only the head offices of the Pathe Exchange, Inc. (formerly the Eclectic Film Co.), but also those of Pathe Freres, which have been moved over from Jersey City in order to insure quicker attendance to business and the highest efficiency.

The big studios and connecting services in Jersey City are, of course, not to be discontinued, but are busier than ever, not only because of the big serial, "The Exploits of Elaine," which is meeting with even more remarkable success than the "Perils of Pauline," but also because several prominent producers are engaged in making some fine features which will be printed and published by Pathe.

"PATSY IN BUSINESS" (Lubin).

In this number Patsy's misfortunes are simply heart pulling. Having run away from home with no money but a bad dollar bill, he is put off the train and has to spend the night on a bench in a lonely depot. Although "not knowing where he is at," he finds an uncle of his beloved Tilly Grace and secures a job in his drug store. Taking down the shutters he breaks a window, for which he must forfeit

Scene from "Patsy in Business" (Lubin).

$2.00, before he has earned it. Then he gives a man a dose of caustic soda instead of bicarbonate of soda and comes near killing the man. Of course, he is fired again without money. He then gets a tryout at a barber shop. His first customer is Sykesy whom he cuts up in good style. Sykesy makes a rush at him and the barber kicks him out. He hurries out of town on the trucks of a freight train. Clay M. Greene, the author of the series, has certainly made this number a scream.

NEW MANAGER FOR KLEINE'S DALLAS OFFICE.

Harry Scott, long and favorably known to film men in all parts of the country, has been made manager of the George Kleine office at Dallas, Texas. Mr. Scott has had a wide experience with the Kleine attractions, having been one of the original "Quo Vadis?" company managers and later opened the Kleine office in Columbus, Ohio.

"THE VISION OF THE SHEPHERD" (Selig).

"The Vision of the Shepherd," a Selig drama, written by Malcolm Douglas and directed by Colin Campbell, will be a special two-reel release for Monday, February 1. The film reviewers who have viewed this drama are a unit in their praises of its beautiful scenes, convincing acting, and the lesson the drama teaches. It is the universal opinion of authorities that "The Vision of the Shepherd" will be one of the most striking picture plays of the year 1915. Old Jacob, while securing his flock of sheep for the night, has a vision in which he is asked if all the sheep are safe in the fold. He answers that they are, but later discovers that a little lamb is missing. Lantern in hand he searches for the missing lamb and he restores it to the fold. Nell, the beautiful daughter of aged Jacob and wife, listens to the voice of the temptor, this time in the person of the worldly-wise young man. She agrees to elope with him and leaves a message to that effect for her aged parents. The scoundrel engages the services of a broken-down actor who is to pose as a clergyman and perform a false marriage. Just as the mock ceremony is being performed the pseudo clergyman becomes conscience-stricken; he warns Nell of her danger and she flees from the dwelling. Again Old Jacob has a vision. Again he is asked if all the sheep are safe in the fold and he sadly answers "No." Again the vision tells him to go forth and seek the missing lamb. His simple heart and devout faith start him on his search, which leads to the city. Nell, in her flight, seeks the city park, where she is rescued from danger by a Salvation Army lass, who takes Nell to the city mission. Old Jacob has also turned his steps to the Salvation Army chapel, and there he is overjoyed to find his only daughter. He returns home with her and that evening, when Jacob has another vision and the question is again asked: "Are all the sheep in the fold?" he clasps Nell to his breast and, with devout thankfulness, replies that the wandering lamb has been found.

Scene from "The Vision of the Shepherd" (Selig).

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE TO OPEN NEW OFFICES.

The Picture Playhouse Film Company has ten branch offices now open and showing good returns. The board of directors has six more offices in different centers now under negotiation, and as soon as suitable quarters and branch managers can be selected, will be ready to open under the direct management of the home office.

The offices will probably be located in Boston, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Atlanta and Indianapolis. The Picture Playhouse has extended its territory in Canada to Winnipeg and Vancouver and now covers the entire Dominion with its feature releases.

The company has just received from abroad the first installment of a wonderful war film taken actually on the battlefields, which will be released together with the regular programme of feature releases.

SPIEGEL VISITS CONNECTICUT THEATERS.

Jacques Spiegel, manager of the New York exchange of the United Film Service, and P. F. Bahrum, of the same office, have left for a week's tour of Connecticut on a mission of inquiry into film conditions. Messrs. Spiegel and Bahrum will visit United theaters in various parts of the state. Rapid expansion of the United Film Service in Connecticut has caused the officials of the company to consider the establishment of another branch to control the service in that state, and on the report to be made by Messrs. Spiegel and Bahrum will be based their decision.

BELLE GOLD TO PLAY IN PICTURES.

Among the prominent picture people now in town is Mrs. A. W. Cross of Pittsburgh, Pa. She will be remembered by theatrical folk as Belle Gold and was last on the stage with the original Winter Garden show. That was three years ago when it was carried by an all star cast. Before that she was co-star with Eddie Foy in "Mr. Hamlet of Broadway." Mrs. Cross is here to buy picture features for her husband, head of the Hudson Feature Company of Pittsburgh, and affiliated with the United Booking Office of the same place, who handles only first class features. This exchange had two prints of Annette Kellerman working every day for fourteen weeks without leaving the neighborhood of Pittsburgh.

One of the most popular offerings of recent days there, Mrs. Cross says, is "After the Ball," for which Mr. Cross received the record-breaking price of $310 for three nights at the Cameraphote, which seats only 600 people. He has just bought the rights for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia of "Souls Enchained," a high-class offering in five reels from the True Feature. Mrs. Cross says that mere melodrama doesn't go strongly in and about the Smoky City; but that there is a good market for such pictures as the last named offering which features Lyda Borelli, an Italian actress of remarkable power and beauty.

Mrs. Cross will become a picture star shortly. For she is to put on three of her old successes, "Colorado Waif," "The Circus Girl," and "The Pitfall."

"IN HER MOTHER'S FOOTSTEPS" (Lubin).

This is a wonderful story of the art studio and a pitiful tale of mistaken jealousy. The artist uses his beautiful wife as a model for a madonna. The picture is secured by an old time rival, which so incenses the artist that he drives his wife and little daughter out into the world. Years pass and the picture which has passed into the possession of a rich collector is destroyed by fire. The artist, who has become a derelict, is sought and implored to make a duplicate, but he has now no model. The daughter, who is a perfect counterpart of her mother, is found and induced to pose. During the sitting the girl slyly slips out and places her mother before the artist. A beautiful recognition and reconciliation takes place, and after the many years the family are blessed with future happiness. Lilie Leslie, who is Col. Joe Smiley's leading lady, plays the dual role of mother and daughter.

Scene from "In Her Mother's Footsteps" (Lubin).

KLEINE MANAGERS HOLD CONFERENCE.

George Kleine held a conference of his Eastern branch managers at his New York offices on Sunday, Jan. 17. Among those present were: Messrs. George Kleine, D. H. Bergh, of Chicago; W. E. Raynor, J. J. Dacey, H. A. Bugie, New York office; J. J. Rotchford, Philadelphia office; D. L. Dennison, Pittsburgh office; B. F. Simpson, Atlanta office; D. Cooper, Toronto office; R. D. Marson, Boston office. After the meeting Mr. Kleine entertained the party at dinner.

TOOMEY-O'HARA.

W. C. Toomey, formerly with the Mutual Film Corporation but more recently with the New York Motion Picture Corporation, was married on Monday, January 18, to a Miss O'Hara of Brooklyn. Mr. and Mrs. Toomey sailed on the following Wednesday for an extended tour of Europe on the Red Star S.S. Lapland.

Notes of the Trade

Augustus Carney, who is known to motion picture audiences throughout the country as "Alkali Ike" and was for years one of the featured stars of the Universal, is an exceptionally talented screen actor to be added to the growing all-star roster of the United Film Service. Carney is now appearing with the Albuquerque Film Company, which releases its output through the United under the imprint of Luna. His first appearance under the United auspices has just been made in the double reel farce comedy, "Hickville's Diamond Mystery." That Hickville should possess such a luxury as a diamond is certainly a mystery, and, Hickville being synonymous to "country town," the comic possibilities of the plot are easily discernible.

* * *

Gail Kane, who has a prominent role in the William A. Brady photoplay based on "The Pit," in which Wilton Lackaye is being starred, has never seen the film in which she appears. To make it possible for her to see herself, Special Representative Beihoff has arranged to have her present at the Locust theater, Philadelphia, where "The Pit" is to be shown.

* * *

With millions of men engaged in the European Armageddon, Americans have not forgotten our own invasion of Vera Cruz last May. Heroes of the landing under fire who distinguished themselves by conspicuous gallantry are shown in the latest number (149) of the Animated Weekly which was released on January 13. Secretary Daniels is shown as he presents medals to the sailors of the battleship Florida at Brooklyn Navy Yard for their exceptional heroism.

* * *

Leona Hutton is given the chance to play the part of a refined and intellectual young woman in "The Chinatown Mystery," a two-part newspaper story released in the Mutual program by the Broncho. She was happy in the change, for she has heretofore played underworld parts.

* * *

Miss Claire McDowell, late of the Biograph Company, has joined the Universal Company, to be leading woman for King Baggot.

* * *

In "Suspicious Characters," Edison, there is a whirlwind windup wherein everbody finds pies coming toward their mouths more quickly than they can be masticated. William Bechtel, new to these pie battles, liked to see what was coming—instead of closing his eyes, as those battles are always fought. William saw the pie all right. The spice in it so inflamed his eye that he was laid up for two days.

* * *

Gladden James, the well-known leading man of the Vitagraph Company, is fast becoming one of the best liked motion picture players in the profession. Exhibitors all over the country are featuring him. The Star Family theater of New York announces that it specially advertises all pictures in which Mr. James appears.

* * *

George J. Boihoff, who is the special representative for the World Film Corporation, is engaged with the Philadelphia branch, in association with Manager Etris. Prior to becoming special representative, Mr. Boihoff was the manager of the Philadelphia office of the World Film Corporation, and was later associated with the Cleveland and Indianapolis offices.

* * *

Irene Hunt and Eugene Pallette are featured in the Griffith-Mutual two-part drama, "The Death Dice," which has just been released in the Mutual program, and is adapted from George Patulli's story. Dice shaking for a human life, some clever detective work, and western atmosphere are the distinguishing marks of this production. Fred Burns and Vester Perry are also in this cast, which rehearsed under the direction of Fred A. Kelsey.

* * *

The entire Gold Seal (Universal) company has left the Hollywood studios for Balboa, on the Pacific Coast, where, under the direction of W. T. McCulley, they will await the coming of a storm. A realistic storm scene is called for in "Haunted Hearts," a dramatic feature film in which Cleo Madison will star. The scenario of "Haunted Hearts" has been waiting until the Gold Seal company might reasonably expect a storm to sweep the coast.

* * *

Despite the fact that he looks unusually well fed for an actor, Harry Eytinge has not been cast for the part of a cook. But in that role he played to a select but small audience a few nights ago when he played host in his apartment to all the ladies in the Edison scenario and office department. They say it didn't taste bad either.

* * *

H. Rennie, representative for the World Film Corporation, with headquarters in Seattle, was a visitor at Butte, Mont., recently, on a trip through the state calling on theater managers who are using the World Film features. Mr. Rennie was the guest of Manager Philip Levy of the Ansonia theater at luncheon while in Butte, Mont.

* * *

"Through the Murk," a Dominio drama released now in the Mutual program, has as its principal characters a slovenly girl and a town sluggard who refuses to work. Fate brings the two together and the lad braces up under the prospect of a brighter life and obtains employment, while the girl begins to take an interest in her appearance. A bartender, who has been promised the girl by her mother, makes his appearance, but the reformed youth saves her and the happy couple begin life anew. Charles Swickard directed the production.

* * *

In Number 149 of the Universal Animated Weekly, released January 13, hundreds of the German Emperor's crack regiments are shown on their way to a detention camp in England after capture. The views were taken just as the Germans landed from France after crossing the English Channel.

* * *

Realism was reached to a degree uncomfortable to James Harris when as Alderman Quinn in the Edison "In the Plumber's Grip" the ceiling falls on him. With the plaster came a pail which made a real hit with Mr. Harris to the extent of an inch and a half gash in his head. The "ceiling" floored him, but he gamely went back to his part.

Recent Impromptu Reception to Miss Pearl White at the Pathe Studio. From Left to Right—Messrs. Rousseau, Hodupp (Manager of the Syracuse Exchange), Wessel, Ramirez, Malitz (Vice-President of the Company), Julian, Pearl White, Furman (Director of Exchanges), Dupuis (Technical Director of the Company), Atwood (Manager of the Philadelphia Exchange), Osborn (Manager of the Washington Exchange), Burger, Bernfield (Manager of the Boston Exchange), "The Clutching Hand," and Allison (Manager of the Atlanta Exchange).

Joseph Smiley, Lubin director, did some hustling when he completed a three-reel picture in less than three days. And the scenes required a good many exteriors at that. The play was A. Gil Spear's "Rated at Three Million." The "full speed ahead" signal was given and the company got into action. One day they did seventy-two scenes in eleven and a half hours. The picture was completed in two and a half days strenuous work, but Smiley got the results.

* * *

Eddie Lyons of the Nestor comedy company returned to Los Angeles from his home at Beardstown, Illinois, to which place he was summoned by the news of the fatal illness of his mother. He arrived there the day following her death, which occurred in her eighty-first year. The popular young director-actor was very much attached to his mother and her death was a great shock to him and he was much touched at the many expressions of sorrow from his associates.. He started work the day after his arrival in Los Angeles.

* * *

Pretty Reenie Farrington, daughter of Frank Farrington, the Braine of "The Million Dollar Mystery," Thanhouser's great serial, is leading lady of the Princess Company. She has replaced Muriel Ostriche. Reenie, who soon may see her name in the Mutual program, plays leads opposite Boyd Marshall.

* * *

Shannon Fife, one of the shining lights of the scenario writing staff of Lubins, returned to Philadelphia this week from Dallas, Texas, where he has been spending a few weeks telling the "Folks at home" the latest inside news of the motion picture world in general and Lubins in particular.

* * *

"A Heart of Gold," an appealing idyll of the sea, has been released in the Mutual program by the American company. As Jim, the simple-hearted fellow who innocently gives his "heart of gold" to drunken Jake's wife, Harry von Meter is featured. The production was under the direction of Thomas Ricketts.

* * *

Director Howell Hansel has completed the twelfth episode in the Thanhouser-Mutual serial, "Zudora, or the $20,000,000 Mine Mystery," and it will shortly be on sale at all Mutual exchanges. It is called "A Bag of Diamonds." The stones belong to Zudora, but her rascally old uncle, Hassam Ali, took them from her before he died, and entrusted them to a servant, who misplaced them. Jim Baird, played by James Cruze, the new hero, aids John Storm (Harry Benham) in obtaining these diamonds again for Zudora.

* * *

The latest number of the Universal Animated Weekly shows the effects of the bombardment of Scarborough, England, by German cruisers, general views of Scarborough, its landmarks, the old castle on the top of the hill, the terrific damage done to private property, damaged houses in Gladstone road, where several persons lost their lives, the rebuilding of houses in Gladstone road immediately after the bombardment, churches which were used as targets, holes in the roof of the Wesleyan Chapel, damage done to Merryweathers and the patroling of the seashore by cavalry during the bombardment.

* * *

Miss Gertrude McCoy, while posing as a man in a picturesque masquerade scene in "33 Runs Wild," the Edison play soon to be released, is forced to smoke a cigar. Like the small boy behind the barn, she had to spend some time behind the scenes learning how to "pull on it." She bravely went through the cigar-smoking scene, but threw it away weakly, "sick to her stomach." In the same play, she has to leap aboard a flying locomotive which, she declared, she'd rather do ten times than have to smoke a cigar once, or "rope," as she termed it.

* * *

Recent additions for Shubert-Brady service through the Chicago office of the World Film Corporation, include the copper and iron circuit of theaters throughout Northern Michigan and Wisconsin. The Princess theater, Urbana, Ill., Mr. S. H. Freeman, manager, claimed to be one of the finest theaters in that part of the state, opens on January 25 with World Film Corporation releases. The picture selected for the opening night is Wilton Lackaye in "The Pit." Among others who have contracted are Trinklo & Malony, Luna theater, Danville, Ill., and Mr. C. S. Sullivan, who owns a chain of theaters from Calumet to Menominee, Mich.

* * *

Otis B. Thayer, director of the new Pike's Peak Film Company, has produced some of the most picturesque and fascinating western reels ever flashed on the screen. As director of the new Colorado organization he will take full advantage of the pictorial opportunities offered by Colorado's unsurpassed scenic beauties. "The Greater Barrier," with George Gebhart, the noted actor of Indian roles, in the lead, is the most recent release of the Pike's Peak company.

* * *

Edna Maison is no longer connected with the "Powers" brand of Universal pictures. In future all pictures in which she appears will be released under the "Big U" brand. Miss Maison is now busy, under Director Burton King's direction, playing the principal role in "The Vandry Jewels," in which she takes the part of a smuggler who is run to earth by a detective (Ray Gallagher).

* * *

Edward J. Connelly arrived in Los Angeles, "the city of films," last week to begin work as a leading man with the forces of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. Thomas H. Ince has not yet made known just what vehicle he has in mind for Connelly, but it is understood he will be starred in a feature production now being prepared for use in the Mutual program. This actor is well remembered by theater audiences from his appearances in "Everywoman" and "A Good Little Devil."

Director Carroll Fleming has just completed for release in the Mutual program a two-reeler called "In the Jury Room." It is by Philip Lonergan and features Mignon Anderson, "the daredevil ingenue," Arthur Ashley and Sidney Bracy, who plays the part of a self-abnegating physician.

* * *

Pauline Bush will be featured as a chorus girl in "The Girl Who Could Not Go Wrong," which Director Joseph De Grasse has finished while waiting for the rain to stop on the coast. As soon as the clouds roll by Director De Grasse will proceed with "The Dream of Sister Ursula."

* * *

At the new Selig Jungle-Zoo, opened at Los Angeels, there are wild animals valued at a half million dollars. They are used in Selig Jungle-Zoo picture plays. There are 13 Bengal tigers, more than 40 lions, 14 deadly pumas, jaguar, hyenas, black bear, sloth bear, civit cats, ant-eaters, 15 leopards, two black panthers, three Malay bears, nine wolf dogs, and various other beasts.

* * *

The palatial and exclusive homes of four wealthy Californians were recently used by the California Motion Picture Corporation to get the scenic effects needed in producing the filmed version of the famous old grand opera "Mignon."

* * *

Victor Potel as "Slippery Slim" in Western Essanay comedies, was put through another hair raising stunt during the filming of "Sophie Changes Her Mind." From a bridge fifty feet high, he was sent dangling head down into midair at the end of a rope tied to his legs.

* * *

C. N. Mortenson hopes to get many laughs by his work in "College Days," a new K-B production to be released Feb. 5th by the New York Motion Picture Corporation. He plays the part of Jimmy Cripps, an effeminate "grind," who is constantly being maltreated by the other students.

* * *

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. has cast House Peters for the leading male role with Blanche Sweet in the Lasky-Belasco production of "The Warrens of Virginia." Mr. Peters makes his debut as a Lasky artist in the Lasky-Belasco offering, "The Girl of the Golden West."

* * *

Anna Little has a new auto. She says that it's just as long as Herbert Rawlinson's, but Herbert says that that radiator of Anna's car is not as pretty as his—so there! Anna is now practicing hard for the time when she will be able to run her own machine in through the door of its garage without knocking the garage down.

* * *

Every Saturday will hereafter mark the release of a one-reel Selig Jungle-Zoo Wild Animal Pictureplay. A large variety of wild animals will perform in these one-reel pictureplays, in which care has been taken to provide strong stories, good acting, and scenic backgrounds of unusual beauty. There has been a great demand for more Selig Jungle-Zoo Wild Animal Pictureplays on the part of the exhibitors because of the great popularity of these releases with the public. The Selig Company has decided to supply the great demand and each and every release will be correct in every detail.

* * *

A company of eighteen persons—embracing the principals in the cast and a number of actors from the Chinese Stock Company of Los Angeles—was taken to San Francisco last week to enact some scenes for "The Chinatown Mystery," a Broncho production ready for release Feb. 10.

* * *

George Fisher of Inceville is a college-bred actor, and for that reason —among others—he was chosen to play the lead in "College Days," a K-B release of Feb. 5th dealing with a football game and a disloyal student.

* * *

Benjamin Cohen, until recently a member of the staff of Lewis J. Selznick at the World Film Corporation is the latest recruit to the forces at the headquarters of the Alliance Films Corporation.

Mr. Cohen will assume charge of the Auditing Department when alterations now under way are completed.

* * *

Cathrine Countiss, engaged to play the star part in "A Modern Magdalen," now in the course of preparation by the Life Photo Film Corporation, has purchased five gorgeous gowns to be used in that production.

* * *

William Foster, superintendent of the Universal laboratories, has been working on a process of colored photography for the past nine months and now announces that the invention is to be put to a practical use.

* * *

Mr. Aleck Papayanakos, manager of the New Antique Theater, Watertown, N. Y., has arranged to show World Film Corporation features. This insures for manager Papayanakos all the Broadway stars and successes on the World Film schedule.

* * *

Rienzi de Cordova, heretofore of the Famous Players Company, has been engaged by Tom Terriss for the new photoplay, "A Man's Shadow." He will create in America the part of "Craig Dare," recently played in London by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree.

* * *

Thousands of passersby, according to the estimate of a Broadway photographer, stop daily in front of a big plate-glass case at the corner of Broadway and Forty-sixth street, to admire the latest product of his studio, a life size photographic reproduction of Irene Tams, the United Film Service star. The picture is in colors and fairly alive with animation, so well does it mirror the personality of Miss Tams. The subject of the photographer's masterly attention is appearing in a unique series of photoplays which have just been added to the United Film Service.

* * *

Through the kind offices of friends of her father in the Kinetophote Corporation Katherine Adams, the twelve-year-old daughter of C. C. Adams, vice-president of the Postal Telegraph Company, recently enjoyed a most modern birthday party.

She invited fifty people, there being thirty of her little friends among them, and provided as entertainment as fine a moving picture show as any crowd of youngsters could want to see. The Kinetophote sent an operator with a projection machine as well as several comedy films, among them the one-reel pictures depicting the adventures of "Tweedledum," the famous Italian cinema comedian, whose antics so delighted the children at the New York Foundling Hospital on New Year's Day.

* * *

Melvin G. Winstock, the general manager of the National Amusement Company, of Portland, Ore., who owns the largest motion picture theatre on the coast, and a friend of Carlyle Blackwell, writes Mr. Blackwell that he showed the "Key to Yesterday," and that it created a profound impression on all who saw it." He continues, "I consider it a very strong picture. Mechanically, it is almost perfect. I am told that 'The Man Who Could Not Lose' is even better, and have it under contract. If 'The Last Chapter' is better than these two, I can hardly realize how good it may be."

* * *

The latest addition to the growing list of Alliance exchanges is in Cincinnati, at 224½ Fourth Street, in the centre of the city, and convenient to local and suburban exhibitors. This exchange which will handle the state of Ohio, will be one of the finest equipped film houses in that section of the country and under the general direction of A. A. Weilland.

* * *

Donham Palmer has been secured by Western District Manager Harry C. Drum, of the World Film Corporation, as manager of the Salt Lake City branch.

* * *

William Moore, he of the auburn hair known as "Willie," who began his film career in 1908 as office boy for Harry R. Raver, and who has been found in every one of Mr. Raver's enterprises since that time, is now installed in the new Itala offices in the World's Tower Building as "executive custodian," his new duties being to "look after everything" in sight.

* * *

Rose Tapley of the Vitagraph Stock Company, is enjoying all the excitement and thrills of a real lady burglar in her impersonation of a like character in "A Nocturne in A-Flat," a spoken drama shown at the Vitagraph Theatre. Crawling through an open window into a strange apartment, flashing a dark lantern around the room with a revolver in her hand, in the approved style of the latest society burglar.

* * *

J. D. Thatcher, Jr., is now connected with the Omaha branch of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Thatcher is an experienced theatrical man of many years' standing in the middle west, and he should be a valuable acquisition to that energetic organization.

* * *

George Cooper, of the Vitagraph Stock Company, made his first air flight Thursday, January 7, and is so enthusiastic over the thrilling sensation, he is thinking seriously of becoming a professional aviator. His first flight was in the nature of a tryout for a picture in which he is to play the part of an airman. Under the guiding hand of an experienced aviator, Mr. Cooper was introduced to the mysteries of an airship's manipulation and returned to earth after being a thousand feet in the air.

* * *

Although the Tom Mix production was not released until Jan. 26, it needed but a hint regarding "The Grizzly Gulch Chariot Race" to start the orders rolling into the General Film office for this uproarious Selig western comedy. The actual race itself—regardless of its burlesque character—contains one of the biggest thrills of the season. Mix could not even play a comedy without risking his neck. How close he played to the hospital in this picture must be seen to be realized.

* * *

Mr. G. M. Anderson, who spent the holidays in Chicago, and Charles Chaplin, the new Essanay comedian, danced the "Broncho Billy" waltz at a consolation party in Chicago. They appeared in their motion picture make-up. The dance was originated by Mr. Anderson and is one of the weirdest and funniest stunts on or off the stage.

Picture Theaters Projected

WHITE HALL, ILL.—White Hall Theater Co., C. Lowenstein, manager, are having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 135 feet. There will be two stores on the ground floor.

E. CHICAGO, IND.—Joseph Hartley will erect a two-story moving picture theater, hall and office building, 50 by 135 feet, to cost $35,000.

NEWPORT, KY.—Zettel & Rapp have awarded the contract for the new Hippodrome theater to be erected at 8th and Monmouth streets.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Arthur B. Price, 617 West North avenue, has plans under consideration for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $15,000.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—A. E. Elliott has taken title to the Maze theater at 12th and Baltimore streets. The house has seating capacity for about 700 persons, which will be devoted to the exhibit of moving pictures.

KEARNEY, NEB.—Swan & Swartz have opened their new moving picture theater, the Chrystal. It has seating capacity for 1,100 persons and cost $60,000.

KEARNEY, N. J.—James Lindsay will shortly start work on the erection of his one-story moving picture theater, to cost $9,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—S. Jacobs, 3 East 86th street, will expend $5,000 in making alterations and additions to his moving picture theater. Lessee, Mrs. R. Jordan, 209 Park Row.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—F. Lang, 266 East 78th street, will convert two dwellings into a three-story moving picture theater, to cost $7,000.

BUCYRUS, O.—August Helmoldt has awarded the contract for the erection of a moving picture theater, to cost $8,000.

COLUMBUS, O.—T. R. Morris & Co. have been awarded the contract to erect a moving picture theater for Paul Stanffner. Work will not be commenced until early spring.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Liberty theater is being erected at Superior avenue and East 114th street for the Doan Square Realty Co. The house will probably be completed and opened to the public early in February.

CLEVELAND, O.—W. C. Morton, Schofield building, contemplates remodeling his property at Euclid avenue and 79th street into a modern moving picture theater.

CLEVELAND, O.—Edward Miller is planning to erect a moving picture theater at Woodhill road and Woodland avenue, to cost $35,000.

CLEVELAND, O.—Jacob Babin is having the work on his new moving picture theater at Broadway and East 79th street completed as rapidly as possible. The house has been leased to an amusement company formed by local interests for the exhibit of high-class photoplays.

CLEVELAND, O.—Paul Kekas will erect a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 105 by 30 feet.

CINCINNATI, O.—John W. Weinig, 1103 First National Bank building, is interested in a company now organizing for the purpose of erecting a one-story moving picture theater, 96 by 110 feet, to cost about $35,000.

MASSILLON, O.—A stock company has been formed here to construct a two-story theater building, 66 by 150 feet, to cost $60,000.

NEWCOMERSTOWN, O.—Ortt Brothers have let the contract for the erection of a three-story moving picture theater. Work will be started shortly.

RAVENNA, O.—H. W. Riddle will erect a brick and tile moving picture theater on Main street, to cost about $30,000. The house will be modern in every detail.

RAYLAND, O.—The Bellaire Amusement Company are having plans prepared by a local architect for a moving picture theater, to cost about $12,000.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Louis Chakaris is having plans prepared for a large moving picture theater to cost approximately $150,000. It will be one of the show places of the city when completed.

WADSWORTH, O.—William Standen will erect a commodious moving picture theater, to cost about $80,000.

XENIA, O.—Clifford Sutton is having plans prepared for a moving picture theater to be erected in the early spring.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—H. M. Meeker is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 120 feet. There will be two stores on the ground floor.

BRIDGEVILLE, PA.—David Delphus has opened his new moving picture theater here. It has seating capacity for about 300 persons.

EASTON, PA.—Easton & Phillipsburg Construction Company, Phillipsburg, N. J., has obtained the contract to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 36 by 140 feet, to cost $12,000, for the Keystone Amusement Corporation.

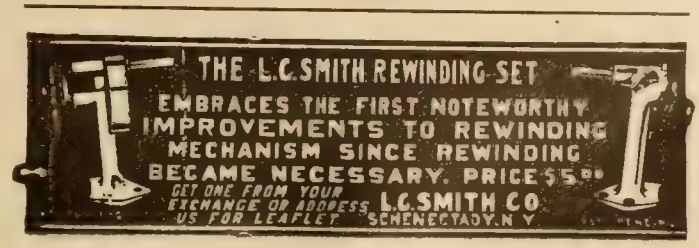
PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The moving picture theater at the northeast corner of 6th and Pike streets, known as the Pike theater, has been sold to Margery A. Redmond, subject to mortgages of $25,700. The price paid for the theater was $32,000. The house has seating capacity for 800 persons.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Manayunk's new moving picture and vaudeville theater, the Empress, has been formally dedicated. The new structure stands on the site of the old Liberty Hotel, in Main street, above Carson. The main entrance is of white glazed terra cotta, designed in the Renaissance period. The balcony is reached by one large stairway from the lobby and another from the promenade which leads to the mezzanine floor. The house has a seating capacity of 1,700, including the boxes. The interior is decorated in cream and soft brown, with ornamental plaster work brought out in ivory tints. The woodwork is Circassian walnut. The stage is large enough to accommodate any "road" show.

LAREDO, TEX.—The Royal Amusement Company of San Antonio is erecting a commodious moving picture theater, to cost about $45,000. The house will have seating capacity for 1,500 persons.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.—L. S. Brock is planning to convert a store building into a modern moving picture theater, to cost $3,000.

WHEELING, W. VA.—John Eapulias and George Zeppides are having plans prepared for a three-story moving picture theater and office building, 67 by 127 feet, to cost $35,000.



License Code in Boston.

License Clerk Casey Holds Different Opinion on Matter of Licenses for Special Picture Shows from Building Commissioner O'Hearn, Who Is Backed by Mayor—Where Applications Are Held Up After Leaving License Bureau—Short Digest of the Laws.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE interpretation of the laws governing licenses for the exhibition of moving pictures has caused differences in opinion between Building Commissioner O'Hearn and License Clerk Casey of Boston. Commissioner O'Hearn firmly refuses to approve buildings where these entertainments are desired and where they have been held in the past, unless the buildings are of first class construction and have means of egress that appear to be sufficient to him. In such refusal, he is said to be exceeding his authority.

Mayor James M. Curley firmly upholds the building commissioner. His Honor has informed O'Hearn that he is the man responsible for the safety of the public in such buildings and, even though the people are inconvenienced to a large extent, the matter of human life is the first consideration and the enforcement of strict regulations should be encouraged. Since December 11, when a permit was refused for the Harvard Club of Boston to have a motion picture entertainment at its annual dinner at the Copley-Plaza hotel, no permits for moving picture entertainments have been issued.

Mr. O'Hearn has declared that the statute of last year with relation to buildings for moving picture entertatinments, should be applied to all applications for private entertainments. License Clerk Casey has taken the opposite view of the matter. When applications for special exhibition permits have been received at the mayor's office, License Clerk Casey has sent them to the building department for the location of the temporary booth, thence to the state police and finally to the wire department. Since December 11, none of these applications have gone further than the office of the building commissioner.

The law upon which Mr. O'Hearn bases his opinions in the case of special exhibitions is that which was recently tested in the Superior Court in the case of the Park theater of Boston. Section 4 of Chapter 782 of the Statutes of 1914 reads: "Every building hereafter erected for, altered or converted to use as a moving picture house shall be a first class building. In this case, O'Hearn maintained that the extensive improvements on the building were not of first class construction and therefore the mayor's office had no license to grant it a license for moving pictures. It was successfully contended, however, that the building was not "hereafter erected for," because it was erected and in use since 1879; that it was not "altered to or converted to use" as a moving picture house, because moving pictures were a part of the entertainment in the house in previous years; consequently the building was exempt under the act.

In 1904, the building act applying to Boston divided amusements into two classes, one a "theater" and the other a "public hall." These are the only two designations. The law also defined what a theater was and what constituted a public hall, a "theater" meaning a building in which it is designed to make a business of the presentation of dramatic, operatic or other performances or shows for the entertainment of spectators, which is capable of seating at least 400 persons, and which has a stage for such appliances. The term "public hall," according to this law, "shall mean any building or part of a building, excluding theaters, armories or churches, containing an audience or assembly hall capable of seating 100 persons, used for public gatherings."

The Park theater was erected in 1879 under the building laws governing theaters, and being licensed since that time as a theater, it was licensed for the year as in the past, to give "theatrical exhibitions" and in accordance of Chapter 341 of the acts of 1905, reading: "The mayor of a city may grant a license for theatrical exhibitions . . . upon such terms and conditions as he deems reasonable." This law seemed conclusive, but after its passage a question arose and an opinion was sought as to the meaning of the words "theatrical exhibition." It was ruled that the words were broad enough to include any form of entertainment. Therefore, under a license issued to the Park theater it entered into the various forms of entertainment.

The building law, Chapter 550 of the Acts of 1907, which was an amendment of Chapter 450 of the Acts of 1904, again defined a theater by stating that "every building hereafter erected so as to contain an audience hall and a stage, with curtain, movable or shifting scenery, adapted for the giving of plays, opera, spectacle or similar forms of entertainment, and of a size to provide seats for more than 500 spectators, shall be a theater within the meaning of this act." Ever since 1879, the Park theater has applied for and received at the mayor's office a license for a theater and was permitted to give theatrical exhibitions.

In 1908, the amusement licensing act was further amended to make it mandatory upon the mayor to grant theatrical licenses, by substituting the word "shall" for the word "may." Then last year came the amendment providing for first class buildings for moving picture theaters, the interpretation of which will mean much to the moving picture enterprises of Boston.

CONNECTICUT SUNDAY SHOWS.

The present legislature of Connecticut will consider the Sunday show proposition. One of the first bills was introduced in the Senate by Senator L. R. Cheney of Hartford. It provides for moving picture performances on Sunday. Representative Martin of Orange has introduced a resolution which would allow the Mayor or Selectmen of cities and towns to issue licenses for Sunday entertainments.

APPOINTED FILM CENSOR.

Mrs. Anna T. Steinauer, whom Police Commissioner O'Meara of Boston refused to name as a Boston policewoman, after she had been appointed by Mayor James M. Curley, is now acting as an assistant censor in the Boston Amusement License Bureau. She will investigate moving picture theaters, public dance halls and other amusement places frequented by working girls, in order to carry out the Mayor's plan to safeguard the morals of young girls. She has no authority to make arrects and will merely investigate and make daily reports to Mayor Curley. Mrs. Steinauer will visit moving picture houses to see if managers are making proper efforts to exclude young children from their houses during school hours.

GUESTS OF TREMONT TEMPLE.

Plans for a moving picture theater party for children who have been residents of its vacation home in Reading, were made by members of the executive board of the Fathers' and Mothers' Club of Boston. The picture show that is being run weekly at Tremont Temple by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union has been chosen and about one hundred children will be the guests of the club. Two club members have been assigned to each hospital where children of the home have been treated and as many of the little ones as possible will be rounded up.

Miss Florence Lincoln, who has charge of the children's weekly moving picture entertainments in Tremont Temple, was present at a special runoff of the educational films of the United Film Service (Warners Features, Inc.). She informed Frederick B. Murphy, New England lessee, of the company's releases, that she was favorably impressed with "The Lady of the Lake," "Sleeping Beauty," "Hansel and Gretel," "Winter's Tale," "Taming of the Shrew," "The Little Shepherd" and "Golden Locks and the Three Bears."

WILBUR IN CONTRACT SUIT.

Hero of Eclectic Serial Picture Sued by Theatrical Agency for Alleged Breaking of Contract.

Crane Wilbur, hero of the "Perils of Pauline," is the defendant of a civil suit brought against him in the Suffolk Superior Civil Court by the John Quigley Theatrical Agency, Inc., of Boston. The agency seeks $5,000 for breach of contract. Quigley claims that he entered into an agreement with Wilbur under which the latter was to appear upon a tour for 15 weeks, during which time he was to receive $400 a week as compensation. He claims that Wilbur did appear for several weeks and then refused to continue to the end of his contract. He says that Wilbur's failure to live up to his contract has occasioned damage to the Quigley agency and brought it into disrepute. Furthermore, it had been agreed that five per cent. of the salary should be paid to the agency.

PICTURE MAN ARRESTED.

Charles A. Dooley of No. 100 Boylston street, Boston, who has been connected with several moving picture theaters in this district, was arrested last Friday afternoon by Police Inspectors McCarthy and Towle on a charge of larceny of $300 from Joseph J. Sullivan, a retired sailor, who wished to invest a little money in the moving picture business. Sullivan says that he has just returned from a sea voyage and answered an advertisement which stated that an investment of $300 would bring in $25 a week from a string of moving picture houses. It is alleged by the police that Sullivan was promised a job, after answering the advertisement, and was to count the money and do other light work in a Charlestown, Mass., theater. After a delay, Sullivan claims that he went to a lawyer who advised him to get his money back, but he says that he was put off by Dooley, who stated that he was about to be married and was off for his honeymoon. Dooley was taken into custody on returning from the wedding trip.

OTHER NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

Photoplays released through the United Film Service are now being used by the Glendale Square theater, Everett, Mass.; Albert theater, Berlin, N. H.; Marlboro theater, Marlboro, Mass., and the Jefferson theater, Portland, Maine. The company's features are being used by many houses throughout New England.

John Goodwin of the Acme Amusement Company has contracted for the exhibition of the Ambrosia production, "Born Warrior and Exile." This six-reel feature will be shown in the concern's houses at Kennebunk, Kennebunkport, Vinalhaven, Hallowell, Belgrade and Winthrop, all Maine towns.

Prominent state and city officials were present at the opening of the New Empire theater, Winthrop, Mass., which was recently purchased and placed under entirely new management by former Representative Dennis A. O'Neil and Charles L. Winston of East Boston. Mr. Winston was formerly connected with the Keith interests in Boston and has managed numerous picture houses throughout New England. The new management has arranged for the presentation of exclusive photoplays and vaudeville acts from the United Booking Office. The new playhouse is on Shirley street at the Ocean Spray station of the Narrow Gauge railroad. It has a seating capacity of 800. It is strictly fireproof throughout and is one of the most beautifully designed and decorated suburban theaters in Boston.

The Rev. Charles S. Hoff, CSSR. of the Mission Church, Roxbury, Mass., has presented Frederick B. Murphy of the United Film Service with a beautiful oil painting. The gift was made after a moving picture entertainment of the alumni of the Mission Church School, at which the United releases, "For the Love of Prince Yolande" and "Finished at Sea," were the feature productions. Father Hoff is one of the best informed clergymen in New England on moving pictures.

The Boston theater, which has deserted the moving picture ranks for the legitimate, has been compelled to advertise extensively that the production of "Ben Hur," which is now playing there, is not a picturized version of that great play. The Boston opera house, which replaced its picture performances with a Shakespearian stock company, is also advertising that its present attractions are acted in person and not in pictures.

George A. Wardwell, manager of Kincaid's theater, Quincy, Mass., was the first exhibitor to greet Manager Samuel Bernfield of the Pathe Exchange on his return from his recent trip to New York. Mr. Wardwell reports that the "Exploits of Elaine" is attracting big audiences.

E. C. Turnbull of the Reading, Mass., Town Hall, spent considerable time in Boston during the past week, booking features.

"Tillie's Punctured Romance" has proved to be a great favorite with New England audiences. The work of Marie Dressler is appreciated by all who have seen the film. Thomas Sprye of the Alco Film Company reports that he has secured many advance bookings on this feature.

Manager Samuel Bernfield of the New England Pathe Exchange has returned to Boston after a short business trip to New York. The "Exploits of Elaine" is doing a most remarkable business in this territory and Manager Bernfield is having considerable difficulty supplying the demand for this serial with the ten prints which he has working.

Walter Nelson, a well known film man, is assisting H. Hirsch in booking the Thanhouser production of "Zudora." Mr. Nelson has been spending considerable time in Maine with the result that several houses in that state have contracted to run the serial.

A movement is on foot among the exhibitors of New Bedford, Mass., to raise the price of admission to moving picture shows. It will be first started by George W. Allen, Jr., of Allen's theater and Joe Tables of the Big Nickel theater. The present price of the shows in this city is five cents. Messrs. Allen and tables will charge ten cents. At the Allen house, Paramount features are used.

Bert Bohannon, New England representative of the Nicholas Power Company, has supplied two Powers' 6A machines with motor drive for Gordon's Olimpia theater, Washington street, Boston. He has also sold machines of similar type to the Nickel theater, Woonsocket, R. I., and the New Empire theater, Winthrop, Mass.

Joseph Tables of the Big Nickel theater, No. 12 West French avenue, New Bedford, Mass., was a visitor to Manager Ed J. Farrell, of the General Film Company, last week, and contracted for the company's regular service and the Essanay Company's Chaplin features.

The Comique theater at Camden, Maine, is to be reopened on January 25th, after being closed for some time, during which extensive alterations were made on the building. The management has contracted for the General Film Company service.

Eddie Rosen of the Orpheum theater, Haverhill, Mass., and Jack Carney of the Exeter opera house, Exeter, N. H., paid a short visit to Manager Edward J. Farrell of the General Film Company after the weekly run-off on last Tuesday.

Sunday Shows in Maine

How Ministers of Pine Tree State Have Been Educated to See Value of Picture Shows on Sabbath—Waterville Latest City to Adopt the Idea—Bangor Still Backward; Hebrew Congregation There Forbidden to Hold Sacred Concert Lest It Be Opening Wedge.

By John P. Flanagan, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

WATERVILLE is the latest city in Maine to adopt moving pictures on Sunday, and the departure has proved a success from the viewpoint of the managers. Sunday moving pictures at two of the local houses drew large crowds at both afternoon and evening exhibitions. Orchestras played short concerts before the regular program and for the pictures. A silver collection was taken at the door.

Bangor has not yet gotten used to the idea of moving pictures on Sunday, and in fact, any sort of entertainment in a theater meets with instant opposition on the part of the Ministers' Association. Even the Hebrew congregation, which desired to give a sacred concert in Bangor City Hall last winter, was successfully opposed by the ministers. They said that they had naught but good wishes for the Hebrew congregation, but opposed the granting of permission on the grounds that it would prove an entering wedge for Sunday theatrical performances.

Waterville has ideals as high as those of Bangor, and it is interesting to trace the development of the Sunday moving picture idea there. Two years ago, there was an enterprising Y. M. C. A. secretary in Waterville, John B. Northcott, a young man from Indiana. He had a lot of progressive western ideas, and one of them was to hold a series of Sunday afternoon meetings, called "Turn to the Right" meetings. These were held in Waterville City Hall through the co-operation of Neil Kelleher, a proprietor and a well-known Maine moving picture exhibitor. At these meetings, elevating talks were given, and educational moving pictures were shown. The Waterville ministers took part, also, and found that the meetings were doing a great deal of good, as the hall was packed to the doors every Sunday afternoon in winter.

Now that the theatrical managers have opened theaters for exhibition of moving pictures, there is not the opposition that would have aroused itself had not the ministers been educated in the good that may be done by pictures.

There's still another factor that doubtless enters into the liberality of Waterville church element towards Sunday moving pictures. Two years ago, the pastor of the Unitarian church here was an Englishman, Rev. Sydney Booth, a citizen of the world, born in England, formerly a newspaper correspondent in South Africa, and generally talented. One of his accomplishments was the writing of moving picture scenarios, and he sold quite a few too, which is more important. Naturally the Waterville ministers, in getting acquainted with him, and discovering that a man might still be devoted to his ministerial calling, and still enjoy moving pictures, they modified their views to some extent.

NEW LEWISTON THEATER.

The New Lewiston theater has just been opened in Lewiston, Me., by Harry Jones and Sam Barrabee. The theater, which is built along big city lines, is the last word in playhouse construction. It will seat 2,000, has ball-bearing sanitary chairs, ten boxes, and a stage that is one of the largest in New England. The lobby is tastefully decorated in gold, mahogany and marble. The proscenium opening is 40 feet wide and 30 feet high. Automatic sprinklers protect against fire. The motion picture screen is 13½ by 18 feet, of gold fibre material. The room for the projecting apparatus, especially constructed beneath the balcony, is fireproof and contains two of the very latest type of Powers projecting machines. In connection with these, a plan new to this part of the country will be used. Instead of the local alternating current lighting wires this current will be taken into a motor which will operate a generator, so that new direct current will be generated in the projecting room for use of the machines. This will be, it is said, steadier.

SOCIETY AT THE BIJOU.

Bangor society women, through the cooperation of Manager Stephen Bogrett of the Bijou theater, gave a benefit performance at the Bijou during the past week, for the Belgian relief fund. Tickets had been sold in advance to the capacity of the handsome theater by the young ladies of the Keynee Club, a well-known organization of young Bangor women, and the result was a throng at the opening of the doors. The moving picture attraction was the five-reel production "The Three of Us," featuring the talented star, Mabel Taliaferro.

OTHER MAINE NOTES.

At the last meeting of Star in the East Lodge of Masons held in Old Town during the week, the report of the committee, which secured the plans for the new Masonic building to be erected in the spring, was read. The lot is on Center street, next to the new post office building, and the plans of the building, by W E. Mansur, a Bangor architect, were shown and discussed by the members.

The two upper stories will be used for lodge purposes. It is expected to begin work on the cellar about the first of April. C. A. Kittredge is chairman of the committee who secured the lots and plans.

James Farrell, of Pittsfield, Me., left last week for Boston, where he has taken a position with the General Film Co.

The newest theater in eastern Maine is the Graphic, which will be run by Carl Sawyer and his partner, Mr. Roberts. It will be conducted in Milbridge and Cherryfield. F. O. Smith of Milbridge will be the operator. It will be a five-reel show, and 10 cents admission will be charged. The show will be given Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in Milbridge and Thursdays and Saturdays in Cherryfield. Morang Hall, in Milbridge, has been engaged for the performances, and Union Hall in Cherryfield. The General Film program will be used, and the theater has just started with the leading attraction, "Adventures of Kathlyn."

A new moving picture house at Thomaston, Me., is the Union theater, which has just been started by W. R. Erskine. This theater will run three times a week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, with the Universal service, and 10 cents admission.

Hon. F. W. Hill, of Exeter, former State Senator from Penobscot county, has opened up Hill's theater, in Exeter, and will show two nights a week with Universal service.

The Grand theater has been opened in Dexter, W. T. Libby as manager. A show is given every night. The admission is 10 cents, and Warner's service is used.

J. W. Stinson has opened the Pastime picture house at Swans Isle. A new Powers 6-A machine with a motor generator has been installed, and Universal service will be used. Only one show a week is to be given.

Victor Gilpatrick has engaged the town hall in Davidson for a moving picture house, and will run three nights a week, Universal service.

Mrs. I. W. Pettingill has opened the Strand theater in Ellsworth, and has installed a new Powers 6-A machine. The house will run a show every night in the week, charging 10 cents admission and using Universal service. Mrs. Pettingill reports business as very good.

Mrs. Musa Stiner, of Winterport, was a visitor to Bangor this week. Mrs. Stiner conducts moving picture houses at Winterport and Greenville Junction, and reports excellent business.

Frank A. Owen, who for 30 years was manager of the Bangor opera house, which was destroyed by fire in January, 1914, has engaged Central Hall, in Dover, Me., for presentation of moving pictures, and is using Universal service. Mr. Owen reports rushing business. He finds "The Trey o' Hearts" a big drawing card.

Neil Kelleher, of Waterville, the genial manager of the City opera house, recently installed the Universal service in his house, and is well satisfied with it. "The Master Key" has proven a fine attraction.

Arthur A. Allen, of Bangor, formerly manager of the Palace and the Star theaters, also at one time manager of a theater in Old Town, has been in Boston and New York during the past week in connection with a moving picture enterprise, the details of which he promises to your correspondent later.

Harold F. Moon, of Bangor, manager of "The Moonshiners," a dramatic company composed of Bangor amateurs, has just completed a two nights' engagement at the Star theater, in Skowhegan. Mr. Moon's company has appeared in a large number of moving picture theaters in eastern and northern Maine during the past fifteen weeks, and is now showing in the Aroostook County moving picture houses.

The management of the Nickel theater in Portland, Me., proposes to change the name of the theater on opening of the house, which is now being remodeled. An organ, one of the finest of its kind in this part of the country, is being installed, and a change of stage setting is being arranged to make this theater one of the most complete in this part of the state. It was at first proposed to call the remodeled theater "The Strand," after the big photoplay house of that name in New York, but objections to it were made by many Nickel patrons. Why they have opposed the adoption of this name, the management does not understand. The managers have suggested in place of it that the theater be known as "The Paramount." To settle the question, the management is asking its patrons to vote upon the matter, each patron depositing a ballot in the voting box at the entrance to the theater. The name that gets the most votes will be adopted.

The Keith interests, which recently acquired a lease of the Park theater in Bangor, Me., have not given up the lease of the theater they formerly managed—the Nickel. It is understood that this theater will be used for boxing exhibitions and the like, and it is not probable that moving picture shows will be given there as long as Keith holds the lease, which extends for a year and a half more.

George A. Hickey, of Portland, Me., has gone to Boston to assume the position of manager for the United Feature Film Company, of Boston. Mr. Hickey has been the manager of the Warner Feature Film Company in Maine, with headquarters in Portland, and resigns his position to take up his duties with the Boston company.

FROM HAWAII.

By Frank H. Madison, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

Manager Samuel Blair of the Popular theater at Honolulu furnished moving pictures for the first of a series of Sunday night entertainments at the armory for the members of the National Guard of Hawaii. The attraction for the soldiers and their families and friends was Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate."

BUILDING CODE IN IOWA.

Davenport Film Men Object to Present Building Regulations—People Upstairs Carefully Protected.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World News Service.

OBJECTION to a clause in the new building code at Dovenport has been made by film men of that city on the ground that it is unreasonable. As drafted, the clause reads: "All buildings used for the purpose of manufacture, keeping, storage, handling or repairing of any inflammable moving pictures shall be of Class One, fireproof construction, and shall not be over two stories in height above the basement." This provision was made, it is said, on the theory that noxious fumes from burning films would endanger persons in offices above film exchanges. The moving picture men declare there is not a two-story fireproof building in the city.

MORE ITEMS FROM IOWA.

The opera house at Ledyard has been leased by J. C. Underkoffer of Germania.

The Davenport camp of the Sons of Veterans gave a belated Christmas entertainment for the children at the Soldiers' Orphans' Home in that city, having a program made up largely of selected moving picture comedies.

Capacity business was had at the opening of Johnston & Biebesheimer's new Gem theater at Grundy Center. The house, which is 40x100, will seat 500 persons.

The Germania opera house at Lamsing was destroyed by fire.

"The Million-Dollar Touchdown" is the name of a novel local film made at Waterloo under the direction of the Times-Tribune of that city. The picture was staged along the lines of the college stories, so dear to the average youth, with the football star kidnapped and returned in time to save the all-important game.

E. A. Lundy has sold the Majestic theater at Winterset to Charles Jennings of Audubon.

A moving picture show is now being operated in the Hildreth opera house at Charles City with William M. Waterhouse of New York as manager.

Anderson & McClurg have sold the Busy Hour theater at Jefferson to Jay Wiggina.

France & Son of Bethany, Mo., have purchased the Crystal theater at Cedar Rapids and have assumed possession.

J. Ellis will have charge of the projection at the new moving picture show opened at Shelby by M. E. Clapp, who remodeled the old hotel building for use as a theater.

With the retirement of J. A. Lisy as manager of the Family theater at Davenport because of ill-health, a reorganization of the company operating the house has taken place. New members of the concern are Richard Mittelbuscher, an insurance and real estate man of Davenport and Chris G. Behrens, manager of the Alcohol Lamp and Stove Company of that city. The latter will be manager of the theater. Extensive improvements are planned to begin next June. A new front will be installed, the stage will be torn out, adding twenty-five feet to the length and increasing the seating capacity to 900, new machines will be secured and the whole interior will be remodeled and redecorated. Lisy expects to leave soon for California, seeking a warmer climate.

A. W. McIntosh, who has been acting as manager for the Crystal and Princess theaters in Waterloo since he disposed of his interest in both houses to his partner, Nick Webber, has been making arrangements to open a picture house in Waverly.

Fire starting in the furnace room destroyed the Arie opera house at Boone. The recently completed opera house at Oto was damaged by fire causing a loss of $500. A film fire at the Lyric theater in Iowa Falls on New Year's Eve did some damage to the machine and there was some smoke and water damage to the building.

SELIG PLAYERS IN SOUTH.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

As the result of the visit of the party of sixteen Selig players and Miss Kathlyn Williams and W. N. Selig to New Orleans, Miss Williams probably will appear in person at one of the Pearce houses—the Tudor or Trianon—upon the return of the company from its Panama trip. Members of the party were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Eugene Pearce, a part of the time they were in New Orleans.

WANTS SUNDAY PICTURES.

Reports from Birmingham, Ala., say that the fight for Sunday picture shows has been reopened, a committee of managers calling upon the city commission. Statements indicating a determined fight are credited to F. B. Orr, a local manager. Alex A. Wall, vice-president of the International Exhibitors' Association, stated that neither the association nor the local division of the association was agitating Sunday shows.

PLENTY OF PATRONS.

Club-women in Montgomery, Ala., are protesting against the overcrowding of moving picture theaters in that city and declare the practice of overselling the seating capacity is creating conditions which are very likely to cause a loss of life sooner or later. The fault is especially noticeable when installments of the serials are being run. Mrs. Olin Kirkland, president of the Montgomery Federation of Clubs, declared she entered one of the leading photoplay houses and found a third of the aisles blocked. It was not until the show was half over that she secured a seat.

OTHER NOTES FROM SOUTH.

Prosperity, not only in photoplay houses but in cotton, banking and other southern lines were reported by Arthur S. Hyman, president and general manager of the Hybar Film corporation of Atlanta, Ga., upon his return from a tour of twelve leading cities of the South.

A petition was filed in the civil court at New Orleans, La., Jan. 12 by Stewart E. Wilson, a moving picture actor, asking for judgment for $2,600 alleged to be due him as salary and for the appointment of a receiver for the Coquille Film Company of that city.

Records for attendance at moving picture shows in the South are claimed by the Lafayette theater in New Orleans, La., where "Cabiria" ran for three notable weeks.

Damage of $4,000 was done by fire to the Louisiana theater at Baton Rouge, La. The fire was discovered behind the screen and had made good headway when Manager Eburn Coe informed the patrons that they were having trouble behind the curtain and asked them to leave. This they did without panic.

Every Tuesday will be set aside by the Alamao theater at Vicksburg, Miss., as World Film Corporation feature day.

Dreamland theater at Vicksburg, Miss., got twenty and ten cents for the Pendleton, Ore., frontier day celebration pictures. Local interest in the attraction was created by Indian Joe, who lectures the films, and two Indians giving a free exhibition in front of the house.

The Florida Equal Franchise league of Jacksonville, Fla., is making arrangements to show "Your Girl and Mine" the suffrage film, in one of the picture houses in that city sometime in February.

The Diamond theater at Tuscaloose, Ala., is now using a Mutual service program.

Manager Kramer, of the Alkrama theater at Elizabeth City, N. C., gave his annual free show to the children of the city January 2.

Swords & Westfall, the new managers of the Dixie theater at Kissimmee, Fla., who took the Keystone comedies off the program when they took charge of the house, have put them on again—by request of patrons.

NEBRASKA ITEMS.

By Midwest International Moving Picture World Service.

HENRY JURGENS, JR., has moved his picture show into the Hochstein building at Wynot.

Statistics of the Chamber of Commerce at Omaha show that moving picture films to the value of $13,422 were manufactured in that city in the year 1914.

Wiley Langford is now manager of the moving picture show at the Auditorium in Auburn.

A moving picture show has been opened at Osceola by Mr. Bell of that place.

Plenty of novelty was planned for a home-talent film made at Tekamah by Hartman Brothers of Omaha but the production of the story developed angles which made the whole pary forget the work for a while. The interest always excited by taking a made-at-home picture was intensified in this case by the announcement that a wolf-hunt would be staged incidental to the unfolding of the story. After the wolf, which had been secured, was unleashed in range of the camera and had finished his part of the romance, a farmer boy burst into the crowd shouting that he had seen real wolves down the field. Film-making was ended and a real chase took place, two residents of the neighborhood each bringing back a dead wolf.

A. O. Colman has sold his interest in the moving picture show at Utica to Charles Bereuter, Jr., who is now sole owner.

Claude De Land has purchased moving picture equipment and will give a show at Cotesfield two nights each week.

Changes in ownership in the two moving picture houses in Wahoo leave Thomas Crawford and John Beermaker as partners in the management of the Star and Bijou theaters. Beermaker purchased a half interest in the Star from Fred Smith and then sold a half interest in the Bijou to Crawford who was Smith's partner.

The Empress theater at North Platte has been leased to F. W. Cross, who will operate a moving picture show.

IN CINCINNATI.

The Lubin, which made something of a record for the downtown houses by running "Tillie's Punctured Romance" for a full week after this laughing success, formed by the Dressler-Chaplin-Normand combination, had had its scheduled week's exhibition there, piled things on somewhat by adding another four days to this record of two weeks. Last week, in accordance with a real demand, and in recognition of the packed houses which greeted the production during its long run, this additional time was put on, with the same success which greeted the earlier part of the engagement.

Harry D. Hunton, known as a moving picture promoter of Canton, O., has filed suit against the city for damages in the amount of $2,000, which he claims on the ground that the city violated an alleged contract with him. He declares that he entered into a contract with the city to use its auditorium for moving pictures during Saturday nights in September, October, November and December, and that the city officials refused to comply with the contract, causing him damages to the amount stated.

The Lyric, one of Dayton's leading houses, took advantage of the holiday season to thank its patrons, and, incidentally, to do some highly effective and spectacular advertising by the use of a full page in Dayton dailies, bordered with a holly design in green and red, with pictures of popular film stars interspersed among the leaves. The Lyric emphasized its "money-back" policy, reiterating its rather unusual guarantee in unmistakable terms and red letters—"Your money cheerfully returned if you have not received your money's worth."

Fight on Censorship

Ohio Legislature Field in Fight For and Against State Censorship—Managers and Owners Association Being Formed in Cincinnati to Oppose State Board—Board Criticised for Its Cutting of Eclectic Feature, "The Life of Our Saviour."

By Kenneth C. Crain, Special Correspond ent of Moving Picture World.

WITH the Ohio legislature in session, the forces for and against State censorship, whether as opposed to the operations of the National Board or against possible municipal censorship, are lining up in battle array, and prospects seem to be good for a battle royal. One of the latest factors in the fight, or possible factors, it might be more accurate to put it, is a proposed organization of Cincinnati exhibitors opposed to the Ohio State Board of Censors, to be known as the Managers' and Owners' Protective Association. Chris W. Popp, who, with his brother, owns the Main theater, at 1439 Main street, is organizing the Association, and stated last week that he has at least twenty exhibitors enlisted as prospective members, on a platform of opposition to the State Board and support of exclusive censorship by the National board. A meeting will probably be held this week to form an organization, in order that the movement may be given form and body so that its efforts may be felt in the forthcoming fight. A movement for a similar organization was made a year or so ago, but did not meet with any great success; but at this time, when sentiment can be crystallized on the subject of censorship, the proposed association may have better luck.

The action of the Ohio Board of Censors in making radical cuts in the well-known production, "The Life of Our Savior," has caused considerable comment among those who are informed of the extent to which the film was censored; and many exhibitors who had booked it declare that if the changes are as extensive as reported they will not use it, as the most dramatic portions of the film have been virtually eliminated. For example, it is stated that with a total in cuts of 700 feet, the scene on the cross, naturally the greatest scene of the picture, has ben reduced to just six feet. The flogging scene also came in for considerable reduction. The picture was seen in Cincinnati a year ago, before the State Board was in effective operation, and met with general approval on the part of the press, as well as of ministers of various denominations. Whether it will be as popular as at that time, produced in its censored form, remains to be seen.

PICTURES OF PROGRESS.

Bureau of Commercial Economics Distributing Films That Show How World Has Progressed.

Unusually interesting pictures are those which are being shown around the country under the auspices of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, established at Philadelphia by Francis Holley, who, it is said, was blind for about ten years up to a short time ago, and was so struck by progress in various lines during the interim that he determined to demonstrate it by means of moving pictures, which are themselves one of the most remarkable developments of the decade. Moving pictures of the latest developments in the scientific world are distributed by the bureau free, and the University of Cincinnati recently showed several reels of the series to students, in connection with its course of "visatures," as its moving-picture lectures are called. The pictures were shown last week in Dayton in one of the high school auditoriums, under the auspices of the Dayton Enginering Laboratories Co., and also at the National Cash Register Company's plant during the noon hour. Films in this series will be shown throughout the winter at the Cincinnati institution, as well as at Dayton and elsewhere.

TAKES NEW QUARTERS.

The Cincinnati offices of the World Special Film Corporation have been moved from 224 East Fourth street, a location which was somewhat inconvenient, on account of being rather out of the beaten path, to a more central location at 17 East Sixth street. The exchange will have ample room here, besides being closer to the central business section of the city. The former offices of the World were promptly occupied, however, by another film concern, a branch of the Alliance Film Co. being established there last week, shortly after the World moved. C. E. Smith, of Pittsburgh, is manager of the latest addition to Cincinanti's fine roll of film exchanges. Quarters in the same office are also occupied by the National Film Service Co., a feature concern under the management of Neil Kingsley, who was formerly with the Cincinnati office of Warner's Features. This latter company is not connected in any way with the National Film Products Co., a Cincinnati commercial film organization with offices at 17 West Seventh street.

OTHER CINCINNATI NOTES.

J. W. Binder, of the National Board of Censors, was in Cincinnati during the week on business connected with his visit to Ohio on behalf of the Board, and on Wednesday was the guest of the Cincinnati Advertisers' Club at the weekly luncheon of that organization at the Metropole Hotel, speaking on the subject, "The Fairy Tale of the Moving Picture." The advertising possibilities of moving pictures are being considered more closely daily by advertising men, and the views of so prominent an authority as Mr. Binder were accordingly heard with much interest.

The fact that Mme. Olga Petrova, the beautiful Russian actress, is soon to appear in Cincinnati in her New York success, "Panthea," lent additional interest to the exhibition of her film appearance in "The Tigress," a production of the Popular Plays and Players Co., which was shown on Sunday of last week at the Victoria. The production is in six parts, and deserved all that has been said of it as an effective and gripping drama, in which Mme. Petrova has many opportunities.

It is announced that the following houses will in the future be the exclusive exhibitors in and around Cincinnati of the productions released under the Paramount brand: The Strand, the Orpheum, the Nordland Plaza, the Arcade, in Cincinnati; the Lyric, in Covington, and the Temple, in Newport. Heretofore there has been more or less uncertainty on this point, at least in the minds of the public, who never knew when or where they would have an opportunity of seeing Paramount releases after they had left the downtown first-run houses, which was formerly the Lubin, and is now the Strand. It is stated now, however, that the houses named will have the exclusive run of these pictures in their respective territories, which are well recognized. Coming productions under this brand for Cincinnati exhibition include "The Girl of the Golden West," the Lasky-Belasco production of the great Belasco stage success, and George Beban in "The Italian," which were seen last week at the Strand; and Macklyn Arbuckle in "It's No Laughing Matter," Florence Reed in "The Dancing Girl," and others.

A Real Exhibitor

Three Million Admissions in Seven Years Is Fine Record John H. Genter, Owner of Retina Theater in St. Louis, Has to Show—House Never Closed a Day Since Opening—Things That, Taken Together, Made for Big Success.

By A. H. Giebler, Special Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE RETINA THEATER, at 20th and Market streets, St. Louis, will celebrate its seventh birthday on the 23rd of January. The Retina is a small theater, there are seats for only three hundred persons, and in its earlier days the capacity was much less than this, but since its first performance on the 23rd of January, 1907, three million admissions have been paid in at the box office.

The Retina has never been closed for a single day since its opening seven years ago. It has never missed a performance, and it has never changed owners. This record has been brought about by the fact that its manager, John H. Gentner, made a study of moving pictures, and a study of people, and his studies taught him that people wanted clean pictures, and that theaters, like any other enterprise, wanted and needed the personal attention and supervision of their owners.

There are a great many men who think that they can rent a moving picture theater and turn it over to some half-baked youth to manage, while they engage in what they think is more important, or more dignified, business. There never was a more important or a more dignified or a more profitable business than the exploitation of the great art of moving pictures when it is done properly. Neither is there a more unprofitable, undignified, nor deplorable business when it is done improperly. And the man that considers it beneath his dignity, and not important enough to make a special study of, is the failure, and the greatest incubus, the worst drawback the great industry has today.

Gentner studied and mastered every detail of the moving picture business. He was in the Retina ten hours of every day of the seven years the theater has been open. Every inch of the million, four hundred and sixty thousand feet of film that was projected on the screen was familiar to him. He studied film projection; he eliminated the flicker from his pictures months before any projecting machine on the market did it. He studied his audiences and gauged them properly. The Retina is not in an aristocratic neighborhood; its audiences are decidedly mixed crowds, and its proximity to the Union Station draws many travelers to its chairs who are looking for a time-killing device, and are not particular what kind of pictures they see.

Some managers would have dressed up the front of their theaters like a street carnival to attract these floaters; some managers would have shown lurid melodrama, but Gentner knew that would injure his business with the resident patrons of his theater in the end, and he started out with a clean program, and has maintained it to this day. Clean pictures of the best type, and many educational subjects are the rule at the Retina.

John Gentner has been the most consistent worker for the advancement of the art of moving pictures this city has known. He has devoted all his time to it; he has preached organization to his fellow exhibitors; he has fought senseless censorship. To his efforts it is largely due that St. Louis and the state of Missouri are still free from censorship.

Mr. Gentner has just been elected president of the Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, an organization for the uplifting of the amusement business along all lines.

GERMANY'S SIDE.

A monster program of moving pictures will be given in the Coliseum Sunday, January 24, at an afternoon and evening performance, the object of which is to present Germany's side of the great war. An admission fee of twenty-five cents will be charged, and one-fourth of the gross receipts will be turned over to the German Red Cross Society by the German War Picture Company, who are managing the presentation. Some of the pictures to be shown pertain to the actual fighting in Europe, and many scenes are depictions of military maneuvers in Germany and Austria, taken before the outbreak of hostilities. A male chorus of two hundred voices from the various German singing societies will furnish a program of songs suitable to the occasion.

MORE ST. LOUIS ITEMS.

F. J. Wolf, manager of the Iola theater, at 2728 Lafayette avenue, is taking time by the forelock, and is cleaning and getting the airdome, which adjoins the theater, in readiness for the spring business.

The McKinley theater, at Jefferson avenue and Accomac street, has added a Sunday matinee to its program since the first of the year. The first performance was well attended.

J. Werner, proprietor of the Lafayette Theater, Lafayette and Jefferson avenues, one of the largest theaters in south St. Louis, which has heretofore maintained an elaborate program of tabloid musical comedy and dramatic stock plays in addition to moving pictures, declares his intention of changing the policy of the house to an all feature photoplay program if he can make the arrangement to get the kind of feature booking he feels will justify him in making the change. Mr. Werner is a veteran in the amusement world, and his declaration that moving pictures are the cleanest, safest, and surest means of pleasing the amusement loving public, has the weight of years of experience behind it that makes it authoritative.

Meyer Brothers and Pracht, managers of the Knickerbocker theater, at 3140 Park avenue, have a lobby display of photographs that is almost an art gallery. Several easels and many frames are used, and forty-six large photos are displayed. Most of the pictures are still scenes from well-known photoplays, but photos of all the well-known stars are shown. The display is very tasteful and a happy departure from the usual lurid posters affected by so many managers of picture shows.

MICHIGAN NEWS LETTER.

By Midwest Special Moving Picture World Service.

"Harry's" theater, on North Washington avenue, in Saginaw, was used for a special show for employees of the firm of Morley Brothers, who saw an industrialog of the Simonds saw manufacturers.

Moving picture houses in Hancock were ordered on January 2 to close their houses for a week at least because of a prevalence of smallpox in the city.

The Grand theater at Calumet recently had a film fire. There was no panic and damage was slight.

The Palace Theater Company has opened a moving picture show in the Palmiter Block, at Hart. Mrs. Nina Miller is manager.

Ability to expand is one of the features of the construction at the new Delft theater which has been opened at Munising. It has been built so that when necessary 100 seats can be added to the main floor and a balcony providing for 200 easily installed. The concrete operating room houses two latest model Powers 6A motor-driven machines.

Arthur Paoli, operating theaters at Negaunee and South Range, has acquired a third house in "the peninsula," having purchased the Lyric theater at Ishpeming from Guy Freese.

NEWS LETTER FROM INDIANA.

By Indiana Special Moving Picture World Trade News Service.

DAVID SIMPKINS has leased the Royal theater at Fairmount, Ind., to G. T. Ogden and C. M. Denison of Kokomo for a year. Simpkins has only housed the house a short time.

The Dreamland theater, Mount Vernon, Ind., has the editor of the Missouri Mule as an extra attraction recently, and is using extras every now and then as an accompaniment to the pictures.

The Merchants of Portland, Ind., have expressed themselves as highly pleased with the holiday business, and attribute its unusual success to the drawing power of the free movie shows which were given at the expense of the merchants.

